The eighth annual convention of the sixteenth congressional district of Illinois will be held at Flora, August 27 to 29. Mrs. Rounds will deliver an address the evenings of the 27th and the 28th. Miss Cowen, state superintendent of Y work, will speak the evening of the 29th

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Mrs. M. L. Wells.
Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.	Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
Mrs. Marion B. Baxter.	Miss I. C. DeVelling.
Miss Henrietta G. Moore.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward.
Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.	Mrs. Mary E. Haggart.
Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.	Rev. W. H. Boole, D.D.
Mr. A. G. Wolfenberger.	Ex-Gov. John P. St. John.
Prof. A. B. Huckins.	Rev. C. H. St. John.
Mrs. S. M. Perkins.	Miss E. Fannie Griffin.
Mrs. R. J. Trego.	Mother Stewart.
D. H. Burwell.	Dr. Kate C. Bushnell.
Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse.	Walter Thomas Mills.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP

speaks at Pittsfield, Ill., August 6; Newton, 7 and 8; Mt. Carmel, 9 and 10; Effingham, 11; Dawson, 12; Quincy, 13 and 14.

MRS. MARION B. BAXTER speaks at Bethany Park, Ind., August 17.

MISS HENRIETTA G. MOORE

goes to Springboro, Ohio, August 17, for one week.

REV. EUGENIA F. ST. JOHN

speaks at Franklin Grove, Ill., August 16 and 17; Charleston, 21 and 22; Medora, August 24 to 30.

MRS. S. M. I. HENRY

will be in New York state from September 1; a few dates are vacant for the western part of the state.

MRS. CAROLINE M. WOODWARD is "holding the fort" in Nebraska, and doing some telling work for the Amendment.

MRS. AMY KELLOGG MORSE will be available for a few meetings in Massachusetts during August.

For dates and terms of all the above, address the

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,

161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Publisher's Dep't.

"Which Road?"

The September number of the Sunday School Crusader has one of the quaintest allegorical exercises we have ever read. It sounds like a modernized epitome of Pilgrim's Progress. John Bunyan couldn't write in his day, and touch up Slang, Primary Caucus, Patriotism, Equal Wages, and Equal Duties as does Miss Guernsey in this word picture. The Black Valley Railway, the Moral Suasion Steamboat Company, and the Harvest Home Railroad Company, bid for the transportation of a lot of boys and girls. How the city of Political Trickery is avoided, and the safe city of Good Citizenship is reached must be discovered by having copies of this sparkling little paper, which by the way has a supplement, Mrs. Rice's admirable exposition of the Temperance Sunday School Lesson for September 28; a letter from Mary Lowe Dickinson on "The King's Babies," and many other items of interest and child life education. Get the paper in your Sunday-school once, this once at least? Price, 1 cent per copy, in packages of five or over.

FAIR

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.

Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies ..... $ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00

All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

Women Vote?

Why not? South Dakota will soon decide the question and decide it "yes," at least that is what the prospect is. Wyoming comes into the Union with equal suffrage in its constitution. Truly, "de world do move." Leaflet forty-two of the National series is by Alice Stone Blackwell and has for its title "Twelve Reasons Why Women Want to Vote." We will quote only one of them: "It is a maxim in war, 'Always do the thing to which your enemy particularly objects.' The Brewers' Convention at Chicago passed this resolution by a unanimous vote:

"Resolved, That we are opposed to woman suffrage everywhere and always; for when woman has the ballot, she will vote solid for prohibition; and woman's vote is the last hope of the Prohibitionists.

"You may persuade a church member that the majority of mothers would vote for dramshops; but you will never make the liquor interest believe it."

Leaflet forty-three, by Ella G. Ives, is called "Why One Woman Wants to Vote." These two will be sent for three cents in stamps. Suppose you do oppose the right of women to vote, why not know what the other side says? You are friendly to it? Excuse us, then of course you will want to have these bright, condensed statements in hand and head? Ten of each, 20 cents, postpaid.

W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

VanHouten's Cocoa. Delicious, made immediately.

MR. JERE R. TRAYLOR, Traveling Salesman, says: I always carry Bradycrotine in my grip.

MR. J. LANE, General Manager, G. S. & F. R. R., says: Bradycrotine is the only thing I have ever tried that would relieve me after the pain commenced.

Young women seeking employment should send for circulars of the Slöjd Institute to be opened early in September. Address Miss Toppelius, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

The tenth year of the Stanberry, Mo., Normal Business and Shorthand College opens September 2, 1890. This school has attained a great reputation. It has hundreds of graduates and thousands of old students doing well. Students may enter at any time and select their own studies, if they do not wish to take a regular course. Twenty teachers. NO SALOONS IN THE COUNTY. Board, tuition, and room rent only $3.00 per week, or $125 per year. The president of this college was orphaned by liquor, and is a radical saloon hater and does not care who knows it. Send for a large, free catalogue, to JOHN E. FESLER, President, STANBERRY, MO.

From actual and daily experience in our family I can thoroughly recommend the Beveridge Steam Cooker. It is very economical, as by its use one burner on the gasoline stove is made to do the work of three. Nothing ever burns in it. Everything cooked in it tastes good. It is not complicated, does not need the services of an engineer to attend to it; so altogether it may safely be considered a success, and an article of great use in every household. Readers of THE UNION SIGNAL like to be told of any culinary device that combines—as does this—convenience, economy and good cooking. Signed, GEO. C. HALL, Pub. UNION SIGNAL.

The New Wonderful Temperance and Manufacturing Suburb,

HARVEY, ILLS.

The Sale of Lots has already begun. If you wish to be counted in for one or more you will need to apply soon.

A Good Investment.

CHICAGO From a Hamlet in 1840 to a Population of 1,200,000 in 1890. The World's Fair is bringing thousands here already—millions of capital are being invested in Chicago, the second city of the country, the first in pluck, energy and vim.

TO THE READERS OF THE UNION SIGNAL:

If you will carefully read this page, you will find that I have a matter of very great interest to bring before you, and you will also find from the references given that what I shall say is worthy your entire confidence. I consider that I am offering the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL an unparalleled opportunity to make a favorable investment, and want you to READ EVERY WORD! READ EVERY WORD!

THE INCEPTION.

Some eight months ago the daily papers told of the purchase of a large tract of land eighteen miles south of the Chicago Court House and two miles south of the city limits, at the junction of the Illinois Central and Grand Trunk Railways. This purchase was made by Mr. T. W. Harvey, a well known wealthy gentleman and much esteemed Christian worker of our city. He is the Vice-President, and practically the leader and supporter of the D. L. Moody Bible Institute here, the Superintendent of the Second Presbyterian Sunday-School, and a strong worker in tha' church. The land was bought with the sole idea of building upon it a successful manufacturing suburb of Chicago, and one which should be notable above all others in our country in that it should be

AN ABSOLUTELY TEMPERANCE TOWN.

And that right under the shadow of this great city, which is ruled as with a rod of iron by its more than 4,500 high-license saloons. What his plans were to carry out this idea, will be enumerated further on. The first thing Mr. Harvey did was to choose the location with rare wisdom and judgment. The new town of Harvey lies just south of the Calumet River, and at the crossing of five railroads, with a fall of from 21 to 28 feet to the river. Fine sewerage is thus afforded. This brings me to naming some of

THE PLANS.

Mr. Harvey formed a strong company, the ground was platted, and by a piece of good fortune I have had the sale of 240 choice lots in Harvey placed in my hands. It was considered that the temperance people of the land would be glad to invest in an enterprise that promises so well as does this one. For our readers may have the utmost confidence in the enterprise, in the men who are behind it, and in the opportunity that is now given you to double your money!

First, last, and always, this is to be strictly a temperance town; every deed says so, insists on it, and already a number of applications for manufacturing sites have been refused by the Land Company, because they felt that it would be difficult to maintain their high temperance ideas and admit the firms that applied.

Second. It is to be a manufacturing city. It is true that the World's Fair is coming to Chicago, and that this property lies within fifteen or twenty minutes' ride of its location, and that the Fair will undoubtedly bring thousands to Chicago who will contentedly settle down and live in this great City of Cities, the marvel of the 19th Century, and that all this will conspire to increase greatly the value of real estate in Harvey; but even without the boom that the great Exposition will bring, Harvey is BOUND TO BE AN ASSURED SUCCESS AS A MANUFACTURING SUBURB.

Because of its unrivalled location. Because of the millions already invested.

Because of the manufactories already there. Because of many more that are coming.

And because the Company is one with unlimited means at their command, and they have determined that it shall be so.

The manufactories already there are the Automatic Mower and Mfg. Co., employing about 125 men; the Grinnell Wagon Works, from Grinnell, Iowa, manufacturers of steel headers, steel hay rakes, buggies, carriages, etc., employing about 500 men. Their buildings are of the following dimensions: One of 160x200 feet; one 200x240 feet, and one 80x200 feet. The Harvey Steel Car Co., formed under the patents of Mr. Geo. L. Harvey, to manufacture steel passenger and sleeping coaches and freight cars. The buildings when completed, about October 1st, will be as follows: One 80x200 feet, and two each 100x300 feet. Five tons of sheet steel will be used daily at the least by this immense company, which will probably employ a thousand men to begin with. The Car Company has a capital of $1,000,000 fully subscribed. Many other manufactories will soon be on the ground. All buildings of this kind will be put up in either brick or stone, and will be in a section by themselves and entirely away from the residence portion of Harvey. There is no doubt whatever that Harvey will soon be a rival of its successful neighbor, Pullman, and the most conservative estimate says will have a Population of Ten Thousand in Three Years or Less.

Reasonably so, for here are some of the plans of the Company which are now being carried out:

MACADAMIZED STREETS, AN ARTESIAN WELL OF ABSOLUTELY PURE WATER, PURE WATER IN EVERY HOUSE, SEWERAGE FOR EVERY LOT,
GAS ALL OVER THE CITY, WIDE STREETS, BEAUTIFUL PARKS, SHADE TREES, HOMELIKE HOUSES.

But there are other reasons why this chance for you to make some money should be of interest to you, so I will tell you something of in the movement, that your full confidence may be given. Of Mr. Harvey, the President, I have already written. Mr. E. T. Jeffery, the Vice-President, was, until quite recently, the general manager of the Illinois Central Railroad, a position of very great responsibilities, and where Mr. Jeffery scored a great success. He has been urged to accept the director-generalship of the World's Fair, but has declined in order to give his attention to the other interests with which he is connected. The Directors are:

THE LEADERS

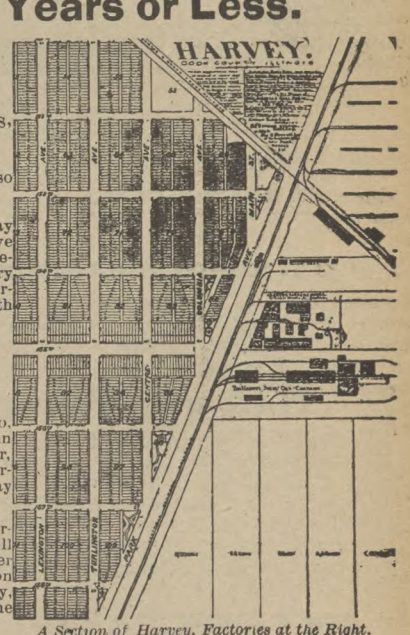
T. W. HARVEY. E. T. JEFFERY. S. A. KENT. W. J. WATSON.
N. K. FAIRBANK. W. R. STIRLING. A. C. BADGER. THOS. MCFARLAND.
MORRIS SELLERS.

Men so well known that you need only to see their names, if you live within five hundred miles of Chicago, to assure yourself that they would never lend their names to any "high-flyer" speculative scheme. But in addition I may say that Mrs. D. L. Moody, Mr. Moody and his brother-in-law, the well-known book publisher, Mr. F. H. Revell, have land in Harvey. The Northfield Institute, also the Mt. Hermon School, are also interested in Harvey. Surely enough has been said to prove to the most critical that here is something in the way of an investment that is above suspicion. Now for

THE OUTLOOK.

Here is a temperance town for temperance people; a place where Sunday will be kept and not made hideous by beer worshippers; a place owned and controlled by a company of Christian men; with numerous manufactories on the ground and more coming; with all the advantages of the big city right at hand—thirty-eight trains daily, soon will be more—and with none of its disadvantages; with pure water; pure air, and steady work for the steady home-maker; with the certainty of rapid increase of value for all who purchase now, and



A Section of Harvey, Factories at the Right.

What Does it Mean to You?

The management want people to buy who will come and go to work in the manufactories, does that mean anything to you? They want temperance people They want Bankers, Merchants and skilled labor of all kinds—carpenters, machinists, foremen, and artisans. Does this mean anything to you?

Believing that the people they want read THE UNION SIGNAL, the company authorizes me to offer the 240 lots, each 25x171½ feet, with 20 foot alleys, for the

MARVELOUSLY LOW PRICE of from $180 to $450 each, Providing they are purchased before September 15th. After that date there is to be a general advance of prices. The payments are to be made as follows: One-fourth down, balance in six, twelve, and eighteen months. Now is the time. Six lots within three blocks have just sold for $5,200.

The Low-Priced Lots Will go off Quick.—Send for Plats AT ONCE.

Remember, I have only 240 lots to sell, and that the prices named hold good only till September 15th.

As has been said the Company prefers that only actual settlers should be the purchasers of lots, and if desired they will advance money for home building, but if you wish to buy on account of the profitable investment it cannot be denied you. There is good reason to believe that you can

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY IN A SHORT TIME!

I refer by permission to Mrs. T. B. Carse, President W. T. P. A.; Miss Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL. Mr. Hall kindly permits me to say that, as the time named is very short, any who desire to invest can send the money to him, and he will see that the deeds, abstracts, etc., are sent promptly. A warranty deed will be issued each purchaser after the first payment is made. Untold millions of money are pressing toward Chicago for investment, and it is scarcely to be wondered at when property sells as did two pieces on State Street recently for $10,000 and $11,000 per front foot respectively. Chicago is the Future Great City, and with all the advantages I have named, you cannot make a mistake if you invest your money here in real estate at a trifle over $7 a front foot. It is in a place where the world must learn that

TEMPERANCE PAYS, BUT SALOONS ARE A CURSE.

And finally the Company has agreed in writing to deed sufficient land free, for building purposes, to the W. T. P. A. in case its stockholders will agree to put buildings and offices thereon, an offer worth at least $4,000 to the W. T. P. A. You can see that your time to get plats and ask questions—if I have left any to ask—is very short. FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED.

Address

C. D. PAINE, Advertising Mgr. Union Signal, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ills.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

New White Cross Pin.

We have been asked a great many times to provide a pin for those who take the White Cross obligations. We have made a great many experiments in the line of supplying the need, but have not been satisfied with any of the results until now. Here is a pin which is a little beauty, modest, plain, effective and very economical. We show it in the exact size. It is made of celluloid and shines out in a way that will attract more attention than if it were made of gold. Prices: Each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.

What Can I do for Temperance?

Secure a local agency for "Glimpses of Fifty Years," or for "The Conflict Between Man and Alcohol," and place a few copies in your town. Write us for terms.

Pledge Cards.

The single pledges are against drinking only. The triple include drinking, profanity and use of tobacco, per 100, 50 cts.

German pledge cards, same as above.

Sunday-school class pledges, for a whole class to sign, per 100, 50 cts.

Loyal Temperance Legion pledge, adopted by the national departments of juvenile and Sunday-school work. This is to take the place of the Sunday-school scholar's pledge; has a place for witnessing by Sunday-school teacher, pastor or parent. Is a folder with a new and specially prepared design, and is very attractive throughout. Order blue when pledge without the words, "as a beverage," is wanted. Order the buff when words, "as a beverage," are wanted. Price per 100, $1; per 1,000, $7.

Wall pledge, designed for Sunday-school and Loyal Temperance Legions. In colors, as above. Price, 25 cts.

Honorary membership cards for Loyal Temperance Legion. Price per 100, 50 cts.

National W. C. T. U. pledge cards, per 100, 50 cts.; per 100 (perforated), 60 cts.; white ribbons for tying, per 100, 40 cts.

Social Purity pledges: White Cross (two colors), per 100, 50 cts,; Silver Cross and White Shield (two colors) each per 100, $1; Daughters of the Temple, per 100, $1; White Shield pledge on paper, per 100, 50c.

R. R. Temperance Association, per 100, $1

Praying League pledge, per 100, $1.

Y. W. C. T. U. Illinois pledge, per 100, $1; Y. W. C. T. U. membership card with pledge, per 100, $1.

HINTS

FOR

Y. W. C. T. U. ENTERTAINMENTS.

Price 10 cents. Explaining the mysteries of Oriental Tiffin, Kaffee Klatsch, Mother Goose, etc. Candy recipes are added to sweeten things generally.

Ye Hatchet Partie.

Price 15 cents. By Miss Mary H. Mather, superintendent department of entertainments National W. C. T. U. The most successful shekel winner we have ever printed for young ladies' use. Other good entertainments are also given, "Mistress Mary and Her Flower Garden," "Silhouette Social," etc.

INTERSTATE
MILKMAID'S CONVENTION.

Price 5 cents. By Laura J. Rittenhouse. An amusing and witty "take off" on a woman's convention. The amount of learning (?) displayed on the cow business is funny.

FOR ✠ 20 ✠ CENTS ✠ YOU ✠ CAN HAVE ✠ THE ✠ UNION ✠ SIGNAL SENT ✠ TO ✠ A ✠ FRIEND ✠ FOR FIVE ✠ WEEKS ✠ WITH ✠ COPY OF ✠ A ✠ 25 ✠ CENT ✠ BOOK ✠ CONKLIN'S ✠ MANUAL ✠ OF ✠ INFORMATION. ✠ THE ✠ BOOK ✠ CAN COME ✠ TO ✠ YOU, ✠ THE ✠ PAPER TO ✠ YOUR ✠ FRIEND ✠ IF ✠ YOU PREFER. ✠ EITHER ✠ ONE ✠ IS ✠ WORTH ✠ MUCH ✠ MORE ✠ THAN 20 ✠ CENTS. ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

Platform Voices.

Price 25 cents; compiled by Miss Julia Ames, editor UNION SIGNAL. This is a collection of unusually good temperance poems and recitations. Great care has been taken in the selections, and we cordially recommend this book to all who need "something in the line of recitations" and don't know exactly what. This book fills the vacuum completely.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For neuralgia bathe with Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

LADIES! Use only { Brown's / French / Dressing } on your Boots and Shoes.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Best & Goes Farthest."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [63

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE
LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill

ASK your dealer for Water Pails, Dairy Pails, Wash Basins, Cuspidors, Slop Jars, Table Mats, Slop Jar Mats, Etc. made from FLAX FIBER. Practically indestructible. Manufact'd by the STANDARD FIBER-WARE CO. Nothing will please you like this Plain and Decorated Ware. In use everywhere. None genuine without "STANDARD" Trade Mark on bottom. If your dealer does not keep it, send his address and we will mail you picture cards.

YOUR CHILD must be kept healthy or she can not be beautiful. Sensible mothers buy the "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing daughters.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

EQUIPOISE WAIST.

A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS, including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jenness-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue. Mrs. S. W Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

LADY Agents clear $5 00 daily Goods indispensable Sample free G. L. Erwin Chicago

WANTS LADY AGENTS Box 1219, Elkhart, Ind.

BABY CARRIAGES We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser Mfr. 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE Pub. Boston

THE LAWS OF HEREDITY A book for every wife and mother. Cloth, 383 large pages, $1.00 by mail. CHARLES H. KERR & CO., Pubs., 175 Dearborn St., Chicago.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LADIES Send to the Steven's Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

400 RECITATIONS and Readings, Bound in Handsome Lithograph Cover, mailed to any address for 50 cents. Stamps taken. Address J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill. We do not sell liquors in any shape.

THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH
duplicating apparatus. Send postal card to A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, for descriptive circulars and samples of work.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

SATIN SILK & PLUSH Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St. Richmond, Va.

HOUSEWIVES should try the Beveridge Quick Cooker. Simple and convenient, saving time and labor. No dirt, no smell, no burning. Saves fuel. Used on any stove, winter or summer. Lady agents wanted Good pay. Ad. W. E Beveridge, Baltimore, Md, or 23 E 14th st, N. Y

THE PRFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE.
The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted. SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO., 160 West Lake St., Chicago.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y. Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

USEFUL and BEAUTIFUL The Pearl Sewing Machine.
Best results and low price. Circulars free M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago

RUG THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. & EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a Wash Blue have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask for it.
D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop.
233 North Second St., Philadelphia, Pa.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at
WHOLESALE.

LOWEST PRICES ON BICYCLES
700 Cycles in stock. Rare bargains in best makes, new and second hand.
EASY PAYMENTS WITH NO EXTRA CHARGE. Lowest prices guaranteed. Low freight rates. We are headquarters and our superior inducements bring us orders from all parts U. S. & Canada. Data free. ROUSE, HAZARD & CO. 3 ST., PEORIA, ILL.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufactures and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

A GOOD LIST!

STRAUSS CONCERT ALBUM.
Edited by J. O. v. PROCHAZKA. Price, 50cts.
Contains the gems of the Selections performed by the world-renowned orchestra of Eduard Strauss, now making a concert tour of the United States.

REED ORGAN STUDIES.
By W. F. SUDDS. In 8 Books. Price, 50cts. each.
An exceptionally fine course of Easy and Progressive Studies for the Reed Organ, by this well-known composer.

WINNOWED SONGS.
By IRA D. SANKEY. Price, 35cts., postage (5cts.) or expressage, extra.
This is the latest and by far the best Sunday School Song Book, containing 224 pages of new and selected songs by the leading writers and composers.

CLASS AND SCHOOL.
By S. G. SMITH. Price, 50cts.
A new book for the use of Day Schools, Singing Classes, County Institutes, Conventions and Normal Schools.

CATALOGUES of Sheet Music. Music Books or Musical Instruments sent free to any address, on application.
——PUBLISHED BY——
The JOHN CHURCH CO., Cincinnati, O.
Root & Sons Music Co., 200 Wabash Ave. Chicago. | The John Church Co., 19 E. 16th St., New York.

KISS ME MAMMA I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 20c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHAL'S UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made Circulars and prices on application to mf'rgs. A. M. HOWES & CO., 65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

WANTED.
One hundred and sixty-five (165) W. C. T. U. members (or other reliable persons), who will, each, secure five (5) purchasers for

FAITH,
or, EARTHLY PARADISE and Other Poems, just issued from the press of the W. T. P. A.; a volume of 528 pages, 330 of which constitute a drama, with scenes laid in Washington City, Faith being the heroine. Good, clear type, with frontispiece, and Three (3) Songs Set to Music.

5½ by 7¾ inches in size by 1¼ thick; bound in royal purple cloth, with name on back in gold letters. Price $1.25 per copy; gilt-edged, $1.50. Six copies, plain, for $6.25, cash in advance. 100 copies, plain, for $20 in advance. Ladies particularly will like the book. The Mississippi White Ribbon says:
"It especially commends itself for its fidelity to the loftiest ideals for woman and the home." Address immediately,
MRS. ELLEN E. HEBRON,
Edwards, Hinds Co., Mississippi.

SONGS FROM SOUTH,
a volume of 245 pages, by same author, for 60 cents.
Postage or freight prepaid on all books.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Publisher's Dep't.

At a Great Expense

We have made preparations with Messrs. L. Prang & Co., the noted color artists of Boston, to get out a picture of Miss Frances E. Willard. This picture is to be life size, in water colors, and a duplicate in every way of the original, concerning which her friends here, who have seen it, say as follows:

Mrs. C. B. Buell:

I have seen the picture of Miss Willard which you offer with a year's subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL, and think it admirable. The wonder to me is that you can give so much for so little money. The picture is full of life and spirit; indeed, the artist caught Miss Willard at her very best, and has given you a picture you may well be proud to offer.

Sincerely yours,
CAROLINE B. BUELL.

Also Miss Pugh:

I consider this by far the best picture of Miss Willard of any description, that I have ever seen. The exquisite tinting will make it an ornament to any room; and the present is a rare opportunity to procure not only a picture of Miss Willard, but a beautiful addition to the household adornment. ESTHER PUGH.

Mrs. T. B. Carse:

I consider the water color painting of Miss Willard by Prang, a gem in every particular. The delicacy of the coloring imparts such a natural, life-like tint to the fair face. The ripple of the golden hair over the smooth, white intellectual brow is most true to life, but the crowning charm is the expression of the soft, loving blue eyes that look into yours with the same frank and kindly light which has won for this incomparable woman the confidence and love of all who know her. Could our white-ribboners see this exquisitely beautiful and life-like picture, I am sure you would sell 100,000—instead of 15,000. MATILDA B. CARSE.

Mrs. E. W. Andrew,

associate editor of THE UNION SIGNAL:

The expression of Miss Willard's face in this picture is very characteristic of her; full of the courage of her convictions and the tenderness of her love for a sinning, suffering world. It will be a light of hope and help in every home it enters.

ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Mr. M. D. Kimball,

our cultured Sup't of Printing:

Art ever betrays some shortcoming. In this otherwise life-like picture of Miss Willard, the lips do not move—the image is dumb. In other respects it seems a most natural and perfect presentment of the National president.

Mrs. L. S. Rounds,

Pres. of Ills. W. C. T. U.:

The picture of Miss Willard is the best of the thousands we have seen of her dear face. Every Illinois woman ought to have one, and can if she will get a new subscriber for THE UNION SIGNAL. Let us work for picture and paper.

LOUISE S. ROUNDS.

Miss Helen Hood,

known to all the constituency:

The new picture of Miss Willard, which was shown me the other day, is, without exception, the finest one ever taken of our National president. The expression of the face is perfect, and full of animation; it is as though she was ready to speak to you. Those who are fortunate enough to possess a copy will have a prize indeed. I trust that thousands of them will be ordered; no truer, nobler face can be found among women. HELEN L. HOOD.

We offer this picture for $1, express paid, or, in connection with a subscription to THE UNION SIGNAL for $1.25, or for six new names with $6, we will send it, express unpaid, in a handsome frame. The picture will not be ready for delivery before November or December, but we want your order now. It is the best and most generous offer we have ever made, and guarantee the picture to please you.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations. NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

TO MOTHERS.

If for any reason you cannot nurse your child, we can assure you positively that there is but one Food that is practically a perfect imitation of Mother's Milk in composition and digestibility, and that is LACTO-PREPARATA. It is made wholly from milk.

All manufacturers of Infant Food make the broad claim that theirs is the best, but few, if any, tell how it is made or of what it is composed, for the facts told to any intelligent person would condemn most of them.

CARNRICK'S SOLUBLE FOOD contains 62 1-2 per cent. of Powdered Milk and 37 1-2 per cent. of wheat. Both the milk and wheat are partially digested. It is especially adapted for Infants from six months upwards, and for Invalids, Aged People and Dyspeptics.

Before you take the risk of trying any other Food, do not fail to send to us for a pamphlet of 64 pages entitled Our Baby's First and Second Years, by Marion Harland, which also gives a minute description of Lacto-Preparata and Carnrick's Soluble Food and their mode of manufacture. Sent Free.

Read the above pamphlet and then ask your Physician which Foods are the nearest approach to mother's milk.

REED & CARNRICK, New York.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

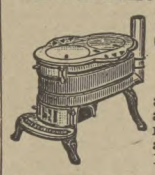
INTRODUCTION LADIES. Sample Package of 24 sheets very extra elegant gilt-edged note paper (Oxford) and envelopes for 25 cts. in stamps. Box 1219, ELKHART, IND.

SUMMER COOK STOVES.
FOR WOOD, COAL OR COBS.
Cheaper and Safer than Oil or Gasoline.



Why not confine heat in a stove, as to confine cold in a refrigerator, and use the same stove for Summer as well as Winter? Price $7 and up. GEO. H. HESS CO., 103 Fulton St., Chicago, Ill.

Bickford Family Knitter
Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired.
A. M. LAWSON,
783 Broadway, New York.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.
Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars. Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.
IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.
No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.
SPLENDID PROGRESS.
Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.
PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.
Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

AGENTS Male or Female can make good wages at their own home. Write for terms and Free Sample.
HOBB'S MEDICINE CO., 407-415 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West Office 163 State St., Chicago, Ill.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME. NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure. Read article in UNION SIGNAL, June 5, page 13. The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O

MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury. to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

A-CORN SALVE.
Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.
$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c. stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

THE DEAF HEAR SOUND DISCS are guaranteed to help a larger per cent. of cases than all similar devices combined. The same to the Ears as glasses are to the eyes. Positively invisible. Worn months without removal. H. A. WALES, Bridgeport, Conn.

RHEUMATISM.
Agents wanted for the German Anti-Rheumatic Ring. A certain and speedy cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all kindred complaints. Write for circulars and particulars. Can refer, by permission, to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, business manager, and Mr. C. D Paine, advertising manager of The Union Signal, who have used them. Address F. W. Kimball, 155 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.
The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin. For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W H. McDoel, Traffic Manager, or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent. 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago

Home Seekers' Excursions.
Take advantage of the cheap excursions offered by the CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY, to points in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Arkansas, Indian Territory, Texas, New Mexico, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Minnesota, Northwestern Iowa, South and North Dakota, Montana and Colorado, at the low rate of ONE FARE FOR THE ROUND TRIP. Tickets for these excursions will be sold on Tuesdays, Sept. 9 and 23, and October 14, 1890. They are first-class and good 30 days for return passage.
If you want to see the country, or secure a home in the Great West, don't neglect this opportunity. Be sure that your tickets read via the C., R. I. & P. Ry., which has its own lines to principal points in many of the above-named states.
For rates and full particulars address G D. BACON, Gen. Agent, Pass. Dept., 106 North Fourth Street, St. Louis, Mo., or JNO. SEBASTIAN, G. T. & P. Agt., Chicago, Ill.

American Scenery.
There is probably not another ten-mile stretch of railroad in the world more varied and majestic in its surroundings than that from Point of Rocks to Harper's Ferry. The Valley of the Potomac narrows, the hills on either side rise to the stateliness of mountains, and the river flows swiftly in ripples and eddies. Just below the ferry, the river, increased by the Shenandoah's volume, becomes a torrent. On the opposite side is Loudon Heights, a sentinel of the Blue Ridge, dark and frowning. Beyond Virginia and into West Virginia, the base of the two states, and ending in the swift flowing. stream which separates them, Bolivar Heights start abruptly up with Harper's Ferry at their feet. The train, still upon the opposite side, winds beneath Maryland Heights, thirteen hundred feet high. The meeting of these three mighty forest-crowned masses, the two rivers becoming but one, the long vista up the Potomac, in the foreground the steel bridge and behind it John Brown's Fort and the old fashioned houses of the town, the ruins of the arsenal whose two tall chimneys alone remain, Jefferson's Rock high on the heights, and over all a September sky—expression fails the theme.
The scene described above can be viewed from the windows of the Vestibule Trains running between the great cities of the east and west via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. All B. & O. trains run via Washington.

MARK YOUR LINEN 25c.
with Thalman's Famous India Ink
Thalman Mfg. Co., 610 Balt. St., Baltimore, Md.

SELL US your second hand books and your back numbers of magazines, of any language, of last 2 to 25 years Send from any distance, a list of them. Without a 2-cent stamp no list considered. MURRAY TEMPLETON & CO., 835 Broadway, N. Y Estab'd 1840

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersoll & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam.

For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores.
Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express
A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy ... 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 20.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness . . 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

ALL FAT PEOPLE
can safely Reduce Weight and Cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without Change of Diet. An English Countess writes.—"Your Trilene Tablets act admirably."—Send Postal Note for 75 cents to THE TRILENE CO., Sole Proprietors, 834 Broadway, New York.

THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.
Disclosing the wonderful medicineless cure for constipation, piles, rheumatism and any and all diseases when impurity of blood works dire results. Abundance of testimonials from the best of people. Closest scrutiny invited. Not a mind cure or any species of gymnastic, and most emphatically not a humbug. Call or address with 2-cent stamp, A. T. Bates, Western Agent, 161 La Salle St., Room 46, Chicago, Ill.

THE DR. OWEN
Electric Belt
AND APPLIANCES
Cure acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. It is a stimulant and tonic, and while curing one disease does not produce another. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.
(TRADE MARK.) THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO., 191 & 193 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Signal Notes.

THERE is nothing new under the sun. Even the penny-in-the-slot machine is by no means a modern invention. In the old Egyptian temples devices of this kind were employed for automatically dispensing the purifying water A coin of five drachmæ dropped into a slot in a vase set a simple piece of mechanism like a well-sweep in motion; a valve was opened for an instant, and a portion of the water permitted to escape. This apparatus was described by Heron of Alexandria, who lived two hundred years before the Christian era.

THE London County Council has decided, as an experiment, to erect a model lodging house on a plot of ground belonging to the Council in Shelton street, St. Giles. It will accommodate from 300 to 350 persons. The experiment will be watched with great interest by philanthropists in New York and other great cities where something to improve the social conditions of the poor is imperatively demanded. Mr. R. F. Cutting, who has expended thousands of dollars to provide improved dwellings for the poor of New York, says that in the crowded tenement houses of that city are apartments in each of which several families are living with only a chalk line to mark the boundaries between them.

MR. GOSCHEN, Chancellor of the English Exchequer, having been quoted as saying that the reduction of labor hours in England had only tended to an increase of drinking among the working people, denies that he ever made such a statement.

THE plea of "poverty" as an excuse for Louisiana's Legislature voting for the lottery is utterly disproved by figures. The state has increased in wealth during the last decade faster than at any time in her previous history; the value of her crops has nearly doubled, and her manufactures have trebled during the decade; her railroad mileage has increased two and a half times, and the New Orleans Clearing House shows an increase in her commerce of thirty-one per cent.

ROSEWATER and Roggen, of Omaha, have been keeping over fifty girls busy with their type-writers, writing letters for the liquor dealers' "Business Men's and Bankers' Association." These letters are sent by mail to voters all over the state, and their object is to persuade them to vote against prohibition "on business principles." Coming ostensibly from business men and bankers of Omaha, they will carry greater weight than if their true origin—the Liquor Dealers' Association—was known, and at the rate the girls are working, every voter in the state can be reached before election. The expense of this work is enormous, but the Omaha business men do not meet it; the money to carry it on comes from the Liquor Dealers' National Protective Association, whose secretary, C. C. Turner, set in motion through Rosewater and Roggen, the "Nebraska Business Men's and Bankers' Association." So says the Omaha Leader. This scheme shows the necessity of prohibition money to spread the truth in Nebraska.

JOHN BURNS, the English labor leader, bears most emphatic testimony to the fact that the short hours movement has always tended to sobriety and increased intelligence among workmen. He says: "Leisure to-day does not mean drinking, but the opportunities for thought, education, and true thrift, which is impossible to men whose long hours make them animals and content with a brutal existence. I attended a meeting last night of 6,000 dock laborers, and asked those who ought to know what was the effect of higher wages and better conditions, and the universal opinion was that the workers of London who have received better wages are more sober than ever before."

A LETTER received by a prominent firm in this city bore on its envelope a "sticker" with this motto, "No man who votes to legalize the saloon can with good grace object to his son's patronizing it."

ST. PAUL'S M. E. Church, Lowell, Mass., on its last communion, substituted water for communion wine. Its reason for so doing is thus given by its pastor: "One of our young men who has an inherited appetite for strong drink has fallen twice because of our communion wine. Learning of this terrible fact, we feel that we can no longer put the bottle to our neighbor's lips. Since we decided to substitute water for wine, I have learned that in former years at least two have fallen because of wine taken at St. Paul's communion service, and it is known that quite a number of our present members have felt that they could not conscientiously partake of our communion service because of the wine."

Mrs Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st 11 Jan 91

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

GRANULA

The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

PURE TEA

GET ORDERS
FOR TEAS, BAKING POWDER AND PURE SPICES.
We are the only Tea firm who give Premiums to Club Raisers and, at the same time, Presents to Consumers. We give Gold Watches, Silver Ware, Tea, Dinner and Toilet Sets, Hanging and Stand Lamps, and hundreds of other useful articles. 3½ lbs. any kind of Tea by mail, $2.00. Agent wanted in each town. Big Pay. For terms address YAMASHIRO TEA CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.
List of 500 Presents for Consumers.

TOKOLOGY. A complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Cannot be bought of dealers. Sent prepaid $2.75. Women write that "Tokology is worth its weight in gold." "Should my house take fire it would be the first book saved." "No book sells like Tokology." Sample pages free. Best terms to agents. Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

HOW OFTEN DOES YOUR UNION MEET?

Do you have good lively meetings? Could they be improved any?

Yes, but You don't Know how?

See now—send to the address below given for samples of the Monthly Responsive Readings; also of Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith's Bible Reading Leaflets, and you will know how. Try this—all it costs is a postal card, and the rest of the bill isn't much more. They constitute the cheapest and most effective W. C. T. U. teaching that we know. All the departments are discussed by the folks that know how to do it.

THEN

Address:

Woman's Temperance Publication Ass'n
181 La Salle Street,
CHICAGO.

Prohibition Program. Price 10 cents. By Anna A. Gordon. Song recitations and exercises of the brightest and best kind. High license is fired at in a way that tells. A dialogue by Mr. E. J. Wheeler on "Sense vs. License," is full of vigor, fun and education!

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

Cancer PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF Cancers & Tumors Without the Knife. Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.
CATARRH
Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.

Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

EDUCATIONAL.

MILWAUKEE COLLEGE. Milwaukee, Wis. For Young Women. For Catalogue address C. R. KINGSLEY, Ph. D., Pres't.

BUNKER HILL ACADEMY, Near St. Louis. A First-Class Boys' Home School; $280; W. C. T. U. patronize; College and Business; 8th year. Circulars of REV. S. L. STIVER, Bunker Hill, Ill.

MT. CARROLL (ILL.) SEMINARY has delightful location easy of access; distinguished for healthfulness; resident physician; Faculty of the best from Eastern colleges; expenses moderate for accommodations given. "Oreads" free.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE Morgan Park (near Chicago). Boarding School for Girls and Young Ladies. For catalogue address G. THAYER, LL. D., Morgan Park, Ill., or 77 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

BLACKBURN UNIVERSITY.
CARLINVILLE, ILL.
26TH YEAR begins September 4th, 1890. Write for Catalogue to E. L. HURD, President.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich. Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

KNOX COLLEGE, GALESBURG, ILLINOIS. Fifty-fourth year opens Sept. 4th, with greatly increased facilities. For catalogue and all information address NEWTON BATEMAN, President.

NORMAL, BUSINESS AND SHORTHAND COLLEGE. 10th year. Opens Sept 2d, 1890. No saloons in the county. A school of great reputation. Has graduated hundreds. Send for large free catalogue to JOHN E. FESLER, Pres't, Stanberry, Mo.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH 42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution. SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year. E. F. BULLARD, A. M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE
NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men. College for Ladies. 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

CHICAGO KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago Ill.

Rockford Seminary for Young Women.
42d year. Full College and Preparatory courses. Special advantages for Music and Art. Resident physician. The Seminary has a fine gymnasium building generously equipped for the Sargent system of work, and the official records show that delicate girls make a marked gain in strength while pursuing regular courses of study. Catalogue with full particulars as to entrance requirements furnished upon application. Correspondence with regard to admission in fall of 1890, or later, is invited.
ROCKFORD SEMINARY, Rockford, Ill.
SARAH F. ANDERSON, Principal.

FOREST PARK UNIVERSITY Kirkwood Seminary, 30th YEAR. Beautiful buildings, modern, roomy and homelike with every convenience; heated with hot water and lighted with electricity. No Basement Dining-Room. FULL COLLEGE COURSE (similar to that of Wellesley, Smith, etc.) Seminary and Academic Courses, Preparatory Departments. THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC fully equipped. Instruction in Pipe Organ, Piano, Voice by a pupil of LaGrange, Paris, (the Italian method), Harmony, Theory, Counterpoint, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, etc. Thorough ART Training. FULL FACULTY, 18 Specialists from Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, and Paris. For catalogue, or to secure rooms address Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, [illegible] University, St. Louis, Mo.
To any union sending a pupil, $20.00 remitted.

"UNRIVALLED" "WORLD RENOWNED"
IMPERIAL GRANUM
SAFE, NOURISHING, DELICIOUS, PURE
FOOD
THE GREAT AMERICAN DIETETIC PREPARATION FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN
FOR INVALIDS
CONVALESCENTS AND THE AGED.
THOUSANDS OF UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING SALES, PROVE MERITED SUCCESS.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. SHIPPING DEPOT. JOHN CARLE & SONS-NEW YORK

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

LADY AGENTS CLEAR $10 DAILY selling "Victoria Protector" and rubber goods for Ladies & Children. Sample "Protector" by mail $1. Mrs. L. E. Singleton, Box 668, Chicago, Ill.

AMERICAN Desk & Seating Co.,
Manufacturers
Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for Catalogues.
270-272 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

NEW ENGLISH PERFUME,
Crab-Apple Blossoms.

(Malus Coronaria.)
Chief among the scents of the season is Crab-Apple Blossoms, a delicate perfume of highest quality and fragrance.—London Court Journal.
It would not be possible to conceive of a more delicate and delightful perfume than the Crab-Apple Blossoms, which is put up by The Crown Perfumery Co. of London. It has the aroma of spring in it, and one could use it for a life time and never tire of it.—New York Observer.

Put up in 1, 2, 3 and 4 ounce bottles.
THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,
177 New Bond St., London. Sold Everywhere.
Send 12 cents in stamps to Caswell, Massey & Co., New York, who will mail a trial Bijou sample bottle of the above delicious Crab-Apple Blossom Perfume to any address.

Methods vs. Hit or Miss.

The real work of the W. C. T. U. is done, not in conventions, nor assemblies, nor popular convocations of whatever name, but in the education received in the home work, in the effort to get laws passed or laws obeyed that will help the neighborhood where you live and in preparing for local meetings where topics are discussed that widen out from neighborhood bounds to world-wide interests. The last Monthly Responsive Reading is on "Music," and is written by Mrs. Mather D. Kimball. It teems with suggestions which many people would never think of, touching music in public gatherings, at L. T. L. meetings, in local unions, etc. The music at the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Chicago last fall was under Mrs. Kimball's charge and was exceptionally well taken care of. You will do well to use this (the July Reading) and the August one on "Fairs" by Mrs. J. R. Nichols, at your meetings. The cost? A trifle compared with value received, only

$1 for 13 Copies to One Address One Year.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Veteran's Route to Boston.

The Baltimore and Ohio R. R. Co. offers the most attractive route to veterans traveling to and from the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Boston, commencing August 26th. In addition to the excellence of its train service and the magnificence of the scenery along its line, the B. & O. R. R. passes through many scenes of historic interest in the valley of the Potomac and in close proximity to the battle fields of Gettysburg, Antietam, South Mountain, Winchester, and Harper's Ferry, also including a view of Washington, the Nation's Capitol.

Excursion tickets to Boston will be sold via B. & O. R.R. at the offices of all connecting lines throughout the West.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 33.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, August 14, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: A Parallel—Education by Work—Family Jars—Statistics 8, 9
SPECIAL DIFFICULTIES: Cure for Snake Bite..... 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, Sweet Faith of Mine, by Emma P Seabury—An August Apple Blossom, by Robert St. John—An Exponent of True Character, by Rev. Henry A. Delano—The Bible for Equal Rights, by Laura Clay 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Our Traveling Editor—The Ohio W. C. T. U. at Lakeside—Ocean Grove Assembly—Bay View, Michigan—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Retta's Discoveries 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning August 24, 1890.. 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The White Ribbon at Last—The Morning Star..... 7
DIRECTORY: 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Illinois, Ohio, Nebraska, Arkansas, Wyoming, Indiana, Eastern Washington, Vermont, Missouri, Kansas—News in a Nutshell..... 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: An Appeal..... 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT:..... 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Salt Lake City has a society of young Mormon women pledged not to marry polygamists.

John Boyle O'Reilly, the Irish patriot and writer, died at Nantasket Beach, Mass., Sunday morning.

President Palmer has called a meeting of the Columbian Exposition Commission for September 15.

Wind Lake canal, Wisconsin, which by draining reclaims over $500.000 worth of land, is completed.

Dr. William Lomax, of Marion, Ind., has given his estate, valued at $100,000, to the Medical College of Indiana.

A firm of coffee dealers, New York, with a capital of $5,000,000, propose colonizing American negroes in Mexico, to cultivate coffee.

The Mississippi Farmers' Alliance met at Starkville, and the Louisiana Alliance at Baton Rouge last week; both were large and representative gatherings.

The Saturday half holiday law in New York is proving a great success. While its observance is almost universal, the percentage of Saturday crimes and misdemeanors has perceptibly diminished.

The House came to its senses before it was too late, accepted the Conference Original Package Bill, which was the Senate Bill, and passed it by a vote of 123 to 96. The President at once signed it.

Horace Waters, of New York, in addition to the thousands of dollars before given to the cause, has just subscribed $2,400 to the National Prohibition committee, payable in monthly installments of $100.

Professor Hirsch, of Chicago, thinks he has solved the problem of separating aluminum from clay, and feels sure that by his process this metal can be furnished for fifteen cents a pound instead of five dollars, the present price.

Patrick Farrelly, manager, and two clerks of the American News Company, New York, were arrested for the sale of impure literature, and 1,244 objectionable volumes were carted from their establishment on Chambers street to court, as evidence.

One result of Emperor William's visit to Queen Victoria is the withdrawal of the candidature of Prince Waldemar to the throne of Bulgaria. Startling changes are predicted as the result of this visit of the young Kaiser to his royal grandmother.

The corner-stone of Sam Small's college, Ogden, Utah, was laid Tuesday. Gladstone sent a congratulatory message, and Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote: "I delight to know that your great lake is not to remain the Dead Sea of Mormonism, but is to send forth from its shores men who will be the 'salt of the earth,' scattered through the Christian world."

The liquor dealers' convention of the Twenty-first district, Illinois, in appointing delegates to the state convention to meet next month, instructed them to agitate the question of an insurance auxiliary to that body because both the mutual and the old line insurance companies had refused to take risks on saloon-keepers, on the ground that the death rate was higher among them than in any other mercantile pursuit.

A. C. HEATH, the Texas Prohibition candidate for Governor, lately addressed the vast assembly of the Farmers' District Encampment at Sulphur Springs. He fearlessly reviewed the genuine original package decision of the Supreme Court. The audience listened with unabated interest for two hours. With a spotless moral record, brave, scholarly, and eloquent, the Texas prohibitionists are justly proud of their standard-bearer.

MR. MOODY'S latest departure in his Northfield work is a welcome advance along a line where advance is much needed. He proposes to open there a new training school for women, distinct from those already established, which shall combine a course of Bible study, with thorough, practical drill in cooking and dress-making. As the workers trained in the Bible Institute at Chicago, or similar institutions, go from house to house on their gospel mission, they find opportunities for practical help forced upon them. For example, last Thanksgiving a lady came upon a motherless home where a boy of twelve was wrestling with the problem of a dinner suited to the day. The father had provided material, but the poor boy was utterly helpless as to its preparation, till the good missionary stepped in and brought order out of confusion. Often a mother is found with a group of half-clothed children, and the garments given her are of no use unless the missionary can teach her how to make them over. The new training school will fit missionaries for just such work, and it, in turn, will open hearts to the gospel. The school will open in October for two terms of three months each; it will be held in "The Northfield," a building that can accommodate from fifty to one hundred ladies. The total expense per term will be $100. Any one desiring further information may address Miss Gertrude Hulbert, the Revell House, East Northfield, Mass.

EX-GOV. ST. JOHN made one of his best speeches at the Maryland Prohibition Convention. Among other things he said: "We are going to bring prohibition into Maryland by way of Washington. We are not here as a prod to the Democratic nor the Republican party; we are here to fight a battle of brains, a battle of conscience, and we are going to have the victory." The platform adopted is a strong one; representatives from four districts were nominated for Congress

---

MRS. GOUGAR writes: "It gives me pleasure to state that through the generosity of friends I have already received $713 for South Dakota woman suffrage work, and reported to Secretary M. F. Bailey, Huron. The recent state convention was largely attended and great earnestness prevailed. Instructions were given to delegates, literature placed in their hands, and the greatest determination was manifested to carry the amendment. The people are poor, owing to continued drouth and the sacrifices made to carry their prohibition amendment so recently," hence the imperative need of help from outside.

WHEN the citizens of Olathe, Kan., were arranging for an indignation meeting over original package saloons, the committee went to the home of St. John to have him preside. On learning that he was absent, they unanimously elected Mrs. St. John, in order, as they said, "to secure the next best man."

THE number of towns kept clear of the drink curse by prohibitory deeds is rapidly increasing. We have great faith in this style of prohibition, being a native of such a town, and, in consequence, never saw a drunken man until eighteen years old, and then saw him on a Hudson river steamboat. The new town of Harvey, eighteen miles out of Chicago, proposes to try this plan. In every deed is an iron-clad provision that if alcoholic liquors are ever manufactured, sold or given away on any lot within its boundaries, said lot shall revert to the company. The town is established for manufacturing purposes, being the site of the great steel car works which will commence business with $1,000,000 paid up capital, and a thousand workmen. Other manufacturing plants will be put in there, as their owners are wise enough to know that the absence of saloons increases the efficiency of their employés.

ON motion of Hon. Wm. Daniel, the Prohibitionists of Maryland, in their state convention last week, declared for the first time in favor of woman's ballot as a plank in their platform, and that the Prohibitionists of Wisconsin have at last frankly aligned themselves with their party for this sure method of outlawing the dram shop.

THE Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America held its twentieth annual convention in Pittsburg last week. Father Morgan M. Sheedy, first vice-president, in his report recommended the employment of organizers by the union, for the reason that the clergy had not sufficient time to devote to temperance work. Father McTighe, of Pittsburg, was greatly incensed at this, taking it as an imputation upon the clergy. In his remarks he declared that a glass of wine or beer now and then would hurt nobody, whereupon he was loudly hissed, thus showing that he had few sympathizers. Delegate Fennessy, of Boston, moved that steps be taken to have temperance lessons printed in parochial text-books. This Father McTighe also opposed, claiming that it would offend German Catholics. But in spite of his opposition, Father Sheedy's report was adopted and the temperance teaching resolution was passed, which so disgusted Father McTighe that he left the hall.

THE Anti-Lottery League of Louisiana met at Baton Rouge with about five hundred delegates. Two hundred of these were from the Farmers' Alliance which was the first organized body in the state to denounce the re-chartering of the nefarious business. An address to the people, a memorial to the President, and one to Congress were adopted requesting the enactment of anti-lottery legislation. An executive committee of twenty-nine was appointed to conduct an anti-lottery campaign. They know the foe they have to fight, and propose to be ready to meet him.

DR. HAYS is not only "home again," but hard at it in the fight. His "Random Shots" fired through the Mid Continent, pierces the armor every time. Here is one of them, written just before the passage of the original package bill: "Even the devil sometimes overreaches himself. In Europe the price of shares in American brewery syndicates went up sharply on the publication of the original package decision of the Supreme Court. That Peoria firm must have spent almost a mint of money on lawyers and costs to fight that case from the lower courts and through the highest tribunal in the land. And what is the outcome? Simply that Congress will sooner or later take the very action enforcing the laws of the states on the temperance question that has been urged on it for years. The lamentable howl that is going up from the brewing interest in view of the possible passage of the Wilson bill is very amusing, in view of the exultation with which they heralded their victory in the Supreme Court. They will perpetually bewail the fact that they ever fell into the hands of that law firm or of that Peoria brewery.

MRS. MAUD CHARLESWORTH BOOTH, the daughter of one of London's first Episcopal clergymen, will, in company with her husband, lead the Great Meetings of the Salvation Army, held in Chicago, August 19 and 20. Friends that have listened to this eloquent lady, who has charmed the select circles of New York City, will be interested to hear her again at these gatherings.

THE animus of the liquor power is the same the world over. A letter just received from Miss Caroline Fulton, the president of the Y. W. C. T. U. of Dunedin, New Zealand, proves this. Some months ago those Y's decided to erect a Cabmen's Shelter, where coffee should be served to the cabmen, and thus lessen the temptations of the public house. The spot chosen was one unfrequented by the general public, but the favorite resort of cabby. It belonged to the city and accordingly the girls applied to the city council for permission to erect the shelter thereon. This was unanimously granted, the shelter was erected, coffee furnished at cost and the good effect was marked. But now a member of the council who was away at the time the permission was granted, returns, and as a representative of the liquor party, protests against the use of the ground belonging to the city, for "purposes of private gain." He is a smooth talker, and actually talks the whole council over to his way of thinking, and the shelter is ordered removed. There was nothing for the Y's to do but to submit, give up the work and sell their building, which brought only about a quarter of what it cost them. The affair has greatly aroused public sentiment, the daily papers have thoroughly ventilated the subject, and the Y's feel that they can safely "Wait His time; the darkest night shall end in brightest day."

Contributed.

SWEET FAITH OF MINE.

BY EMMA P. SEABURY.

Sweet faith of mine that sees beyond to-day
That fuller life we yearn for so alway,
  That in the music of the great To Be
  Hears all our soul's forgotten melody,
Rise in seraphic, diapason play.

My tempters flee before thee in dismay,
And if I turn from duty, thou dost say,
  "Bear it a little while, 'tis best for thee,"
    Sweet faith of mine!

Such pain of loneliness thou dost allay,
For all my loved and lost that from me stray
  Out in the world, or o'er death's silent sea;
"We'll meet ere long," they smiling say to me,
I could not lift my cross without thy sway,
  Sweet faith of mine.

Denver, Col.

AN AUGUST APPLE BLOSSOM.

BY ROBERT ST. JOHN.

CHAPTER II.

My cousin Joe was as good and gentle a lad as lived in the shadow of Duncliff Hill. That was what the neighbors said again and again whenever I came near any of them. They delighted to talk of him, made most kind inquiries about him and always ended by wishing him safe home again. They seemed to overlook the fact that he would come back no longer a lad, but a man; or that he could possibly have undergone change of any kind in the period between the ages of seventeen and twenty-five. They never hinted to me, not the most gossiping of them all, that he had begun to be "unsteady" before he went away. Perhaps they did not really know of this, though that could hardly have been possible in a hamlet like Duncliff. More likely they sought to forget what they knew out of regard for his adoring parents.

The fact was that Joe had for a year or two been fond of spending his evenings, and now and then a Sunday afternoon, at the "Sign of the Jungle," an old beer-shop made over, renamed and newly landlorded. The proprietor and his wife had been, so they said (and I do not question the statement), for twenty years in the service of Lord Napier, and at the expiration of that period they were pensioned for life, were married and had returned to England to settle down after having traveled with his Lordship throughout all Her Majesty's dominions. They were agreeable persons to talk with, well informed in geography, history and especially in the Peerage, as becometh the loyal servants of a notable lord and statesman. Some of the farm people of Duncliff thought them a bit too mannerly for downright companionship, but this impression wore off when it was discovered that they had stories to tell to the liking of the very lowest, and that they sold as "good" beer as their predecessors had sold and gave even a larger proportion of liquid to froth. The opinion became pronounced and permanent that it was better to have a pensioned than an unpensioned hand on the tap.

England is full of such country inns kept by retired servants of the notables, or persons pretending to be such servants. If some of the lords and ladies could hear the stories which these ex-servants reel off night after night at their expense, there would probably be not a little blushing, and effort might be made to put a gag on beer-house story-telling, and not only the servants of the great families, but many notable men, themselves, are in the English tippling house business—soldiers, artists, explorers, professional men of all sorts, that is, if their stories are true.

I remember one such proprietor in particular, at whose inn I spent a night. When he learned I was an American he volunteered the information that he had served a term in the Union army and was engaged in the defense of Fort Sumter. "Yes," declared Major ——, "I was in that great battle, and I had two horses shot under me!" Perhaps I was unkind, and certainly I was not sagacious, when I brought my host to shame in the presence of his patrons by explaining that there were no horses engaged in the battle, as Sumter was a naval fort in Charleston harbor, and that no horse ever set foot within its walls.

These intelligent, traveled, fluent inn-keepers do great harm to the country people of England, for not only do they make good salesmen in a business that robs the people of their money and their happiness, but they excite the young people who come to hear their tales, render them discontented with their lot and give them wrong ideas of what sort of career is noble or base. I have never yet heard in any such inn a story or an argument that would tend to make a boy diligent, studious, honest, or obedient. They all tend the other way.

My Cousin Joe "attended lectures" at the "Sign of the Jungle" for two years steadily, and at the end of that time he knew all that seemed worth knowing about India, Australia and all the rest of the Queen's possessions. But worst of all, he had learned that his father and mother were very dull people, that his sisters had no spirit, that their life at Duncliff was the next thing to imprisonment at hard labor, and that a young man with any pluck about him would be off to do for himself. In acquiring this information and these ideas Joe had one diligent teacher in addition to the proprietors themselves. This was the landlady's sister, a girl five years older than himself, who had made the discovery that Joe had considerable money of his own and could secure plenty more from his father in case of need.

In the spring of 1864 Joe and this scheming girl landed from a steamship in the city of New York. They spent a few days in the city and then started westward, finally settling in Cleveland. On the voyage they had fallen in with a young fellow considerably older than Joe, who had traveled in America and who promised to accompany them to the West. As Joe was somewhat timid, and his wife—so he called his companion—was not unwilling, the offer was accepted. The girl carried most of the money and paid expenses for the three, she pretending that this was customary in the United States. Upon arriving in Cleveland, they selected rooms in a large house for their residence, and Joe set out to find some sort of occupation for himself. There appeared to be enough work to do, but nothing he had been accustomed to doing; so week after week passed, and by and by the money was gone. Joe was implored by his deceiver and her companion to write to his father for help, of course concealing the fact of their presence with him. He did write, confessing his ingratitude and promising to return, but that letter was never sent; his wicked companions having taken it by stealth and destroyed it. He waited months for an answer, and as none came, he concluded that his parents had lost all care for him. He earned a little money at teaming, but it was new work, unsuited to his habits, and he failed to give satisfaction.

Finally his companions persuaded him to enlist in the army, as large bounties were offered for volunteers, as high as $1,000. They gave him liquor to drink, then took him to a recruiting office with the understanding that both men were to enlist and put their bounty into the girl's keeping. Joe enlisted and his money was paid as directed. That was the last he saw of either of his deceivers until the day he was to leave for the front; then he caught sight of them hurrying away together as if to leave the city. He realized at last that he had been basely betrayed, and he could not restrain his wrath. Leaving the ranks he rushed after the cruel pair without leave or ceremony. An officer attempted to stop him and was struck down. At once there was a tumult, and when order was restored it was found that one man was mortally hurt. Joe's doom was fixed. He might have been shot under the martial law, but in the end his punishment was fixed at imprisonment for life.

The war was over in less than a year, but Joe could not go home along with the rest of the soldier boys; indeed he knew not that he had a home any longer that would welcome him even if he were free. His heart grew more hard toward his true friends as those who had betrayed him became cruel. He refused to write to his friends or to have the prison chaplain write for him. It was only through chance that my family ever learned the fate of poor Joe, although we had made diligent search in New York City and elsewhere. That prison chaplain, while on a visit in the East, attending a prison convention, was entertained at my father's home, and while there he detected in one of the photograph albums a face strikingly resembling Joe's. He learned that the names were the same. It was my good Uncle Ben. The discovery was told to Joe and he at length consented to receive a visit from some of us, but he strictly cautioned us again t revealing the dreadful secret to any other of his relatives, but only to let his father and sisters know that he was living and well.

Could poor, erring Joe have known that through all those eight years of his father's and mother's loneliness and expectancy, they had never locked the house door nor the gate in the garden wall at night, would it have eased or burdened his mind? And could his broken-hearted mother, whose last thought on earth was of her absent boy, and her last anxiety was that he should not be shut out from home even for a night—could she have seen that stronger, sterner wall, and those bars of iron, which kept her boy away, instead of his own choice, would that vision have lightened or increased her death agony?

The pretty, peaceful home at the base of Duncliff Hill was long ago broken up, and all the members have been called to the long home which, as we hope, is not subject to cruel invasion. The gentle maidens did not remain long after their father left. They would gladly have come with me to America, but I dared not let them. Last of all, Joe, himself, has gone. One day last month the prison gates opened for him to pass out forever. Let us hope that a door was open to receive him in a kindlier world.

Syracuse, N. Y.

THE END.

AN EXPONENT OF TRUE CHARACTER.

BY REV. HENRY A. DELANO.

Clinton B. Fisk furnished a splendid type of character. Character is that quality of being distinguished, but not separated from circumstances and surroundings. It is the crystal that has gathered its own from the solution we call life; the intrinsic substance, the original independent something—physical, spiritual, mental—which survives all the exposures and affiliations of the man with the human whole. It is the man, seen alone, distinct, separate from mass and masses; the mighty grip of conscious, responsible being, which preserves one totally himself. It makes him equal to the whole, so that, though the whole humanity pulled the other way, he would, nevertheless, be himself. What a man is at the heart, and in the soul of him, must determine our judgments. "Who is he? and what does he do?" These questions truly answered, will mark the real worth or demerit of the man.

"Character and service" have been emphasized by the peerless Phillips Brooks, as the two great regions of life, wherein it is possible to judge men. Moving in these spheres, I am put under the thousand candle power, the electric light, which tells my real character, motive, life. I must find the sphere of service if I would know what a man is. Out in the wide spheres of business, society, politics, men must be seen and studied if we are to know them.

Clinton B. Fisk, seen in the sphere of service, gives splendid opportunity for a proper estimate of character. He believed in the Son of God, who, as man's great exemplar, entered these wide gates of opportunity, and showed men the richness and value of the poorest life. He had studied that great life and seemed to have grasped its secrets. He saw the Saviour of men "in the world," yet not of it, touched by it, at every point of hope or doom, yet not contaminated. He saw that the Son of God could let "the potsherd thrive, Cæsar reign, Pilate judge, and the careful Pharisee pay tithes of softly weighed mint, anise, and cummin," while he was content to live, to do simple justice, and regard mercy. He saw the Man of Nazareth, bearing the splendid capacities of manhood into that higher region of service where he who would be master becomes minister, and where he who would educate a disciple's head, must first learn to wash his feet. "I sanctify myself that they also may be sanctified." That was the Master's motto. The inspirations of that great life our brother seemed to have taught.

I was permitted to have part in the great convention of thousands of sober, home-loving citizens, who called this noble patriot to stand for a great advanced idea. I am proud of that history. I have been wondering how much the nation would have suffered had its great affairs been entrusted to this man. The calm, nobly-poised, humble yet princely soul might have failed in some respects, as others have, and will. But of one thing I am very sure, yea, morally certain, he never would have furnished the example of a tolerating, license-granting, rum-befriending policy to the nation, and no appointment of his would ever have fallen to any man who, in any way, from the topmost hair of his head to the last tack in his boot, was compromised with the rum traffic.

I remember a day at New Haven, during the last campaign, when the expectant throng at the Opera House waited the arrival of General Fisk. He was ill, and was lying in pain and suffering at his hotel. Called then, to speak, to mitigate simply the weariness of the time, I remember how nervous I was. I was indignant, I was stung at the supineness, the deadness and irresoluteness of men's consciences as to this burning question of the defiant rum power. I doubtless expressed it. I spoke hot words. At last, through the pouring rain, suffering, yet resolute, the General came. He advanced to speak, amid the tumultuous encores and hurrahs of the people. How he rebuked my impatience, as I saw him there, so calm and steadfast! His manner was that of a great, patient, tender mother. His voice, clear and full, but sweet as a woman's. There were no apologies, extenuations or explanations. No side thrusts at his differing and opposing brethren; no stinging venom; no spleen of prejudice nor hate. He was calm, majestic, mirthful yet logical and sincere. He seemed confident, with a great, clear look, far ahead, in his quiet, beaming eyes. And then I thought of a gifted poet's words:

"Serene I fold my hands and wait,
  Nor care for wind, nor tide, nor sea;

I rave not now 'gainst time or fate,
For lo, my own shall come to me.
I stay all haste, I make delays,
For what avails an eager pace?
I stand amid the Eternal's ways,
And what is mine shall know my face."

Mr. Fisk showed profound respect for others and their opinions, passions and fears. I never so fully recognized the power of greatness, moral earnestness and genuine manliness, as then and there.

His life work is done. At home, in society, in church, upon public boards, at the head of bureaus, as delegate, commissioner, philanthropist, presiding officer, friend of God, humanity and goodness, General Fisk was a rare, unique and exceptional man. What was the secret? Certain it is, he was a soul of splendid courage. Character always takes sides. He had convictions, and was resolute in them.

We need such men. Need them, oh, never more than to-day. Historians assure us that the decline of the Roman Empire, the French Revolution, oppression and serfdom in Europe, and many bad, sudden calamities to nations have come through the lack or for the want of "brave, moral leadership." Things are becoming so complicated and evil so dominant, that the hero, even, is tempted to play the renegade.

Macaulay has almost foretold the situation in those wonderful lines:

"How Roman is to Roman,
More hateful than a foe,
And the tribunes beard the high,
While the fathers grind the low,
As we wax hot in faction,
In battle we wax cold,
Where foemen fight not as they fought,
In the brave days of old."

To defy danger, front disease, despise hardship, and fever, and pain! That takes a Livingstone or a Stanley, with physical and mental powers tremendous. But to expose one's self to the moral censorship of good men, to stand quietly, bearing misunderstanding and reproach, to cut one's self off from his beloved and best, to outrun all the sweet, social sympathies, and fellow confidences of those upon whom we lean, to differ with the wisest, to go in advance, even, of the moral sense of the church of Jesus Christ, to be head and front of a despised and beleaguered cause, all this demands an altitude of purpose and ideal, a supremacy of trust, mighty, resolute, almost divine.

"Fightings within and fears without," "spiritual wickedness in high places," enthroned falsehood, venomous assault and political perfidy, all these our brother knew he must face, and at last, he said to us, "I have settled it upon the knees of my heart; I can take the standard, and taking it, I will not turn back."

Fisk had the splendid courage to live in the white light of a brave, pure conscience. Like the apostle of old, he dared to say, "We can but speak the things we have heard and seen." He would "hearken unto God." His faith, his hope, his very life, were so rooted in the eternal laws of God's evermore Right, he could not compromise with the world on other terms than those of justice, duty, goodness and truth.

He was a generous man, open-hearted, open-handed and benign. Newsboys, bootblacks, and many a little waif of New York would "lay for the Gin'ral," as they put it, and said, "We'll git a tip worth yer while, when he gits along."

And yet, he possessed discrimination and wisdom rare. In so many meetings of the days gone by, he has been seen, the observed of all, mingling in the great throngs at "Cooper Union," "Chickering," or the Grand Opera House, and frequently with Greeley, Raymond, General Grant and other famous men of the last decades. Public-spirited, broad of view, wise in counsel, dignified, generous,—a cool yet tender heart, society needed him.

The noble Methodist Church loses a great layman, a fit representative, a devoted Christian, a loyal worker; a man who used his best powers to keep the badged and bannered hosts of that great body foremost and faithful.

He was a hopeful man. With clear-visioned faith he saw the earth move sunward. He knew that truth would triumph. He was in no hurry. He leaned back upon the Gibraltar rock of right, and hid himself in the promises of Almighty God. Somebody said, one day, and it was meant for a stinging sarcasm, "He is greater than his party."

I said to myself, "That is as it should be. A man should be greater than his party." Yes, ever and always, a man should be greater than his business, greater than his town, and, in a high moral sense, a minister should be greater, grander than his church. He must be if he lifts men up to the high altitude of character and service for Jesus Christ. Oh, that dominant political parties would set about to find a leader greater than the party, instead of some accidental, available figurehead, to serve as henchman and divider of spoils. Yes, we need greatness to-day. Paul was greater than the Roman Empire. Livingstone, greater than the dark continent. Carey, greater, indeed, than poor India. Lincoln was greater far than the rebellion. Luther, greater than the papacy. Fremont was greater than the Rocky Mountains, and the "Pathfinder" of the west found his way at last to the topmost zenith of their snow-clad mysteries.

If we are to govern corrupt cities, meet pauperism with thrift and fair wages, assuage the thirst of the mad commune, check the fever of avarice, beat back the threatening floods of Romanism and superstition, we must be greater than party, policy, or selfish fear.

If we are to conquer the hydra-headed monster, whose legalized and semi-sanctioned murder is making the whole land black with crime and misery, we must be greater than it. We must rise into the spheres of truer ethical character, and go forth into the arena of that exalted service made sacred by the radiant example of the Christian citizen, the tender patriot, the peaceful hero, General Clinton B. Fisk.

Evanston, Ill.

THE BIBLE FOR EQUAL RIGHTS.

BY LAURA CLAY.

Numbers of Christian men and women are opposed to some features of the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union from a conservatism which they mistakenly imagine is founded on Bible precepts, whereas I am fully persuaded that the Holy Scriptures throughout teach equality of rights between men and women, and though many of the rights of women have hitherto been cast in abeyance through the effects of sin, yet now the great woman's rights movement is God's call to His children to go forward in the direction of their restoration for the advancement of His kingdom upon earth.

Genesis 1: 26-28, may aptly be called the great charter of human rights. Here we are told that God made both man and woman in His own image; that he assigned to both of them the same task—to subdue the earth, and that He gave to both of them the same authority—to have dominion over the works of His hands. So we are taught that the rights of the woman were fully equal to the rights of the man. I remember that some years ago a grave senator in our Kentucky legislature, arguing against a bill for the property rights of married women, quoted the Scripture as saying, "God made man in His own image, and gave him dominion." His speech was reported in a religious paper, and the reverend editors either did not observe the misquotation, or did not think it worth while to point it out. I give this as a striking instance of the necessity of our studying very closely for ourselves what the Scriptures do teach, lest the Word of God be made void to us by the tradition of men as it was in the days of Christ.

In the second chapter of Genesis we have the institution of the Sabbath; the picture of the man in the Garden of Eden, which he tilled, and from which he won his food without painful toil; and then a second account of the creation of woman, from which we may derive much instruction by a careful study. In this second and fuller account of the creation of woman every detail condemns the baneful subjection of woman which sprang into its foul existence when primal sin cast down woman, the physically weaker vessel, from her high estate of equality with man. For, notice; God first declares that it is not good for the man to be alone, and that He will make an helpmeet for him. In this sentence we have a complete refutation of the idea so often advanced that in many important functions woman is not fitted to be man's co-laborer. But this tells us she was made a helpmeet for man, so pronounced by her Maker, and hence her aid is suited to every requirement of his life; and the more difficult the duty the more necessity for her aid. Then the sacred account tells minutely of what nature this helpmeet should be. God caused to pass before man every living creature, and man gave names to them all; but among them all there was not found an helpmeet for man. Now it is not said that man himself perceived that none of these creatures could be an helpmeet for him.

Since we know so little about man before his fall, it is useless for us to surmise what he thought about it then; but it is a fact full of warning to all who may consider men's ideal of womanhood a worthy aim for women that since the fall an overwhelming majority of men, even at the present time, are quite content in the companionship of women whom they believe have either no souls, or inferior ones. Mohammedans far outnumber all sects of Christians, and they believe women have no souls; Hindoos, who are numbered by the hundred million, and hold the transmigration of souls, believe that women, by the most abject submission in this life, attain the privilege of being born men in the next. In short, except in the Jewish and Christian religions, we find no recognition of an equal soul in man and woman; and a very great philosopher of our day has pointed out that the still prevalent belief that the rights of women are not equal to the rights of men is an evanescent form of the old belief that women have no souls. So the standing of women in Christian countries now is not due to men's ideal of womanhood, but to the Holy Scriptures where God has very carefully taught us that woman is the equal of man. For having shown that there was no helpmeet for man in any creature inferior to himself, he causes Adam to fall into a deep sleep, and taking from him a rib, of it he makes a woman, and brings her unto the man; and the man says, "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh." And God declares, "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife, and they shall be one flesh;" thus instituting the holy law of the marriage of one man to one woman. Here, then, we see the helpmeet whom God provided for the man; a creature made in God's own image, not made apart from the man that he might in the arrogance born of sin declare that she was inferior to himself, but bone of his bones and flesh of his flesh; a different individuality, indeed, but equal in noble endowment. And she was placed by the side of man in perfect equality of rights; the task of subduing the earth was given to both of them; the dominion over the works of God's hands was confided to both of them; and the woman was to be guided in the performance of her part of the mission of the race, not by man, but by the divinely appointed capacities of her own nature.

But we must turn from our contemplation of this perfect plan, and consider how sin has affected it; for the serpent entered the garden, and the woman and the man fell into disobedience. Then we read that God said unto the woman, "Thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." Gen. 3: 16. In this sentence many find justification for the subjection of women to men who acknowledge that they were created with equal rights. They interpret it as a command from God which both men and women are in duty bound to see executed. But this is a false view; for, as many commentators point out, this is a prophecy, not a command, as is evident by applying the same method of exposition to it as is invariably applied to the passage following (Gen. 3: 17-19), which has never been interpreted as a command. It is a singular thing that the penalty of sin foretold to the woman and the one foretold to the man have been regarded in remarkably different lights; for, though the ground was cursed for man's sake, yet it has always been evident and admitted that toil and weariness were thereby entailed upon the woman as well as upon the man. But it is an amazing thing that we not infrequently hear the opinion implied that the sin-wrought inequality between man and woman, which God foretold when he said to the woman that her desire should be to her husband and he should rule over her, is a penalty which attaches solely to the woman, while the man not only is not degraded by it, but that actually his rule over the woman is a new honor and privilege conferred upon him! How far from the true meaning of God is such an imagination as this! When we have more of the spirit of Christ, we shall understand that what degrades woman degrades man as surely as what afflicts man afflicts woman. Man and woman are halves of one whole, and they can never be separated in their woe or in their weal. Let us strive to see clearly what this prophecy means, and I think we shall find that the Lord foretells the darkest consummation of sin and one which is the root of the most disastrous social disorders—the woman should debase herself to seek to please the creature rather than the Creator; and the man should despise the woman, and rejecting her as an equal helpmeet, should rule over her. Thus the disloyalty of the woman and the brutish arrogance of the man should cast the woman down from her rightful station, and in the train of this unholy subversion of God's plan should follow humanity's bitterest woes. All the history of the past is a record of how mankind has wrought out this prophecy in sin and sorrow. But has this been in accordance with God's will? Has it not, on the contrary, been in accordance with that mysterious dispensation whereby God has for a time permitted evil to obscure His everlasting purposes? Surely this is the case, for in the beginning God gave woman equal dominion with the man, and "The gifts and the calling of God are without repentance." Rom. 11: 29.

Besides this, we are taught that the social order of Eden is God's will for us now. We have read the institution of the Sabbath on the seventh day, and also that the Lord appointed to man moderate labor with abundant returns in the Garden of Eden. Now, after sin came into the world God said: "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in toil shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth to thee; in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." Through all the past we have seen this prophecy also fulfilled. Everywhere man has carried on a bitter, and often unequal warfare with material forces. To the savage, starvation is ever like a tiger tugging at a slender leash, ready to spring upon its victim; and although in civilized countries this dread foe is subdued, yet the greed of gain and power, and their selfish and ignoble use when won, sensual and wasteful vices, and a groveling absorption in material things; all these contribute to keep millions of men and women eating scanty bread, and crowd out of their toilsome lives the sweet rest and holy influences of the Sabbath day. But is this in accordance with the will of God? Far from it; God reiterates His command to keep the Sabbath day holy both in the Old and New Testaments, and it is because of sin that the primal curse still clings to earth, for again and again the promise is given us that if we walk in His statutes and keep His commandments the land shall yield her increase and we shall eat bread in fullness, and keep His Sabbaths in peace; and so man's life would be again as in Eden, divided between healthful labor and refreshing and holy rest.

Thus we have seen that sin has blighted the human race both in its contact with material forces and in social relations, as the Lord foretold; but the Lord also promised that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. So when Christ came He said, "Every plant which my Heavenly Father planted not shall be rooted up." Matt. 15:13. Sin obscured God's Edenic gift of the Sabbath, but it was restored; sin introduced polygamy, but Jesus commanded His followers to return to the primal type of marriage; and it is nothing but sin that through long ages has cast woman down from her place of equality with man. But Christ's kingdom still advances until in our day this hoary wrong is called up to judgment, and Christians are asked the question, Are the rights of women equal to men's? Shall the woman have dominion with the man? O Christians, let us answer as Christ did, and say, Have ye not read that He which made them from the beginning made them male and female and gave them dominion? And if it be said, Why, then, do the laws of every land place the woman in subjection to the man? Let Christians answer again, "Through the hardness of men's hearts" they have done this, "but from the beginning it hath not been so."

Humanity shall regain all its lost liberties when it seeks them through the way shown in Christ's promise, "If ye abide in my word, then are ye truly my disciples, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John 8:31, 32. Christian women, let us seek and claim all the freedom Christ would give us. If we do this we must seek the franchise for ourselves; for without that it is but a mockery to call ourselves free under a government where every man, indeed, has a share in the dominion, but not one woman has a part. Say not, "It is not womanly to take part in government." Let Christian women covet that womanliness wherewith God clothed them in the day "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." Job 38:7, 8. Say not, "We have all the rights we want." Would you refuse a gift from the Saviour's hands? It is He who calls you to freedom. And if this gift appears to you, not a privilege, but a new and heavy responsibility, yet it should be gladly accepted to do the Master service. We cannot blind our eyes to the need for woman's voice in the laws that govern women. We gratefully concede that the men of America have done more for women than other men; and yet we need the watchful care of women over the interests of women, that even-handed justice may prevail in our laws, rather than unequal discriminations pieced out with capricious generosity in administration. We need protection by the law adjusted to women's own sense of their wants, not the scanty restraints which they, who are too often the aggressors, are content to place upon themselves. Through all and above all we need the woman half of the race to be represented throughout the realm of government, because government should meet the wants of a twofold humanity. Men cannot supply these deficiencies if they would. The ages which have passed have not made man more sufficient in himself than when God pronounced, "It is not good for the man to be alone." O Christian men and women, let us do what we can to speed the blessed day when in our beloved country the helpmeet God provided for man shall stand by his side, and the woman shall share again the dominion with the man.

Lexington, Kentucky.

Correspondence.

OUR TRAVELING EDITOR.

[Miss Ames seems too much occupied to "write for the paper," so we are glad to give our readers an extract from a letter to a friend.—ED.]

FLORENCE, ITALY, July 22.

The days are so full and rich, they fly as though winged. From Berlin we went to Dresden, the city of charming art galleries; Vienna came next, the most beautiful of cities. I longed to stay months. Then we visited Munich, interesting but not enchanting. From there we went to Oberammergau to see the Passion Play. I have never had such a spiritual uplift as on that Sabbath day when, with 6,000 others, I sat from eight in the morning until six in the evening and followed our blessed Saviour from his triumphal entry into Jerusalem, on to his betrayal, trial, crucifixion, resurrection and ascension. Every scene is introduced by a fine chorus, and while they sang our hearts were strangely touched, and as our eyes wandered away from those singular peasant angels up to the sky, we heard the rustle of the trees and the song of birds and caught glimpses of the mountains, and all seemed a strange, poetic dream. Never has Christ seemed so near and real as since then.

On last Monday, a week ago to-day, we started for Venice; when near the Brenner pass we found two feet of snow covering wheat-fields, mountains and valleys. We were delayed by a broken bridge, so while waiting we made snow-balls and talked of home, and the way you were all doubtless sweltering.

As we went up into the Tyrol mountains the scenery was more and more grand. Great peaks, snow-clad, rose on both sides and cascades came tearing down into the river until it was a rushing torrent. At Botzen we were told we could go no farther, so we spent the night, and in the morning took carriages for a fifty miles drive over the Mendel mountains. It was wonderful; up, up, we went, into the very heavens, while below us thousands of feet, lay the picturesque villages, blue lakes, and vine clad hills. I shall never forget that day.

The next day we spent in Verona, drove past the homes of Romeo and Juliet on our way to the great Amphitheatre which seats 24,000. How Mrs. Carse would like to engage it for one of her great entertainments! It is about equal to her great heart and marvelous successes. At 2:30 we reached Venice, and my first view of the "Queen of the Adriatic," rising fairy-like from the sea, will never be forgotten, I felt the charm of that none-such city as soon as I stepped into a gondola, and could appreciate the state of mind of the Boston girl who wrote home: "Last night I lay in a gondola, on the Grand Canal, drinking it all in, and life never seemed so full before."

We took part in a grand fête given in honor of the Prince of Morocco and his suite. A circular floating palace composed entirely of colored lights, with a huge light tree in the center, headed the procession, and was followed by a thousand gondolas, all decorated with Chinese lanterns and filled with gaily dressed people. The palaces all along the Grand Canal were brilliantly illuminated, and the music by the orchestra and singers in the great colored boat, was fairly bewildering. It was one o'clock before we reached our hotel, so slowly did we float, and for some time I could not sleep for thinking of that enchanting scene.

JULIA A. AMES.

THE OHIO W. C. T. U. AT LAKESIDE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL;—The music of the rain on the roof of the great auditorium at Lakeside on Thursday night, July 31, was answered as with a joyful refrain by the great audience rising and singing, at Dr. Vincent's request, the soulful Doxology: "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

As Friday came with its smiling sun and cool breezes, helping folks to forget their bodies a bit after the long drought, minds and hearts were alert for the feast in store on Friday and Saturday, the W. C. T. U. days, which were this year made a part of the regular Lakeside Encampment. Crowds poured in from all directions, so that the greatest strain of the season on the ample accommodations of the resort was made, and the audiences were the largest and the speaking, in the judgment of many judicious persons, the best thus far.

On Friday, at ten a. m., Miss Esther Pugh poured out her earnest soul in the Bible Reading on "The Model Prayer," from John 14th, 15th and 16th chapters. The obedient and submissive soul of Christ she held up as the model of the disciple who would pray aright. Mrs. Terrill, of Cleveland, followed with a paper, carefully prepared and modestly but effectively delivered, on "The Importance of Temperance Teaching in Our Sabbath Schools." The victory gained in the International Sabbath School Lesson Committee was set forth.

At eleven o'clock Mrs. Frances H. Leiter, Ohio superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, spoke with remarkable grace and power for coöperation in the enforcement of the Temperance Instruction Law, which she worked so long and faithfully to secure. The Coal oil Legislature, which passed the law, and whose photographs a little street Arab took to be pictures of the Salvation Army, will live, as Mrs. Leiter said, in the good fruits of this law when all the rest of their deeds are forgotten.

In the afternoon the auditorium was packed to hear Miss Willard on "A White Life for Two." Her golden words "waked the better soul that slumbered" in many, as one could see in the tears and smiles chasing each other on all hands. The kindly words from the "elder sister" appealing to her brothers for the same standard of purity in them as they expect in their sisters, found as kindly a welcome.

Mrs. H. B. Wisner, at nine o'clock on Saturday marshaled her "Loyal Legion." At ten o'clock Miss Esther Pugh led a prayer service, giving as the key-note, "They saw Jesus only." The starting point of the thought being the Mount of Transfiguration.

At eleven o'clock Mrs. Haggart, of Indianapolis, Ind., National lecturer on woman suffrage, gave an able argument in behalf of that cause. At half past two o'clock Miss Willard spoke again in her matchless style, on "The Woman's Work," developing in a sermonic appeal for the consecration of women especially to Christian work.

The Sabbath was, of course, the high day of the feast, though but an hour of it was given distinctively to W. C. T. U. work.

Dr. T. P. Stevenson, editor of the Christian Statesman, made an able plea for National Reform at the morning service in his convincing sermon on, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The Nation must own Christ as the rightful Head and Ruler of it, Dr. Stevenson maintained, and proved it from the Word of God and right reason.

Miss Willard, as vice-president of National Reform Association, followed in the most eloquent strain we have ever heard even from her eloquent lips.

The Christian patriot spoke in her ringing tones: "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy."

At four o'clock the Y's presented their objects and aims. Mrs. Ingham introduced Dr. Anna Shaw, who led in prayer. Miss Jennie Olmstead, superintendent of social purity, gave a Bible reading. Miss Morgan, the efficient superintendent of Young Woman's work, introduced Miss Anna Gordon and Mrs. Marie M. Powell, who spoke on the work of the Y W. C. T. U. Through the kindness of Professor Meyers, the able leader of the Auditorium orchestra, stirring songs from Miss Gordon's "Songs of the Y. W. C. T. U." were rendered most effectively.

All white-ribboners were delighted to hear Mrs. Lovell, National superintendent of the mercy department, who came from her home in Bryn Mawr, Penn., at her own expense to present her favorite theme. Much interest in this department was awakened through Mrs. Lovell's earnest presentation of its needs.

On Friday an excursion of nine hundred people came in from Detroit to hear Miss Willard on "A White Life for Two." Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, state president of the Ohio W. C. T. U., presided at all the meetings of the W. C. T. U. days. To her efforts belongs largely the success of these meetings.

The National officers and lecturers who were entertained at the Lakeside Hotel together with Ohio's officers expressed themselves heartily pleased with the manner in which they were entertained by the Ohio W. C. T. U. Every courtesy was shown our officers by the Lakeside Association and the proprietors of Lakeside Hotel.

It was cause for general regret that Mrs. Clevenger, the faithful corresponding secretary of the State Union, could not be present because of illness. It is remarked by all who have attended these W. C. T. U. meetings, that through them there has been greater interest awakened in W. C. T. U. work at Lakeside, and it is believed that the good influences of these gatherings will be felt in all parts of the state in time to come. The two days given the state union were made a part of the regular encampment season and the dates were most timely.

Surely, in this movement cradled in the Crusade of sixteen years ago is realized the truth of the promise, "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

M. P.

OCEAN GROVE ASSEMBLY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of New Jersey is a strong organization, exerting a needed influence throughout the state. Mrs. Sarah J. Downs, the president and state organizer, has traveled up and down New Jersey, until now every county in the state is organized and there are 220 local unions. Last winter the unions presented to the state legislature a petition with 16,000 signatures for the passage of a Scientific Temperance Educational bill. Mrs. Downs spent three weeks at Trenton last winter pressing this educational bill, but though unsuccessful, she is not discouraged and will try it again next fall. She says she will never stop till she succeeds.

The W. C. T. U. School of Methods opened with a Temperance Love Feast on Saturday morning, July 5th, presided over by the president, Mrs. Downs. This was an exceedingly interesting occasion, as it gave a large number of ladies an opportunity to relate their personal experiences in temperance work.

Mrs. Laura B. Crane, the evangelist, gave an interesting account of her experience in breaking off taking whisky as medicine. Although she and her parents were Christian people, she said that they, like many others, thought liquors a medical necessity, and she used whisky regularly for dyspepsia. She was persuaded against her will to make an address at a temperance convention, and she said to her audience, "How can I make a temperance speech when I have to take whisky for dyspepsia, or the doctors say I will die, but it has come to me that die or not I will never touch whisky again. But," continued Mrs. Crane, "I did not die; my dyspepsia got better, and I am here to recommend simple hot or cold water."

Mrs. Crane's experience was received with applause, for one of the special doctrines of the New Jersey union is that alcoholic liquors are not necessary for medicinal purposes.

Mrs. Downs stated in her annual address, that the union was not a political organization, but that the members had their political affiliations just as they had before they put on the white ribbon. The foundation stone of their work was the gospel.

Mrs. Helen Crane, the president of the Asbury Park union, made a crisp speech in which she said that their society would be willing to let the men vote, when they had learned that taxation without representation was tyranny, and gave the women their rights.

The Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union held a conference in the afternoon, at which Miss Fannie C. Mulford, state superintendent, presided, Mrs. Mary P. Sparks read a paper on Health, and Miss Mattie O. Waters, of New York, made an address on Physical Culture, which was well received. Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap made a few remarks. She said she had just come from Maine, where she had spoken twenty-seven times in twenty-six days. The saloon, she said, was going down. It was a throne of iniquity. The truth would endure; men will meet it at the ballot-box, or they will meet it at the judgment day. Both the original package and the original saloon must go.

The following Sunday evening services were under the auspices of the union, and Mrs. Lathrap delivered the sermon, a discourse of convincing argument and wonderful power. Her text was, "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God." "Faith," she said, "was not a religious dogma, nor necessarily shut up to the spiritual realm alone, but the force in all life which achieves and brings to perfection all living means. What the world wants to know, is the success of being and doing. Faith always goes out from the known to the yet undiscovered and unaccomplished, and is, therefore, the part of all progress. God takes this mightiest force for victory as the power unto salvation, and gives a distinct truth to the acceptance of faith, viz: Jesus is His Son. Believing that Jesus is the Son of God, all else must be accepted. Sin is a danger, judgment a reality, personal harmony with God a necessity, or this life and the other must end in defeat. In life's doings the same glorious force is the center of power. If Jesus is the Son of God, then His kingdom is sure. Truth must triumph, wrong must die, and they who stand for the right must win. How then can a man say he believes Jesus is the Son of God, and then say that to license the rum traffic is the best that can be done with this evil."

The walls of the James Tabernacle, where the W. C. T. U. held most of the sessions of the state summer School of Methods, were decorated with mottoes, expressive of the principles of the organization. The following are samples: "Prohibition is better enforced in ninety counties in Iowa than any license law ever made in Iowa, and even better than any high license law is now enforced in any state in the Union." "What the voters of to-day need is backbone." "If men will engage in this destructive traffic, if they will reap the wages of iniquity, let them no longer have the law-books as a pillow, nor quiet their consciences with the opiate of a court of license."

Mrs. J. K. Barney, of Rhode Island, made some interesting remarks on the good results of wearing the white ribbon. Mrs. Emma Boarne, the state secretary, opened the discussion, "What shall be substituted for the subtile attraction of the saloon?" She said the saloons were supplied with papers and games, and these the ladies tried to counteract by opening coffee-houses, a reading-room and giving free lectures. Another attraction of the saloon which she referred to was its political relations. The slates are made out there and the caucuses are held there. Whether temperance is in politics or not, we have found that the saloon is in politics. The only remedy for this is in legislation, and the only way that this can be secured is by the ballot.

Mrs. McClees, of New York, who is doing such a good work for sailors and soldiers, said that they had found that neither soda water nor coffee will put out the fire of alcohol; nothing but prohibition would abolish the saloon.

Mrs. A. A. Phelps, state superintendent of the department of narcotics, read a paper on the question, "Does the tobacco habit foster the love of drink?" She presented many facts and medical testimonials showing that it did.

Mrs. Ellis, of Newark, gave statistics of physicians, showing that in typhoid fever eleven out of one hundred total abstainers died, thirty-one out of one hundred moderate drinkers died, and of drinking men one hundred per cent died prematurely.

Dr. A. A. Phillips read statistics showing the success of non-alcoholic treatment in disease. At the closing session of the School of Methods Mrs. Lathrap made a brilliant address on Prohibition, and Prof. Cornwell, of Omaha, spoke on the Nebraska amendment campaign.

Last Monday afternoon the union held a memorial service to General Fisk. Mrs. Downs presided, and read an account of his death-bed scene. Mrs. J. T. Ellis, of Newark, paid Gen. Fisk a touching tribute. She referred to the fact that no mention was made at the funeral in New York of General Fisk's prohibition record. She thought it was a great omission that some of the speakers did not say that "General Fisk had the courage to do what he thought was right." "But," said she, "as I looked at him in his coffin, I thought God will not forget his work for prohibition." Mrs. Helen Crane, of Asbury Park, Dr. Wright, of New York, and Mrs. Downs made addresses, paying loving tribute to their beloved leader, General Fisk.

The New Jersey union will hold a number of Schools of Methods on various camp-grounds in the state during the summer. One of the subjects that will be given special consideration is "The Duty of the Church to the Prohibition movement." IDA HINMAN.

BAY VIEW, MICHIGAN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—"Beautiful for situation," indeed, is Evelyn Hall, the new home of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at Bay View, and the beauty of the Hall is a fitting complement of the position, for it is a gem worthy of its setting. The building is the gift of the Union's staunch friends, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Peters, of Manistee, and is named in honor of Mrs. Peters. The builder and the architect have been faithful to the trust given them, and the broad halls, the pleasant lodging rooms, the airy, cheerful assembly rooms are, in their turn, worthy of the work of the School of Methods, which is to be held therein.

The dedicatory exercises took place July 24. Noble, brotherly words were spoken by Mr. John M. Hall, the superintendent of the Assembly, in presenting the keys of the building to Mrs. Benjamin, the leader of the School of Methods. He congratulated Bay View on the recognition, therewith, of a "new department, organically connected with the Assembly." "I am glad," said he, "that we invited the Woman's Christian Temperance Union here four years ago. I am glad because this union of Christian women has come here, and come to stay, and to sustain us. We shall give them a hearty welcome at all times. This building is a prophecy of the time to come, when the influence of this Assembly shall be enlarged, so as to reach thousands more than it now does. We are glad to know that these thousands will here come under the influence of this splendid organization." After returning thanks to the donors, and paying special tribute to Mrs. Benjamin, in acknowledgment of her faithful work, he placed the keys in her hands, as custodian for the W. C. T. U.

"The W. C. T. U.," said Mrs. Benjamin, "has no desire to commemorate itself in monuments of bronze or marble, but would the rather preserve its memory by writing on the minds and hearts of men; and this building enables us to obey the wise and kindly spirit of the age, in seeking and disseminating such truths as shall make men free. This spirit is in all the Bay View atmosphere—the camp-meeting, the missionary conferences, the Round Table, the lecture courses, the schools of art and music, and all the departments of the University, are helps to lift men higher and to make them wiser and happier and better. . . . We are gratefully glad for Evelyn Hall, and especially glad that it was builded here, for in the life at Bay View there is nothing to repel, nothing to deplore. The folly and sin of bowing down to wealth is not here manifest; the social and moral perils of resorts peopled only by the gay and fashionable, are here unknown. . . . There was never such serious intensity of conviction, never such fixedness of purpose to work to successful results, never such earnest desire that the world should be better because this organization has lived in it. So to-day we dedicate this temple to the sacred service of humanity; and as the cause of humanity is the cause of God, we shall come here as to a hallowed shrine, believing that prayer and song and the incense of thanksgiving are more acceptable to Him than the odor of spices, and patient labor a better offering than burnt sacrifice. May there dwell within these walls that sweet charity 'that vaunteth not itself, that thinketh no evil, but hopeth all things, and rejoiceth in the truth.'"

The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Moots, state superintendent of evangelistic work; the music was by Miss McLaughlin, whose clear, beautiful voice rang out in a song of supplication, and the La Carita Club, a quartette of ladies from Petoskey, of which Mrs. McCune is leader, who sang a fine chorus arranged for the occasion, entitled "Hail, Temple, Beautiful and Grand!"

Letters were read from Miss Willard and Mrs. Lathrap, expressing their regret at being unable to be present at the dedication of the Hall: "I rejoice in another finished monument to the work and purposes of the W. C. T. U.," said Mrs. Lathrap, "and especially rejoice that it stands at Bay View, in our own state. . . . It is the gift of a man who built, so far as I know, the very first hall devoted to our work—the one at Manistee. . . . What his generous thought has builded should be dear to us, and will be. It is graced with the name of our comrade and sister in a holy work; and in her honor to-day we are honored, and in this token we all share. . . . I send you greeting, with all who gather to dedicate to God and the truth this new home of the White Ribbon and its high ideals. I pray for the blessing of heaven on those who have builded, and those who enter into the joy of this finished work."

"If there is anything I like above everything else connected with the temperance movement," wrote Miss Willard, "it is to be on hand in the 'good times' when a new building is dedicated to the cause of God and Home and Native Land, for here is a fresh object lesson, level to everybody's comprehension, saying with each brick and stone and gable that our cause has come to stay. It has moved out of its tents, lost its temporary character, and come into temples, beautiful, useful, abiding." She also spoke grateful thanks to the gracious donors of the Hall, and to Bay View, "that grand and generous summer camp where women have equal recognition with men, and whose brotherly chief, John M. Hall, has won our undying gratitude because of the chivalric justice he always manifests."

Mrs. L. M. Boise, "Honorary" state superintendent of evangelistic work, spoke of the Divine side of the work, saying that "the long continuance of the conflict gives promise of greater permanence than might have resulted from the plans made at the beginning, in the Crusade days." Rev. Dr. Fisk, president of Albion College, gave earnest words of encouragement, saying, "I believe in the women—I believe in Christian women—I most believe in Christian temperance women. The world has been waiting for you for six thousand years. How it should have occurred to men that they could save the world alone, except that they are self-conceited, I can not tell."

The day and its exercises were all that one need wish for the opening of a new vista of possibilities.

The Bay View School of Methods must be counted among the successes in this line. Recognized as a department on the Assembly program, ably led by Mrs. Benjamin, and served by a corps of teachers embracing many well-known specialists, it could not be a failure.

Most of the time the sessions were from nine to eleven in the morning, and from three to five in the afternoon. Among the state workers who took part were Mrs. Moots and Mrs. Boise, presenting the claims and needs of the evangelistic department; Mrs. Kellogg, that of franchise; Miss Newcomb, on how to walk, breathe, dress and talk; and—last, but by no means least—Mrs. Benjamin with her inimitable parliamentary drill. If the women of Michigan do not become experts, able to untangle all the possible snarls of "amendments to amendments" even when faced by the "previous question," it can only be because they fail to improve a rare opportunity.

Miss Newcomb, in addition to her work in the School of Methods, conducted large classes in physical culture, using the Delsarte gymnastics. She is doing a fine work in Michigan in thus teaching the care of these bodily temples. I prophecy that the Peninsular state will not always be able to hold exclusive possession of this preacher of the new gospel.

I had the pleasure of presenting the subjects of scientific temperance instruction, health, our literature, and the World's W. C. T. U. Professor Delos Fall, of Albion College, gave two fine addresses on "The Physical Effects of Alcohol," and "Is Alcohol a Food?" Our white-ribbon songster, Mrs. Alice J. Osborne, of Boston, sang at call, lifting all hearts on the wings of her song. Mrs. Livermore, yielding at last to the urgent petitions of Mrs. Benjamin, took the long journey from Boston to Bay View, gave three of the Assembly lectures, assisted in the School of Methods, and was the orator of "ours" on the W. C. T. U. day. Grandly, indeed, did she present our cause, rising to the occasion with no less power than when, the day before, she told the marvelous story of Wendell Phillips and the times that tried men's souls.

The decorations of the auditorium were beautiful and appropriate; our motto in snowy letters rested on a background of evergreen, while above it was a crayon portrait of Miss Willard, draped in yellow and white (the Michigan colors), the festoons caught with water lilies. The superintendence of this work was in the hands of Mrs. P. J. Howard, of Bay View, president of the eleventh district. Evelyn Hall was thronged with guests coming from Washington, Rhode Island, Tennessee and California, as well as nearer states, on the evening of July 31, for a general invitation had been given to the W. C. T. U. reception. Many words of appreciation and congratulation were spoken as the guests met the principal of the School of Methods and her aids or the reception committee. A short program of music, recitations, and words of cheer followed the hand-shaking.

During the last few days of the Assembly the School of Methods gives place to a missionary conference; but missionary or temperance, "or whatever it be," beautiful Evelyn Hall, reflecting the spirit of the Assembly which it adorns, stands for the truth of God.

ALICE M. GUERNSEY.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

***

If there is any class of workers more than another who deserve credit for working for the Temple, it is the patient, loving women that go from house to house to get the names of a hundred little children on their Baby Band list, and earn $10 for the building fund. But their unselfish work is more far-reaching than this. They are sowing temperance seed most effectually. Taking little baby fingers and placing their clinging clasp in the hand of the parent, drawing both parent and child into paths of temperance and righteousness. One of these noble workers is Mrs. Mary E. Dubridge, Morrison, Ill. Although sixty-two years old and delicate in health, she has raised a full Baby Band numbering 106. Another aged saint in her sixty-ninth year, Mrs. S. J. Lundy, Palmyra, Mo., has raised a full Baby Band. Mrs. Lucy L. Hubbard, the efficient superintendent of Temple work for Lake City, Minn., W. C. T. U., sends $10 for a full Baby Band. She has succeeded so well that she is going to get up another one.

***

We never receive a gift from the aged for the Temple, no matter how small it may be, but it seems increased a thousand fold by the prayers and blessings which accompany it. Mrs. Jane M. Range, Dayton, Wash., aged seventy-six years, sends $1, with her blessing, and wishes she was able to multiply it by one thousand. Mrs. H. Brady, West Point, Ill., aged eighty-six years, sends twenty-five cents. Mrs. C. F. Rand, Malden, Mass., writes: "I have had my mite-box three months; I find in it to-day, $2; as it is my eighty-sixth birthday I will forward the money, saving my box to fill the coming year, and on my next birthday will send its contents, hoping it will be a much larger sum." No doubt Mrs. Rand expects to live to be a hundred and we trust she may. Mrs. L. M. Gay, superintendent of Temple work for the W. C. T. U. of Decatur, Ill., sends a check for $34.59, of this amount $3 is for the names of veterans, Mrs. Abigail Clark, seventy-eight years old; Rev W. I. Crissy, aged seventy-five years and Mrs. T M. Miller, aged seventy-seven years. The Decatur union have now twenty-three names on their veteran list. Mrs. Gay says they will soon pay the balance of their $100 pledge. One of the mothers in Israel, who has passed her three score years and ten, pledges $100, but requests that her name be withheld until the amount is paid. She has already given $100 to the building fund in memory of her husband. She writes: "I thought I could not raise the first hundred, but I did it easily, and if all goes well I can this, as the last act of my life in this line! I will say if permitted to see the Temple, 'Now, Lord let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.'"

***

The increased interest of the children in the work of building the Temple is most gratifying. The Oakdale, Ill., Band of Hope has sent the largest amount yet received from either W. C. T. U. or Loyal Temperance Legion mite-box collections. They send $40.26. The three who had the largest amount in their boxes were Mrs. Mary A. McCluskin, Miss Lib McCluskin and Miss Lizzie Gebom. At Rock Falls, Ill., the "Good Deed Circle" of King's Daughters, through a white-ribboner, Mrs. I. C. Butler, sends a gift of $21.29. The money was gathered from five mite-boxes sent them, and a list of their names for the corner-stone. Another circle of King's Daughters at Detroit, Mich., members of the Cass Avenue M. E. Church, has sent in a Baby Band. The children of the Ashland Avenue Baptist Sunday-school of Wicker Park, Ill., sent a gift of $5.25, through the W. C. T.U. By a mistake the union got credited for it. Mrs. H. M. Tenny, of Greenwich, Ct., writes: "As a result of those mite-boxes I sent fo. last winter, the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion raised $7.08 for the Temple, for which I inclose a check. Lucinda Walker, Alice B. Sampson and Mamie Wellstood were the three largest donors." Mrs. Kathrine T. A. Strau, superintendent of the Indiana Juvenile Temperance work, sends $3.75 for autographs of four Loyal Temperance Legions; the names have already been given and credited by Miss Pugh. Mrs. Strau writes: "I am kept very busy with my state work, but gladly help the Temple all I can, in the building of which and the good it will bring to the cause I have great faith." Charlotte M. Way, local and territorial superintendent of juvenile work for Arizona territory, sends $10, the proceeds of an entertainment given by the Loyal Temperance Legion of Tempe, Arizona. We wish more state superintendents of the Loyal Temperance Legion would fall into line and interest the children in working for the Temple. The Loyal Temperance Legion of Verona, Minn., sends $5, which the children made at an entertainment. Mrs. Jennie Johnson, who sent the money, writes that the children are most eager to help and work for the Temple.

***

The Willard W. C. T. U. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, through Mrs. E. A. Price, sends $1 for Mother Thompson's Memorial. She writes: "My heart was stirred within me as I read the dear Father had put into the heart of some white-ribboner to have the name of Mother Thompson engraved upon a tablet in the consecrated Temple." Mrs. Sarah A. B. Carrier also sends $1 for the Memorial. She writes: "For that dear, aged, courageous mother of the Crusade."

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

RETTA'S DISCOVERIES.

BY MABEL GIFFORD.

It was one of the loveliest summer afternoons, and it was the fourth week of our school vacation. It was nice and shady on our piazza, but I was so uncomfortable, for Mena Pollard was going to have company this very afternoon, and Winnie and I were not invited.

Mena lived just across the street; we went to school together, and out of school we were together most of the time. And now she was going to have company from the city, Jean Stedman and his sister, and she hadn't invited us.

Jean had visited here several vacations, and we liked him very much. We never had seen his sister. It was just too mean for anything that we were not invited. They were going to play croquet, and have tea in the arbor, with those pink china dishes Mena's grandmother gave her.

Oh, I was so miserable! Winnie teased to play something, and we commenced, but I kept forgetting, looking across the street so often, and feeling so miserable. Finally we gave up trying to play. I sat and shuffled my feet in and out of the grass, and Winnie looked at me so soberly and said:

"I wouldn't care, Retta; I wouldn't care for the old party; let's go up in the woods and swing in our grape-vine."

Winnie was younger than I, you see, and she didn't understand. I couldn't make up my mind to leave the piazza; it was a sort of comfort to be near and know what was going on, and so we did nothing, and Winnie was miserable because I was.

They came about half-past two, three of them; Jean, and the cousin he was visiting, and the third must be his sister.

My! how fine she did look! She wore a blue silk dress trimmed with white lace, and a white leghorn hat to match; white lace, blue ribbons, and the loveliest long white feathers. The other girl had on a white muslin, with little loops of ribbon fixed around on it so pretty, but she was cross-looking. They went into the house and after a little while they all came out and skipped down the steps, looking just like a picture. O, dear! and then the game! How the crack of the mallets against the balls did aggravate me! I looked at them as well as I could, holding my head down and pretending not to notice.

Mena said afterward that Jean waved his hat at us, but I did not see him. Mena looked beautiful, just as I knew she would. She had on a dolly-varden muslin with a garnet sash, and such stylish croquet slippers. She never once looked our way that I could see. Jean looked over once, I saw him, and then he said something to the others, and they all laughed; not loud, but I heard them. My cheeks began to burn, and I shuffled my feet faster.

What were they making fun of? I looked at Winnie and then at myself. Most likely we did look countrified in our check ginghams without frills or ribbons.

"Sit down, Winnie, don't show off so much," I said, not very pleasantly, and I felt more miserable than ever. Every stroke of those mallets seemed to hurt me.

"Let's go away," said Winnie again; "I want to move. I can't keep still all the time. They will think we want to come over there if we stay here."

They certainly wouldn't think that of me, for I looked right down in the grass all the time. Winnie kept swinging round and round the piazza post, and saying, "Now they are doing this," and "Now they are doing that," and I liked to have her, for I could know what was going on without looking up.

Suddenly I did not hear the voices or the mallets. I raised my head then. There was a grape-vine over the arbor, so I could not see much. First I thought they were going to play games, but they kept so still I concluded they were only talking. I wondered if Mena knew nice, proper things to say to Miss Stedman. I know how to play, but I don't know how to talk proper like grown-ups.

What next, do you think? Mother came out with a basket and told us to go up into the garden and pick some peas.

Pick peas, indeed! I should be distracted up there, and it took such a long time to pick peas; but of course I had to go.

I always did dislike to pick peas in the afternoon. Mena never has to pick peas, or wipe dishes, or do anything but work beautiful silks and worsteds, go visiting and have company. We never have real company, and we never go a-visiting.

I was so afraid they would be gone before we got back.

"Oh, you do hurry so!" said Winnie, she could not keep up with me, and I carried the basket alone.

Winnie sighed; "We didn't stop to see if the red ants had finished their new house, nor swing, nor anything."

But I was thinking we might not see Jean Stedman again all summer. Why couldn't we have a party and invite him? I should want Mena, for I love her the best of anybody, except Winnie, of course, and how could I invite her after the way she had treated me!

Then we had no china, no croquet, and no arbor; mother wouldn't let us wear our best dresses, I knew, and Jean's fine lady sister—what would she think of us?

When we went out to the piazza again, they were having tea in the arbor. I could hear the spoons, and I saw Mena's mother—she is the most particular woman—going down the steps with a tray. After that they went home.

Then, what do you think? About as soon as they were gone, Mena came hurrying over, dolly-varden, croquet slippers and all. She never wore such things when she came to see Winnie and me.

"Oh, if I ain't glad they have gone!" she exclaimed, with a long, tired-out breath, dropping down on the piazza and leaning against the post; "such a stupid time!"

"Why-y-y-e-e! I thought you were having the loveliest time."

Mena shrugged her shoulders. "Well, you wouldn't have thought so if you had been there. How I wished I was over here with you! What were you playing when Winnie went round and round the post?"

"We weren't playing anything," I said, beginning to feel ashamed. "But you were laughing as though you were having a good time."

"Oh, I had to be polite, and mother said I must be very polite to them, for they were such fine-mannered people."

"H'mp! Why didn't you have a good time, then?"

"Because that sister and cousin of Jean's wouldn't do anything. We played croquet a little; Jean and I beat. They didn't want to play any more. I tried games in the arbor, but they couldn't be suited; one did not like this and one did not like that, and they 'didn't care,' they would 'play anything,' and between them they played nothing.

"Oh, they were so stiff! and Miss Stedman was the stiffest. She hardly spoke, and I thought it never would be time for tea. Jean tried to get me to laughing; but you ought to have seen his sister; she never smiled the least bit, and his cousin said, 'How bright you are, Jean.'

"I saw your mother come out with the basket, and I wanted to jump up and run away with you. Did you look to see if the little birds had gone? and was that funny old woodpecker there, boring tunnels in the apple-tree?"

I felt more ashamed every minute.

"I didn't have time to look," I said. "But you had a nice time with the dishes, didn't you?"

"Not I. Mother made French rolls, and vanilla cakes, and we had cocoa, and fruit and confectionery. They hardly tasted a thing; weren't hungry, they said, and they only sipped the cocoa."

One afternoon a few days after that who should come home with brother Ted but Jean Stedman? We were out in the porch, Winnie and I, in the same check gingham, sewing patchwork, and Mena was with us, making rick-rack. We played proverbs, and twenty questions, and black art, and Jean told us about his school and his friends in the city.

"I suppose they are much nicer than country folks," I said. Somehow I was having disagreeable "thinks" pop into my head.

"I don't know," he answered up, cool as you please. "There are agreeable and disagreeable people everywhere. I never thought much about it. There isn't so much difference between the boys as the girls; I think I like country girls best; city girls are so prim and afraid of hurting their clothes. You ought to see them come out of the schoolhouse at recess! two by two, white aprons and ruffles and ribbons. They walk up and down, up and down, while the boys are batting balls, playing hop-scotch and the like. I suppose they grow up to it, not having anywhere but sidewalks to play. You have fields and woods, and all sorts of jolly places, and lots of jolly things to do. I wish I lived in the country."

Then we passed around cookies and soda crackers, and mother made us a pitcher of lemonade. After that Jean spoke a piece he had recited at school, and sang some college songs he learned of his brother Hugh. We all sang "Sympathy Deepens," "Auld Lang Syne," and "Pansy Blossom," and then Jean said he must go, for his aunt and the girls did not know where he was. He asked us all to walk part of the way home with him through the pines. We had the loveliest walk; Jean told us more things about the trees and birds than we had learned, living all our lives in the country.

We stopped at the brook, and he said that this was one of the pleasantest times he had had this summer, and he wished his sister and cousin were like us. "But they are nicer at home," he said, looking at Mena, "than in company, when they are dressed up and are so stiff and proper."

He waved his hat all the way up the hill, and we all agreed as we watched him out of sight that this was the best time we had had this summer.

"And we never got ready for a party," I said, "for we didn't know a thing about it."

"Perhaps that's why," said Mena, looking down into the brook as if she could see right through to China. "I always get ready, and I never have a very good time."

"It's queer," I said to Winnie that night after we were in bed, "some folks don't have anything and they have the best times. It's queer."

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING AUGUST 24, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

(Luke 18: 1-14; Proverbs 14-19.)

Sunday, 24; Luke 18: 1–14. Verse 1, Prayer is usually spoken of in the Scriptures as a duty: at the same time it is our greatest privilege. Every one "ought" to pray. Verse 7, Our Lord teaches us clearly that we ought to keep on praying for right things, however long the answers may be delayed. Verse 13, In the parable of the Judge and the widow, believing perseverance in prayer is taught; in the parable of the Pharisee and the publican, humble approach to the throne of grace is commended. In order to end like the widow, one must begin like the publican.

Monday, 25; Prov. 14. Verse 6, Heavenly knowledge is easily found by one who seeks it with his whole heart, but the scorner cannot find it, and by his scorning evidences that he is shallow-hearted. Verse 10, How perfectly alone are we in the greatest triumphs and the bitterest defeats, which take place in the innermost chambers of the soul. Only He who searcheth the hearts, can with thorough sympathy enter into our joys and sorrows.

Tuesday, 26; Prov. 15. Verse 1, Nothing excites anger so often and so much as bitter words. It is a mark of a worthy and strong mind to be able to meet anger with a soft answer. Verse 8, God sees no sincerity or real humility in the costly and outward show of religion, oftentimes seen in the world.

Wednesday, 27; Prov. 16. Verse 4, God has not made men sinners, but He has made a day of evil for those who sin and remain impenitent. He has connected together sin and suffering and made punishment to correspond to crime. Verse 11, God in all His dealings is perfectly just, and He will exact of all men that they do that which is just toward each other.

Thursday, 28; Prov. 17. Verse 4, Those who are bad in themselves are the ones that take an interest in and help along falsehood and all kinds of evil in the community. Verse 5, We are all liable to calamity, and it is inhuman to insult or despise those who have been overtaken by poverty. Verse 17, How few and rare are the faithful friends who become as brothers born to us for times of adversity!

Friday, 29; Prov. 18. Verse 1, "Selfishness is apt to become exclusive and supreme, and to break through all bounds to gratify itself." Verse 8, The talebearer's story injures the one who tells it; injures the one he detracts, and injures the one who listens to the story, by the poison of suspicion, distrust and dislike.

Saturday, 30; Prov. 19. Verse 1, The rich fool shows himself both by ill-gotten and ill-used wealth, and should have none of the respect which is due to the poor man who has integrity and noble aims in life. Verse 13, The continual dropping of water on one's head becomes, after a time, a means of the most exquisite suffering—so do contentions in a family.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(The conduct of life determines our state beyond death. Luke 16: 26.)

1. Between those who are in the right and those who are in the wrong there is going on all the time a divergence of moral character. So it came about at last that Dives had no affinity for Lazarus, Abraham, or God. How can one who loves what God hates be happy in heaven?

2. In this world other matters determine our standing and associations; but beyond death there is nothing left but actual character, and every one must go to his own place. Acts 1: 25. We must be made meet for the inheritance of the saints in light in order to be partakers of it. Colos. 1: 12. All bad characters must stay outside the city. Rev. 22: 15.

3. By living a worthless and bad life we are certain to meet the destiny of the bad beyond death. The buried talent, the good deed left undone, and all wickedness of conduct determines an unhappy state for us. Matt. 25: 30, 45; II Thess. 1: 9.

The Household.

THE WHITE RIBBON AT LAST.

[A member of one of our local unions was greatly opposed by her husband who disliked her white ribbon badge so much that he sometimes threw ink upon it. She died not long since and was prepared for the grave by some of her temperance comrades, who called her husband in to see if all was satisfactory, whereupon he broke out crying and said, "Where's her badge? She suffered much for it. She must wear it in death, and I wish to tie it on." One of our honorary members wrote the following lines in memory of this touching incident.]

They dressed her in her wedding gown,
Which had been sacred kept;
And smoothed her wealth of tresses brown—
She seemed as if she slept!
They placed a white rose in her hands,
Pale, folded on her breast;
Then called her husband to approve,
Or something more suggest.

He bent to give the first warm kiss
That could not be returned,
Startled to know again by this
What must be often learned.
He wrung his hands in silent pain
And strove his grief to quell;
One thing was wanting which in vain
He wished he might not tell.

"Tie the white ribbon on her breast—
She'll know I've had it done—
That little sign will give me rest."
Ah! late her faith had won!
But truth must triumph ere the end;
Cold brows oft wear the crown;
Death opens more sin-blinded eyes
Than close beneath his frown!

THE MORNING STAR.

God's Newspaper—A Herald of Joy to the World.

And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.—Isa. 60: 3.

In 2 Vols. "Without price."

New every morning.—Lam. 3; 23.

CONTENTS.

What the Prophets Saw.
Testimony of Angels.
The Testimony of Jesus.
Promise to the Faithful.
Extract from Sermon.
Jesus' Prayer for Us.
A Story.
A Song.

The Prophets.

For thousands of years the prophets of God had been telling the people of Israel what glimpses they caught, now and then, of a glorious future when the "dayspring from on high" should arise on this sin-stricken world of ours. How their hearts must have yearned to see in their day the star that was to herald the coming of the Redeemer! Among all the prophecies of the Old Testament Scriptures, those which foretell the coming of the Messiah, and the glory of the church are preëminent in grandeur and pathos. Even Balaam, when the spirit of prophecy was upon him, uttered these grand words:

I shall see him, but not now: I shall behold him, but not nigh; there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel. . . . Out of Jacob shall come he that shall have dominion.—Num. 24: 17-19.

It was as though he stood on a lofty mountain peak, and looked far off through the mists of worldliness which surrounded him, and of which he himself was partaker, and saw the glory of that "Holy One of Israel," whose brightness was to illuminate the darkest corners of the earth. No wonder Balak "went his way," and made no farther attempt to get Israel cursed.

The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light; they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death upon them hath the light shined.—Isa. 9: 2.

Isaiah was a prophet of clear vision and strong language. He seemed to see the dreadful state of darkness and misery in which the world would be involved at the time when the morning dawn should be announced by the angel host. Everywhere there was wreck and ruin. The heathen civilizations of Greece, Rome and Egypt had shed what light they could, but the depths of degradation into which they were plunged showed how true were the words of our Lord in Matt. 6: 23: "If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!" All the nobleness, purity and generosity of those once proud nations had ebbed after a brief period of national greatness, and the corruption to which they descended may not be mentioned in society in our day, and as for their literature it became so impure as not to be fit to be translated. It was then that the star appeared, and the light became manifest.

The prophet proclaims in ringing tones whence that light should come:

For unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given, and the government shall be upon his shoulders, and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end.—Isa. 9: 6, 7.

Other prophets of the Lord saw the coming light, but Malachi, the last of the line of prophets, shall give us our last quotation:

Behold I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me, and the Lord unborn ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts.—Mal. 3: 1.

Yet centuries rolled away and the darkness became more dense. Faith grew faint, and hope, so long deferred, had almost died in the hearts of some of the Lord's chosen people.

Testimony of Angels.

At length the supreme moment came when archangels hastened to proclaim the approach of the long-looked-for Messiah. The message which the angel Gabriel brought to Mary came suddenly and unexpectedly. After informing her that she should have a son, he said:

Thou . . . shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. —Luke 1: 32.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field keeping watch over their flocks by night. . . . And the angel said unto them: Fear not; for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—Luke 2: 8, 10-14.

This announcement made by the heavenly host was the most blessed message ever delivered to men. That day marked the dividing line between the Old Testament record and the New. "The Star of Bethlehem," "Jesus, blessed Jesus," became the "Sweetest theme on mortal tongue, Sweetest carol ever sung."

From Him was to spring the light that should fill the world with glory and truth.

The Testimony of Jesus.

I, Jesus, have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.—Rev. 22, 16, 17.

Why need poor, weary souls go about thirsting for the waters of salvation when there is such a gracious invitation as this always on record? It is for you and me and all the nations of the earth and the isles of the sea. We are all just as welcome to refresh ourselves at this living fountain as though He had called each of us by name.

Promise to the Faithful.

And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of the potter shall they be broken in shivers, even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star.—Rev. 2: 26-28.

What more precious reward could we have for our unprofitable service than that here indicated? He will divide with us the power and glory which the Father has given Him, and will give us Himself, also.

It is certain that we, with our weak understanding, cannot comprehend the meaning of this passage. Like Paul we shall have to content ourselves with the comforting assurance that "We shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as he is."

Extract from Sermon on the Mount.

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 5: 14-16.

If we are living so as to exemplify the character of our Lord we shall reflect the radiance, pure and beautiful, from the cross of Calvary.

We are not to hide the light if we have it, for if we do, it will be smothered and we shall be left in darkness. No Christian who refuses to let his light shine will be foremost in good works or strong in faith. He will be a mere nominal Christian without zeal, without influence, and without enjoyment. Such a life does not honor our Lord, or glorify the name of our Heavenly Father. Our object in doing good must not be to get praise for ourselves, as that would not be service for the Master at all. It is Christ whom we must hold up in the sight of a dying world, for it is "looking unto Jesus" that heals the sin-sick soul.

Jesus' Prayer for Us.

Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word: That they all may be one, as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. . . . . Father I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world.—John 17: 20, 21, 24.

There could be no heaven for us out of Christ. Unless we have Him, we shall not be able to come into the presence of God. We must be in Christ and He in us, and then we shall abide in his presence, and behold His glory.

The Story.

And when the Sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Salome, had brought sweet spices that they might come and anoint him. And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came unto the sepulcher at the rising of the sun. And they said among themselves, Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher? And when they looked, they saw that the stone was rolled away; for it was very great. And entering into the sepulcher, they saw a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment; and they were affrighted. And he saith unto them, Be not affrighted: Ye seek Jesus of Nazareth, which was crucified; he is risen; he is not here; behold the place where they laid him. But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee; then shall ye see him as he said unto you.—Mark 16: 1-8.

One might have thought the knowledge those women had of the way the sepulcher was fastened would have deterred them from making the attempt to anoint the body; but their love inspired their faith, and great was their reward. Had their faith faltered or their timidity overcome them, they would have missed being the first to proclaim the resurrection of our Lord. The privilege of doing this was honor enough for a lifetime, for no tidings had ever so startled the world, or burst upon the rising day with such glory. We sometimes hear people complain about the weakness of their faith. This story should teach them that a cure could be effected by getting more love for their Saviour. With hearts overflowing with love to Him what blessings might the Church experience, and what valiant service might she render for the salvation of souls! It is neither love nor faith that causes one to stop and look at obstacles in the way of service for the Master. If He sends us on any errand for Him, all we have to do is to go forward and not look to see what stones may lie in our path. He knows all about them, and He will take care of them for us. Our part is love, obedience, trust.

In the seventh verse we have a hint of the peculiar position Peter had placed himself in. He had denied his discipleship with an oath, and it had been heard by his suffering Lord. If he did not wish to be known as a disciple he could have his way; but when the resurrection was to be preached Peter must hear it as well as the rest. He bitterly repented of his great sin, and was mercifully reinstated in Divine favor, and commissioned especially to feed the sheep and lambs of the good Shepherd's pasture. This shows that when Jesus forgives it is a thorough work. The transgression is hidden out of sight to be remembered no more. All that He requires is that the wicked shall "forsake his way," and come humbly asking to be forgiven, and our compassionate Redeemer will have mercy upon him, and will "abundantly pardon," even though it may be for "seventy times seven."

A Song of the Redeemed.

And they sung a new song, saying:
" Thou art worthy to take the book
And to open the seals thereof,
For Thou hast redeemed us to God by Thy blood,
Out of every kindred and tongue and people and nation,
And hast made us unto our God, kings and priests,
And we shall reign on the earth."

And I beheld, and I heard the voice of many angels round about the throne and the beasts and the elders: and the number of them was ten thousand times ten thousand, and thousands of thousands, saying with a loud voice:

" Worthy is the Lamb that was slain
To receive power and riches and wisdom, and strength,
To receive honor and glory and blessing.
Unto Him that sitteth on the throne
Be blessing and honor, dominion and power,
For ever and ever, Amen."—Rev. 5: 9-12.

"I EXPECT to pass through this world but once: any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness I can show to a human being, let me do it now. Let me not neglect or defer it, for I shall not pass this way again."

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O arm of the Lord. Awake, as in the ancient days, in the generations of old. Art thou not He that hath cut Rahab and wounded the dragon?—Isaiah 51:9.

A PARALLEL.

For months the country has rung from one end to the other with denunciations of the Louisiana lottery. This is well; the nefarious thing deserves the execration of the universe. Yet through all these months, as we listened to these denunciations, they have had a double meaning to our ears, for not one of them but is applicable to the licensed liquor traffic. Some of the strongest arguments against the lottery have been presented by the leading high license journals; we have greatly enjoyed reading them, both because of our strong anti-lottery principles, and because the arguments used were so manifestly applicable to the licensed liquor traffic that we felt sure these great journals would soon be converted to prohibition by the force of their own arguments. We kept still about it, not wishing to distract their attention from their own logic to antagonizing us; but as they seem somewhat slow in making the desired application, it may be well to stir up their minds by way of remembrance.

Back of all the lottery's sins, making each of them stand out in more hideous light, according to the statement of its critics—and every one feels its truth—is the fact that the state government is a partner in its guilt, it has sold its people for gain. This is the very core of the license system, and it is amazing that sharp-eyed editors do not see it. They will, some day, and then exceed us in denouncing the bribe-taking system of high license; but this will not be till the system has come to an end. Let us look at a few of the points made against the lottery and see if with the words "licensed liquor traffic" substituted for "Louisiana lottery" they would not read just as truthfully.

The Crescent City Anti-Series, F. D. Van Valkenburg, 106 Church street, New Orleans, publishes two addresses by Rev. B. Carradine, D.D., which so admirably sum up the arguments against the lottery that we shall draw largely from his summary, though we do not class him with the license dailies. "Every true citizen, every well-wisher of the race, certainly must desire this legalized evil be removed from our midst. But simply desiring this consummation will not effect this end. Wickedness always materializes and has to be dealt with in a sturdy, forcible, material way." (That is to say, mere "sympathy with all well-directed effort" needs something back of it to make it destructive of the saloon.) "The country at large is profoundly interested in the matter of the lottery's abolishment." So it is in the abolishment of the saloon, for where the lottery slays its thousands, the saloon slays its ten thousands. "The Louisiana state lottery is regarded as a shame and disgrace by everybody except the people of Louisiana." The licensed saloon system is considered a shame and disgrace by everybody except those who make a gain thereby. "The so-called gifts of the Louisiana company are an insult to the intelligence and virtue of community. They are soothing and tranquilizing the public mind, diverting attention from their own life and practices, and ingratiating themselves before the coming election with the voters who hold their destiny in their hands." Is this not true of license money—with a difference? And the difference does not tell in favor of the liquor license. The lottery offers its bribes unsolicited and government may not connive at it; grand Governor Nichols can ed the State University to return the amount donated to it by the lottery, and spurned the $100,000 offered to repair the levees. In licensing the liquor traffic the government forces the saloon to give bribes to the municipality, and by its internal revenue extorts the lion's share of the money coming from debauching its people, to fill its own coffers. What worse has Louisiana done?

Says Dr. Carradine: "Here is an institution that was born in sin and conceived in iniquity, and yet this oppressive, gambling, grinding, corrupting institution offers us its unholy, ill-gotten gains; will you receive them? What would you do if a highwayman offered you a part of his gains? What if a murderer offered you a bank bill, saying: 'I took this out of the pocket of the man I killed, you see it has a few blood spots'? What if a lewd woman offered you a few dollars from her gatherings of sin? How the blood dashes into your face at the bare thought!" Yet every dollar of license money is a bribe received from the business which fosters robbery, murder and lewdness. "The offering of this money is an insult to the virtue of our people; if we accept it we are morally as low as the company who offered it," is the verdict in the lottery case. Can any lighter one be rendered in the license case when the bribe of blood-stained money is not only accepted but demanded?

"The Louisiana state lottery is one of the greatest political machines in America. It is well known that for years it has ruled the state of Louisiana. Furthermore it is as deeply entrenched in Washington as in New Orleans. Under the livery of our government there is being worn the livery of the lottery by prominent men both in and out of Congress. Its political influence is almost as widespread as its impoverishing influence. There is no party organization that can equal it in some respects. It manages legislatures as potters would clay. It matters not whether they be of Republican or Democratic complexion, for it has arguments of its own, and powers peculiar to itself, by which it twists about and around an august body of law-makers, as you would a child. It is enthroned in law; it has Judges and Governors for its particular friends, our legislators are its servants. Its presence and power is felt on the Judge's bench, the editor's desk, in town and city council, in common school and in the church itself. Do you wish to know who are kings to-day in this miscalled republic of ours? Please tell me what sense there is in our holding elections here year after year? You may elect whom you will and call them by courtesy, Governor, Judge, Honorable, but the sad and awful fact remains, that the Louisiana state lottery company is ruler, judge, law-maker and law executor for the fallen state of Louisiana."

If you think that anything more is necessary to make this arraignment fit the case of the licensed liquor traffic, just watch the action of your city council for six months, or go to your state legislature. Read carefully the debates in Congress on the Original Package Bill, as given in the Congressional Record—party papers "have not room" for some of the most telling points—and you will be convinced there is a power behind the throne pulling the strings which make the puppets jump. In that debate in the House at least two representatives stood up unblushingly to declare the wish of their constituents, the brewers and distillers, in the matter. And why should they not, when the liquor business is legalized and protected by government?

The next charge made against the lottery is that it has silenced the secular press of New Orleans. "Listen, and see if you can hear them say anything against the lottery. When a paper refuses to print anything against a great evil we say it is silent. The lottery master looks at its Boze and thus soliloquizes:

"If I had an editor, I'd pat him on the head;
How prettily he wags his pen whenever he is fed.

"Alas! for a silent press! O the shame and the pity of it! The glory of our great republic has been an unshackled press. It could not be muzzled nor throttled. It could, and did, always speak out in denunciation of wrong, in exposure of evil and in defense of the people. How are the mighty fallen! If a king and parliament should silence the press, if Congress should do it, we would all cry out 'Tyranny!' and fly to arms. But the Louisiana state lottery comes, and in a way well known to us all, gags, muzzles and silences the papers, and behold! nothing is thought of it. We accept the shame and degradation and outrage, without a word.

"We have been afflicted lately with a peculiar disease called la grippe. I lament that a peculiar disease has broken out among our editors. The peculiarity of their sickness is that whenever the word lottery is mentioned, they suddenly grow silent; a numbness falls upon the tongue; a paralysis creeps over the hand that holds the pen. O it is painful to see! Doctors are puzzled over the disease; the whole town is talking about it. Many say they cannot imagine what it is. In strict confidence I give you the name of the disease, "la-grippe-de-greenback-de-la-lottery.'" We leave you each to insert "licensed liquor traffic" instead of "Louisiana lottery company" in the above quotations wherever you choose.

We will quote some of his points with the words inserted and ask every fair-minded man if the one reading is not as true as the other. "The lottery (licensed liquor traffic) is silencing the Christian Church; it is destructive of the spirit of labor; it is the cause and occasion of countless crimes; it is the cause of the commercial and social ruin of thousands; it is the cause of suicide; it is the cause of great suffering to the poor, and untold misery to innocent parties; in the face of repeated assertions that it is beneficial to a community, it is steadily impoverishing us; its benefits are only to the few, while many are made to suffer; in its relation to other business interests it is unjust and oppressive; it is a child corruptor, a theft encourager, a municipal pauperizer, a judge and lawyer persuader, a legislature briber, a chartered (licensed) curse and abomination."

Is not all this true of the licensed liquor traffic? Then why, by your vote, enter into partnership with it? Continue to denounce the lottery as severely as you can, only remember that every denunciation of it, if carried out to its logical sequence, strikes a blow at the legalized saloon.

EDUCATION BY WORK.

More and more is the world learning that the sentence pronounced upon Adam is not a curse but a blessing. God mercifully overrules "the dreary doom of labor" so that instead of its dreariness come the greatest blessings to mankind. "The gods give no great good without labor" has a deeper significance than the ancient philosophers dreamed of. Physiology shows us the connection between the hand and the brain to be so close that without the hand's working there cannot be the fullest development of brain substance and hence of brain power. Sociology shows the close connection between hand work and morals; the "dangerous classes" are very largely made up of those whose hands are untrained and unskilled in honest work.

A realization of these facts lies at the basis of the "new education"; this is the underlying principle of the Kindergarten and of slöyd; our interest as W. C. T. U. workers in these forms of education is due to the fact that in them we see means of prevention, safeguards against temptation.

As was mentioned last week, a training school for teachers in slöyd is to be opened in Chicago; Miss Toppelius, the talented Finnish lady who has charge of it, was educated at the Pedagogical school at Helsingfors, Finland, under Vera Hjelt, the acknowledged head of the movement in that country. Miss Toppelius was brought here by the Art Educational section of the Chicago Woman's Club, upon the recommendation of Dr. Stockham. She last spring conducted classes in the Industrial School for Boys with great success. It was felt, however, that much more could be accomplished by having her devote her time to training of teachers, as thus her work would be multiplied.

Through Miss Toppelius we have learned many facts of interest in regard to Uno Cygnaeus, the originator of slöyd. Not the least interesting one is that the idea of this new form of education by work came to him while residing at Sitka as a government official under Russia. So North America can contest with Sweden the glory of originating the system, and it is quite fitting that it should find here not only welcome reception, but higher development. For slöyd is preëminently a developing educational system, every step in it carefully designed to develop not muscle alone, but thought, purpose, will.

Cygnaeus died about two years ago; his biography has just been published. In his notes he tells us that as he mingled with all sorts of people, from the highest to the lowest grades of cultivation, he was more and more impressed with the thought that "the education from the homes, through all the years of school and of development, is of immense significance." Gradually the truth was borne in upon him that the education of the hand was a necessity in intellectual and moral development. For a long time these thoughts floated vaguely in his mind; with them mingled the great thoughts—Fraternity, equality, liberty (those terms had not then been so desecrated as they have been since), and as he tells us he pondered them in his promenades on the lonely shore of Alaska, and through America's primeval forests, till the great ideas gained more and more power over him. He would evolve a system of education which should systematically develop all children's powers, thus lifting all to an equality where they could together enjoy true liberty.

It is difficult now to determine how fixed a form this idea of "people's education," to use his favorite term, took during his residence in America. From his notes written at that time it seems that the ideas most clear in his mind were concerning the mutual relation of the home and the school, and concerning the more prominent part woman ought to take in education, for at that time women school teachers were almost unknown in Sweden. He says that he returned from America "with head and heart full of all sorts of half-ripe speculations." But he came into an atmosphere which quickly completed the ripening process. During his absence the seed-thoughts of Pestalozzi, of Froebel and of Diesterweg, sown through much tribulation, had sprung into vigorous growth, and at once Cygnaeus recognized them as akin to his own. Thus slöyd was born—the child of thought evolved in Alaskan forests, and of the kindergarten idea, and this child inherits the qualities of both its parents.

FAMILY JARS.

"There is beautiful fighting all along the line." Harry Rubens, attorney for the foreign brewers, thinks they have a good case under the original package decision, and that under it the city of Chicago cannot collect one cent of its $500 license. Rubens informed the mayor that the brewers consider that they are pretty nearly as responsible as the city, and if the case goes against them they are willing to settle up; but there is no telling how far the case may go. It may be appealed to the State Supreme Court and then to the United States Court, and be carried along a good many years. That is to say, these foreign brewers propose to defy the high license law of Illinois, take the matter into the courts, trusting to the proverbial slowness of operations there to keep the city out of its license dues for years, if not forever.

An important point here is one which so incenses the people of Kansas, giving to those outside the state privileges which are denied to its own citizens. If a Kansas man attempts to open a saloon in that state, he is at once seized and punished under Kansas prohibitory law; Missouri saloon-keepers go over there by the score and carry on their nefarious traffic with impunity under shadow of the original package decision. Here American brewers must pay their license or go out of the business, but these foreigners flaunt that same decision in the face of municipal authority. As the corporation counsel says, it is preposterous to suppose that foreign brewers could ship car loads of beer here, go to the depots with big trucks and haul it away and cut the streets up with their truck wheels, without being required to pay their portion toward keeping the streets in repair. But this was only an item. Should outside companies be allowed to sell their beer without license, when our own local brewers were required to pay a license? Hardly!

He feels sure that the concurrence of the House in the conference report on the Original Package Bill will win the case for the city, while Rubens is quite as sure it will not. "There are a number of points on which we can trip them up, and I have no fear of the result. The effect is bad on other brewing interests, however. The United States Brewing Company, which was formed out of Bartholomae & Leicht, M. Brand and Ernst Bros., now comes to the front, and only wants to pay one license of $500, whereas it has three breweries which have always paid $500 each. I don't see what is getting into the brewers—they must want the earth." Of course they do. We always knew that, but it has taken the English syndicate to open the eyes of the city fathers to the fact. Let the fight go on, and other eyes will be opened. Napoleon's military maxim, "Divide and conquer" is a good one, and is applying itself in this case. First came the division between the brewers and the distillers; now that between American or German and English brewers, while the action of the brewers chronicled last week presages a split between brewers and saloon-keepers. All of which help on the temperance cause.

STATISTICS.

Scarcely a week passes without our receiving requests for statistics, which can not be given with any accuracy until the census reports are published, and many of them can not be given then. The most common request is for statistics showing the relation of intemperance to crime. The following response to a letter addressed to Fred H. Wines, whose long connection with boards of charities and corrections has made him as fit as any man in the country to give the needed statistics, shows something of the difficulty of securing them. He writes: "I have never published any statement in regard to the percentage of crime that is due to intemperance. I do not believe that any figures on that subject are trustworthy. In the present census, we are making an effort to find out the habits of the prisoners in this regard, but the relation of crime and intemperance is not so much a matter of statistics as it is of reasoning about them. A man might be both a drunkard and a thief, and yet his thievish propensities might be natural and not due in any sense to his intemperate habits. It might be even that if he had not been a thief he would never have become intemperate. But the statistics of incarceration alone are not sufficient to justify any positive opinion on the subject. It is necessary, also, to have the statistics of arrests in cities, of which the census takes no note. A great deal of drunkenness, disorder and violation of the liquor laws are punished by fine alone." This of course decreases the number of incarcerations.

A WISE woman in Minnesota is moved to stir up the minds of all women in states where they have the ballot. She has noticed how ready men who wish their votes are to send carriages round to take the ladies to the polls, and to supply them with tickets. She will have none of this, but says to her sisters of the W. C. T. U., and the advice is good for all women possessing the franchise, "Let us enlighten our own minds concerning the issues and the candidates, then when the day comes to vote, let us go in our own conveyance or on foot to the polls, with our minds made up what we are going to do and the ticket in our hands that we are going to vote. Let us not go to vote for the nice little ride we shall enjoy so much, not because some one has politely invited us, but because we have a duty to do, matters of importance to be adjusted, questions of right or wrong to be settled. We don't want the politicians to feel sure that the first one who gets to our house with a carriage and tickets is sure of our vote. Let us show principle in the matter and, if we are able, let us go to the polls on foot; if not, let us provide our own way of going."

Special Difficulties.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

CURE FOR SNAKE BITE.

We are receiving our usual midsummer installment of inquiries for non-alcoholic remedies for snake bite. We give here a number whose efficiency is vouched for by reliable persons. A lady from Nebraska writes of permanganate of potash kept always in the house for the purpose. It comes in dark crystals, somewhat resembling rusty iron in color, but brighter. In the case given, a child was bitten by a rattlesnake; the wound was probed with one of the crystals which was left in, and with others bound on with a cloth. A complete cure was effected. The prescription was given by Dr. Stimpson, of Plum Creek, Nebraska, who tested its virtues thoroughly.

Soft soap and lime mixed in equal parts and applied to the bite is recommended by those who have found it an antidote. A Pennsylvania friend recommends holding the bitten part in running water, or pouring water over it continuously for several hours, till the inflammation subsides. Another has tried sweet oil successfully; a tablespoonful taken internally and the wound bathed in it. For a horse, use eight times the dose for a man. Killing the snake and applying the warm flesh to the bite is an old remedy, well vouched for; killing a chicken and enveloping the wounded part in its warm body is also a well-known prescription; in both cases the flesh applied soon turns green with the extracted poison and must be replaced by fresh. A hunter recommends turning on the wound immediately a thimble full of gunpowder and igniting it; the pain is slight and the cure certain.

The wife of a physician who has practiced nine years in Texas where never a summer passes without his treating cases of snake bite, writes that the remedy used by him and which has never failed is compound tincture of iodine; for an adult give four drops in a tablespoonful of sweet milk once an hour as long as necessary. Dr. Hiatt has used this remedy for the most venomous copperhead bite and found it always effected a cure and without the bad after-effect resulting from the alcohol treatment.

Common salt mixed with the white of an egg to the consistency of paste and spread on the wound, renewed frequently, is a household remedy always at hand and recommended by those who have tried it for snake bite. We can vouch for its efficacy in bee stings.

Equal parts of powdered charcoal and fresh lard is another household remedy recommended by a correspondent. Other remedies have been before given in THE UNION SIGNAL, prominent among them aqua ammonia, a bottle of which should always be kept in the house, as it has so many uses.

The household remedy which seems to have the weight of authority on its side is common indigo powdered, moistened and applied to the wound; it soon turns green with the poison it draws out and must be renewed. This is vouched for by a number of correspondents in different parts of the country who write us they have tested it. It is also recommended by the "Medical and Surgical Reporter."

For snake bite the remedy must be applied immediately and hence should be one always at hand and easily applied without waiting to send for a physician or to a drug store. The remedies here given, with possibly one exception, are of this character, are found, or can easily be kept in every household. If every family living in a snake infested district would take as much pains to keep one of them within reach as some do to have whisky "handy" for snake bite, they would find it quite as efficacious and much safer.

The Watch-Tower.

Miss Willard and Anna Gordon have returned from their long southern trip, Miss Guernsey is back from Bay View and Miss Pugh from Lakeside. All report grand gatherings; indeed, from all quarters we hear that in no previous year have the Summer Assemblies and Schools of Methods been so well attended and so enthusiastically conducted. At Lakeside the Ohio W. C. T. U. had two days, Mrs. Monroe presiding; Miss Willard, Mrs. Haggart, Mrs. Leiter and Mrs. Lovell were the speakers; Miss Pugh conducted Bible readings each day, and had charge of the question-box. Mrs. Buell attended the meetings at Valley Forge, and at Newton Hamilton, Penn., but was summoned from the latter to Connecticut by a telegram announcing the death of her sister, Miss Ella Buell.

***

Up to the Watch-tower comes continually the sound of work upon the Temple; very pleasant are the thoughts that the picks upon its stones interject through the roar of Chicago's rush. Never since the temple went up at Jerusalem has there been a building around which so many loving thoughts centered; whose very stones seemed so sacred. All white-ribboner callers must look out of the window and see it; very many cross the street to stand on its site and watch the work more closely. Mrs. Julia H. Welch, of Colorado, lately did this and secured from the workmen fragments of the stones "which are sure to go in," as they told her. "I shall take them to our state convention," she said, "and let our women see that the Temple is really going up."

***

Among the noble workers, Mrs. Ulrika Brunn, who conducts the Chicago Central Union work among Scandinavians, holds a high place. Her self-sacrifice and devotion to that work are measureless. So modest is she that few of her co-workers suspect what is a fact, that she has decided literary talent which has been exercised successfully. She has published three books in the Norwegian, and is now completing her first story in English. She has written much for various papers, among them the Daily Skandinaven, published here. Lately her deep interest in temperance work has led to the use of her poetic faculty in the translation of a number of English temperance songs into the Norwegian. Many of these have never before been translated into this tongue, and are from a book especially used by W. C. T. U. workers. Scandinavians in lodges, churches and missions will all be glad to have the assistance of these hymns, which are notably a labor of love in this case.

***

Miss Inez Hill, a young lady on the staff of the Harrisburg Telegraph, has invented a method of printing in colors which is pronounced a decided success. A specimen of the work done was lately given in an American flag, in red white and blue, completely surrounded by black type-matter, the printing being done by one impression on a fast Webb perfecting press. Miss Hill spent many months working out her idea, and its success promises to revolutionize polychrome printing.

***

Here is what an Italian woman is doing "In His Name." She is poor, earns her living as governess in English families coming to spend the winter in Rome, and in summer doing whatever she can find to do that will pay her board. Her heart was pained to see the laborers crowd the beer saloons every rainy day, for Italians do not work in the rain. She thought long over the sin and misery resulting from their beer-drinking, prayed much for guidance, and at length a plan for relief presented itself. It was to provide a house where they could have hot coffee instead of beer and cognac, with good reading matter accessible. In three weeks' time she had the means given her, and now the building is near completion. Many have promised to help furnish and send books.

***

It is said that there are at least 500 women doing good, hard editorial work in this country. This is matter for hearty congratulation. The domain of literature has many fields that women can best cultivate. Literature, and journalism especially, will be all the sweeter and cleaner for a large band of thoughtful, gentle women.

***

Mrs. Fessenden, National superintendent of franchise, makes these among many good points: "If submission were the only virtue, tyrants would hold the world under foot forever." To women she said in regard to their enfranchisement: "Do you say there is no hope? Then let us create hope!" "No woman can accept the theory that she was born to be subordinate without a humiliation which will make her inferior to her best self." "Man's control of woman is alike pernicious to man and to woman." "In that day when all shall stand before the Great Judge, will any woman dare to say: 'We buried the talent Thou gavest us in the grave of prejudice, and covered it neatly with the sod of custom, and here it is in a napkin'?"

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Founded 1883.

Motto.—For God and Home and Every Land. Object: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over, and to circulate a petition for the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic drinks and opium, and other social reforms.

All members wear a little knot of white ribbon, and remember the noon hour of prayer for all temperance work and workers, and for the coming of Christ's kingdom.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.

Vice Presidents—England, Lady Henry Somerset, 16 Memorial Hall, Farmingdon St., London, E. C.

Canada—Mrs. Fawcett, Toronto.

China—Mrs. Dr. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.

Japan—Mrs. Saku Asai, Tokio.

Hawaiian Islands—Mrs. Mary S. Whitney, Honolulu.

New Zealand—Mrs. Catherine Fulton, Dunedin.

Queensland, Australia—Mrs. Elizabeth Brentnall, Box 61 G. P. O. Brisbane.

South Australia—Mrs. E. Nicholls, Prospect, Adelaide.

Victoria—Mrs. Mary M. Love, Armadale, Melbourne.

Ceylon—Mrs. T. S. Smith, Tillipally, Jaffna.

India—Mrs. McDonald, F. C. M. Calcutta. Nat. Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Chowpati, Bombay.

Burmah—Miss Ruth W. Ranney, Rangoon.

Turkey—Mrs. W. E. Locke, Philippopolis, Bulgaria.

Africa—Miss Pride, Huguenot Seminary, Capetown.

Siam—Miss Mary L. Cort, Petchaburee.

Sweden—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm.

Straits Settlement—Mrs. Marie Oldham, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.

Mauritius—Mrs. Bishop Royston, Bishop Thorpe, Rose Hill.

Norway—Fru Ignase Carlsen, Nordal Bruns Gade 10, Christiania.

New South Wales—Mrs. E. Bowes, Stanmore, Sydney.

Tasmania—Mrs. Grace Saltan, Mildmay Cottage, Launceston.

Mexico—Mrs. Margaret Taber, Zacatecas.

Jamaica—Miss Mary Dillon, Machioneal.

Chili—Mrs. Ida A. T. Arms, Colejio Americano, Concepcion, Chili.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care of Miss Amy Leavitt, 1226 Massachusetts Ave., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Secretaries—American—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio. British—Mrs. Mary Whitall Costelloe, 40 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W. England.

Treasurers—American—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill. British—Mrs. James Gregson, Heart's Hill, Debden Green, Longhton, England.

World's Organizers—Europe, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, Stensberggade 25 Christiania, Norway. Northern Europe—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm, Sweden. American Committee—The five General Officers of N. W. C. T. U.

Supt. Department of Bible Readings—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W., England.

Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Massachusetts.

Supt. Department of Prisons, Police Stations and Almshouses—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.

American Supt. Legal Dept.—Mrs. Bishop John P. Newman, Omaha, Neb.

Supt. Fairs and Expositions—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 519 N. Pennsylvania St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Supt. Dept. Peace and International Arbitration—Mrs. Hannah J. Baily, Winthrop, Me.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

PLEDGE.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ———; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary, Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Miss Bertha G. Brown, Office Secretary.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.

Treasurer—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle, St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama—Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, Birmingham.

Alaska—Mrs. John G Brady, Sitka.

Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.

Arkansas—Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, 315½ W. Markham St., Little Rock

California—Mrs. R. R. Johnston, Box 288, Oakland.

California, Southern—Mrs. N. P. J. Button, Riverside.

Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, New Garden.

Carolina, South—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.

Colorado—Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, Longmont.

Connecticut—Mrs. S. B. Forbes, 152 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford

Dakota, North—Miss Addie M. Kinnear, Fargo.

Dakota, South—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Huron.

Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.

District of Columbia—Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, Temple Hotel, Washington.

Florida—Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, Jacksonville.

Georgia—Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Augusta.

Idaho—Mrs. Susan Holbrook, Blackfoot.

Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago.

Indiana—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, 519 N. Pennsylvania St., Indianapolis.

Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Staples, Tahlequah.

Iowa—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Clinton.

Kansas—Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, Topeka.

Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 Chestnut St., Louisville.

Louisiana—Mrs. E. T. Merrick, New Orleans.

Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Stroudwater.

Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, Baltimore.

Massachusetts—Miss Elizabeth S. Tobey, 36 Bromfield St., Boston.

Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson.

Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart, Red Wing.

Mississippi—Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.

Missouri—Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Kansas City.

Montana—Mrs. R. H. Howey, Helena.

Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.

Nevada—Mrs. D. W. Van Deventer, Virginia City.

New Hampshire—Mrs. N. H. Knox, 19 Penacook St. Manchester.

New Jersey—Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, Ocean Grove.

New Mexico—Mrs. M C. Raynolds, Las Vegas.

New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 103 East 123d St., New York.

Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.

Oklahoma—Mrs. W. L. Rhodes, Guthrie.

Oregon—Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.

Pennsylvania—Mrs. Mary H. Jones, 2051 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Rhode Island—Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, Pawtuxet.

Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.

Texas—Mrs. S C. Acheson, 1419 W. Woodard St., Denison.

Utah—

Vermont—Mrs. Esther T. Housh, Brattleboro.

Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.

West Virginia—Mrs. Jane A Johnson, Parkersburg.

Washington, Eastern—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.

Washington, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.

Wisconsin—Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, Durand.

Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, Evanston.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell.

Organizers—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.; Miss Henrietta G. Moore, Springfield, O.; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Toof Coppin, Paris, Iowa; Mrs. M. L. Wells, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Frances E. Grinin, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

American Organizers for World's W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, 830 12th St., N. W. Washington, D. C., Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, Sacramento, Cal.; Miss Charlotte Gray, Christiania, Norway; Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kan.; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kan.; Scandinavians, Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Hollanders, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Chinese, Mrs. M. S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, Cal.; Sclavic Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton Ill.; Department Evangelist, Mrs. C. H. St. John, Beloit, Ka

Work among the Colored People—Mrs. Frances E. Harper, 1009 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Associate, Mrs. S. J. H. Early, 260 S. Cherry St., Nashville, Tenn.

Young Women's Work—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 146 W. 103rd St., New York City. Department Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Evans, 155 West 48th St., New York City; Organizers, Miss Ida Clothier, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Miss Jessica Morgan, Oberlin, Ohio; Miss Mary McDowell, Evanston, Ill.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice, 1597 Washington St., Boston; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Kindergarten, Mrs. E. L. Hailmann, La Porte, Ind.

II. PREVENTIVE.

Health and Heredity—Dr. Orpha A. Baldwin, 216 J St., Portland, Oregon. Associates—Health—Dr. Mary Allen, Ithaca, N. Y.; Heredity—Mrs. R. A. Armstrong, Woodland, Cal.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass.; Literary Assistant, Miss Emma L. Benedict; Associate, Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, 165 State St., Portland Me.

Sunday School Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill., or Woodfords, Me.; Secretary, Miss Julia A. Bidwell, Hartford, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City; Advisory Committee, Mrs. Helen E. Brown, Mrs. E. W. Ruliffson, Mrs. E. M. Wymond, Mrs. Dr. A. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Vigelius, Mrs. J. C. Craw, Mrs. M. E. Morgan, Mrs. Dr. H. McLean, Treasurer, 205 Mason St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Temperance Publication Association—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, Editor Department Books and Leaflets, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T. B. Carse, Publisher; Advisory Committee, the National President and Corresponding Secretary.

Editors of The Union Signal—Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Julia A. Ames, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of the Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of The Young Crusader—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers.

The Press—Miss Mary Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, Baltimore, Md.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Kirkwood, Mo.

W. C. T. U. School of Methods—Miss Mary Allen West, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.; For Practical Training to Public Speakers, Mrs. Anna B. Curry, Boston School of Expression.

Department of Narcotics—Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl. St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer, Mrs. James Havens, 673 Broadway, Denver, Col.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Work among Miners, Mrs. D. W. English, Rushville, Ill.; Bible Study, Rev. A. A. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.

Unfermented Sacramental Wine—Mrs. R. A. Esmond, Syracuse, N.Y

Flower Mission—Miss Jennie Casseday, 216 E. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.; Department Secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

Work in Prisons, Jails, Police Stations, Almshouses and Asylums—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Department Secretary, Mrs. H. D. Walker, Providence, R. I.

Work among Railroad Employes—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, 24 Hawthorne Ave., East Orange, N. J.; Secretary, Miss Anna L. Davidson; Associate, Veterans' Branch, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Tacoma, Wash.; Petition Work, Mrs. Lavinia H. Chace, 1310 I St. N. W. Washington, D. C. Evangelist, Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, 40 Prospect St., Orange, N. J.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis. Associate, Mrs. Emma Obenauer, East Saginaw, Mich.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

Promotion of Social Purity—Miss Frances E. Willard; Associates, Mothers' Meetings, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Dr. Julia Plummer, Boston, Mass.; Department Evangelist, Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, Evanston, Ill.; Legal Adviser, Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.; Industrial Homes, Mrs. Lydia R. Clark, Northfield, Minn. Work among Mormon Women, Mrs. Angie F. Newman, Lincoln, Neb.; Lecturer, Mrs. Frances McCready Harris, 218 DeGraw St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Purity in Literature, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, Effingham, Ill.; Travelers' Aid, Miss Maud Remington, Baraboo, Wis.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, 23 Rowland St., Newark, N. J.; Associate, Madame Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York City.

State and County Fairs—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate, Mrs. Marion McBride, 179 Fremont St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Mary I. Stille, Westchester, Pa.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.

Franchise—Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, Malden, Mass.; Lecturer, Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace, Cataract, Ind.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine; Lecturer, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

On Appropriations—Chairman, Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 202 W. 133rd St., New York City. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie H. Rastall, Topeka, Kan.

Advisory Committee—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson, Mich.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—Chairman of Committee, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Streator, Ill.

News from the Field.

ILLINOIS.

ANNUAL MEETING OF PRINCEVILLE UNION.

In the Presbyterian Church of the little city of Princeville, the earnest, faithful women of the tenth district W. C. T. U. met in annual convention June 26, 27, 1890. The felt, uplifting presence of the Holy Spirit made delightful the convention labors that would otherwise have seemed somewhat burdensome owing to the heat.

Mrs. L. S. Rounds, our state president, and Mrs. E. G. Hibben, our district president, were both with us. Most of the unions in the district were reported, and indicated the good work going on in the way of Gospel meetings, parlor meetings, mothers' meetings and Loyal Legion work, etc., in addition to the usual weekly meetings of the W. C. T. U. The reports of the county presidents showed them actively engaged in pushing their various lines of work, and probably there has never been such united effort as is being made now throughout our four counties of Peoria, Fulton, Knox and Stark.

Our district president has been most abundant in labors the past year. She has had many calls throughout the district and to some points she has repeated her visit twice or thrice. We have not been called to report a defeat, except that of giving license in Elmwood and Canton. But all the unions in the district are in better working order and we have several new organizations. The reports were all cheering and inspiring. The district has twelve lines of work. Well prepared, earnest, practical papers were read by Mrs. M. B. Reynolds, of Peoria, Miss Inez Crocker, of Oneida and Miss May Arnold, of Galesburg, on "The King's Business Requireth Haste," "Practical Suggestions on Loyal Legion Work" and "The Need of the Hour—The Revival of the Y's," respectively. The question-box in the hands of Mrs. Rounds gave much light on misty questions, and proved very helpful in many ways.

Mrs. L. M. Auten welcomed the convention, and Mrs. Lucie Kline, of Canton, responded. Mrs. E. G. Hibben gave the address the first, and Mrs. Rounds the second evening. The I. O. G. T., numbering seventy members, came in a body to hear her and to express their sympathy and coöperation with the W. C. T. U.

The officers for 1890-1891 are: President, Mrs. E. G. Hibben, Peoria; vice-president, Mrs. Ella Arnold, Galesburg; secretary, Miss Lina Jordan, Elmwood; treasurer, Miss Lucie B. Tyng, Peoria; Superintendents of departments: Evangelistic, Mrs. L. L. Evernden, Ipava; Sunday-school, Miss M. Jenny, Galesburg; Loyal Legion, Mrs. Ella Fleming, Canton; Press, Miss Inez Crocker, Oneida; Young woman's work, Miss May Arnold, Galesburg; Scientific Instruction, Mrs. M. A. E. Castle, Wyoming; Work among foreigners, Mrs. L. M. Davidson, Lewistown; Sabbath observance, Mrs. R. A. Turner, Toulon; Work among miners, Mrs. Overman, Canton; Suppression of impure literature, Mrs. M. E. Williamson, Peoria; Railroad, Mrs. Jennie Shoop, Abingdon; County fairs, Mrs. A. P. Eakin, Peoria; Narcotics, Mrs. Esther Auten, Princeville. County presidents: Peoria, Miss Lina Jordan, Elmwood; Fulton, Mrs. Kate Hughes, Table Grove; Knox, Miss Mary Hazzard, Galesburg; Stark, Mrs. R. A. Turner, Toulon. Delegate to National Convention, Miss Lina Jordan, Elmwood; alternate, Mrs. Lucie Kline, Canton.

The session was one of rare profit and enjoyment. The most perfect unanimity prevailed throughout, and the members went from it with fresh courage and renewed zeal to take up the active duties that await them with the assurance that the coming year will be one of marked growth.

LINA JORDAN, Sec. Tenth Dist.

SIXTEENTH DISTRICT.

I have been watching your columns to see some notice of the good work done in our county during the winter and spring, by our superintendent of evangelistic work, Mrs. H. J. Musselman, of Greenup. She came to us in February and labored in revival work fourteen weeks. Nearly one hundred and fifty souls were converted. The places which she visited have not been attended with such an outpouring of God's spirit for years.

At first the novelty of seeing a woman in the pulpit brought the people out, but it was not long until her earnest appeals to the unsaved held the attention of the congregation and they began to inquire, "What shall we do to be saved?" In one meeting there were forty fathers and mothers converted. A number of them were drinking men. One man, a drinker and a gambler, who had not been to church for twenty years, came to hear Mrs. Musselman through curiosity, and was convicted and converted three days later.

Another man, nearly sixty years old, who had received a collegiate education and inherited a nice fortune, but, like the prodigal son, had wasted all in dissipation, was converted, and to-day is preaching the glad tidings of God's power to save the chief of sinners. This man is a marvel to all who know him; a few days after his conversion he came in to the church very early in the morning and knelt at the altar where the Lord had first blessed his soul, and while there he felt impressed to write a hymn of praise, which he did, and sung it at the morning meeting. His wife told me it was the first time she had ever heard his voice in song. A man and his wife came to the service one evening to satisfy curiosity; at the close of the sermon they both came to the altar and were blessed.

We want to praise God for sending us such an earnest, consecrated worker. The people in our county who had the privilege of hearing Mrs. Musselman, and of knowing her, will ever treasure her name in precious memory.

L. S. G.

WORK AT MASON CITY.

After a year of saloon rule, we commenced in the spring to cast about to see what could be done to influence our election, and plant seeds of temperance. With only $8 in our treasury we began arrangements for having Mrs. Henry for a week's gospel temperance work. Before time for her arrival a tri-county teachers' institute was held in our place and $2 was used to procure leaflets on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," by our superintendent of that department, leaving but $6. A soliciting committee of four was appointed who visited many of the friends of temperance. No one gave over one dollar, but something like $50 were raised this way, added to that were collections taken at monthly gospel temperance meetings and at the eight meetings held while Mrs. Henry was with us. The meetings cost us, rent and all, about $75, and we paid all and had about $15 left in the treasury. The good done by these meetings eternity alone will reveal. The large hall was filled every night, and Mrs. Henry's addresses were most highly appreciated. "The Work of the Evangelistic Department" was the finest temperance speech ever given here, many think. She left for home the morning of the election, her health not permitting her to stay longer. The ladies held a seven o'clock prayer meeting the morning of the election, where a few earnest souls poured out their hearts' desire to God. They opened two free lunch rooms, the ladies in the third ward working at the polls all day. After dinner we went out to the first and second ward polling places and found our presence so needed that we never left until they closed at 7 p. m., and dear UNION SIGNAL, imagine, if you can, our great joy when the count was known and we found we had elected every one of our men, and our total majority was about forty, when last year the saloon element elected all their men, with about seventy total majority. Men, women and children gathered on the principal street corner and sang "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and many other songs of praise. Then a triumphal march took possession of the street with their drum corps, the ladies of our union and all the friends of temperance; the church bells rang, etc. We have the saloons this year, also, as they have the mayor and half the aldermen. Next year all their men go out and our men stay in; the fight grows fiercer and hotter until after next election. God grant us a sweeping victory!

Before Mrs. Henry's meetings we had twenty-eight members, and only one honorary; now we have seventy-five, eleven of whom are honoraries. Mrs. Henry organized a Y with thirteen members; it now numbers over twenty. They held a reception June 3, which was a success socially and financially. They have done well in flower mission work.

May 30, the W. C. T. U. presented each of the veterans with "The Open Letter to Veterans," and the Y's gave each a bouquet tied with white ribbon and a Scripture text attached. Our society has just been fitting up headquarters. It is in the center of town, an upper room about twenty-two feet wide by seventy feet long, with a hall running the entire length of the room, with front and back stairway. The room has south, east, and west windows, eight in all, and four doors into the hall. Folding doors divide the room into a front parlor twenty-two by twenty-five feet, and a hall, forty-five feet long. It can all be thrown together at any time. We rent the hall to the Prohibition Club, for two evenings each month at four dollars per month; the remainder of the rent is paid by the members, each pledging to pay some small sum each month for that purpose.

We gave a "chair social" June 24, had a good program, a pleasant time, and secured fifty-four chairs. We have eighty-seven chairs in our rooms, several tables, a good many fine pictures, lace curtains at the parlor windows; an organ was loaned us for three months and plenty of good lamps were put in for our use by our friends. On the evening of June 26, we had the rooms dedicated to the work of temperance and humanity, and although disappointed in not having the lady to preach for us whom we expected, on account of a railroad strike, and also in not having our district president to present the finances, still it was a glad day to us all. The pastor of the Baptist Church came to our help, and preached a good and appropriate sermon. A beautiful quartette, "No Compromise with the Foe" was sung. Encouraging remarks were made by the Christian minister and a visiting minister, also some others. A dearly loved white-ribboner, who has done the most of her W. C. T. U. work in Delavan, Ill., but who has been with us here for a year, offered the dedicatory prayer. Now we have a place for the regular meetings of our society, the Y's, the Loyal Temperance Legion and all extra meetings. We are now very busy getting up the Demorest medal contests here. We have only started in the work; our success in that line is a thing of the future.

COR. SEC.

OHIO.

REYNOLDSBURG NOTES.

Miss Webb lectured in April for the W. C. T. U. on social purity. She also gave a memorial address to the soldiers on Sabbath evening, May 25. At the close she pleaded with "the boys" to enlist in the fight for temperance, purity and truth.

The flower mission is a local organization composed of twenty-five girls, originated by Mrs. Ella Lunn, flower mission superintendent, and Mrs. Hettie Evans, county superintendent of Y work. They meet twice a month, and give a literary feast concerning flowers or some other bright subject, also reporting work done by different committees.

At a neighboring town, Gahanna, the temperance vote carried the day, and the saloon had to go. The "drys" were victorious. When the news was made known that the temperance people were ahead, a woman was the first to reach the church, and then, how triumphantly the bell did ring out!

The W. C. T. U. recently gave an ice cream social at which they realized quite a little sum. They have been scattering W. T. P. A. literature broadcast over the land; thus obeying the command, "Cast thy bread upon the waters." The superintendent of literature put up racks in the stores and barber-shops, filling them with good Christian papers and leaflets. The superintendent of mothers' meetings has held several very instructive conferences. The Temperance Temple mite-box stands on the shelf in the W. C. T. U. room, and welcomes and receives mites from eager, cheerful givers.

MRS. HETTIE GRAHAM EVANS.

NEBRASKA.

FIFTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

This was held at Superior, June 11 and 12. On the evening of the 10th Mrs. L. E. Bailey, of New York, addressed a full house, on the amendment question. She was introduced by the venerable president of the district, Mrs. M. S. Putnam. During the convention the latter was reëlected for the ensuing year. She is also president of two counties, and was elected delegate to the coming National Convention. Space would fail me to give even a general outline of the vast amount of work done during the two days of this enthusiastic, earnest convention. The district has fifty unions; thirty report 468 paying members, and twenty-eight honorary. If we take an average union as a basis from which to form an estimate it will give us a membership of 780 paying members.

The W. C. T. U. has taken up most of the departments, and is pushing campaign work. Among the many subjects discussed were, "White Cross and Social Purity," "How to Carry the Amendment," "The Absurdities of our Opposers" and "Kindergarten." The songs used during the convention were taken from "White Ribbon Vibrations," a book compiled and partly composed by one of our Nebraska W. C. T. U. women, Mrs. Flora H. Cassell. A Demorest gold medal contest was held on the evening of the 11th, Master Ray Thompson winning the medal by only one-sixth of one, a tie resulting between the two second best.

On the morning of the 12th about fifty carriages collected in front of the Presbyterian church and gathering up the members of the convention took them for a ride through this beautiful city, and across the Republican river into Kansas, that they might have the privilege of standing on prohibition soil. On our return a rousing vote of thanks was given to the citizens for the delightful ride about their beautiful city; in these thanks was also couched the prayer that when the Ides of next November shall come, not one should vote against the amendment. At the close of the afternoon session, on the 12th, another pleasant and enjoyable surprise, in the form of a banquet, was given the convention by the citizens of Superior. A blessing was invoked by Rev. Mr. Ewell, of the M. E. church. At the close, an address of welcome was tendered the ladies by Mrs. Stine, which was responded to, on behalf of the convention, by Mrs. C. M. Woodward. The occasion was very enjoyable. A vote of thanks was given the Y's for the beautiful floral decorations of the church in which the convention was held; to the retiring corresponding secretary for her work and excellent report; to Mrs. C. C. Welton, delegate to the last National convention for her full and very interesting report of that convention; and for all kind favors and hospitalities extended; Mrs. Carson, of Kansas, superintendent of juvenile work in that state, was with us during the convention, and aided much by conducting the children's singing. Editor Young, of the Guide, attended each session. Editor Stine, of the Journal, was present most of the time, and each cheered us on by stirring, enthusiastic speeches. Mrs. Woodward gave the closing address, on the evening of the 12th. Editor Young in a few stirring remarks thanked the ladies for coming to Superior. All joined in singing, "God be with you," and the benediction closed a very profitable and pleasant convention.

MRS. DR. PERKINS.

ARKANSAS.

THE OUTLOOK.

All undaunted by whatever of failure we may have sustained last year, and in the face of the latest unconscionable outrage, the "original package decision," we have buckled on our armor afresh, resolved to meet the foe in all legitimate ways possible, and are enrolled for 1890, or "during the war!" A few have deserted their colors, but the veterans, true and tried, are beginning to number legion, and the ranks of the faint-hearted are well-nigh replaced by new recruits. Public sentiment is perceptibly coming over to our side, and the secular papers are kindly contracting their politics, economics, base-ball, athletics, etc., within narrower compass that they may make space for their sisters; some breaking through their conservatism so far as to insist that the columns thus set apart shall be devoted especially to temperance. Take it all in all, the outlook is decidedly more promising than ever before.

Our president, Mrs. Chace, had a most complimentary recall to the chair. She is at present in Kansas City, having been called there to resign her youngest son, her "baby-boy," over to the guardianship of one of Kansas' daughters. The prospect seemed a most pleasing one to the little Quaker mother, who knows so well how to make the best of everything. She may extend her visit to several weeks.

MRS. F. L. SUTTON, Cor. Sec.

WYOMING.

A LECTURER IN THE FIELD.

"Our glorious cause" has received a new impetus in the good work done by Miss I. C. DeVelling in this state. (Territory no longer!) She came to us from Washington (state) and began work at Evanston, where she delivered two lectures and preached once from the pulpit of Rev. O. S. Fisher. From there she went to Almy, a mining town; she was accompanied by our president, Mrs. Fisher, and they succeeded in arousing considerable interest in the cause of temperance.

At Green River she gave an excellent lecture which was appreciated by all who heard her, and although the audience was not large the collection was good.

Her next point was Rock Springs, where she was very kindly welcomed. She spoke with her usual earnestness and eloquence and awakened the union to renewed vigor, but the saloon element there, as in Green River, is very strong. In this country a saloon-keeper is as respectable as a good man, and they and their wives are bon ton.

Miss DeVelling spoke at Cheyenne in the M. E. Church in the morning, visited the prison and talked to the inmates in the afternoon, and spoke in the Baptist Church in the evening. Some additions were made to the union.

At Rawlins, a union was organized and some splendid workers enlisted in the cause. The corresponding secretary at that place is the wife of the general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

At Carbon our lecturer had a good helper in the Rev. Benjamin Young, who did all in his power to make her meetings at that place a success, and the results were very gratifying. From that place the good brother had her conveyed to several points off the railroad where she delivered lectures at Hanna, Medicine Bow and other places.

At Douglas Miss De Velling gave two splendid lectures. There were several other points visited and addressed, but as we have not full reports from them cannot tell what work was done. Miss De Velling visited Noa, Casper and Big Horn. No new unions were organized at those places, but one lady at Noa joined the state union. Several subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL were obtained. We have a union at Manville, which Miss De V. did not visit. Traveling across the country is very tedious and very expensive. Glenock, Wendover, Douglas and Lusk were all visited. She labored five weeks in the state and has done much to prepare the way for more good work.

MRS. F. A. JONES.

INDIANA.

STATE JOTTINGS.

Ninety-six boys have won silver medals in Indiana this year, and five of this company hold small gold medals. Wouldn't you like to see these sturdy little Hoosiers in line? Remember, Indiana gave John P. St. John to the world.

The W. C. T. U. state treasurer makes a call for 1,000 new members befor the state convention in October, and she will get them.

Alice R. Palmer conducted a School of Methods at the Island Park Assembly which opened July 30th. The Culver Park Assembly grounds were open to the W. C. T. U. on Friday, Aug. 1. A gold medal contest will be one of the features of the day.

This week's Organizer contains three letters, one for the W's, one for the Y's and one for the Loyal Temperance Legions full of the doings of the Lake Bluff Convocation. Miss Palmer is the correspondent. We are glad to see the name of Miss Mary G. Hay upon the executive committee of the woman's department of the Lake Bluff Convocation. We know she will perform her duties faithfully and creditably.

Organization is the order of the day in Indiana. New Loyal Temperance Legions have lately been organized at Dunkirk, Coloma, College Corner and Prairie Chapel. Miss L. M. Thompson organized two new unions a few weeks ago at Holton and New Marion. Mrs. Bayless president of Clinton county, also organized a union in her county at Mulberry. Lake county has wheeled into line with a new county organization.

The New Albany union held a meeting at the tent of one of their members at the Holiness camp-meeting on Silver Heights. The meeting was largely attended, having representatives from Cincinnati, Evansville, Louisville, Madison and Jeffersonville.

We note with sorrow that the Fort Wayne union is called to mourn the death of Mrs. Phœbe L. Winch, one of their most faithful workers.

The Organizer is brimming full of state news these days. Certainly the W. C. T. U. are a busy class. The Organizer company declare that a dividend on paid up stock is near at hand. The title page of the issue of July 24, "The Gathering Army," is worthy of careful notice, as is all the work of our faithful editor, Miss L. R. Reed.

Jesse T. Hutchens, the promoted leader of the prohibition forces of Indiana, received his summons home on July 11, while journeying from Lafayette to his earthly home in Wabash; "heart failure" the pronounced trouble. Brother Hutchens hesitated to accept the trust placed in his hands, knowing his physical ailment, but at last he did accept, and cheerfully gave his brave, beautiful life to the work in Indiana. God took him, we know; still our hearts are sad, and we ask, "How many, Lord, must we give?" "Nevertheless, Thy will be done," and Indiana Prohibitionists have placed the work entrusted to Brother Hutchens in the hands of that true and tried man, John Ratliff, of Marion, and may God bless him and be his helper in all his work.

According to the plans of Brother Hutchens the campaign was formally opened in Indiana on July 24, by a general movement throughout the state. This was the anniversary of the nomination of John P. St. John, at Pittsburg.

The W. C. T. U. of Warren county will conduct the dining hall at the coming county fair, August 18 to 23, and will for the first time hold gospel service in the evenings. The object is to reach the stock, booth, and display men who remain upon the ground all the time. Our stanch brother, Rev. J. C. Kemp, of the M. E. Church, will conduct these meetings.

A general movement by the temperance people to open the state campaign upon the Fourth was participated in by Warren county, in the following manner. There were two citizens' celebrations in the county, at Pine Village and at Williamsport. At Pine Village, Brother McKenzie, of the M. E. Church, held the fort for temperance and prohibition.

At Williamsport the afternoon's program was under the control of the county W. C. T. U. First came the children's parade, consisting of three companies uniformed in red, white and blue, carrying banners with appropriate mottoes: "Tremble, King Alcohol," "Coming Voters," "The Saloon Must Go," "No License," "The Children are Afield," "Voters Should Protect the Home," etc. After the children sang "America" with pleasing effect, the multitude were called to order by Mrs. A. S. Fleming. After prayer by Rev. J. C. Kemp, our state president, Mrs. J. R. Nichols, was introduced, and in an address of one hour gave the people of Warren county much material for thoughtful meditation. Mrs. Nichols' address was followed by a gold medal contest in which nine young people took part, their subjects covering many phases of the temperance reform, even to "Church Politics."

The judges on the occasion were, Mrs. Nichols, Professor Schafer, and Wm. B. Durburow, and the medal was awarded to Aubrey Lewis, of Coloma, Parke county, Ind.

SADIE B. WHISTLER

EASTERN WASHINGTON.

REPORTS FROM WALLA WALLA UNION.

This union has lately moved into new and pleasant headquarters in a brick block, recently built on East Main street. The room is completely furnished, and open to visitors during the day.

On the Fourth of July the union served dinner and refreshments to the public, and distributed literature to all comers. The day passed very pleasantly and the receipts over and above all expenses were $45.90.

The firm of Staver & Walker donated to the union the use of their old stand on Main street bridge for the day, a most eligible position fully appreciated by the ladies.

A few days ago Rev. E. B. Sutton, a faithful prohibition lecturer in this state, was assaulted by a saloon-keeper and seriously injured. In view of this occurrence, the Walla Walla union passed appropriate resolutions of sympathy at the next regular session following the attack.

MRS. SUSIE E. FOSTER, Press Supt.

VERMONT

"ONWARD AND UPWARD."

On account of the rigid prohibition law of which Vermont has been so proud these long years past, and which has been comparatively well enforced in places large and small, many earnest temperance workers have been led to believe that the state W. C. T. U. should protest against the attitude of the N. W. C. T. U. Predictions of a great falling off in numbers and loss of influence have been made, but Vermont is waking up to more earnest action instead. Reports from different parts of the state show additions in membership and new unions formed.

The work of Miss Minnie Phelps, Ontario's young orator, who during the months of March and April spoke in nearly every county in the state, was especially effective in bringing in new members and making sentiment against license. Mrs. Lathrap and Rev. Sam Small have also aided the work in different parts of the state, and wherever they have been their labors have resulted in increased activity among temperance workers, such that the liquor forces may find it no easy task to enslave the sturdy Vermonters.

An encouraging letter from the Rutland union says, "We have more than twenty new members and among them some of the first ladies in the place, with plenty of means to help the good cause. Now we are over a hundred strong and we sang the doxology with a WILL, at the close of our last meeting. Our lecturers have been doing much good. Sam Small was a grand success. The lawyers and business men as well as officers of the law, went out to hear him, and the truths he uttered must have lodged somewhere."

Ten county conventions have been held, each one having special excellencies. The most delightful harmony has prevailed and the watchword with all is Onward. Mrs. Housh has been a help and inspiration in nearly every county meeting, and Mrs. Kenyon, our state chalk talker, has rendered efficient service in several counties among the children.

Burlington union has passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That we unanimously declare our entire want of sympathy with the present movement to divide the forces of the W. C. T. U. in our State and Nation, feeling that our individual differences of opinion are of little moment compared with the magnitude of the great evil we are banded together to exterminate; and that, only as we present a united front shall we be able to command respect for our cause and success in the great work before us.

The Windham County Convention indorsed this resolution, and Woodstock union passed one of similar import.

New Y's have been organized at St. Johnsburg, Craftsbury, East Corinth and Newport. Miss Nellie Blakely, state superintendent of Y. W. C. T. U., has proved a faithful worker, visiting and encouraging the Y's in several counties. The work in departments has been constantly increasing, and no previous year has witnessed a convention in every organized county, the attendance upon which has been good. The reports presented have been most encouraging, and the faith and persistence of the white-ribbon women were never better.

GRATIA E. DAVIDSON, Cor. Sec.

MISSOURI.

TO FLOWER MISSION SUPERINTENDENTS.

Will all workers of the flower mission send me their quarterly reports before or not later than August 25, that I may make out my report to the National superintendent by the first of September?

To those unions who have but recently taken up the work I have not thought best to send blanks to be filled out, but ask simply for a statement of your work and any touching or interesting incidents connected with the same. Some of our workers are making a specialty of looking up strangers in hotels and boarding-houses, forgetting none who may be cheered or comforted by their kindly ministrations. The Scripture texts accompanying the flowers, given by the loving hands of children, are a great power for good, in many instances being blessed to the conversion of souls. Will not more unions take up the work, especially those who have jails and hospitals to work for? The dry season has cut off the supply of flowers to some extent, but a few flowers will serve as a setting for the Scripture text, which is the great desideratum in our work. Miss Casseday's secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank Street, Louisville, Ky., will furnish explanatory leaflets at two cents each, and text cards at fifteen cents per hundred.

M. M. PHILLIPS, State Sup't F. M.

KANSAS.

THE "ORIGINAL PACKAGE" QUESTION SUPREME.

Neither the cold of winter, nor the heat of summer seems to affect the enthusiasm of the temperance people of Kansas or their fixed purpose never to yield the state again into the power of King Alcohol. The question of re-submission pales into insignificance, compared with that of "original packages." The "Supreme Court saloon" in our midst has aroused the indignation of the people, and united them "as one man."

What other question could call together a convention of 3,000 elected delegates (representing every county) with thousands more from all over the state, coming as one man to protest against a Supreme Court decision! I wish I had space to give an extended report of that grand meeting, to give their ringing resolutions, and their address to the people of Kansas. It was estimated that at least 12,000 people were in attendance at the outdoor meeting from the steps of the state house. No building in Topeka could accommodate the audiences that assembled, and it was necessary to hold several meetings at the same time. President Troutman remarked that at the late re-submission convention held in that city, seven counties were represented by 126 delegates, and ninety-nine counties were not represented at all, wittily adding:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay,
In the shelter of the fold,
But seven were out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold."

The original package houses are springing up all over the state, but in very many instances our people have said, "They must go; peaceably if they will, forcibly if they must." It is making temperance sentiment, and strengthening the vertebra of the weak ones, as nothing else could have done. The spectacle of the city drunk versus the city sober, enacted in so many of our towns that had long been strangers to such scenes, has answered most emphatically the oft-repeated question, "Does prohibition prohibit?" and people are ready now to take oath, if need be, in the affirmative. "Blessings brighten as they take their flight." The liquor men are making a desperate fight for their "rights." As though the great majority of the people of the state who are opposed to them had "rights." It seems we have been deluding ourselves these many years with the idea that, "To be a Roman (Kansan) were greater than a king." We find, alas, that it were better to be a "foreigner," even a Missouri liquor dealer, as far as "rights" are concerned.

The state superintendent of work among the soldiers, Mrs. Julia A. Chase, sends a very encouraging report. She, with Mrs. McClees, National superintendent, was successful in securing the appointment of Hon. E. N. Morrill, a true friend of ours, on the board of managers of the National Military Home for disabled volunteers. She says, "The amendment to the Canteen bill, by which all liquors are excluded from the canteens in prohibition states, affects forts Leavenworth and Riley. I am assured by officers at Fort Leavenworth that it will be rigidly enforced. It is an experiment, however, and is to be tested a year, to see that the morale of the garrison is any better for it, and if the canteen is self-supporting without the wine and beer. I wish the W. C. T. U. women throughout the country who know any one at either of these forts would pour in temperance literature on them, and help to make temperance sentiment, so that the 'experiment' may become a fixed law." The union at the Home is still alive, but some of its best members have answered to the last roll-call. The union at the military prison held an anniversary meeting recently, at which a fine program was rendered. The members presented Mrs. Chase with a beautiful picture, handsomely framed, which will be on exhibition at our state convention.

The W. C. T. U. work at the Chautauqua Assemblies at Ottawa and Winfield was a grand success. The School of Methods was one of the "attractions" of the grounds. Our state president, Mrs. Rastall, is untiring in her energy and her devotedness to the cause, and at these assemblies she puts her whole soul into the work. A touching incident in connection with our work at Ottawa was the presentation to Ex-President Hayes, of a beautiful basket of flowers, in memory of his wife. Ex-Governor Anthony made the presentation address, and spoke of Mrs. Hayes in the tenderest language. President Hayes was deeply affected and attempted a response, but his heart was too full for utterance, and he burst into tears. Dr. Milner then briefly alluded to the good work of the W. C. T. U. of Kansas, and in closing said to that vast audience of veterans, "Comrades, let us, too, take for the motto of this assembly the motto of the W. C. T. U., 'For God and Home and Native Land,' and let us all stand one moment in memory of that pure and noble woman who banished wine from the White House table." As they were again seated Miss Florence Topping stepped forward and sweetly sang "Home, Sweet Home." On the ends of the ribbon which was entwined about the handle of the basket were the words "Kansas W. C. T. U.," and on the card which was attached to the basket,

"Lucy Webb Hayes,
Memoria in perpetua,
Ottawa, Kansas, June 27, 1890."

One who makes frequent business trips to Kansas City informs me that it is impossible for a traveler to procure a drink of cool water, but that at every corner, and everywhere may be found iced beer and the like beverages to tempt the tired and thirsty, and that many feel really forced to take a drink who are opposed to the drink habit, and perhaps trying to reform. Can not something be done to counteract this evil? Could not the city authorities be prevailed upon to furnish good, cold water free, in every convenient place, or at short distances apart, being particular that a sufficient quantity, and of good quality was supplied to such public places as the railroad depots? It seems to me the W. C. T. U. of all our cities could not do a better or more appropriate thing than to furnish the cup of cold water to the weary traveler, thus obeying the commands of the Saviour.

The first district reports several new unions organized during the past year and old ones strengthened. A district convention was held at Leavenworth in April, and county conventions have been held at Seneca, Sabetha, Hiawatha and Holton.

The Kansas women would like to shake hands with their sisters of Wyoming and congratulate them upon their victory, and they stand in great expectancy, almost with bated breath, waiting to see the results of "female citizenship" fully fledged. We are waiting to see them send a woman to Congress. Would the sun stand still, or in darkness hide his head? Who can foretell what the future may bring forth? Just fancy the commotion it would make in our legislative halls!

MRS. S. S. WEATHERBY, State Reporter.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MISS MARY MCDOWELL, so long associated with the Y. W. C. T. U. as National organizer, has been out of the work for the past year, by reason of her time being occupied in kindergarten study. She will be at leisure, however, during the month of September, and can give the time between the 8th and 25th of that month to the states of Illinois, Indiana and Michigan. The announcement should be quickly heeded by the Y's, as Miss McDowell is authority in their department. Her address is 108 Chicago avenue, Evanston, Ill.

MRS. LOUISE S. ROUNDS, president of Illinois W. C. T. U., will return to her state and her work, August 15. Mrs. Rounds has spent the most of her vacation at Clifton Springs, N. Y., and, because of needed rest, has declined a score or more of invitations to speak in the Empire state.

MEMBERS were added to the union at Utica, N. Y., July 13, on the occasion of a visit from Mrs. S. D. Curtiss. Her theme was, "What the Bible Says About License." The proofs were most conclusive that divine law is not in harmony with any system of license. She also gave vivid descriptions of methods employed to decoy the boys, and showed a thorough knowledge of the evasions of law.

SINCE the appointment of Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler as a National evangelist, she had delivered sixty-seven public addresses up to May 28. She has held evangelistic services in Huntingdon, Towanda, Wellsville, Steelton and Philadelphia, all in Pennsylvania. Many have found Christ, and many new members have been added to the W. C. T. U. She is now engaged in work at the summer encampments with blessed success.

THE Christian church at Pittsfield, Ills., has voted their pastor a month's leave of absence and expenses to go to Nebraska and work for the amendment. He will take the month of August for this work. He is a fine speaker and will undoubtedly do great good.

THE following is an extract from a letter written by a California girl, and contains a valuable hint: "I was graduated from the State Normal June 27th. We had very pleasant exercises. Our class is the largest that has ever been graduated. There were ninety-two of us. We had no essays nor dress parade, but entertained our many visitors by teaching in the training school. Some of the lessons were very enjoyable. There were two temperance lessons given, one on alcohol, and one on tobacco. Then there were lessons in arithmetic, practical, mental, and number work; science lessons, chemistry, physics, zoölogy, botany, etc.; language work, reading, composition, grammar, spelling, etc.; clay modeling, wood carving, paper cutting, card board work, work shop, etc. I had some of the little folks—babies almost—and gave them an observation lesson on the crab. I wish you could have seen their great eager eyes, and heard their cute questions and answers."

THE W. C. T. U. of East Lincoln, Nebraska, conducted a beautiful Fisk memorial on Sabbath evening, July 27. Among the speakers were Mrs. C. M. Woodward and A. G. Wolfenbarger; to the former was assigned, "Fisk and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union," to the latter, "Fisk as a Soldier and a Christian." It is unnecessary to say that both these well-known speakers were in full sympathy with their respective themes and greatly pleased the large audience.

A TOUCHING notice comes, regarding the death of Mrs. Florence Fanning Wheelon, in Livingston, Montana, July 7, at the age of thirty-five. Bereft of her mother in infancy, she was the pupil and companion of her father, an eminent divine, and becoming a Christian in early youth, she was prepared for a life of great usefulness. "She was a zealous white-ribboner, and rejoiced in the possession of Miss Willard's books, sent her as a reward for earnest work in securing new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL; going on even in her weakness, and taking it into homes where a temperance paper was before unknown. But her work was done, and God took her, leaving her loving husband and three little sons to mourn her loss." The tribute adds that "her loss to the local union is irreparable, but God knows best."

THE W. C. T. U. of Nebraska opened its third School of Methods at "The Chautauqua of Long Pine," August 2. This school, together with those at Beatrice and Crete, is conducted by Mrs. C. M. Woodward. The program has a leading place upon the regular schedule, covers two weeks, and promises to be of great benefit and interest. From all reports, Nebraska women are certainly "afield."

THE energy and endurance of our workers is almost phenomenal. Mrs. M. L. Wells, National organizer, has spoken on an average once daily for several months. Misses Willard and Gordon will visit one hundred towns this year.

MISS HENRIETTA G. MOORE is with her mother at their home in Springfield, O., after twenty months of consecutive speaking and work as National W. C. T. U. organizer, on the Pacific Coast.

Official Communications.

AN APPEAL.

"Crops in Nebraska are nearly a failure this year, because of the continual drouth and hot winds. The corn crop cannot be saved, no matter how much rain we have now."

These pitiful words have just come to me in an earnest letter from Mrs. Mary A. Hitchcock, of Fremont, Nebraska, president of that state. I earnestly hope that the words of this heroic woman, a cousin of George Haddock, who gave his life for prohibition some years ago in Iowa, may find an earnest response in the heart of every friend of prohibition. One hundred thousand dollars, it is believed, will carry Nebraska for Constitutional Prohibition. The Original Package Bill being now assured, gives strong hope to our cause in that state, and if the Christian and philanthropic people of this country will hurry along their dollars, in token of their faith and prayer for the success of this great home protection movement, the cause of Christ and good government will win, out on the prairies.

Will not every church paper in the land give place to this announcement and add hearty editorial indorsement, that the necessary literature and speakers may be put into the field and into the homes?

God grant that this appeal may be urged home by His spirit, is the prayer of

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
President National W. C. T. U.

WHY THESE ODD SHAPES?

OUR

GREATEST OFFER!

We cannot longer delay reaching that 100,000 mark. We propose to "get there" by October 1st, and from now till that date only will receive old subscribers' names and new ones at 75 cents each, or

JUST HALF PRICE.

When sent in subject to the conditions. Here are : : : : : : : :

THE CONDITIONS:

1st. One old and one new name must always come together, that is, new names can be sent in at 75 cents each till October 1st by any one, but if you are an old subscriber and want to get the paper for a year for 75 cents you must send in at least one new name with yours.

2d. The money must be sent with the subscription. • • • • •

3d. You can send us $7.50 and your own name only as an old subscriber and we will send you coupons for nine new names which can be sent in any time up to January 1st, 1891. The same holds good for 2, 4, 6—any number of new names for which you want coupons. : : : : :

TO CATCH YOUR EYE—

SAVE YOUR MONEY AND—

CONDITIONS Continued.

You or your union can take the new names at $1.00 after October 1st, as the price will not again be reduced to 75 cents.

4th. No money will be received by us if the envelope which holds it bears the stamp of October. The offer positively closes Sept. 30th, that is, you can mail money on that day and it will be received, but not if you mail it October 1st.

5th. No commissions will be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD

Add 30 cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. No matter when your subscription expires it will be extended a year if you will send us $1.50 with your own name and one new name.

8th. This offer holds good only for those whose subscription expires in '90 or '91. It is not meant that those who are in arrears can pay up at the rate of 75 cts. a year.

9th. Now it has all been explained—the offer is a great and generous one, don't forget it, don't pass it by. It ought to bring us 50,000 new names, sure.

Address W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

GET UP TO THE 100,000 MARK!

Dear Friends:

The above offer speaks for itself. Many have claimed it was unjust to old subscribers to take new names at a less rate than their own. Here is the opportunity to get THE UNION SIGNAL at just as low a price as to the new subscriber. If you do not accept it you cannot, again, justly criticize our system of building up the paper. Is not this true? We are trying to get the paper into homes where it would not go without these efforts to get new subscribers. A gain of 15,000 new names a year for five consecutive years, is evidence that this is being done. With one more good push from you, NOW, the 100,000 mark will be reached. Let every lover of the paper and its claims say, "It shall be so!" and it will be done. The offer is plain, so are the conditions; now, then?

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Take Pains

with your work, unless you take Pearline to it. Without Pearline, you may have your labor for pains. In all washing and cleaning it saves work, wear and worry. It is harmless to everything washable; it should be used with everything that is washed. Pearline is worth more than it costs. Imitations are worthless and are dangerous.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door. First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by

205 JAMES PYLE, New York.

"Van Houten's Cocoa, the original, most soluble."

MR. W. H. SNOWDEN, Macon, Ga., says: Allow me to voluntarily attest to the merits of Bradycrotine as a specific in relieving Headache.

MR. JOHN FLANNERY, Savannah, Ga., says: I obtain relief from Headache by using Bradycrotine, in a shorter time than from any other remedy.

A Chance for a Good Investment.

Wanted W. C. T. U ladies or temperance workers having a little money to invest, to investigate a company started to develop a town site, fruit farms, etc., on the Cumberland Plateau, Tennessee. Fullest investigation solicited and references exchanged H. E. PARTRIDGE, 168 Washington St., Chicago.

Prohibition Program. Price 10 cents. By Anna A. Gordon. Song recitations and exercises of the brightest and best kind. High license is fired at in a way that tells. A dialogue by Mr. E. J. Wheeler on "Sense vs. License," is full of vigor, fun and education!

W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Bargain Prices.

Books, etc., soiled by having been sent to convention, or having some slight damage in binding.

	Regular Price.	Bargain Price
Ye Hatchet Partie,	$ .15	$ .07
Helping,	.10	.05
Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	.75	.35
" " " paper,	.40	.15
Romance Nineteenth Century	1.00	.35
Duties of Women,	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo,	.25	.10
Boys and Other Boys, paper,	.25	.12
Girls of To-Day,	.25	.12
Y Song Books,	.25	.20
Glorious Cause,	.30	.20
Birthday Books, plain,	1.00	.50
Birthday Books, gilt edge,	1.25	.60

Please name first and second choice, as we have only a few of some of the items. Secure your bargains promptly. They will not last long.

Co-operative Housekeeping. Price 5 cts.

By Lide Merriwether, president Tennessee W. C. T. U. An admirable allegory to show how the women of the country could clean house at Washington if they only had the chance. Telling and effective.

FAIR

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers. Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00

All prepaid, Address W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Summer in the East.

Rapid Transit to the Mountains and the Ocean.

The famous resorts of the East are placed within easy and comfortable reach of residents of Chicago by the PENNSYLVANIA SPECIAL, which, leaving the Pennsylvania Passenger Station at 10:30 a. m. runs through with Pullman Perfected Safety Vestibule Dining and Sleeping cars, arriving early the next morning at Cresson and Altoona, the key to the Alleghenies, Philadelphia, but a few hours' ride from Atlantic City, Cape May and Long Branch, is reached early in the afternoon, and at four o'clock the Pennsylvania Special arrives in New York, where it is the only train making direct connection with the palatial steamers of the Fall River Line for Newport, Fall River and Boston; for Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket; for the resorts of Cape Cod and those farther north. The salt water and salt air of the ocean, the clear atmosphere of the mountains give delightful vigor to all who court their influence. For a folder containing a perspective map of the country traversed by the Pennsylvania Lines and any other information apply to J. H. Luce, Assistant General Passenger Agent, No. 65 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Only Thirty Days Left!

Two weeks ago I commenced hearing from my advertisement about the new manufacturing and temperance town of Harvey, just south of the Chicago city limits. Since that time I have sold forty-one lots outright, and probably as many more conditionally. On the 15th of September the prices will certainly be advanced. Here is an item clipped from the news columns of the Chicago Tribune of August 8. It is worth reading:

"People back of manufacturing enterprises that will give employment to 1,000 men are negotiating for sites in the new industrial town of Harvey. The Kalamazoo Spring Company from Michigan, a lock company from Oshkosh, Wis., the Owatonna Feed-Mill Company from Owatonna, Minn., and a wind engine company from Keokuk are all seeking sites in Harvey.

"We will begin the manufacture of cars Oct. 1," said an officer of The Harvey Steel Car Company yesterday, "if the buildings can possibly be completed by that time. We will employ 1,000 men at the start. The contracts have been let for work on the new railroads to be built in this section, and work will be commenced on the Rock Island and Calumet Terminal branches in a short time."

In that part of the Harvey tract known as the residence part twelve lots have been sold during this week for about $10,000.

Write for plats or say what priced lot you wish. Prices till September 15th are: $180, $200, $225, $250, $275, $300, $325, $400, $450. The advance per lot will probably be about ten per cent.

C. D. PAINE, Mgr. Adv. Dept. Union Signal,

161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

I refer by permission to Mrs. T. B. Carse, President W. T. P. A.; Miss Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL. Mr. Hall kindly permits me to say that, as the time named is very short, any who desire to invest can send the money to him, and he will see that the deeds, abstracts, etc., are sent promptly.

Publisher's Notes.

Now Ready!

The new Marching Songs (No. 2) by Anna A. Gordon. How shall we tell you about its strong common sense in words and melody? its adaptability? its brightness? its really good music—not the "la la la weak, weak, weak" style. There are songs to teach kindness to birds and animals; songs to teach courtesy:

" * * * An island far away,
Across the rosy sunset seas
Where we'll send to stay for a year and a day,
The folks who forget to say 'please.'"

Songs to teach patriotism; Harvest Hymns; a Temple Hymn; Rounds, and on many other subjects—all teaching some good true idea. We can quote one more verse from a song, "The Saloons Must Go." The words are by Miss Willard, and the music, by Mr. Charles T. Kimball, has the sound of the march of many feet. This is the fifth verse:

"Thy Kingdom come, O Savior great,
In hearts and homes, in church and state;
But ere it comes full well we know—
Saloons, Saloons, Saloons must go!"

But who can tell what a music-book is like? It's like trying to describe the perfume of a flower. Miss Gordon's work needs no commendation to those who know Marching Songs No. 1, and Songs of the Y. W. C. T. U. The price of this new book will be the same as No. 1—10 cents, a marvel of cheapness in paper, printing and binding, but when you consider the worth of the contents, ten cents seems almost like giving you the book for nothing.

Friendly Promises.

The following persons pledge themselves to send in a new subscriber at $1:

A. A. Cole, Warren, Pa.
Mary Conves, Burr Oak, Kas.
M. W. Logan, London, Mo.
L. F. Kletzing, Berlin, Ont.
Lettie S. Weaver, Woods, N. Dak.
Florence Bell, New Mt. Pleasant, Ind.
L. D. Conner, Petoskey, Mich.
Mrs. John Dutwiller, Mexico, Mo.
Mrs. M. J. Aten, Toronto, Ohio,
Mrs. R. H. Sargent, Titusville, Pa.
Mrs. G. W. L. Baker, Payson, Ill.
Mrs. E. B. Hard, Detroit, Mich.
Jessie M. Hines, Normal, Ill.
Emma Ellis, Redfield, Ia.
Mrs. Belle Kimball, Kirkwood, Mo.
Lena Heartsill, Cleveland, Tenn.
Mrs. Laura A. Berry, Chicago, Ill.
Mrs. P. C. Temple, East Saginaw, Mich.
Mrs. M. C. Rapp, Dodge City, Kas.
W. C. T. U., Shelbyville, Ill.
Mrs. M. L. Harlan, Hutton, Ill.
E. E. Ware, Coventry, Vt.
Elizabeth R. Taylor, Hartford, Conn.
Miss M. S. Hilles, Wilmington, Del.
E. B. T. Willson, Leslie, Mich.
Mrs. I. F. Maynard, Tullahoma, Tenn.
Mary A. Willard, M. D., Detroit, Mich.
Mrs. Geo. L. Sackett, Springfield, Mass.
M. E. Gilman, Fargo, Dak.
A. E. Sanford, Bloomington, Ill.
Mary Edith Gould, Florence, Mass.
Mrs. Alice J. Mears, Wayne, Neb.
Lydia M. Chace, Little Rock, Ark.
Mrs. M. E. Carley, Colfax, Wash.
Belle Anderson, Williamsport, Ind.
Anna Morris, Lima, Ohio.
Mrs. H. H. Hartranft, Moorestown, N. J.
L. Anna Ballard, Lansing, Mich.
Mrs. Mary Wilkinson, Hill's Grove, Ill.
Mrs. O. B. Rowley, Marshall, Mich.
Mrs. W. B. Rennick, Kinzua, Pa.
Mrs. E. A. Steele, Higley, Fla.
Mrs. S. Plummer, Coryville, Pa.
Mrs. Frances Russell, Gilman, Ill.
Mrs. J. H. Spelman, Tamora. Ill.
Mrs. M. M. Chapin, Denison, Texas.
Helen Sherfey, Brazil. Ind.
Mrs. L. D. Conner, Petoskey, Mich.
Mrs. E. J. Norton, Woodstock, Ill.
Mary A. Wells, North Adams, Mich.
Mrs. Emma Birtch, Thompson, N. Dak.
Mrs. H. A. Murrell, Pollocksville, N. C.
Mrs. E. G. Blackman, Moosic, Pa.
Mrs. J. L. Boggs, Argos, Ind.
Mrs. E. J. Warden, Mound City. Kan.
Mrs. Wm. G. Montgomery, Reynolds, Ill.
Mrs. F. F. Kellogg Neenah, Wis.
Mrs. E. Strickler, Solomon City, Kan.
Mrs. N. Jones, Oak Grove, Mich.
Mrs. P. W. Melick, Elizabeth City, N. C.
Miss R. H. Henderson, Mitchell's Salt Works, Ohio.

The following unions agree to send in five or more new names before January.

Epping, N. H.
Clay County, Kan.
Harrisonville, Mo.
Fitchburg, Mass.
Pratt, Kan.
N. Capitol Auxiliary, Washington, D. C.
Cazenovia, N. Y.
Doylestown, Pa.
Zanesfield, Ohio.
Girard, Ill.
East Orange, N. J.
Johnston, R. I.
Highland, N. Y.
The Raisin Valley, Adrian, Mich.
Flat Rock, Mich.
Moosic, Pa.

Crusader Programs. Price 25 cts. A book of 188 pages, full of the best of Sunday-school and general temperance exercises, largely from the Sunday-school Young Crusader, given in its columns from time to time. All are good; none need costumes or any such outside helps. An admirable book in every way. Twenty-four numbers or exercises in all are given.

For piles use Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

LADIES! Use only Brown's French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Once Tried, Always Used."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [64

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill

RUG THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. & EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago.

MOTHERS' PORTFOLIO. Illustrated. 400 pages. Contains best helps for teaching young children. Instruction and amusement combined in Kindergarten lessons, stories, games, etc. Agents can find no better selling book. Circulars free. Prepaid $2.25. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

LOWEST PRICES ON BICYCLES
700 Cycles in stock. Rare bargains in best makes, new and second hand.
EASY PAYMENTS WITH NO EXTRA CHARGE. Lowest prices guaranteed. Low freight rates. We are headquarters and our superior inducements bring us orders from all parts U. S. & Canada. Cata free. ROUSE, HAZARD & CO. 77 ST., PEORIA, ILL.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.
The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin. For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W. H. McDoel, Traffic Manager or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent, 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS! $35. ORGANS!
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

WANTS LADY AGENTS. Box 1219, Elkhart, Ind.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE Pub. Boston

SAVE MONEY. Our 486-page Catalogue gives Wholesale Prices on all kinds of Merchandise in any quanity. Anti-trust and Co-operative. Write for particulars. Cash Buyers' Mer. Union, Chicago, Ill.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS.
Fit all ages. Infants to Adults.
Are made of the best material and workmanship

SEE ADVERTISEMENT OF
STANDARD FIBER-WARE
IN NEXT WEEK'S "UNION SIGNAL."

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia. Pa.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

LADIES Send to the Steven's Dish Washing Machine Co., Cleveland, O., for descriptive circulars of this wonderful invention. No dish or wiping cloth used; truly a great blessing to the household. Agents wanted.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O

$50 CUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

BABY CARRIAGES FREE ARE DELIVERED to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

THE PREFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE.
The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted.
SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO.,
491-493 Carroll Ave., Cor. Union Park Place. Chicago

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it.
Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

SATIN PLUSH SILK & Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at
WHOLESALE.

WE WANT 1,000 BRIGHT BOYS OR GIRLS.
To whom we can give employment in a way that will be easy and pleasant. The preliminary work can be done after school hours—an hour a week after that will suffice to bring in a profit of from 20 cents to $2.00 a week.
SEND FOR PARTICULARS TO
The Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co.,
235 East 21st St., N. Y.

CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO.,
Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

EVERYBODY SATISFIED
that uses WESTPHAL'S UTILITY. Strong, clean, durable and the only satisfactory FLOWER STAND made. Circulars and prices on application to mf'rs. A. M. HOWES & CO.,
65 and 67 So. Canal St., Chicago, Ill.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

WANTED.
One hundred and sixty-five (165) W. C. T. U. members (or other reliable persons), who will, each, secure five (5) purchasers for FAITH,
or, EARTHLY PARADISE and Other Poems, just issued from the press of the W. T. P. A.; a volume of 528 pages, 330 of which constitute a drama, with scenes laid in Washington City, Faith being the heroine. Good, clear type, with frontispiece, and Three (3) Songs Set to Music.
5½ by 7¾ inches in size by 1½ thick; bound in royal purple cloth, with name on back in gold letters. Price $1.25 per copy; gilt-edged, $1.50. Six copies, plain, for $6.25, cash in advance. 100 copies, plain, for $90 in advance. Ladies particularly will like the book. The Mississippi White Ribbon says:
"It especially commends itself for its fidelity to the loftiest ideals for woman and the home." Address immediately,
MRS. ELLEN E. HEBRON,
Edwards, Hinds Co., Mississippi.

SONGS FROM SOUTH,
a volume of 245 pages, by same author, for 60 cents.
Postage or freight prepaid on all books.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W 23d St., New York.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL. Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty The best looking and cheapest sanitary system o building.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

Spiritual Diseases!

Few of our readers realize what they are missing in not using the Bible Reading Leaflets, by Hannah Whitall Smith. We have so many, and such diverse publications, that we can only semi-occasionally call your attention to the different ones. For this time we will make short extracts from the last three, and then will expect you to see to it that the Leaflets are used in your ladies' prayer-meeting, W. C. T. unions, and for home reading. The July Leaflet has the above given title, and says:

* * * *

"A large number of Christians are seriously afflicted with one form or other of spiritual ill health, and are incapacitated thereby from the right fulfilling of the high calling wherewith God has called them. And the worst of it is, so ignorant are we of the true nature and manifestations of the various forms of these spiritual diseases, that we are continually mistaking its symptoms as evidences of spiritual health, and are encouraging and fostering them rather than seeking to get rid of them. For instance, how many Christians, who are laboring under the disease of discouragement, call it humility, and look upon it as a sign of deep spiritual life!

* * * *

"When He was on earth our Lord healed many physical diseases that may be taken as types of these spiritual diseases. Among them are the following, which will be discussed:

I. Fever; or restlessness.
II. Palsy; or lack of spiritual power.
III. Blindness; or inability to see God.
IV. Infirmity; or being bowed down and discouraged.
V. The withered hand; or inability to lay hold of Divine things.
VI. Dropsy; or self-inflation."

"ME!"

is the subject of the June Leaflet, and after giving Bible texts Mrs. Smith says:

"Most lives are largely made up of variations on the word 'ME.' What do people think of ME? How will things affect ME? Will this make ME happy? Do people value ME as they ought? Look at MY great estate. Behold MY remarkable experiences. Listen to MY wisdom. Adopt MY views. Follow MY methods, and so on, and so on, through all the varied range of daily life. Always and everywhere this giant ME intrudes itself, demanding attention, and insisting on its rights.

"The whole book of Ecclesiastes is founded on this devotion to the word ME.

"The 'Preacher' having resolved to see what is the best thing for the sons of men to do under the heaven all the days of their life, secures for himself everything that can in any way conduce to the welfare and happiness of ME. At the end he looks back upon his life and is forced to declare that 'all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun.' This is the inevitable result of everything that has ME and ME only for its center. There is never any 'profit' in it, but always a grievous loss, and it can never turn out to be anything but 'vanity and vexation of spirit.'"

The August number is on

The Law of Kindness.

"Kindness is one of the mightiest forces in the universe. Nothing else has so much power to change the whole face of things as kindness. In fact, so marvelous are the transformations it effects, that one is almost tempted to think there must be some magical or occult power hidden in the 'law of kindness,' that works according to a principle unknown to us. Like electricity, we need an Edison to discover its secrets, and to reveal its power. God is kind, and kindness makes us like God.

* * * *

"One thing I want to say before closing, and that is that the kindness I mean is not that condescending sort of 'being kind' which stoops from a height to patronize those who are beneath it. It is 'brotherly kindness' I mean, the genuine kindly outflow of one heart towards another, where self is forgotten, and only the good of the other is desired."

These extracts give an unsatisfactory idea of the Leaflets, because of our limited space, but enough to assure our readers that they will do well to use the Leaflets as heart expositions of the Word.

Prices singly.—Five or more copies of any number, 1 cent each. Fifty or more copies, ½ cent each.

By the year.—12 cents per copy; ten or more copies, ten cents each.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTIN SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations. Notice autograph of STEWART HARTSHORN on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks. 10c. CHICAGO.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.
Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars. Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

INTRODUCTION LADIES. Sample Package of 24 sheets very extra elegant gilt-edged note paper (Oxford) and envelopes for 25 cts. in stamps. Box 1219. ELKHART, IND.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted

? ? In its 58th year and read by the third generation of many of its earliest subscribers and keeping easily every new subscriber. Perhaps our magazine may attract you too? Send 4 two-cent stamps for sample copy. The Mother's Magazine, New York City.

Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed. Agents wanted.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

THE "PEARL"
A marvel of beauty & usefulness. FULLY WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS. Plush-lined case of Attachments free. Buy direct and see $20 to $50 Agents' commissions.
Send for Circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., CHICAGO, ILL.

DELAVAU'S WHOOPING COUGH REMEDY
Dispels whoop, allays cough, and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden, dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists.

Dr. Owen's Electric Belt.
FOR MAN AND WOMAN

The only practicable electric belt made. Cures Rheumatism, Brights' Disease, Sciatica, Paralysis, Torpid Liver, Lumbago, Nervous Debility, Female Weakness, General Debility, Painful Menses, Saint Vitus Dance, Spinal Diseases, Kidney Complaints, Urinary Diseases. Pat. Aug., 16, 1887. Improved Aug. 1, 1889.
Awarded the highest medal at Cincinnati Exposition, 1888.
Gives mild or strong current of electricity which stimulates and assists nature to restore weak organs to health and vigor.
ELECTRIC INSOLES $1.00.
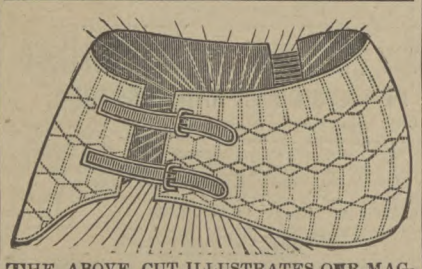
Send 6c for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.
DR. OWEN BELT CO., 191 & 193 State St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.
Disclosing the wonderful medicineless cure for constipation, piles, rheumatism and any and all diseases when impurity of blood works dire results. Abundance of testimonials from the best of people. Closest scrutiny invited. Not a mind cure or any species of gymnastic, and most emphatically not a humbug. Call or address with 2-cent stamp, A. T. Bates, Western Agent, 161 La Salle St., Room 46, Chicago, Ill.



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.
IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.
No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.
SPLENDID PROGRESS.
Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.
PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.
Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

GLOBE PILE CURE
HEMORRHOIDS OR PILES
Quickly and forever cured. New treatment at home. Mild, Painless, Effectual, Clean and Cheap. Is not a mechanical contrivance. Contains no grease, no liquid. Is easily used, and acts directly upon the diseased parts. Relieves in 15 minutes. Nothing in the world like it for Piles. IT NEVER FAILS. Your Physician will approve it. Will not interfere with household duties or business. Full instructions for self-treatment at home, free with each order. Large package, enough to cure any case, $2.00; trial size, $1.00. Our new Scientific Treatise on Piles, and Testimonials sent free on application. Every package fully warranted as represented or money refunded. Send money by Express Order, P. O. Order, or Registered Letter to the GLOBE MEDICINE CO., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.
CURES EXTERNAL INTERNAL BLEEDING PROTRUDING ITCHING PILES

THE EDISON
MIMEOGRAPH
Patented by THOS. A. EDISON.
Patented by Thos. A. Edison. A simple, practical and portable device for every day use. Makes 3,000 copies of the one original writing, Drawing, Music, etc. 1,500 copies of one original Typewriter Letter. Recommended by over 40,000 users. Send for circular and sample of work.
A. B. DICK COMPANY,
152-154 Lake Street, CHICAGO. 32 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

MOTHERHOOD with Little Pain. Stamp to Dr. Stainback Wilson, Atlanta, Ga.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

AGENTS Male or Female can make good wages at their own home. Write for terms and Free Sample.
HOBB'S MEDICINE CO.,
407-415 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. CATARRH.
REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.
$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c. stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

THE DEAF HEAR SOUND DISCS are guaranteed to help a larger per cent. of cases than all similar devices combined. The same to the Ears as glasses are to the eyes. Positively invisible. Worn months without removal. H. A. WALES, Bridgeport, Conn.

A-CORN SALVE.
Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

ELASTIC TRUSS
Best Truss Ever Used.
Improved Elastic Truss. Worn night and day. Positively cures rupture, Sent by mail everywhere. Write for full descriptive circulars. DR. HOUSE, N. Y., ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 744 Broadway, N. Y.
(Mention this paper.)

RHEUMATISM.
Agents wanted for the German Anti-Rheumatic Ring. A certain and speedy cure for Rheumatism, Neuralgia and all kindred complaints. Write for circulars and particulars. Can refer, by permission, to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, business manager, and Mr. C. D. Paine, advertising manager of The Union Signal, who have used them. Address F. W. Kimball, 155 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU ARE MARRIED, or contemplate taking this important step, we can send you information which you ought to know, and worth $100. Valuable 16-page circular mailed free, by J. S. OGILVIE, 57 Rose Street, New York.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

For Gas or Oil
BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS,
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.
113 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam.

For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express
A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy.... 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill..... 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE how you do it for the money.

$12.50 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine, a perfect working, reliable, finely finished Sewing Machine, adapted for light or heavy work, with all the latest improvements and complete set of attachments. A written guarantee for 5 years with each machine. Buy direct from manufacturers and save Dealers and Agents profits. Catalogue free.
OXFORD MANUFACTURING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

ALL FAT PEOPLE
can safely Reduce Weight and Cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without Change of Diet. An English Countess writes:—"Your Trilene Tablets act admirably."—Send Postal Note for 75 cents to THE TRILENE CO., Sole Proprietors, 834 Broadway, New York.

CURLYQUEUE

KEEPS THE HAIR IN CURL
DURING THE DAMPEST WEATHER, AND IN THE HEATED BALL ROOM IT SOFTENS AND INVIGORATES THE HAIR, AND IS ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS.
PRICE 50 CTS. PER BOX
AT ALL DRUGGISTS OR SENT BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
H. S. Johnson.
SOLE PROPRIETOR, SUFFERN, N.Y.

Signal Notes.

THERE are few brighter papers than the Southern California White Ribbon. It is "little, but mighty," a marvel of condensed strength, sweetness and sense, with plenty of fun thrown in. Here is one of its suggestions concerning the Long Beach School of Methods: "If whole unions can not go, do the next best thing, send proxies. A few women will bring home with them the program and the ability to reproduce it." Here is one of its "Dots": "Please, Lord, forgive me for running away to-day, and forgive me when I run away to-morrow."

NOT every American has heard that Valley Forge, the scene of the sufferings of Washington's army, is about to become the site of a large brewing establishment. This sacrilege on patriotism will be consummated unless the government steps in to prevent and converts the scene and its surroundings into a National park. Allen Eastman Cross, the young poet whose recent verses in the New England Magazine attracted such favorable attention, has a stirring protest against this outrage, in the August or Grand Army number of the New England Magazine.

MR. GEORGE BLAIKLOK, of London, addressed the people of Sag Harbor, Long Island, on Sunday evening, July 27, and on the Monday and Tuesday evenings following. His subject Sunday evening was "Moderate Drinking," taking for his text, "Let your moderation be known to all men." Monday evening, practical truths; Tuesday evening a lecture on, "Life in London," showing that much of the poverty and wretchedness was due to strong drink. Wednesday afternoon he met the ladies of the W. C. T. U., and spoke to them for a half hour. He is an earnest and successful advocate of total abstinence. He is to return to the Old World next week.

A REPORT having been circulated that Father Chiniquy had become an atheist and then died, a London lady wrote for a contradiction of the falsehood. Father Chiniquy, writing from Ste. Anne, Kankakee county, Ill., said: "Though eighty years and ten months old, I travel in the United States and Canada, and lecture almost every day, with as much ease as when thirty years old. By the good mercy of God my eyes are still good, my hands do not shake, my steps are firm, and my lungs excellent. Far from being dead in a state of atheism, I am at work to build a church for one of the many congregations of converts. This year my work has been more prosperous than ever, upwards of 500 converts being the blessed fruits which the good Master has granted me to reap in his vineyard during the last twelve months."

WHEN Edison had given two weeks of his valuable time to going up and down the New York elevated railroad, trying to discover what caused its noise, and a cure for it, he gave up the task. Then a little woman took it. She rode on the cars three days, was denied a place on the rear platform, laughed at for her curiosity, and politely snubbed by conductors and passengers. But she discovered what caused the noise and invented a remedy, which was patented, and she was paid the sum of $10,000 and a royalty forever. Her name is Mrs. Mary Walton, and she lives in New York City.

A REPORT has been going the rounds of the Associated Press that Abraham Lincoln's home in Springfield, given to the state of Illinois by his son Robert, was falling into decay for lack of proper care. Nothing is further from the truth. It is kept in most beautiful order by Captain Oldroyd and wife, with whom it is a labor of love. Nothing can exceed their devotion to the memory of Lincoln; indeed, it is the passion of Captain Oldroyd's life. From boyhood he has been collecting mementoes of his hero, till now his personal collection, aside from all that belonging to the state, is so full and interesting that it would command almost any price from museums. But no money can purchase it from him to whom it is sacred.

A MEMBER of the New York State Liquor Dealers' Association is reported as saying recently: "In almost every county in the state now there is a liquor dealers' association, and we are all pledged to vote together. We will vote together regardless of politics, for we have come to the conclusion that it is about time that we should take care of ourselves."

A BRITISH liquor-dealer has offered John Burns £20 for a straw hat of his which has become famous; doubtless John Burns is a poor man, but he refused the offer: he declares he would have refused £1,000 from such a source, since the hat would only be used to entice his friends into the saloons.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Mrs Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st 11 Jan 91

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

Warren Hose Supporter
THE WARREN FASTENER has a ROUNDED RIB around the part which holds the stocking and WILL NOT TEAR the finest hose.

WARREN HOSE SUPPORTERS ARE FOR SALE EVERYWHERE. Ask for them at the stores and BE SURE YOU GET THE GENUINE which may be identified by the Fastener having a ROUNDED RIB on holding edges and being stamped with the name WARREN. DO NOT ACCEPT WORTHLESS IMITATIONS. Illustrated catalogue mailed free to any address.
GEO. FROST & CO., 31 Bedford St., Boston.

This is the Picture of
Baby Barendse,

Three months old when cured by the use of Steketee's Worm Destroyer.
Read what its mother says:
"The undersigned has a child only three months old. It became sick with pains in its bowels and stomach when scarcely two months old. It cried and whined nearly all the time, and was completely run down in flesh. We gave it everything that we thought would relieve the child, but it grew worse all the time. We made twenty powders from a teaspoonful of Steketee's Worm Destroyer, gave it one powder three times daily. To our astonishment it was relieved of thousands of worms. We have given the child but twenty powders. It is entirely cured. I shall always recommend Steketee's Worm Destroyer.
MRS. B. BARENDSE,
Oakdale Park, Kent Co., Mich.
For Sale by all Druggists, and by mail, 25 Cents.
Send U. S. Stamp. Address:
GEO. G. STEKETEE,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
The proprietor of this paper knows that this medicine is no humbug, and perfectly safe to send money to Mr. Steketee. Mention Union Signal.

SPLENDID! The New Towel Rack, 15c. Gilt Tidy Pins, 5c. Pr.
Willcox Comfort Cuff Holders, 15c.
(All for 30 cts.) S. & S. WILLCOX, Fairhaven Mass.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF Cancer & Tumors Without the Knife
Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR THE
Union's Devotional Life
see that it is supplied monthly with
HANNAH WHITALL SMITH'S
BIBLE READING LEAFLETS.
They are evangelical, full of a breezy, cheery religiousness, wonderfully simple and pointed. Twelve copies to one address one year $1.00.
Address. Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth, Minn.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILWAUKEE COLLEGE, Milwaukee, Wis. For Young Women. For Catalogue address C. R. KINGSLEY, Ph. D., Pres't.

BUNKER HILL ACADEMY, Near St. Louis. A First-Class Boys' Home School: $280; W. C. T. U. patronize; College and Business; 8th year. Circulars of REV. S. L. STIVER, Bunker Hill, Ill.

MT. CARROLL (ILL.) SEMINARY } has delightful location: easy of access; distinguished for healthfulness; resident physician; Faculty of the best from Eastern colleges; expenses moderate for accommodations given. "Oreads" free.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE Morgan Park (near Chicago). Boarding School for Girls and Young Ladies. For catalogue address G. THAYER, LL. D., Morgan Park, Ill., or 77 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich. Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, S. E. Cor. Druid Hill Av. & Hoffman St. The ninth annual session will begin on Wednesday, Oct. 1st, 1890, and will continue seven months. For further information or catalogue address Randolph Winslow, M. D., Dean, 1 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

KNOX COLLEGE, GALESBURG, ILLINOIS.
Fifty-fourth year opens Sept. 4th, with greatly increased facilities. For catalogue and all information address NEWTON BATEMAN, President.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH
42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY
Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution. SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year.
E. F. BULLARD, A. M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

JENNINGS SEMINARY
AURORA NORMAL SCHOOL AND BUSINESS COLLEGE.
Prepares for COLLEGE, for TEACHING, for BUSINESS, and offers excellent opportunities for the study of Music, Art, Short Hand and Typewriting and Elocution. Building heated by steam. For catalogs address. Rev. C. C. LOVEJOY, A. M., Aurora, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE
NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

ALBION COLLEGE. YEAR-BOOK SENT FREE.
It is more than a catalogue; it is full of information, and contains a discussion of the great live educational questions of the day, such as every progressive scholar needs. Postage four cents. This is one of the leading colleges in the West in attendance, range and thoroughness of work, and in extent of election of studies. Alive on all historic and scientific questions. Tuition Free. Expenses only ½ as great as Eastern colleges. L. R. Fiske, LL.D., Pres., Albion, Mich.

The St. Louis Hygienic College
OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.
Will begin its Fourth annual course of instruction Wednesday, October 1, 1890. This is the only hygienic college in the United States; it is legally chartered and officered, and has a full graded course of three years. Men and women are admitted.
Address for announcement, S. W. DODDS, M.D., 2826 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

CHICAGO KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago Ill.

Rockford Seminary for Young Women.
42d year. Full College and Preparatory courses. Special advantages for Music and Art. Resident physician. The Seminary has a fine gymnasium building generously equipped for the Sargent system of work, and the official records show that delicate girls make a marked gain in strength while pursuing regular courses of study. Catalogue with full particulars as to entrance requirements furnished upon application. Correspondence with regard to admission in fall of 1890, or later, is invited.
ROCKFORD SEMINARY, Rockford, Ill.
SARAH F. ANDERSON, Principal.

RUBIFOAM
A PERFECT LIQUID DENTIFRICE DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED.
ITS USE INSURES BEAUTIFUL CLEAN TEETH

Price 25 cents
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

VAN ORDEN CORSETS

Agents Wanted.
Perfect Shape
Van Orden Corset Co., 22 Clinton Pl., N. Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

A SET (12 vols.) of Dickens' works given to every user of the Favorite Baking Tins. Information free. Greene & Hendryx, Bath, N. Y.

AMERICAN Desk and Seating Co.,
Manufacturers
Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for Catalogues.
270-272 Wabash Ave., Chicago

RUPTURE
Positively cured in 60 days by Dr. Horne's Electro-Magnetic Belt Truss, combined. Guaranteed the only one in the world generating a continuous Electric & Magnetic current. Scientific, Powerful, Durable, Comfortable and Effective. Avoid frauds. Over 9,000 cured. Send stamp for pamphlet.
ALSO ELECTRIC BELTS FOR DISEASES.
DR. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

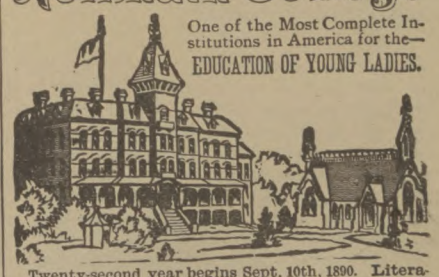
OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

RIDGE'S FOOD
Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

OPIUM HABIT.
Send two dollars to Dr. L. S. Means, Oxford, Ga., for a sure remedy for the Opium & Morphine habit.

HOUSEWIVES should try the Beveridge Quick Cooker. Simple and convenient, saving time and labor. No dirt, no smell, no burning. Saves fuel. Used on any stove, winter or summer. Lady agents wanted. Good pay. Ad. W. E. Beveridge, Baltimore, Md, or 23 E 14th st, N.Y.

FOREST PARK UNIVERSITY Kirkwood Seminary, 30th YEAR.
Beautiful buildings, modern, roomy and homelike with every convenience; heated with hot water and lighted with electricity. No Basement Dining-Room. FULL COLLEGE COURSE (similar to that of Wellesley, Smith, etc.) Seminary and Academic Courses, Preparatory Departments. THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC fully equipped. Instruction in Pipe Organ, Piano, Voice by a pupil of LaGrange, Paris, (the Italian method), Harmony, Theory, Counterpoint, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, etc. Thorough ART Training. FULL FACULTY. 18 Specialists from Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, and Paris. For catalogue, or to secure rooms address, Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Forest Park University, St. Louis, Mo.
To any union sending a pupil, $20.00 remitted.

Hellmuth College


One of the Most Complete Institutions in America for the— EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES.
Twenty-second year begins Sept. 10th, 1890. Literature, Languages, Mathematics, Science, Music, Painting, Elocution, Business Course, etc. Diplomas and certificates granted. Climate exceptionally healthy about same as Ohio. Comfortable buildings, beautifully situated in 150 ACRES of land. On Through Route between East and West. Passenger Elevator. Gymnasium; Riding School. Students from all parts of America. The number received limited. Charges moderate.
Illustrated Circulars sent on Application. | Rev. E. N. ENGLISH, M. A., Principal.
LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 34.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, August 21, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: From Our Neighbors—A Useless Attempt—Medical Temperance and Sunday Rest—Membership Crusade Day 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, In Memoriam, by J. R.—Only Cider, by Ella Rockwood—International Temperance Studies, by Felix L. Oswald, M. D.—How to Reach the Foreigners, by Eva C. Griffith—Is National Constitutional Prohibition Now Necessary? by Ada M. Bittenbender 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Opening Day at Chautauqua—The Seidl Society—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.: Our Second Round-the-World Missionary 4, 5
OUR BOOK TABLE: 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The Robin's Garden—A Little Worn-out Shoe 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning August 31, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The Bravest Battle That Ever Was Fought—Home Influence—Words to the Wise; "Thoughts are Things"—The Marthas and the Marys 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: Poem, Why?—Words to Girls 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Pennsylvania, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Connecticut—News in a Nutshell 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: A Message to Superintendents and Prison Workers—Foreign Department—Receipts for Temperance Temple 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Emperor William has now gone a-visiting to Russia.

Original package dealers in Iowa are closing up and clearing out.

The Anti-Lottery Bill passed the House of Representatives Saturday.

Newly discovered copper and silver mines in southern Oregon are attracting attention.

The potato blight is spreading so rapidly in Ireland as to arouse the gravest apprehensions.

Professor James Brice, author of "The American Commonwealth," landed in New York, Monday.

First Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson has tendered his resignation to take effect September 1.

Forest fires are raging in South Dakota, doing immense damage. It started from a smoker's pipe.

Superintendent Porter says the census shows the population of this country to be not far from 64,250,000.

Louisville's largest distillery burned, and with it 1,120,177 gallons of whisky. Loss $2,000,000; partly insured.

The Mississippi Constitutional convention is in session at Jackson. It is proposed to incorporate the Australian ballot system in the new constitution.

Another big express robbery by bandits occurred at Robbers' Cut, Mo., the scene of the most daring of the James brothers' crimes, early Sunday morning.

The Congo State has annexed the kingdon of Monat-ayamoo, comprising a vast extent of territory south of the Congo state, extending in the direction of the Zambezi river.

Bishop John Henry Newman died near Birmingham, England, aged nearly ninety years. He will live forever in the hearts of Christians through his hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light."

Merrill Edwards Gates, president of Rutger College, is having hard work to decide between the presidency of three colleges, having received calls to preside over Oberlin and Amherst.

Albert Griffin, in an interview with the Chicago Inter-Ocean last week, declared that but for the Anti-Saloon Republican movement, the Prohibition Party would have polled 1,000,000 votes in 1888.

Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska have had extensive rains, too late, however, to be of much use to crops. Cotton crop estimates are slightly lower than a week ago. Sugar and rice promise well, so says Bradstreet.

The Woman's Relief Corps, in session at Boston during the encampment of the G. A. R., reports a membership of 102,522, and a relief fund of $94,335. Since its organization it has disbursed $375,090. Mrs. McHenry, of Iowa, was elected president, and Mrs. E. A. Turner, of Massachusetts, vice-president.

MRS. HOFFMAN stopped over Sunday in Chicago on her way from Ohio to Nebraska, where she goes to give five weeks' work in the amendment campaign. While here she gave one of her grand addresses under the auspices of the West Side W. C. T. U. She spoke at Watseka Wednesday evening.

WE are thankful to note in The New Republic, Lincoln, Neb., that editor Hardy has so far regained his health as to be able to give three or four days each week to holding meetings. This means much for the amendment cause there, for Nebraska has no stronger man, nor one who can strike harder blows than H. W. Hardy.

MRS. S. F. GRUBB sends out a note of warning against a Mr. Goebel who is sending urgent letters to W. C. T. U. and other temperance people for money to build a Prohibition Hall in Philadelphia. Through inquiries made of the Voice and investigations by that paper, she learns that his kind of prohibition is not our kind. Whether it be or not, it seems an inappropriate thing for the rich city of Philadelphia to send out to Western people who are fighting for the faith at home, for money to build a hall for the Prohibition League to meet in. Better send the money to Nebraska and South Dakota to aid in their campaigns.

WE call especial attention to the "Greatest Offer" made by Mr. Hall in the Publisher's Department. His star and circle contain good news for all people who thus far have been so blind to their own interest as not to subscribe for this paper, and to our wise friends who have long stood by us. One reason of the offer in the star is that we so thoroughly appreciate the value of the aquarelle tint picture of Miss Willard that we wish one in every household, knowing it will be an educator there. The offer must close October 1, for it will take months to reproduce the portrait as it will be reproduced, and we must know the number demanded before ordering the work done.

THE Chicago Post, a very lively new contemporary of ours, says in a recent issue that "The temperance women have carried their point. There will be beating of their tom-toms and blowing of their horns throughout the length and breadth of the land; for, behold, the original package-seller in South Dakota has been crushed. He has been so flattened out that it will take him a long time to recover. The Supreme Court of that state has rendered a decision in which it is declared that no intoxicating liquors can be sold in South Dakota. More than that, the county courts are given full jurisdiction to fine and imprison liquor sellers without the interference of grand juries or other courts."

THE Bible Institute, now holding its eighth session in Northfield, Mass., is very largely attended. Among the speakers are Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia; Marcus Rainsford, England; Bishop Thoburn, India; Dr. A. G. Gordon, George F. Pentacost, John G. Woolley, Rev. Mr. Ewing, from the China Inland Mission; Miss Kelsey, from Alaska; Miss Whitman, Tokio, Japan, and Dr. Washburn, president of Robert College, Constantinople. Bishop Thoburn urges that if Pentacost meant anything it meant the gospel for the whole world. We may live, he thinks, to see 500,000 converts in India in a single year. Dr. Little, of Boston, says: "Wouldn't it be a splendid thing to see the Church of God put in one solid day's work?"

MRS. MARY A. HITCHCOCK, president of Nebraska, wishes us to emphasize the call printed two weeks ago in this paper of the Association of Prayer for state and national prohibition. Its especial work now is to raise money for the Nebraska campaign; its plan, to secure 100,000 members to the Association who will each send one dollar to the treasurer, Mr. H. E. George, Room 128, Burr Block, Lincoln, Neb. The money is greatly needed; drouth and scorching winds have caused an almost complete failure of crops through many portions of the state, making it difficult for the people there to do any more than they are doing; they must have help in their heroic struggle against the massed forces of the liquor traffic.

THE Massachusetts W. C. T. U. gave a "glad and cordial welcome" to the veterans of the G. A. R. in Boston. To it they added this bugle call to service in our peaceful war "For God and Home and Native Land": "Relying on your faithfulness, your honor and bravery, we confidently ask you to help us complete the freedom of our country by the extermination of the saloon. No more relentless foe ever threatened us. No surer destruction ever awaited our cherished homes. No traitorous bullet ever slew more of the flower of youth, or the prime of manhood. Your vote and your influence will rout this enemy, and from countless hearts and homes will go up added prayers for blessings on the heroes of this later victory."

LOUIS PRANG, in a letter to Hon. Charles H. Ham, brings out an unexpected relation between manual training and the protective tariff. He says: "Nothing can be more sure than that this art element, rightly cultivated in combination with manual training in our schools, will put not only our architecture but also the products of all our industries on such a high level of inherent and evident excellence that an honest protectionist will find no excuse for protecting them by tariff legislation. And when that day dawns we shall see an industrial development so broad, so strong, so superior to what any other nation has to show that we shall feel ashamed of having ever attempted to build them up by any less noble means than by educating the whole people in the idea that the labor of the hand, when it expresses artistic skill, is a benefit alike to the individual and to all mankind."

THE last I. C. B. U. Journal, those initials standing for the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union, is loaded to the muzzle with prohibition hot shot. It gives prominence to the temperance action of the C. I. A. U., says the convention at Pittsburg set its seal of condemnation on the saloon, and adds: "Oh! we Catholic Prohibitionists have reason to be glad of heart and courageous in our advocacy of our principles. We are 'marching on' rightly, well and rapidly. May God give us strength of will and increase of fidelity to our principle that we may do His will in removing the saloon temptation from our people and all the people of this God-favored land. We must coöperate in 'all legislation against the saloon,' and allow no move in its behalf among religious people or politicians to go unchallenged. So 'Glory! glory! hallelujah! as we go marching on.' And prohibition among Catholics is not being 'relegated to the domain of dead issues.' Oh, no!"

THE Chicago Free Kindergarten Training School deserves special attention. It is eight years since it was established; it has in successful operation seventeen schools in this city. They are located in neighborhoods where they become missions to the most destitute and needy. The training school graduated sixty young lady teachers in June last. We rejoice to state that this city has the honor and privilege of successfully teaching the Bible and temperance in addition to the Froebel Kindergarten system. Teachers trained in this school have become so popular that there is an increased demand for their services. Nearly every state in the Union has representatives from this school, as has foreign lands, Japan, Siam and Turkey. One of the last graduates goes to Olympia, Washington, next week, to open a kindergarten there. The training school opens Wednesday, Sept. 3, 1890. For other information apply to Miss Eva Whitmore, Principal, 175 Twenty-second street, Chicago.

MISS MINNIE PHELPS, of St. Catharines, Ont., is probably the best known, and up to date the ablest speaker among women in Canada, always excepting that Boanerges, Mrs. Letitia Youmans. Miss Phelps is a graduate of the Philadelphia School of Oratory, and has a career before her; having evoluted to a dignified view of life, Miss Phelps is not willing to be called "Minnie," and who can blame her? It is a niminy piminy name, which any woman ought to outgrow with her teens. Indeed, the "ie" must be dropped from the hundreds of women's names before any honorary designation ought ever to be found as a prefix to the name. Miss Phelps is so fortunate as to have been christened "Lilian," one of the "airiest, fairiest" names in the beautiful nomenclature assigned to the more beautiful sex; but it fell out that she diminished down to "Minnie." How to be extricated from this dilemma was a question. Pondering upon it, it occurred to me that as her elderly comrade and friend, I could announce to the white ribbon host that now and ever hereafter Miss Phelps is no more Minnie, but Lilian. This I hereby do, confident that not a woman who wears our badge will fail to perceive the patent of royalty conferred by this change on our young Canadian orator, and to help forward the happy improvement to the extent of her power. So says Miss Willard.

Contributed.

IN MEMORIAM.

Clinton B. Fisk.

BY J. R.

"High hopes that burned like stars sublime
Go down the heavens of freedom;
And true hearts perish in the time
We bitterliest need them.
But never sit we down and say,
There's nothing left but sorrow;
We walk the wilderness to-day,
The promised land to-morrow."

—Gerald Massey.

Our Great Heart gone! We seek in vain
A soul to truth more loyal,
A life more free than his from stain,
More nobly great, more royal.
But in our grief we hear him say:
"Oh, waste no time in sorrow!
God calls to work; though dark to-day,
His sun will shine to-morrow."

Oh, noble soul! Thy life makes ours
The better worth the living;
Thy strength and greatness help us grow
More strong, yet more forgiving.
From sordid aim to purpose high,
To loyalty unswerving,
Thou callest us; may we become
As faithful and deserving.

Oh, loving heart! Thou couldst not look
In silence on wrong-doing;
But spoke and worked for the oppressed,
The bonds of wrong undoing.
And now, what time in doubt or fear
We halt for sin or sorrow,
Our souls from thine shall gain new strength,
And work for God's to-morrow.

Oh, tireless brain! Oh, strong right arm!
When God your aid was needing,
How well you wrought for Him and man,
Men cannot pass unheeding.
Ten thousand hearts shall be more strong,
Though burdened sore with sorrow;
A myriad souls shall fight the wrong,
And Christ shall reign to-morrow.

Dear Lord! Thy workmen seem to die
When most we seem to need them;
But all who share their courage high
Shall know that Thou wilt lead them.
And, though we cannot see the way
For eyes tear-dimmed with sorrow,
We still can work, and trust, and pray;
Thy kingdom comes to-morrow.

Thy kingdom comes! Our brother gone—
To higher life arisen—
Shall aid men still to do Thy will:
To free sad souls from prison.
Thy workmen die. Thy work lives on,
And greater strength shall borrow
From lives that help to usher in
The reign of Christ to-morrow.

Conshohocken, Pa.

ONLY CIDER.

BY ELLA ROCKWOOD.

"I saw Brother Powelson to-day, mother; and he wants a barrel of cider again this fall," said Deacon Jones one chill October evening, as he pushed back his spectacles, folded up his paper, and drew a little closer to the cheerful wood fire that was snapping and crackling upon the hearth.

"He says he'll give ten cents a gallon," he added, as his wife did not reply.

Still no remark; and the knitting-needles only clicked the faster, as the heel of the gray woolen stocking grew apace. Somehow the Deacon seemed to feel a trifle uneasy. He ran his fingers through his iron-gray hair; then jumped up and stirred the fire vigorously, going to the wood-box for a fresh stick; then, as he reseated himself, his wife, looking over the tops of her silver-rimmed spectacles, asked, "And what did you tell him, Jason?"

"Tell him! why, I told him he could have it, of course. That's what I call a fair price, and a man must look out for business."

"Business!" repeats his wife, an indignant flash coming into her black eyes. "What kind of business do you call it to sell a man that which is slowly but surely bringing his boys to a drunkard's grave."

"Tut! tut! wife, don't put it quite so strong as that. Tom and Joe like a glass of cider, I'll allow, and perhaps they drink more than is good for them, but I'm sure their own father ought to know, and he doesn't seem to object."

"Yes, he ought to know, I'll admit, but it seems he doesn't. I don't see how he can be so blind. Ever since they were little boys, and were allowed to drink all the cider they wanted just as it was beginning to sparkle, their taste for it has been growing stronger, until now, sweet cider, or that in the earlier stages of fermentation, is insipid to their taste; and only last winter their mother told me that of the two barrels of cider put into their cellar, not a drop was left for vinegar. 'The boys were so fond of it,' she said, and her husband drank it to ward off rheumatism, although, his wife said with a laugh, she guessed 'he liked it as well as the boys did.'

"She told me about one of their neighbor's boys," continued Mrs. Jones after a pause in which the Deacon looked fixedly at the ceiling, but said never a word, "who is somewhat younger than Tom and Joe, but comes in frequently to spend the evening, and when the pitcher of cider is brought from the cellar, this boy would often drink so much of it as to become quite intoxicated. 'It was really shocking,' to use her own words, 'to see such a depraved appetite.'

" 'Then why do you give it to him?' I asked.

" 'Why, we could not be so inhospitable as to refuse him a little cider! he would be offended; he is a nice boy otherwise, and his parents are among our best friends.'

" 'And yet,' I said, 'you'll set before him that which is surely driving him to a drunkard's grave.'

" 'How can you talk so! it's only cider!' was her reply.

" 'Only cider!' yet a truer name was never given it than 'The devil's kindling-wood,' as one of our reformed men calls it; and that you, Jason, should sell any one cider, even when it is sweet, grieves me beyond expression."

"Well, now, mother, there's no use making such a fuss about it; if I hadn't sold it to him some one else would, so where's the difference."

"That's exactly what the saloon-keepers say; and you certainly do not uphold them in selling liquor."

"By no means," replied the Deacon, decidedly. "But I reckon there's some difference between sweet cider and whisky."

"A difference, yes, I grant it; but sweet cider becomes sour, and then it is an alcoholic drink, just as much as any liquor, and boys who begin by drinking cider when it is sweet, soon grow to like it when it 'sparkles,' and then to like it when it is old and 'hard.' The more I see the effects of cider drinking the more strongly I am opposed to it. I know it is a common drink among farmers, but more than one farmer's boy has been ruined by it; and how any father can so blindly allow cider to be kept in his cellar for his own and the neighbors' boys to drink is more than I can understand."

"Well, now, John Powelson's drank cider ever since he was a boy, and he's been a church member these twenty years. It ain't made him a drunkard, and it never will."

"No, Jason, Mr. Powelson is not a drunkard, but unless I am greatly mistaken his boys are not likely to escape so easily."

"If I'd known you was going to take it so hard, I wouldn't 'a promised him he could have it. But I told him I'd bring it to-morrow, and I suppose I'll have to now."

The following day Deacon Jones loaded the barrel of cider, which was already hissing and foaming, as if a band of demons were confined within, and were struggling with might and main to grasp their victims before time—into his wagon. Mounting the seat, he rode away toward the village, where he left the cider, and pocketing the money, which someway did not seem much of a satisfaction to him after all, drove slowly homeward.

"I don't know but Mary's right after all," he soliloquized as the horses jogged along, taking their own gait over the dusty highway, where on either side stretched the richly tinted woodland, or the now barren meadows and pastures, with now and then a herd of cows filing slowly homeward.

"If I'd fed them apples to the pigs," he continued, as he flecked the off horse lightly with the whip, "mebbe I'd 'a got just as much out of 'em; they do say as how apples is powerful good for pigs."

But let us see what became of that barrel of cider. It was proposed by one of the boys to add to it a half gallon of alcohol, as he had been told that would improve the flavor, and add also to the "keeping" qualities of the cider. This was accordingly done, with the added result of making it much more intoxicating.

The neighbor's boy had to be carried home on several occasions from the effects of it, in such a condition as to surprise and grieve his parents, who had been ignorant of the fact that their only son had developed an appetite which had been carefully guarded against in their own home, on account of hereditary tendencies. Too late the discovery was made to save the boy! The hereditary longing for drink, which had lain dormant for years, had been aroused, and like a lighted match to the fuse, it increased with frightful rapidity. Tom and Joe were often his companions at the saloon now; the alcoholic fluid in their father's cellar was becoming tame to their taste.

But now their father begins to demur. What! his boys in a saloon! The companions of tipplers and bar-room loafers! In vain he protests, and their mother's tears are alike unavailing; every evening finds them at the saloon, where, with cards and dice, drink and vile jest, the hours are filled.

At last one evening after several drinks have been disposed of, a quarrel arose over a game of cards. Words led to blows. Enraged beyond control, Tom seized a heavy bottle, and with strength born of frenzy dealt his brother a crushing blow upon the head. As the blood trickled from the wound and formed into a little pool upon the floor where he lay, the door opened and John Powelson entered as he often had done lately to try and persuade the boys to go home.

The awe-stricken crowd parted to give him admission. Horrified he gazes upon his son. In another moment he is kneeling at his side with his head upon his arm.

"Go for a doctor, some one, quick!" he commands, and two men dart out of the room to do his bidding. "O Joe! my boy! my boy! to see you come to this!" he wails.

The dying boy's eyes unclose. "Father," he murmurs faintly; "cider did it; that was the starting point; if it hadn't been for that, I wouldn't be here now."

"Tom didn't mean to do it," he added, after a moment, as the now thoroughly-sobered brother, realizing what he had done, threw himself upon the floor by the side of Joe and wept aloud. "It wasn't him; it was the drink did it. Tell mother I——" His words came more faintly, the heart fluttered feebly, and—he was gone.

One son's life put out in shame and darkness, and twenty years in the penitentiary for the other is the result of cider-drinking in John Powelson's family, while the neighbor's son, a victim to his ill-advised so-called hospitality, after breaking the hearts of his parents, eventually filled a drunkard's grave.

And shall any call it harmless, even though 'tis "only cider"?

"Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

Flint, Mich.

INTERNATIONAL TEMPERANCE STUDIES.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

Author of "Physical Education," "The Poison Problem," etc.

VII. RUSSIA.

The royal despots of the Middle Ages often astonished their subjects by their generosity in protecting the interests of quarrelsome rustic litigants, till time revealed their motive to be the desire of fomenting quarrels between the peasants and nobles, and thus keep both in more effectual subjection.

A similar policy has for centuries aided the cause of European liquor dealers. "Ein Bauer der sauft raisonirt nicht,"—"a drunken boor doesn't meddle with politics," is an East German proverb that reveals the secret of the paternal care of modern sovereigns in fostering the development of the alcohol trade. German students were submitted to ceaseless vexations on the discovery of their intention to restore the waning manhood of their generation by the establishment of gymnastic associations, but the same would-be reformers were freely permitted to drown their patriotic sorrows in floods of lager-beer. Italian political prisoners who are denied the privilege of books and writing material were never grudged the permission to invest their scudi in liquor, and even the founders of strict monastic orders indulged their self-renouncing followers in the luxury of capacious wine-cellars. But nowhere on earth has that policy been carried to greater lengths than in the dominions of the absolute Czar. In Russia. King Alcohol reigns as a viceroy protected by countless fiscal and municipal privileges. Beer, wine and brandy are the faithful allies of Muscovite despotism; several kinds of liquor are sold under the charter of government monopolies, and public taverns and distilleries enjoy prerogatives denied to other industrial establishments. In many Russian towns smoking factories can be established only in the suburbs under all sorts of red-tape restrictions, but those restrictions are waived in favor of brewers and distillers—"purveyors of necessities of daily life"—just as a strict army-commander would expel ice-cream venders and pastry-cooks, but tolerate bread-bakers.

"You are no patriot, you won't drink liquor that puts money in the pocket of our dear father, the Czar," a Russian tavern-keeper will reprove the peasant boy who declines an invitation to join his vodka-swilling friends; and in Central Russia a temperance lecturer, who should venture to expose the social tendencies of the poison traffic, would be promptly jailed as a dangerous demagogue. A vile stimulant, prepared from fermented cabbage leaves, is included among the daily rations of soldiers in barracks; liquor is permitted to be sold in camps, in college buildings, in factories and on every public market.

But, as a modern philosopher well remarks, "It is a risky plan to found the impunity of crime on the ignorance of the victims, for the difference between right and wrong is often instinctively perceived long before it can be logically defined." Not military despotism, not the knout and the chain, not Siberia itself, has done so much to make the Russian government the loathed and cursed enemy of its subjects as the governmental protection of the poison-traffic. That alliance of tyranny and vice has made the tyrant the representative of a political devil-worship supported only by brutal force, and has morally released his slaves from the duty of submission the moment insurrection ceases to be absolutely hopeless.

Hence the anarchic and nihilistic tendencies of Russian patriots, who have learned to consider the "powers that be" as the embodiment of the evil principle: hence, also, that system of unparalleled official corruption, and the general indifference to peculation and dishonesty wherever the interests of the government are concerned. Before the war, our Southern planters often noticed as a curious fact that their darkies disliked negro-overseers, whom they instinctively dreaded as more brutal, unjust, and merciless than a white taskmaster, and for similar reasons Russian laborers and soldiers are strangely partial to foreign-born superiors, their mental picture of a native official being mostly that of a besotted flunkey who avenges his degradation by degrading and oppressing his helpless subordinates. Diebitsch, Münnich, Grabbe, and Wrangell were all foreigners; Suvaroff, in his earlier career, had to contend against the violent prejudice of his subalterns, and Carlyle, in his history of Frederick the Great, tells the following characteristic anecdote: "Galitzin, the commander in chief of the Russian forces, was subject to fits of sleeplessness, and, wandering about in his large tent, overheard one night a common soldier recounting his dream to the sentry, outside the door. 'A curious dream,' said the soldier; 'I dreamt I was in a battle where I got my head cut off, and of course, went to heaven. I knocked at the door, St. Peter came with a bunch of keys and made such a rattling that he awoke the Lord, who started up in haste, asking, "What is the matter? any trouble?" "Yes," says Peter, "there is a great war on earth between the Russians and the Turks." "And who commands my Russians?" asked the Lord. "Count Münnich," answered Peter. "Very well, I may go to sleep again." But that was not the last of it,' continued the soldier. 'I dreamt again, the very same as before, only that I was killed in the present war, and when the Lord asked, "Who commands my Russians?" Peter answered, "Prince Galitzin.'" "Galitzin? then quick, get my boots," said the Lord.' ".

Russian fireside tales abound with anecdotes about drunken judges, drunken school-teachers and even drunken papas, or village priests, as a proof that the public sanction of the drink-vice has completely undermined the people's respect for the character of his official superiors.

Yet here, as elsewhere, the progress of education has operated a perceptible, though rather slow, change for the better. There are total abstainers and temperance unions among the upper classes of Russian society, and temperance lectures, though too risky in the North American form, are circulated in the guise of novels and medical treatises. More than one popular Russian physician has publicly stated his reason for dropping alcohol from the list of his remedial prescriptions, and the ostentatious intemperance of high public functionaries has become a thing of the past.

Experience has even undermined one main prop of the stimulant delusion: The cold climate argument. The logic of practical experiments, in Siberian journeys and arctic voyages, has convinced many Russian travelers that frost can be fought with better weapons than brandy-bottles; and that in polar winters temperance may become a primary condition of survival.

Watauga. Tenn.

HOW TO REACH THE FOREIGNERS.

BY EVA C. GRIFFITH.

When we realize that about half of the population of the United States is either foreign born or of foreign parentage, and that a very large majority of these foreigners are opposed to temperance legislation, we realize one of the greatest difficulties we have to meet in the temperance reform. How to reach these foreigners with temperance education is a problem with which the W. C. T. U. is having a constant struggle. I offer a few suggestions to local workers, which, if carried out, will at least lessen the difficulties of this problem.

First of all we must remember that these foreigners are human beings. They have the same likes and dislikes as other human beings, and are susceptible to the same softening influences of love, sympathy and kindness. The great necessity is, that we Americanize these foreigners, and the only way that this can be accomplished is to go among them socially and treat them as friends and equals. In many communities of our land there are intelligent, respectable, well-to-do Germans and Norwegians, who are never called upon by their American neighbors, never welcomed to their social circles nor in any way drawn into companionship with them. Were this otherwise, were these foreigners treated with the same cordiality, socially, that Americans treat each other, they would soon get into American ways, catch American ideas and gradually become assimilated with the native population.

I am not fully in accord with the plan of sending German women lecturers into German communities to speak in the German language, to be entertained in German homes, organize German unions and thus perpetuate the isolation of the Germans from the Americans. As far as possible I would send American women among the Germans and other foreigners, to be entertained in their homes and to speak in the English language. They may not understand all they say, but they will understand enough to want to learn more, and they will fully understand the hearty hand-shaking, and the kindliness of the visit. Foreigners are always cordial, and sometimes I think they are more social, brighter and livelier than Americans are, and they welcome a visitor among them with a heartiness that Americans might do well to imitate.

In Northern Wisconsin there is a W. C. T. U. composed of Americans, Germans and Norwegians, neither of whom can speak the language of the other fluently. The president of the union, an American, told me that the devotional exercises at the regular meeting were carried on one week in the Norwegian and the next in the German language, while all the business is done in English.

At a public meeting where I lectured, the Bible was read in English, the prayer made in Norwegian, and two of the songs and the benediction rendered in German. Yet I never had a more attentive audience nor a more cordial hand-shaking at the end. When this union was organized there were but two prohibition voters in the township, now there are about thirty. Elderly women have undertaken the study of the English language that they might read THE UNION SIGNAL, and a general feeling of friendliness and social intercourse brought about that could have come in no other way save by this steady working together.

Every white-ribbon woman can begin this work of helping to Americanize the foreigners by calling socially on the foreign women in her own town or neighborhood, getting acquainted with them, inviting them to her own home and to the meetings of the local union. The efforts being made by some of our states to compel, by law, every child to be taught the English language, should be seconded by good people everywhere, in trying to make the English language attractive to old and young by personal sympathy and cordiality, and in interesting foreigners in American institutions and plans.

Whitewater, Wis.

IS NATIONAL CONSTITUTIONAL PROHIBITION NOW NECESSARY?

BY ADA M. BITTENBENDER.

Since the passage of the "Original Package Bill," the question has been asked: "Does not its enactment do away with the necessity for National Constitutional Prohibition?"

Let us see. The law provides:

"That all fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquors or liquids, transported into any state or territory, or remaining therein, for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival in such state or territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state or territory, enacted in the exercise of its police powers to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquors or liquids had been produced in such state or territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom, by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise."

What is its effect? Senator Wilson, of Iowa, who had the bill in charge in the Senate, and framed the wording of the law, has answered this question. In opening the discussion on the bill, he said:

In the case recently decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, the case of Leisy & Co. vs. Hardin, on writ of error to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa, the court, in its opinion, held the following language:

The plaintiffs in error are citizens of Illinois, are not pharmacists, and have no permit, but import into Iowa beer which they sell in original packages, as described. Under our decision in Bowman vs. Chicago, etc., Railway Company they had the right to import this beer into that state, and in the view which we have expressed they had the right to sell it, by which act alone it would become mingled in the common mass of property within the state. Up to that point of time, we hold that in the absence of Congressional permission to do so, the state had no power to interfere by seizure, or any other action, in prohibition of importation and sale by the foreign or non-resident importer. Whatever our individual views may be as to the deleterious or dangerous qualities of particular articles, we cannot hold that any articles which Congress recognizes as subjects of interstate commerce are not such, or that whatever are thus recognized can be controlled by state laws amounting to regulations, while they retain that character; although at the same time, if directly dangerous in themselves, the state may take appropriate measures to guard against injury before it obtains complete jurisdiction over them.

To concede to a state the power to exclude, directly or indirectly, articles so situated, without Congressional permission, is to concede to a majority of the people of a state, represented in the state legislature, the power to regulate commercial intercourse between the states, by determining what shall be its subjects, when that power was distinctly granted to be exercised by the people of the United States, represented in Congress, and its possession by the latter was considered essential to that more perfect union which the Constitution was adopted to create. Undoubtedly there is difficulty in drawing the line between the municipal powers of the one government and the commercial powers of the other, but when that line is determined, in the particular instance, accommodation to it, without serious inconvenience, may readily be found, to use the language of Mr. Justice Johnson, in Gibbons vs. Ogden (9 Wheat., 1,238), in "a frank and candid coöperation for the general good."

The effect of the bill, if it shall become a law, will be to leave every state in the Union free to determine for itself what its policy shall be in respect of the traffic in intoxicating liquors. If a state shall desire prohibition, it can adopt it and exercise it and enforce it under the provisions of this bill. If it shall desire license, high or low, the same conditions will attend that policy so far as this bill is concerned. If it shall prefer to adopt the policy denominated local option, it may do that, so that the traffic may be allowed in such counties or cities as desire it and be prohibited in others. But that each state shall be left to determine for itself what its policy in this regard shall be is the scope of the bill, its purpose and its effect.

Senator Blair, of New Hampshire, in discussing the bill, said:

If we pass this bill the Senator from Iowa only hopes that the condition will be made legal which everybody had believed in hitherto, which the courts of Iowa had acted upon, which the courts of the United States had acted upon, which the executive departments of the state and the nation and the people at large had acted upon, simply to establish that condition which everybody had previously believed to exist.

This measure will add nothing to the great controversy between those who believe in prohibition, those who believe in what we call temperance, and those who hold to the opposite belief. It will add nothing to the relative strength of the position which either of these parties has hitherto occupied. Not to pass it is to be sure to have the effect of ranging all the powers of the state and of the nation upon the side of intoxication and indiscriminate trade in intoxicating liquors; but to enact it into law has none other effect than I have alluded to. . . .

I believe that the great fortress, the real defense of the liquor trade in this country, is the Constitution of the United States, and that but for that Constitution many of the states to-day would have freed themselves almost absolutely from the entanglement and the injury which result from this bad traffic. I hold to that doctrine, and I do not believe any one who studies the subject can arrive at any other conclusion. After we have adopted this bill it will be found that the great temperance controversy is in substantially the same position that it has been heretofore; no worse for the decision of the Supreme Court, because this act of Congress will have rectified that evil; but so far as the future contention is concerned we shall be where we were, and we shall still need an enlargement of the powers of the states, or an amendment of the Constitution of the United States which shall liberate those powers to the full exercise of the power which they possess for their own protection, or an amendment of the Constitution of the United States which, I say, will give every state the power of an independent nation within its own limits over this subject; and, better, a still broader and more comprehensive amendment of the Constitution which shall not only do that, but shall re-enforce the police powers of the state by an absolute prohibition—a national prohibition extending over the whole country.

The enactment of this law was as eagerly sought by advocates of the license system as by Prohibitionists. Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, a believer in "high license," expressed the views of these advocates. In the course of his remarks, he said:

If I comprehend this decision correctly, should no action be taken by Congress, what will be the effect in my state or in any state that now authorizes licenses to be issued with a view of controlling and regulating the sale of liquors? The effect will be that there will be transported from across the boundaries of that state to any citizen or resident, for sale in "original packages," liquor in flasks or bottle as an article of commerce, the barter and exchange of which will be protected under this decision, construing that provision of the Federal Constitution, and in a few months we will find bars open selling side by side with the men who are honestly paying a license to the municipality, the county and the state for the privilege of exercising that calling, while those engaged in selling by the "original package" are receiving all the rewards and profits, without any of the liabilities and burdens assumed by the law-abiding citizen who executes his bond with a heavy penalty, and pays into the treasury an annual sum to secure this privilege.

The tendency of that will at once be to make every man refuse to take out a license. He can not afford to pay a license of five hundred or a thousand dollars for the privilege of selling an article when the man in the next house has the privilege of selling the same article in the 'original package' brought from another state, perhaps just beyond the boundary line of that state and is disposing of it as an importer to the citizens of the state without any license, and without any power whatever upon the part of the state to regulate or control it."

Therefore, all Prohibitionists must agree with Senator Blair, that "this measure will add nothing in the great controversy between those who believe in prohibition and those who hold to the opposite belief."

Hence, to the question: "Does not the law on 'original packages' do away with the necessity for National Constitutional Prohibition?" all Prohibitionists with one accord will or should answer No!

Several very able arguments were made in each House of Congress to the effect that the measure is unconstitutional, and that the Supreme Court will so declare it, notwithstanding the suggestion of the court which has led to its passage. In case of such a decision, most miserable, indeed, will be the condition of this American people. It, however, would greatly hasten the day of final deliverance through absolute prohibition. It has been said that Congress has the power to outlaw these poisonous drinks as articles of interstate and foreign commerce, through a law enacted for that purpose. If so, and that power should be exercised, still the inhibition ought to be expressed in the Constitution to insure permanent protection.

Washington, D. C.

Correspondence.

OPENING DAY AT CHAUTAUQUA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—If you have thought that "all roads lead to Rome" it is because you have been wrongly taught. All roads lead to Chautauqua, or so we thought on "opening day" August 5, as the boats came loaded with excursionists to worship at this shrine of Minerva, the now famous "assembly." The drizzle, drizzle of the morning, the pouring rain of noon, promised another flood (Flood) here, and those who had invested heavily in bunting and Chinese lanterns felt that it was "Love's labor lost," but at four o'clock the sun shone forth and the prospect for a gala evening was more cheering.

Bands of music called the people together, and soon the large amphitheater was packed to overflowing. The exercises were opened by prayer. President Miller welcomed the large assembly in a happy, cheery manner. On the large rostrum sat musicians, ministers, divines and professors. Rev. McKee, of Kentucky, brought greetings from the oldest daughter of the "mother Chautauqua." John Habberton, author of "Helen's babies," told "All He Knew," but not a "female woman" was on the platform, though we understood our National president had a cordial invitation to participate.

Time and space are too limited to permit of even a synopsis of the good speeches, good music, grand fireworks, etc., etc., that marked this red-letter day at Chautauqua; suffice it to say that the Chautauqua idea is in the lead, and enough enthusiasm imbibed to last through the year.

Aside from the wisdom and culture that is to be had simply by the getting, this is no mean place as a health resort. Lake Chautauqua, though but a few miles from Lake Erie, is from eight hundred to a thousand feet higher, in fact, a lake on a hill, which accounts for the exceptional coolness of the place, as well as the absence of flies, mosquitoes, and other disagreeable insects. No boats are allowed to leave or land at this place on the Sabbath day, nor railroad trains to come nearer than three miles, consequently the Sabbath breakers, and "original packages" are kept out and an ideal Puritan Sabbath can be enjoyed. It is not surprising that a young minister, spending his vacation here, should return home and preach that the "world is growing better."

All sorts of "Days" have had their day, such as "Deaconesses' Day," "Grange Day," "Foreign Missionary Day," "Home Missionary Day," but we predict that the greatest day of all will be, "W. C. T. U. Day," which lasts five days, and will be in charge of that very competent leader, Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, when the Evangelistic, National Hospital, and many other lines of work will be presented by competent women. We notice particularly that the very choicest time of the Assembly is given to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union work Another thing we notice is, that all of this Christian work, represented by different days is indivisible, the same women interested in one are interested in all.

Among the many busy workers who are here for a little "outing," which they seem to get by working hard all the time, is Miss Cusac, more generally known as the "Nun of Kenmare." I find her as charming in person and conversation as she is in correspondence. I took a peep into one of her popular books, and my eyes fell upon these lines of truth and soberness, which every temperance worker knows to be too true: "Those who support the evil doer, whether by silence when speech is a duty, or by assent which lies perilously near consent, are alike guilty."

I send you an extract from a lecture delivered by Alexander McKenzie, of Harvard College, in the amphitheater, Aug. 4:

"In 1840 William Henry Harrison became President by a majority of 150,000 votes, and James G. Birney brought together but 7,000 votes. Carl Schurz said that the 7,000 votes received by Birney meant more than the 150,000 majority of Harrison. Our civil war came on, and nobody remembered that there had been a President Harrison. There was no idea in the campaign of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too"—in the log cabin and hard cider—the struggle ranged itself around the 7,000 who stood with Birney. What was thought to be defeated in 1840 saved the country in 1865. You cannot kill an idea. If you are in a minority, fight for that which is true. If you are the only temperance man in the community, vote for that, and sooner or later the right will triumph. Hold to this for yourself, teach it to your children, preach it, live it."

Next to a reference to the absent Chancellor, such sentiments as these brought forth the greatest applause, but Dr. McKenzie is a strong man, and in the language of Aunt Samantha, "He dast." We believe this means something in an audience of six thousand people, nearly all "cup-bearers" who are in one way or another doing errands for the Master.

The different schools of "ologies" and "isms," "urgies," and "pathies" with their respective prefixes, have their own particular devotees; these you recognize by their hurrying from one class to another, a book under each arm, a pencil behind each ear, a writing pad in their hand, and glasses astride their nose. Such affinity have books for spectacles, that an optician is kept constantly busy here.

The Woman's Club which meets at eight o'clock in the morning, and is in charge of our Emily Huntington Miller, is a means of instruction and entertainment, the best women in their line taking part. Mrs. Bishop, teacher of Delsarte, is winning converts every day to her theory, and if the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL have presumed to think that Nature taught them to breathe, to eat, to sleep, to get up, to sit down, perish the thought. Mrs. Bishop will soon convince them that this is an art to be acquired, and that there is a vast difference between walking and simply getting somewhere.

A great help to the student of Bible literature are the models of Palestine and Jerusalem where Professor Marks is found every afternoon at four o'clock, lecturing on the places of interest in the Holy Land. The last but not least to mention is the Cooking School. This is supposed to appeal to a man's heart, and many young wives are taking advantage of this, and are finding out from Mrs. Ewing the secrets of good cooking, but, as some admit, perhaps ignorance would be bliss while boarding, but taking it all in all we can say, whether our days be few or many, let some of them be spent at Chautauqua.

HULDAH E. LOVELESS.

THE SEIDL SOCIETY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Late in June, 1889, there was organized in the beautiful city of Brooklyn, N. Y., a society, unique in object and operation, about which your readers will be glad to hear.

During the preceding summer an orchestra, led by Anton Seidl, one of the finest musicians living, held daily concerts at the Music Hall at Brighton beach, Coney Island, one of the most famous resorts of the East. Here music of the very highest order was rendered every afternoon and evening.

One of Brooklyn's most noted and public-spirited women, Mrs. Laura Holloway Langford, author of "Ladies of the White House," and many other books, found recreation from a busy life in attending these concerts day after day. Then she bethought herself of hundreds of other Brooklyn women who also, instead of leaving the city and their busy husbands during the season, might find refreshment on that magnificent beach and likewise have the delight of such music as one might cross an ocean to hear.

At once Mrs. Langford set to work, and in a short time the Seidl Society became an established fact. The Brighton Beach railway, with one terminus in Brooklyn, the other at the large hotel bearing the same name and in immediate proximity to the Music Hall, agreed to furnish on each train a special car for the members of the Seidl Society and other ladies without escorts. By this means, under the care of officials, lone women and children have been able to visit the beach and listen to exquisite music with ease and propriety.

The Seidl Society grew beyond all expectations. At its first annual dinner on the 28th of June it numbered nearly 500 members.

But this is not all. Under the splendid management of its executive board and with a president matchless in energy, originality and capacity for large operations, the society has done something more than enjoy itself and hear fine music at reduced rates. It instituted a series of lectures upon music, giving one day each week to one prominent composer, whose brilliant works were then rendered by the orchestra in the concert immediately following. Under its management Wagner's Parsifel was put on the stage on a magnificent scale at an expense of $7,000. The receipts in excess of this sum went into the coffers of the Seidl Society.

Nor is this all. The society, first musical, secondly social, is thirdly and prominently humanitarian and progressive. These bright women, expending little vitality in idle boasts, chatter and promises, went to work and raised funds by means of which, during the three months season of 1889, three thousand poor women and children spent one day each at the beach.

The society has secured a building on the beach, the sign of which "The Children's Pavilion of the Seidl Society," explains its object. Within are rows of cots, toys, rockers for mothers, milk for the little ones and a maid in attendance. How much benefit and happiness is here stored for the poor little denizens of the city's slums!

And this is not all. In deference to the wishes of the Seidl Society the mammoth Brighton Beach Hotel for the first time in its history closed its bar on Sunday, and promises to keep it closed on that day hereafter. In so doing it loses its chief revenue, but gains something better.

Said a prominent railway and hotel officer, in speaking of the subject, "You cannot know how much we have to contend with in carrying out this restriction. But it takes little foresight to say that this beginning will end in closing every bar on Coney Island on Sunday." So much for the unheralded work of the Seidl Society.

Again, the president is making arrangements to have Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. during the season, in Music Hall, in which prominent clergymen will officiate, beginning with Dr. Lyman Abbott, of Plymouth Church. And on every Friday there will be given a lecture in the same hall by some well-known woman speaker, like Mrs. Martha J. Lamb, on American History. To them the public will be admitted on payment of a small entrance fee.

At the annual dinner which has just taken place, this program was modestly outlined by the chief officers. It was a delightful occasion. Several hundred members and guests went to the beach by a special train, were delightfully entertained by the Brighton Beach Hotel, had an excellent dinner in the banqueting hall, listened to short speeches from members and guests, including some of the noted women editors of New York and Brooklyn, attended the afternoon concert, then the Seidl Society reception and the evening concert, and then home by moonlight, making a memorable day.

During the last year the society has raised and expended about $10,000. There is a grand future before it if it continues on its present lines of work.

HESTER M. POOLE.

World's W. C. T. U.

OUR SECOND ROUND-THE-WORLD MISSIONARY.

INTERESTING EXPERIENCES IN JAPAN.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The Y. M. C. A. of Shidzuoka sent one of their members to Numadza as an escort. The scenery along the line of travel is lovely but not impressive. The whole valley is planted with rice and each bunch stands with head erect as if eager to catch every ray of sun or drop of rain. The foot-hills are cultivated far up the sides in greatest perfection. Our train skimmed on through this narrow valley; hemmed in on one side by the sea and on the other by the hills, it all seems like a little world by itself. Twice we have had a fine view of "Fuji" in the distance. My escort speaks English and talks of his country, his people and their customs, and is full of knowledge of the outer world; a delightful traveling companion.

Our station reached, we find the pastor of the native church and about a hundred of his members there to welcome us. The city is a good-sized one, but being somewhat inland and very few foreigners living there, the announcement of the arrival of a "foreign lady teacher" brought the people out in great numbers. That night we held a meeting in the theater, a large building seating about two thousand. The place was packed and I found it a most delightful audience. At the close of the meeting a number signed the pledge and the following day we formed a union with about forty members. Much interest was manifested, and it was decided to have an early meeting before leaving. At nine o'clock a. m., through a heavy rain, the women came to hold a special prayer meeting and listen to instruction as to methods of work.

My visit to this place was a hasty one. The Emperor and Empress were out "doing" the empire, and on this special day he was on his way to review the troops. An order had been given to suspend all railroad travel and traffic that the troops might be conveyed to the parade grounds, so our train was held at the depot till the Emperor's train passed. He travels, of course, in his own special train, and everything steps aside till this "Son of Heaven" has passed. The train stopped five minutes at the depot, but all we saw was his body-guard and outriders. Thousands and thousands of people gathered, each eager to catch a glimpse of their sovereign Our train passed out about fifteen minutes after the special, and for nearly thirty miles the roadside was lined with people, many of whom had come miles and had been waiting for hours.

At the next depot it was almost impossible to make one's way through the crowd. The special had reached there and the Emperor had been driven to the castle, but the crowds still stood in the drenching rain. The day was dark and cloudy, and as night approached the crowd seemed loth to separate. A missionary met me at the depot and for a drive of a mile and a half it was almost impossible to make our way through the crowds of people. The city was beautifully decorated. A great arch had been put up over the main street leading to the city. This was of evergreen and festooned with national Chinese flags (a white bunting background with a large red ball supposed to represent the rising sun) and paper flowers arranged to represent the Emperor's crest; other arches less imposing were put up at various places. The only hotel in the place did itself credit in decorations. The foreign ministers were to be entertained there, and from their arch floated the flags of all countries whose representatives were present.

The Emperor proceeded to the castle, a structure three hundred years old, situated in a very large enclosure surrounded by a high, heavy wall, and the entrance guarded by soldiers. The building is almost indescribable, built on a heavy foundation of stone, irregular in outline, and towering up five stories. In the center of the castle is a great well capable of supplying water for five thousand men in times of a siege; the well is said to be lined with gold.

On the very top of the castle are two mammoth dolphins made of gold. One has a most interesting history. They are regarded as very great curiosities, and were put up at great expense. When the Exhibition was held in Vienna, it was decided that one should be placed on exhibition. Accordingly, a Commission was dispatched with their precious charge. The exhibit over, the dolphin was returned to Japan, but the steamer, just before reaching Hong-Kong, went to the bottom, and the dolphin was only recently recovered and replaced upon the castle. They are now covered with heavy wicker work to protect them from being defaced by sight-seers. Here in this gigantic structure the Emperor with his attendants will remain.

This is the time when the spring maneuvers take place, and the Emperor is here to witness the attack of a supposed Western enemy, and the defense offered by the army and navy. A lengthy account of this might not be very interesting, as we have all set our faces like a flint toward a higher and more civilized form of defense than setting the bravest and noblest sons of a country before the cannon's mouth to be mown down like grass. My heart is so stirred over this relic of barbarism that I feel sometimes like taking one text, "Peace on earth, good will to men," and crying it out among the nations. On this occasion, the Emperor gave a hundred thousand yen ($82) from his own private purse for the benefit of these maneuvers, and at the same time comes the cry from the North of starving hundreds who have been driven to every extremity for food. It is quite time that Christian nations should lead off in sounding the clarion notes of Peace! Peace!! Peace!!! "So all the people shall dwell in peace."

After the excitement of trying to see His Majesty had subsided, an attempt was made to hold meetings. The stormy weather that prevailed interfered somewhat, but did not prevent the women coming out, and a union was formed and departments of work taken up at once. The women were most enthusiastic, and invited me to sit with them for a photograph.

We saw much of interest here in the form of pottery, so delicate, it looks like painted egg shells, yet so strong it is one of the most serviceable kinds of ware in use. Several places are noted for producing certain kinds of wares, but it seems to me nothing compared with this manufactured at Nagoya.

The Temperance League of Keyoto invited me to come down and speak for them. I next made my way to Keyoto, where I found there had been a union, but as in most places they had changed the name and were only just alive under another name. Several meetings resulted in awakening an interest, but they preferred the last adopted name.

The Congregational Conference was in session, and I was invited to address the body. I was very glad of an opportunity of conveying our greetings to this Christian gathering of about forty native preachers, also of bringing our work before them. I was most kindly received, and a vote of thanks was given, and general invitations to visit all these churches. Our meetings were crowded. On one night I was invited, with others, to address a meeting in the theater. As I was not the first speaker, I went in late. On reaching the theater I heard almost an uproar. The meeting was a religious gathering composed of about six hundred Buddhist students, but they were trying to cry down the speaker. Intense confusion prevailed through his speech and I feared I would not be able to address them, but when I assured them I had not come to ridicule them or their religion, but simply to tell them of ours, they seemed quite ready to listen. The subject of the address was, "What Christianity has done for the World." I am glad to record that they listened for more than an hour, and frequently applauded.

On Sabbath morning I attended service at the Doshisha school where nearly nine hundred students were present, many of them being Christians. It was a grand sight. The professor and teachers were seated on the platform, one presided at the organ, another conducted the opening services and a Japanese preached. I was invited to address the students, and of course was very glad of the opportunity. Several of the students called on me and offered to show me the sights of the city, an offer I was glad to accept, as it was a time of special interest.

The Emperor was expected the following day and great preparation was made. The palace (for Keyoto was once the capital) was opened and the grounds were decorated in flying colors. Several arches were put up and there was no end to the flags and evergreens. The arrival of the special train was announced to be at one o'clock p. m. Orders were sent to all schools that the children must be in line before that hour. The children began to gather in hundreds, multitudes crowded the highways and acres of people had assembled when it was announced that the train was three hours late. Meantime it began to rain, but there the crowd stood till the salute announced the arrival of His Majesty. We first caught sight of the outriders, less than fifty in number, all mounted on fine horses. The soldiers wore red jackets, helmet shaped hats with white plumes, carrying swords at their side; next came carriages with Japanese of rank, then the Emperor. His carriage was plain, much like our own. Seated in the carriage in front of the Emperor was his body-guard, a Japanese dressed in foreign clothes. The Emperor was in full military dress, with fancy dress hat. Standing very near the street I had a good view of all who passed. The Emperor is by no means a fine looking man, many of his subjects rivaling him in good looks. His face is wholly destitute of expression, and on no occasion have I seen him in any way recognize the homage paid him by his subjects.

What surprised me very much was the lack of an expression of enthusiasm on the part of the people. Not a sound was heard; some two hundred thousand people received him in most profound silence. They seemed awed by the presence of His Majesty, and there was no sign of greeting on the part of the people and not the slightest recognition of his subjects on the part of the Emperor. It seemed very strange to one coming from a land where we can swing our hats at the President and see him, in all grace and dignity and even in smiles, recognize our enthusiasm. The Emperor is said to be a man of advanced thought and quite in favor of all progress that tends to elevate his people.

A visit to the temples of Keyoto is most interesting. The largest temples in Japan are there. One is now in the course of construction. A very ancient temple of great note is worth a long journey, if there was nothing else to see; it is especially noted for its paintings; they are very old and of great beauty. Painted in the form of screens, they form the walls or partitions between the apartments of the temple. We made hasty visits to the temple containing more than three thousand idols; here they stand in solemn silence one hand uplifted and the other outstretched. Near by is a shrine containing an image of Buddha, made of brass and surrounded by strange ornamentations of many kinds. Some distance to the left another shrine contains the Diabutis (Great Buddha). This is but the head and shoulders of Buddha, made of wood and covered with gilt paper. The paper is peeling off in spots and gives the image a very ugly look. The bust is built from the floor up, and must be about sixty feet high. The head is crowned with a coronet of snails. It is said when Buddha was in India and exposed to the burning rays of the sun this crown of snails fell from heaven upon his brow, to protect his head from the heat.

In the same locality is a great bell tower, containing a bronze bell that weighs sixty-three tons; it is nine inches thick, eleven feet in diameter and twenty feet high. It is sounded by striking it with a heavy beam suspended from the ceiling by ropes; one end of the beam is covered with metal, to the other end a rope is attached, by means of which the beam is swung against the bell. The sound is sweet and clear, and can be heard more than a mile away. So much of interest centers about this old capital, I cannot begin to tell of all. Japan and Japanese life are a study worth much attention.

From Keyoto I journeyed on to Osaka. The Y. M. C. A. had invited me there and given the use of their hall. The storms began again, but did not seem to interfere with the meetings. A missionary and his wife, to whom I had a letter from a classmate in Alaska, gave a reception and entertained me. I met all the missionaries, visited the school, addressed twenty kindergarten teachers, held night and afternoon meetings, and every moment seemed more than crowded full.

My next stop was Kobe, from whence I sailed for China. Kobe is a port of call for all vessels sailing between China and Japan, and is a very important place and a very wicked place. Sometimes numbers of vessels, steamers and men-of-war are in port, and this means a city full of drunken sailors. I met many distinguished persons at Kobe. The Emperor was there at that time, and the city was in gala dress. Vessels tried to outdo each other in decoration, and the booming of cannons as salutes became familiar sounds. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrived about that time, and they were wined, dined and saluted; the whole city seemed as eager to see them as they were to see the Emperor. We lived in a royal atmosphere for some days, and all this excitement, of course, interfered with carrying out my plans of work, and I failed to accomplish what I most desired—to form a union among the foreigners. I must not fail to mention that I met George Francis Train, with all his baggage marked "Around the World in Sixty Days." He rushed from the depot to the wharf where the steamer had been delayed for an hour or more that he might "make time." I also met and traveled with the admiral and lieutenant of a Russian man-of-war. I had met the Russians of Alaska, and knowing a little of their people they talked freely. The admiral was a fine-looking man of about fifty or more, dressed in military full dress, and spoke English fluently and correctly. We talked of Russia and Siberian prison system as freely as old friends, and the lieutenant called a few days after to invite me to Russia, saying he would do all he could to open the way for me. It was my intention to go North to Siberia, but I am having the fever so often the doctor has advised me to go to a cool climate at once.

JESSIE A. ACKERMAN.

(To be Continued.)

Our Book Table.

Among the many books brought out by the Scientific Temperance Instruction law, few seem to us to offer such practical help to teachers in the lower grades as, "The Human Body, Part I," published by A. Lovell & Company, New York. It is the first book of the series, "Practical Work in the Schoolroom," and bears marks of having originated in the schoolroom rather than the study. It is a transcript of actual work done by Sarah F. Buckelew and Margaret W. Lewis in the primary department of one of the New York City schools. Under each topic is given, first, a model lesson; second, a formula embodying the principal facts brought out in developing the lesson; third, questions for the formula; fourth, directions for teaching the lesson, and lastly, questions on the lesson. The book exactly answers the question so often asked, "How shall I teach little children who cannot read, the laws of health and of temperance?" In these lessons health teaching and temperance teaching are carried straight along with scientific teaching in such simple terms the child can understand them.

Here is part of the formula of the lesson on circulation: "If I would be healthy, my blood must be pure and circulate freely. It will not circulate freely if I wear tight clothing, if I do not exercise in work or play; if I do not keep my body warm. It will be impure if I breathe bad air; if I eat unwholesome food; if I drink alcoholic liquors; if I snuff, smoke or chew tobacco." Here is one of the questions, with its answer: "Which is the more dreadful, hydrophobia or delirium tremens? One is as dreadful as the other," and this leads up to the sure safeguard against delirium tremens: "I should never drink a drop of alcoholic liquors," and the child is left in no doubt of the fact that wine, beer and cider contain alcohol.

RECOLLECTIONS OF GENERAL GRANT, by George W. Childs, comes to us with the compliments of the author. This dainty little book contains papers which have appeared in magazine and newspaper articles, and thousands will be pleased to have them in this convenient form for preservation. These Recollections show us the man, rather than the general; no one can read them without being impressed with his genuineness, his innate humility and his kindness of heart. Many noble things not before known, come out in these records; making us honor still more him, who, though he was our greatest general, was even greater as a genuine man.

Mr. H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, issues monthly booklets at two cents each, twenty-five cents a year, which are just the thing to stem the tide of worldliness and infidelity threatening to sweep the land. Concerning one of them, WILL THE BIBLE STAND? Miss Willard writes: "It is the best embodiment of evidences of Christianity anywhere to be found, and has the hearty indorsement of leading scholars in England and America. Let me warmly recommend it to mothers who have skeptical sons and daughters as I once was." Mr. Hastings publishes many tracts suitable for distribution.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

* * *

The letters that we receive daily inclosing gifts for the memorial tablet in the Temple, to be erected in honor of Mother Thompson, show in what loving remembrance she is held by white-ribboners all over the land. Mrs. Sarah A. McClees, of East Orange, N. J., writes: "I inclose $2 to help along the 'Thompson fund' in the great building; may it rise gloriously from corner-stone to capstone." Mrs. L. H. Lasey, Galesburg, Ill., incloses $1 for the same purpose and says: "Surely Mrs. Thompson's memory should be preserved to future generations." The W. C. T. U. of Montrose, Pa., sends $1 for the tablet. The Y's of Emlenton, Pa., and Mrs. Wm. Ingalls, of Abington, Conn., each send $1 for the tablet.

* * *

Mrs. Harriet L. Dunlap, of Tiffin, O., who was one of the original Crusaders, and gave three solid months to the work in its inception, sends a check for $100, and writes: "I shall rejoice to see the Temple finished, and have woman take her proper place in all things in this land, and redeem it from the curse of intemperance." Mrs. Dunlap also made a very unselfish offer, which it would not be wise at present to reveal. Mrs. Maria C. Madison, of Irving Park, Ill., entered the Temple office a few days ago. She remarked that she wanted to do some good, and generously handed out a check for $100 for the building fund. We wish a few more rich women who want to do good would follow her noble example. Mrs. Nancy Hilleary, Burlington, Ia., sends a check for $50. She says: "I am an old lady past my three score and ten. I hardly expect to see the Temple completed, but hope it will be finished, and be the means of doing great good."

Mrs. Martha A. Stowe, New Brighton, Pa., sends a check for $100 in memory of her mother, Mrs. Deborah Darragh, a pioneer temperance worker in Beaver county, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Stowe sent, besides, $5.60, the contents of her mite-box for a year. It was accompanied by $4.05, the contents of the mite-box of Mrs. W. B. Watkins, wife of the pastor of the M. E. Church.

* * *

Our indefatigable friend, Jane E. Weeden, is as undeterred by the heat of summer as by the stinging cold of winter, in her work for the Temple. She writes: "I have had a sort of a semi-vacation during the heated term, but by the assistance of Mrs. Egley, president of the Onarga, Ill., W. C. T. U., and other friends, I have done a little toward the magnificent enterprise which I am glad God has blessed in spite of all opposition." She has gathered in the following amounts; Onarga, Ill., W. C. T. U., $40; Gilman W. C. T. U., $13.50; Ottawa W. C. T. U., $25.

* * *

We are sure the children are all anxious to know how The Midget, edited by little Ethel Stout, is getting along. We had a letter from her mamma a short time ago. She writes that Ethel is spending part of her vacation in Indiana. The Midget is prospering and has gained a hundred new subscribers. She inclosed one-tenth of the subscription ($1) for the building fund. Ethel's cute little paper costs only ten cents a year. If you want it send a dime with your name to Ethel Stout, Delaware, Ohio.

We have a great many letters from the children, showing that they are at work for the Temple, as well as their elders. Little Samuel Grissinger, McConnell, Ill., writes: "I am a little boy seven years old. I send you $1.10 for the Temple fund; will send you more as soon as I can save more. I read a chapter in the Bible every day and THE UNION SIGNAL." How could he help being a good little boy?

Mabel Berry, Lincoln, Neb., a little girl ten years old, writes: "I see you have so many letters from the children I thought I would write, too. My Grandma Lathrap and I have a mite-box in partnership. My share of the contents I got by selling pie-plant. We send $3.65. I have read about The Midget, and my dear grandpa has given me ten cents to pay for it. I hope I shall see the Temple some time."

Four little orphans, Hattie, Dwight, Charley and Susie Eames, Jacksonville, Ill., send $1 to have their names placed in the corner-stone. Hattie writes: "We are very much interested in the Temple, and always read your letters. My father and mother have both gone to heaven, and we are living with grandma."

* * *

Mrs. G. Quatermass, Woodville, Ind., sends for two mite-boxes. She wants to know the price of one brick, "so that the children can tell how many bricks their money will buy. It is always quite a satisfaction for them to know that they really have a little share in the building." Pressed bricks, such as are going into the building, cost about two cents each.

Little Fostoria Macklin, Lewisburg, Ohio, sends $3.75. Her mother writes: "She (Fostoria) could hardly wait till her birthday came again to see how much we had for the Temple. To her joy, on counting the money the first thing in the morning, she found $3.75. The box is set up for another year, and this time we have more help, in the way of a sweet little Frances Willard, that came to our house last September. Her offering will go in with ours."

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

THE ROBIN'S GARDEN.

'Twas a saucy, bold robin perched high on the tree
With one eye on my cherries, the other on me;
"And what do you want in my garden?" said he.

I knew he was young by his flight and his note,
By the color and cut of his dapper new coat,
And the spots, like a thrush, on his breast and his throat;

So I said, "It's a shame to be thieving! It's wrong
For a chicken like you!" But, "Ho! Ho!" was his song,
"I've been out of the egg-shell for ever so long.

"If I followed your thought, it was chicken you said!
Why, sir! I remember the strawberry bed
When there wasn't one berry quite edibly red.

"Do I like them? Like strawberries? Well, for the sake
Of judicious variety—just for a break
In a diet of worms—I do sometimes partake.

"Did I hear you say cherries? Now, now, if you please,
Go find your own cherries. I'll answer for these.
Or fill up that vulgar great basket with peas.

"Your cherries? my cherries, you mean," whistled he;
"For my title is clear as a title can be,
I was hatched in that very identical tree!"

—Isaac Ogden Rankin, in July Wide Awake.

A LITTLE WORN-OUT SHOE.

BY CARRIE CLARK.

Yes, Tom Burton really stopped drinking, not for a day, or a week, or a month; but forever. It is not worth while to tell how he began. The story would be too long and too sad, and we thrive better in sunshine than in shadow. But how he stopped; ah! that is worth knowing about!

It all grew out of Annie Harwood's friendliness. Mamma thought Annie altogether too friendly, and perhaps mamma was right, for it seemed to be impossible to make five-year-old Annie understand the first thing about conventionalities, and she was just as apt to accost a total stranger without the least excuse for doing so as she was to talk about the weather to her doll when "playing lady."

Mamma tried to explain that this was not customary; but Annie stoutly maintained that it ought to be.

"You tell me to love everybody," she argued, "and I can't love people and never speak to them," a bit of logic that mamma found unanswerable; but she hoped that time would teach her little daughter when to speak and when to keep silence. In the meantime Annie's favorite amusement was sauntering about, with her dolly in her arms, nodding "good-mornings" or "good-afternoons" to any face that pleased her fancy.

Tom Burton was laying a new sidewalk in front of Mr. Harwood's house. Tom was a skilled mechanic, capable of earning high wages, and his work had been in great demand; but the times grew more frequent when his mind was clouded and his hand unsteady, until now no one would trust him in a responsible position, and he was obliged, when inclined to exert himself at all, to take the work and pay of a laborer.

It was the noon hour and, comfortably reclining in the shade of a large tree, Tom was partaking of his luncheon. One could scarcely say, eating it, for the food was very meager; his bottle was full, though, so Tom was fairly content.

He had just taken an especially long draught, and was smacking his lips over it, when he was startled by a childish voice saying, "How do you do?"

Tom hastily hiding his bottle, said, "Very well, thank you," and began nibbling a bit of bread before he realized that his visitor was a very small girl nursing a doll, and looking at him with friendly, not critical, eyes.

Tom waited a few moments for her to go away; but she showed no inclination to do so, and he grew impatient for the rest of his rum.

He must have been, unconsciously, a trifle ashamed of himself, for he carried on a mental argument while looking at Annie's sweet little face.

"She won't know what it is," he said to himself; "I'm just wasting time sitting here waiting. She doesn't intend to go away."

Evidently the argument was not perfectly satisfactory, for he waited awhile longer. It was no use; Annie did not go away; so he reached stealthily around for his bottle, tried to cover its length with his hands, and took a long drink.

"What's that?" asked Annie promptly.

"Something to drink," answered Tom, with a faint blush.

"Is it dood?" was the next question.

"Ye-yes," replied Tom with an effort, and a deeper blush.

"I'm firsty," suggested Annie mildly.

"You'd better go home and ask your mamma for a cup of milk or some water," said Tom gruffly. He was fairly crimson now.

"I don't like milk, and I'm not firsty for water," explained Annie, looking longingly at the bottle.

Tom did not take the hint, so Annie tried again: "You said it was dood, didn't you?"

"Yes, but not for little girls," answered Tom.

"Why?" persisted Annie.

"Never mind why," said Tom, draining the bottle.

Disappointed and confused Annie dropped her eyes. As she did so they rested on her pretty new shoes. Instantly the busy little mind flitted to a new subject.

"I've dot new shoes," she ventured.

"So I see," said Tom, much relieved by the turn conversation had taken.

"My papa buys me new shoes. He works hard every day; that's the way he dets me new shoes." Then after a moment's pleased contemplation of her feet, "You dot any little dirls?"

"Yes," answered Tom smiling. "One just about your size, and a dear little girl she is, too."

"What's her name?"

"Katie."

"Tatie dot new shoes, too?"

"No, she hasn't," was the answer given with falling countenance.

"Why?" was the next pitiless question.

Tom did not answer, and his inquisitor gave him a loop-hole for escape, "Perhaps her old ones aren't worn out yet; perhaps they haven't any holes in them," and then, "Have they?"

"Yes, they have," admitted Tom; "they're pretty much all holes."

Annie studied over the problem with her little brows in a pucker. A little girl with worn-out shoes and no new ones to replace them! What could it mean?

Suddenly a bright idea struck her, and with a smile of self-satisfaction she said, "Perhaps she's not as sweet a little dirl as I am."

"Indeed she is, little Miss!" cried Tom indignantly.

"Then why don't you det her new shoes?" persisted Annie, not the least abashed.

Dared he answer that question even to himself? Could he ever again endure his own presence if he looked himself in the face now, and truthfully explained why little Katie's feet were on the ground, and her dress in tatters? In shame and silence he covered his face with his hands; but his merciless little questioner was not satisfied, and standing there before him with grave and thoughtful little face was fast answering the query for herself.

"Don't you work every day but Sundays, as my papa does? Is that why you don't det poor Tatie new shoes? I wish she tould live at our house! You tan't be a dood papa at all!"

"I'm not!" said Tom, fiercely, springing to his feet. "I'm not a good one! Do you want to know why I don't get Katie new shoes? That's why!" he almost shouted, raising the bottle high above his head, "that's why!" and he flung it far out into the street where it broke into a hundred pieces. "And now," he went on rapidly, "there is no reason, and, God helping me, there never shall be again!" And there never was.

The struggle was a long one, and a hard one, as such struggles are apt to be; but Tom was firm in his determination and never took a backward step. With the first money he received for the work he was then doing, he bought Katie a pair of shoes. The child was wild with delight, and even the tired mother smiled faintly.

After the little girl had gone to bed Tom said to his wife: "Mary, I want one of Katie's old shoes."

"They are all worn out, Tom," said Mrs. Burton. "They couldn't do anybody any good."

"Anybody but me," corrected Tom. "I want to carry it in my pocket as a reminder—to help me—because—" and then he told her all about it.

A few weeks later, as Mrs. Burton was sewing one evening, her husband handed her a little shoe saying, "I wish you'd sew this up a little for me, Mary, it's going all to pieces in my pocket, and that will never do." And almost blinded by happy tears, Mrs. Burton put some loving stitches in the priceless little worn-out shoe.

I GUESS God made my mamma's eyes
With some of the blue that's in the skies,
For when I look into them I see
Two little angels looking at me.

—W. B. Seabrook in the Congregationalist.

SHOW love for your enemy in words and acts, and combine these with praying for him.—Godet.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING AUGUST 31, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 18:15-43; Proverbs 20-25.)

Sunday, 31; Luke 18:15-43. Verse 15, The Jews by their religion were educated to have a special regard for children; but Christ's interest surpassed that of His disciples, and He recognizes the children as belonging to His kingdom as no other system of religion ever did. Verse 17, A childlike spirit is necessary in order to enter the kingdom. Verse 24, The selfish possession of money is a most common hindrance in the way of entering the kingdom.

Monday, 1; Prov. 20. Verse 1, If the drinks that were drugged be excepted, there was no stronger drink known to the Hebrews than wine. Wine made in Palestine contains much less alcohol than the wine of this country. With what displeasure must God look down upon the dreadful drinks now sold in dram shops. Verse 14, How much alike are the evil ways of the world in all generations. We should never underrate the things we wish to purchase in order to obtain them cheaper.

Tuesday, 2; Prov. 21. Verse 1, It should be the daily prayer of every one that God may direct his heart to purposes of good. Verse 5, How many in our times are pursuing the dishonest ways of speculation, hoping to get property in a short time. Plans well made and diligently pursued, with prudence and continued labor, is the right way to success.

Wednesday, 3; Prov. 22. Verse 1, A young person has accomplished much toward his future success, when, by his virtues, his good habits and his industry, he has won for himself in the community a good name; and he cannot be too careful not to do anything that will ever blemish his good name. Verse 6, Too many children are left to grow up in the way they would go, instead of the way they should go. The seed of that which we would have appear in the after lives of children, should be sown in early childhood and youth.

Thursday, 4; Prov. 23. Verse 17, How foolish is the course of those who attend to the things of religion by impulsive fits and starts, instead of living reliable, pious lives, every day. Verse 29, This picture of the drunkard is as true now as it ever was. Let all good people unite to put an end to drunkenness and the accursed liquor traffic.

Friday, 5; Prov. 24. Verse 19, Many hinder their usefulness in good work by fretting all the time about the evil that bad men are doing. Keep your mind filled with the good to be done; the wicked will at last perish in their wickedness. Verse 33, There is nothing good before a lazy, indolent life. Every one for his own sake, and for the sake of others and the good he may do, should be industrious.

Saturday, 6; Prov. 25. Verse 8, No one ought to allow himself to be easily provoked; those who do so, are certain to say things and do things for which they will afterwards feel ashamed. Verse 21, It is very wrong to pursue an enemy with the purpose of revenge. We owe it to all men to be kind. Verse 28, By prayerful, watchful self-control, every one should make himself strong against the inroads of passions and lusts.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Religious instruction in the public schools. Ps. 119:9.)

1. Religious instruction, so far as it has to do with the formation of good characters, should be given in the public schools. The life of the state is not safe without such characters, and what is needed in the life of the state ought to be put into the public schools. The Bible is most useful in imparting such instruction. Its effect, as the text declares, has always been to lead the young to cleanse themselves from all evil ways.

2. Every body should oppose the teaching of a sectarian religion in the schools. This is not essential to the teaching of that Christianity upon which the morality of the country is so deeply engrafted. True and essential religion lies back of all sectarian opinions and controversies. It is religion that is wanted in order to the molding of good citizens; that which is about religion has no place in the public schools.

3. The fact that most of the crimes now being committed are by the young, and that the great majority of the inmates of prisons are young men, shows what a need there is that the education provided by the state have reference to good hearts as well as sharp intellects. The schools should be schools of virtue.

THERE are no fragments so precious as those of time, and none so heedlessly lost by people who cannot make a moment, and yet can waste years.—Montgomery.

The Household.

THE BRAVEST BATTLE THAT EVER WAS FOUGHT.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

The bravest battle that ever was fought!
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not;
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon, or battle-shot,
With sword, or nobler pen;
Nay, not with eloquent word, or thought,
From mouths of wonderful men.

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently bore her part—
Lo! there is that battle-field!

No marshaling troop, no bivouac song;
No banner to gleam and wave;
But, oh! these battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave!

Yet, faithful still as a bridge of stars,
She fights in her walled-up town—
Fights on and on, in the endless wars,
Then silent, unseen—goes down.

O ye with banners and battle-shot,
And soldiers to shout and praise,
I tell you the kingliest victories fought
Are fought in these silent ways.

Oh, spotless woman in a world of shame!
With splendid and silent scorn,
Go back to God as white as you came,
The kingliest warrior born!

—Selected.

HOME INFLUENCE.

BY MRS. S. M. HARTOUGH.

"Walter Harris has been arrested for embezzlement!" That was the word passing from mouth to mouth everywhere in our small town of L——. And I think never was news more unwelcome or unexpected; for Walter Harris had been considered a model young man, and was the pride of many warm friends; and how he could have fallen was incomprehensible. Reared in a Christian home by Christian parents, brought up in the Sabbath school and with every influence for good, it was, indeed, hard to believe him guilty of such a grave crime.

His friends refused to credit the tale. His parents hastened to the city where their son was imprisoned, to effect his release, scarcely believing it could be true that he was in jail, much less that he was guilty of the charge mentioned. So, while all is excitement, and rumors of every kind are in circulation, let us go back and review the life of this unfortunate young man. I believe that I am the only one in the town that is not shocked. But I only wonder it did not happen sooner. I am a seamstress, and for years have had the secrets of some of the families of L—— in my heart, and many things that surprise and shock the community are not unexpected to me.

I remember little Walter as a bright, frank, interesting child; one who shrank from falsehood and dishonesty as the lamb shrinks from the wolf. "How did he get into bad company," do you ask? Why, he was born and bred in dishonesty! Don't shrink. It is true. Let me narrate some facts that came under my own observation. One day, I remember, he was told to go to a neighboring store to make a small purchase. His mother gave him the money with which to pay for the article, and the happy child went about his errand, soon returning and giving into his mother's hands the purchase and the change.

"Why, Walter!" exclaimed the mother, "you have more money than you started with. Did Mr. —— give you this?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered the child. "Isn't it all right, mamma?"

"Of course it's all right. If Mr. —— makes mistakes he must be the loser." And the mother put the money in her purse giving a little nod of gratification to me.

"I ought to take it back, mamma?" said the bewildered boy. And the mother laughed again, as she returned a flippant answer. Did the child comprehend the act?

Not long after this incident another occurred. We three—Walter, his mother and I—were passing a grocery store. A basket of fine pears was on exhibition outside and we stopped to admire. Imagine my surprise after we had passed the store to see Mrs. Harris with a pear. Walter saw it too, and with childish curiosity and eagerness began to question his mother.

"Did you buy some pears, mamma?"

"Hush, no."

"Did the man give it to you?"

"Here, take a piece and run on ahead," then turning to me, said Mrs. Harris, "I didn't mean that Walter should see that pear. I took it as we passed. I often do, but he is such a keen one, I shall have to be more careful!"

On another occasion the pennies in his little bank were missing. His grief and indignation at the discovery were very great, and he at once charged the servant with the theft. To clear herself, the servant informed him that she saw his mother take them. Scarcely believing her word, he hastened into the sewing room, and with his little face aflame with indignation told his mamma of his loss and the servant's charge.

"You didn't do it, did you, mamma?"

"Yes, dear," she answered with reddening cheeks, "I took them one day when I needed some change. Of course I intend to replace them, my dear."

"But, mamma, isn't that stealing, just the same?"

"Sometimes it is," she answered hesitatingly. "But I intended to put it back before you should discover it, and was going to put in five cents more than I took out, for interest, you know. Won't that do?"

"O, I s'pose so," replied the child. And so it was done the next day.

As the years went by, and Walter grew out of childhood and dresses, his frank, conscientious nature was changed. Still the educating influence went on. If the milkman gave, in mistake, an extra ticket, or the monthly bills showed some article omitted, Mrs. Harris would say with great satisfaction, "It is their lookout not mine."

"But, mamma," said Walter, "if the mistake was the other way, if he had charged you with something you never bought, wouldn't you tell him?"

"Of course I should," she replied gaily. "Here, you may have the extra dimes to buy some ice cream as you wished to do this morning." Thus the boy became particeps criminis unwittingly.

And so the education went on in the boy's heart and life. Such a training would corrupt any boy. Now, as I sit and hear the footsteps of the neighbors as they go about the Harris mansion and hear their expressed words of wonderment and sympathy, I cannot but think of these words, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Mrs. Harris is gathering in her harvest. God help us mothers to be watchful of our little acts, for the eyes of our children are upon us.

Leavenworth, Kan.

WORDS TO THE WISE—"THOUGHTS ARE THINGS."

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

In the popular estimate thought gets pretty low rating. A school not far remote from Boston has been severely criticised: "All folly to waste so much time writing compositions! Teach 'em something practical." Had these critics their own thinking faculties developed they would recognize such development as the very "something practical" demanded. They would see that in the world's progress every advance in even the most practical departments has been made possible only by the power of thought. They would see, too, that the ability to think clearly, and to express thought in ways to produce a desired effect, is an immense help to that supposed embodiment of practicality, the business man. Every business man undertaking an enterprise does a good deal of thinking. He thinks out his methods, thinks how he shall get knowledge of the matter in hand, avails himself of opportunities, or makes them, keeping always in view his special aim.

First comes thought, then action. Thought will reveal an existing need, and suggest ways of supplying it. Very little thought will show to the most of us a need of the nobler attributes of character in political, social and commercial circles. To secure these attributes is no matter of mere philanthropy. It is a practical, business-like work, affecting the everyday interests of every individual, and should be undertaken in a practical, business-like way.

It has been shown in previous words that character can best be reached early, and in the home, and while not ignoring the paternal responsibility, we have been considering the matter chiefly in relation to mothers and other women-folk. Now by what power, through what means, shall they accomplish this foundation work on which human welfare so largely depends? It is plain that such work, like all practical undertakings, requires, first and foremost, thought. Taking women by and large all over the country, their thought-force is not turned on to the highest uses. Multitudes of them are deep in toil, other multitudes deep in pleasure. Multitudes of them of every class and condition never concern themselves with various matters which do very much concern them in their relations with children. Serious thought is to them hard labor for the reason that their thinking faculties are too little exercised, yet their vocation as child-trainers especially demands the "high thinking" which will uplift them, and with them the race.

Here, then, is working ground with ample room for willing workers. In every town, village, neighborhood, and community, we may suppose to dwell at least one woman who sees the needs of women, their solemn responsibilities, their precious opportunities, and what a power for good they may become in the household and in the community. Let this clear-sighted individual begin by inviting the women of her neighborhood to assemble once a week, the mode of proceedings to vary according to circumstances. In many communities the thought range runs so low that nothing much above entertainment should be at first proposed, travels and adventures, accounts of inventions, processes of manufacture, incidents of history, and the like. Later on would come all kinds of household problems. One of these might be, In what spirit shall reproof be given? Probably the large majority of parents suppose that reproof, or blame, demands severity of word, look and tone, usually anger. They seem to think these effective in causing the reproof to reach deep, and take effect, while in reality anger and severity do at once raise a barrier in the child from which the reproof bounds back without at all making the intended impression. Also, in many cases, the severity is unwarranted, those for instance which were not intentional offences, but which only caused bad results. And too often the word of reproof is spoken right out before the family and guests.

The power of love combined with wisdom has as yet been little tested in the household or elsewhere. A few confidential words spoken to the offender in private in a gentle, loving way—how seldom is this method tried! It is thought necessary to be exasperated. Yet anger and love cannot exist together, and while anger exists love ceases. But this matter, with others of the same nature, demands more space than can here be taken. It must go over to next time, together with another one which has scarcely yet been mentioned, the responsibility of woman for the general moral standard of a community for the standard of manhood as well as of womanhood.

Belmont, Mass.

THE MARTHAS AND THE MARYS.

BY ADELLA C. FIRMAN.

There is one incident in the life of Jesus, as recorded by Luke, over which my girlish mind puzzled many a time. It seemed but reasonable that Martha should desire Mary to assist her in her labor. Where is there a sister to-day that would not desire as much from another?

What did Jesus mean when he said Mary had chosen the one good part? Did he mean to imply that serving was useless? Not so, I am sure, since He, Himself was with us as "one that serveth."

Was not Jesus' answer to Martha one proof of His divinity? Would any merely human man have answered as He did?

There are many Marthas to-day, and there are many Marys. What do our human brothers say to the two? Which do they commend? Is it not the Marthas? How many of them, without something of the divinity of Christ influencing them, will say to Mary, "You have chosen the good part, and it shall not be taken from you."

Did Jesus, looking back over the ages gone, and forward over the ages to come, make Martha that answer for our benefit as well as for hers and Mary's?

Did he foresee the influence that answer would have on all the Marys and Marthas for evermore? Can we doubt it? Suppose Jesus had sent Mary to help Martha, as any human man, or even woman, would have done; however lovingly or kindly He might have done so, would it not have settled the woman question more effectively than anything else?

I have a great deal of sympathy for the Marthas; I have always felt sorry for that special Martha, but I am so glad Jesus did not send Mary to the kitchen or dining-room, but just let her stay in the place she had chosen.

Why is it that man has always been so blinded to God's real meaning when He said, "It is not good that man should be alone; I will make him an helpmeet for him." What did God mean? What does the word help imply? As a noun it means a source of strength. Is this not what woman in her truest sphere is? A source of strength; a strength giver?

A help does not mean a helper, as we call sometimes those who serve us in our households. The noun help has a different significance from the noun helper. Do we ever speak of God as a helper? If we do we are in the wrong.

"God is a very present help in time of trouble," the Psalmist tells us, that is, a source of strength.

Whenever and wherever man has refused to accept God's meaning of the "helpmeet" sent him, it has been to his everlasting detriment, and nature has had her revenge. Men have chosen the helper rather than the help; have chosen and praised the Marthas rather than the Marys, yet it is only the Marys that can help them into ideal manhood.

Muskegon, Mich.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.—Gal. 5: 1.
To obey God is liberty.—Seneca.

FROM OUR NEIGHBORS.

The air is full of grand utterances which we long to give to our readers. But the limitations of our pages leave little room for other than original matter. This week we devote most of our editorial space to our neighbors who say things better than we can say them.

Going back to the rare June days, we hear among the many noble utterances on commencement day, nothing more noteworthy than the words of Bishop Spalding in his address to the graduates of Notre Dame, Indiana, at its forty-sixth commencement. The occasion was worthy the man. Never in its history had that institution gathered so many interested visitors at its commencement; the number of ladies present was especially noticeable. Seated on the platform from which he spoke, were President Walsh and the faculty of this leading Catholic institution; the Right Rev. Bishop Moore, of Florida, and an hundred priests; before him were six hundred students, and the vast concourse of visitors. It is a significant fact and one of great promise, that his strongest utterances were the ones most heartily cheered both from the platform and the pews. At first his audience seemed startled by the truth he told, but soon they caught the inspiration of his enthusiasm and testified their appreciation by frequent and hearty cheers.

His address was an appeal for a higher civilization and it ran along unfrequented lines. Speaking to young men he startled them by picturing the probable future of the average hundred young Americans who graduate from college. Twenty-five, he said, would ruin themselves by the sins of the flesh, and at forty be total wrecks, thrown helpless on the shore by the storms of intemperance and lust. Twenty-five might fall by dishonesty or live degraded by unhappy marriages; the other fifty might be fairly respectable, doing the work of slaves, the humdrum work of making money merely to exist. How many out of the hundred would live for love, for culture, for the higher life? How many would strive to be great saints, great poets, great philosophers?

His plea was for noble living, and a strong protest against materialism. In this, though grand, it was not unique; considering the time and the speaker—a bishop in the Catholic church always ranked with conservatives on the woman question—it was unique in the position taken on this subject. His appeal for the higher education of women, and for their political equality with man was as strong as it was unexpected. He declared the present position of woman throughout Christendom was a relic of barbarism. "The right of woman is to be the equal of man in every respect. He who denies her this right is a savage. She is ill-paid; she should be paid as much as a man for equal service; the saddest sight on earth is that of a delicately nurtured girl, capable, cultured, willing to work, thrust out of her place in life by barbarous prejudice. In this country woman has emancipated herself; American women are more intelligent than men," he said.

Turning solemnly to the graduates of St. Mary's he told them not to make marriage their main idea in life. "A man would laugh at you if you told him that marriage was to be his aim in life; he will not be dependent; he intends to start alone and so can a woman; she can learn to battle for the prizes of life; she is, in most cases, superior to man." The old theory, that woman is like a flower, to be cherished only in her bloom, is exploded; she is no longer a creature to be loved and caressed when the bloom is on her cheek, and then to be thrust aside to be a drudge; she will henceforth work side by side with man, and win the prizes that he wins. Because of this he demands the highest education for women; they must make themselves strong, physically and mentally, for strength is power. "A woman could live in a grand world of her own, were she a sister in a hospital, a worker in the marts of trade, a toiler in the desert; were she rich or were she poor, she could live in the fairest realms of poetry; the world of Plato, of Dante, of Milton, is open to her. The young girls of St. Mary's have received the key of culture; with it they can open their way to dazzling realms of light. Through it they must raise themselves to the heights of a noble, self-respecting womanhood. They are the equals of men; the highest virtues that men cultivate come to women by nature; they are gentle, merciful, pure, their mission is to help the world to attain to the desire of God. The world is better to-day than it ever was before, and good women have made it so."

In commenting on this part of Bishop Spalding's address the Inter-Ocean says: "The Bishop's words seemed like a declaration of advanced belief in woman's rights, and they were applauded to the echo."

Not less pronounced was he in favor of social purity and of temperance. "The time will come," said he, "when the saloon must go, for it, too, is a relic of barbarism," and he sounded the bugle-call to young manhood to speed its going.

He closed with a strong protest against materialism, and an appeal for a higher aim in life than can be computed in dollars and cents; his prophetic eye saw the good time coming when "Americans will cease to boast of great cities, of long railroads, of material progress; when riches or the holding of office will not be the criterion of a man's worth. What can riches buy? Only the outward things. One may buy great pictures, but he cannot purchase the insight into their beauties; one may go to Switzerland, but who can buy the gift of seeing its beauty? It is a misfortune for an American to be born rich; the sons of rich Americans generally go to the devil." This certainly would not be the case if they heeded the brave words of Bishop Spalding.

Another notable utterance is that of Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward in the August Forum, on "The Décolleté in Modern Life." We do not think her strictures are applicable to W. C. T. U. women, but back of them is a truth it will do us all good to heed. After giving hard, and deserved blows to the theater and the ballet, or rather to respectable people who attend them, and to the round dance, she says:

"One need not be a fanatic in the temperance movement to discern one cause for the decrease of modesty in the increase of drinking habits among a certain class of our ladies—thank heaven, we may still believe that this class is not a large one. 'Certainly,' testifies the first young man I happen to ask, himself a person of so-called good morals; 'certainly, I have often danced with young ladies who were intoxicated. It is not an uncommon thing to meet them "too far gone" to converse.' If the delicacy of a sober girl cannot protect her from the taint in the social atmosphere, what is to be expected from the modesty of a drunken one? . . . . .

"What is the evening dress of a fashionable woman, but a burlesque on civilization? It exposes the body with an indifference which nothing seems to abash. The reproofs of the pulpit, the complaints of the press, the denunciations of modest members of our own sex, flit over these bared bosoms like the feathered tips of their own fans. The impression goes no deeper. . . .

"O women! queens of life! bestir your hearts. Rouse your dulled perceptions of the monstrous things you do and suffer to be done. Call the fact by its right name. Blush for it, and abhor it, for it is abhorrent. So long as you take your fashions from the demi-monde, wherein are ye better than these? The Irish cook in your kitchen is your superior, madam, when she goes to her ball-room on St. Patrick's Day clothed to the throat, as by the customs of her people she is required to be. And the rules of the Roman Catholic Church forbid her to waltz. . . .

"By their robes ye shall know them. And, pray, why not? As you characterize the danseuse, as you stigmatize the poor creature who flaunts herself in the eye of vice, why shall not yourselves be judged by their judgment? Have women of fortune any special immunity from heaven or earth which releases them from the common, human, moral conditions of their sex? To be rich and fashionable—does this give one the privilege of being immodest and respected?

"We are a club-burdened age, and of forming many societies there is no end; but let one association more be suggested; and heaven hasten, as it will surely prosper it! Let a dozen of the most influential women in the city of New York be banded together—that would be enough; as many in Washington, Philadelphia, and Boston. Let these women, having agreed to regulate their own costumes with regard to the essentials of decorum, bind themselves never to receive a second time into their parlors a woman who is immodestly dressed. Let them agree that they will accept no invitations coming from indecently-dressed hostesses. Let them reduce their definitions of modesty to a few articles and the thing is done. It is perfectly easy. Any of us can think, at hap-hazard, of a dozen society ladies, any one of whom would gladly do this if the other eleven would. Suggest, for such an association, simply this name—The Ladies. Suppose that there were added to the efforts of these ladies, in full harmony with them, the sympathy of a dozen clean-hearted, high-minded, socially-powerful men? We are glad to believe that it would be quite possible to find them. Let these gentlemen firmly take the stand, 'We accept no invitations from hostesses who invite us to meet immodestly-dressed guests.' What would happen, think you? Society would be revolutionized in three months. From a half-nude set of Bacchantes, we should become decently-draped human beings, and probably stay so. When we consider how much easier to put in motion this would be than most social reforms, it is a matter of surprise that some such simple project has not been tried."

A USELESS ATTEMPT.

An excitable friend—we judge she is excited by the number of underscored words in her communication—writes: "Can nothing be published in THE UNION SIGNAL to check the constant tirade by respectable Republican journals against prohibition?" The note was accompanied by a paper of the kind designated, with half-a-dozen articles marked. They are certainly exasperating enough to account for any amount of excitement, but it is a hopeless task to publish anything in THE UNION SIGNAL, or any other temperance paper, to "check their tirade of abuse." In the first place, they will not read the truth if it happens to bear hard on their theories, and in the second place they are so wedded to high license that they seem morally incapable of believing the plainest facts that go against that system.

The articles in question are all aimed at prohibition, most of them trying to prove that "prohibition is a stupendous fraud" in Maine. They really are meant to kill two birds with one stone—prove prohibition a failure and that it is not a Republican institution. Under the head of "Republican Doctrine," one article, quoted from the Bangor Commercial, declares that the prohibition organs in Maine would like to make people believe that it is only Democrats who oppose prohibition, and that Republicans everywhere favor it. It says: "The immense majorities by which prohibition has been voted down in Republican states is a sufficient answer to this deception; but it is well enough occasionally to quote some prominent Republican on the question. Here is some sensible talk from Halstead, the well-known Ohio Republican editor and politician: 'Tax saloons,' he says; 'you need not license them—tax them and give all communities local option. The tax helps the tax-payers at large; and the local option gives each community the right to maintain prohibition within its own limits.'"

In this is the explanation of whatever of failure there is in prohibition in Maine; no law will be enforced where the dominant political party is opposed to it. Let such a party offer the same opposition to the law against horse-stealing, and whose horse would be safe? But would it not seem rather cheeky for the allies of the horse-thief to taunt the law-abiding citizens with the non-enforcement of the law? Yet this seems to us a parallel case to the one in hand. The complaint that the prohibitory law is not enforced is most loudly made by those who are doing the most to prevent its enforcement.

Most of the articles marked have a very familiar sound; they may not be word for word the same, but they are very similar to those published in the Omaha Bee, for which its editor confesses to having been paid by the brewers to prevent the injury to their trade sure to follow the adoption of the prohibitory amendment in Nebraska. If prohibition is such a failure in Iowa, Maine and Kansas, why are the liquor men spending thousands upon thousands to defeat it in Nebraska? Their lies refute themselves.

Here is a sample of what this Vermont paper calls "strong testimony," though it gives no hint as to who bears the testimony:

"Topeka was the one bright star in the entire West. She stood ready to combat for commercial supremacy with Omaha and Kansas City. Then, as if by one fell swoop, the moral blight of prohibition engulfed us. Topeka is, to-day, struggling like the drowning man who catches at a straw. May heaven preserve Nebraska or any other American state from getting into the sea of trouble that now besets the state of Kansas. Be not deceived. Prohibition is not the glorious panacea for all ills. It is a blight that ruins and destroys. It tears down, does not build up. It is a curse, which for some mysterious reason Divine Providence has inflicted upon the people of Kansas that has been far more reaching in its direful effects than all the droughts, grasshopper plagues, etc., we have ever experienced."

If this be true, how do we account for the figures of the census, giving Topeka, which was only a village ten years ago, 31,000 inhabitants now?

We are free to confess that its "boom" has somewhat subsided, but so has that at Kansas City, and it surely cannot be charged to prohibition. Said a prominent Kansas City gentleman, whose entire property is invested there, only last week, "Kansas City seems as if a pestilence had swept through it, it is so dead. During the rate war, when you could go almost anywhere for a dollar, railroad officials told me that five hundred tool chests a day left Kansas City depots, and that meant the exodus of thousands of mechanics. Even saloon keepers are failing and bringing the brewers who were on their bonds into tight places." The reason of this is that the boom has swept westward and left these inland cities. It would be just as fair to impute the collapse in Kansas City, which is much more marked than in Topeka, to high license, as it is to charge prohibition with dull times in Topeka.

So long as high license continues to be the policy of their party, "respectable Republican newspapers" will continue to lie about prohibition. You cannot expect anything else, and it is not worth while to worry over it. Sometime our good brothers will get their eyes opened—not till after the next Presidential election, however; until they do, you must possess your soul in patience and pay as little attention as you can to their—misunderstanding of fact.

MEDICAL TEMPERANCE AND SUNDAY REST.

In answer to the question in Our Day for August, "What methods have been most successful in England in advancing the cause of temperance in the medical profession?" Robert Rae tells us that the medical temperance movement in England assumed shape in 1869, when the National Temperance League convened a conference of medical abstainers, in London. This conference adopted the recommendations: 1st. That a series of conferences of the British Medical Association should be held, and 2d. The establishment of a medical temperance journal. This was done; the journal has been issued quarterly ever since, and its twenty published volumes contain most valuable matter on this important subject.

One of the most effective means of influencing the profession has been the publication of declarations concerning alcohol signed by medical men. At first these declarations were directed only against ardent spirits; the first one embodying a declaration of total abstinence principles was issued in 1874, and signed by more than two thousand medical practitioners. Mr. Rae considers the famous medical declaration of 1871 one of the direct results of establishing the Medical Temperance Journal. The signatures of two hundred and sixty-nine physicians and surgeons of eminence were secured to this declaration; it was then printed, with all the signatures, in the London Times, the League paying for it as advertisements. A copy of the document, together with Dr. McMurtry's pamphlet on the same subject was sent to every physician whose name was in the medical directory of 1872. Thus attention was focused upon this point, the subject was very thoroughly discussed by medical societies, and great good resulted.

In the same issue Rev. W. F. Crafts answered the question, "What precedents have been set by the Federal Government favorable to a National Sunday Rest Bill?" by saying that the Revised Statutes of the United States, 1878, contain four operative Sunday laws; one against distilling on Sunday with a one thousand dollars penalty; two intermitting studies on Sunday in the military and naval academies, and the fourth declaring Sunday a day not to be counted in bankruptcy proceedings. The same year Congress passed a Sunday law for the District of Columbia, to protect, not employés, but game birds, forbidding shooting them on Sunday. Presidents Washington, Jackson, Lincoln and Harrison, by proclamation, gave Sunday rest to the army.

The Supreme Court also furnishes a precedent. March 16, 1885, this decision, concurred in by all the judges, was delivered by Justice Field: "Laws setting aside Sunday as a day of rest are upheld, not from any right of government to legislate for the promotion of religious observances, but from its right to protect all persons from the physical and moral debasement that comes from uninterrupted labor. Such laws have always been deemed beneficent and merciful laws, especially to the poor and dependent, to the laborers in our factories and workshops, and in the heated rooms of our cities; and their validity has been sustained by the highest courts of the states."

In this connection we give some extracts from a leaflet written by Dr. Crafts, and published by the Western Tract Society, Cincinnati, Ohio. It can be obtained there at the low price of twenty-five cents an hundred, and should be sown broadcast. In discussing the question of opening the Columbian Exposition he makes the point which, so far as we know, is undisputed, that Sunday openings of museums, etc., are always urged for, but never by workingmen. The unsuccessful effort to open New York museums was initiated by Ingersoll's Secular Union. The same thing is true in England; a shrewd observer noted that in the meetings called in the name of workingmen, in favor of Sunday opening, a large proportion of those in attendance wore the cockney's single eyeglass, which has not usually been regarded as the badge of labor.

The workingmen neither ask for Sunday opening where it does not exist, nor do they use it to any large degree where it is already in vogue. In England an earnest canvass of workingmen's societies was made in 1883 by the friends of Sunday opening, and also by its opponents, each seeking the approving votes and signatures of workingmen's organizations. The result was: Against Sunday opening, 2,412 organizations, with 501,705 members. For Sunday opening, sixty-two organizations, with 45,482 members—not one-tenth as many as petitioned against it. Why did these workingmen oppose Sunday opening? Not for religious reasons chiefly, but because British workingmen, with one day in the week to think, see that if they require or permit men to work on the rest day in museums that they may be amused, they cannot justly oppose the opening of theaters to gratify others who want more pepper in their amusement—something more exciting than a stuffed monkey and a cold statue. And those workingmen see, further, that if the theater can use the rest day for money-making, the factory cannot be equitably refused the same opportunity. This is not mere prophecy on their part.

They know that in Prussia fifty-seven per cent of the establishments engaged in manufacture, and seventy-seven per cent of those engaged in trade and transportation, continue their business on the so-called "holiday Sunday"—keeping over two-fifths of all the wage-earners of that country at their toil on the average Sunday.

There is no force in the plea that Sunday is the only day for workingmen to see the Fair. As at Philadelphia, there will be special holidays when all workingmen who wish to go can do so without crushing either their own consciences or their priceless rest day.

The Columbian Exposition should exhibit American institutions as well as American products. That first "Columbian Exposition," personally conducted by Columbus himself on his return to Spain, after his discovery of this new world, contained samples not only of American minerals and vegetables and animals, but also of its men—the red savages. We shall make a poor showing for our four hundred years of progress if we exhibit at Chicago the half-savage Sabbath of the frontier, with its toil and dissipation and childish play, instead of the quiet American Sabbath of our best manhood.

The only large American exposition that has opened on Sunday—that of New Orleans in 1885—was financially and every way an inglorious failure. Many of the exhibitors refused to run their machinery or uncover their exhibits on the national rest day, and the receipts on that day were seldom half as much as on other days, besides alienating the best people.

Let the Chicago Exposition imitate, not the Frenchy Sunday of the New Orleans Fair, but the American Sabbath of the Philadelphia Centennial. To accomplish this, let organizations and individuals all over the land, especially prospective exhibitors, by petitions and letters, request the directors, the commissioners, the Legislature of Illinois—if necessary, the Congress of the United States also—to prevent the Fair from misrepresenting the American Sabbath.

MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

Thursday, September 27, has been set apart by the National officers, as a day to be devoted to securing new names for the society, not only of working members, but of honorary members. What is everybody's business is nobody's; what may be done on any day of the year is likely not to be thoroughly done at all. It is believed there will come to the women a sense of inspiration in the setting apart of one whole day which can be planned for beforehand; the village, town or city divided off among the existing members and well-wishers of the W. C. T. U., and a persistent effort made to increase the numbers of those who pledge themselves as total abstainers and members of the society, even if they cannot be active workers. No work could be entered upon for a day that would promise more of blessing to the individual life, to the home, and to the nation. Will not each white-ribboner, as she reads this paragraph, lift up her heart to God, asking a blessing on that day, and pledge herself to be, if possible, among those who shall bring in the sheaves throughout its hallowed and helpful hours? Miss Willard makes this an emphatic request, also that each state president will at once send out a special message to her local unions, urging the observance of this Membership Crusade Day.

The Watch-Tower.

Dr. Julia Plummer, of Boston, the new associate superintendent of that department in the National W. C. T. U., gives the social purity address at Martha's Vineyard in August.

***

A lovely young lady writes the following. Cannot others follow her example? "Nine years ago my only sister, Mary Lelia Olmstead, went to heaven. Had she lived, the world would have felt the touch of her pure, true life. I have thought that work for women would have appealed especially to her. Last June I knelt by the rosebush at her head and promised her and God that as long as I lived I would help some sacred cause 'as a memorial of her.' One dollar a year is not much, but it will help. Please use this ten to help the school for Hindu widows. She will know and be glad. When she went away, she was seventeen years old. Many things my heart might say of her; but as I am coming to realize the new ideals of womanhood, I think the highest and best I can give her is, to say she was a true woman, and not a stranger to heaven."

***

Mrs. President Polk, of Nashville, Tenn., will be eighty-seven years old the 3d of September. She is bright and cheerful, and earnestly interested in all the reform work of women, though herself a lady of the old school, and a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church.

***

The Woman's Temperance Publishing Association is rich in bright spirits, even if it is perhaps the worst foe in America of spirits material. Mr. Mather D. Kimball, superintendent of the printing department, is a graduate of the Northwestern University, and a poet of no mean order. His specialty is humoristic verse, and he is certainly a most musical fellow. Some of his verses have recently appeared in the Century. He is geniality itself, and merits the highest praise of the old Arab proverb that when it would say the best and the last word about a young man, writes him down as a "brother of girls."

***

John Henry Newman, author of that immortal hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," has left as his last words an utterance that in all the ages of Christian faith has not been excelled. About an hour before his death the Cardinal asked to see Father Neville, his private secretary, whose hand he grasped, while he smiled and murmured, "I hear the music of heaven; all is sunshine." Several priests and others at the bedside were moved to tears at the scene.

***

Miss Lois L. Smith writes from Ocean Grove: "I listened with a degree of interest to the explanation of the different methods here at the W. C. T. U. school, but nobody but Mary Lathrap relieved my soul. I would, if I could, call on all our W. C. T. U. Israel to go upon their knees before the Lord and pray for that which the fathers used to talk about, namely, an awakening power to fall as a deluge from heaven upon the people. So if nothing else is done at the great summer camps, may the W. C. T. U. furnish speakers with trumpets through which they can send this call abroad among the churches. Then we may look for the arm clear, fair and terrible."

***

Dean Wright has now 275 students among our white-ribboners, studying the Bible and New Testament Greek.

***

All forms of philanthropy have lost a friend in the death of Dr. Henry T. Child, of Philadelphia. He was a brave worker for constitutional amendment, and his body was laid to rest on the first anniversary of its sad defeat. But his spirit knew no defeat, and so long as life lasted he worked on unceasingly "For God and Home and Native Land," seeing in defeat only greater need for deeper consecration to the divine service. To be helpful to others was a ruling trait of his busy life, no opportunity of doing good to the weakest of God's creatures was allowed to pass unimproved. From a sense of religious duty he gave up the business of his early manhood to study medicine, that thus he might be more helpful to the suffering and unfortunate. An active member of the religious Society of Friends, he was a leader in all their beneficent enterprises; as a public speaker he was welcomed everywhere; especially was he useful in making clear to teachers and pupils the pathological effects of alcohol and tobacco. He was ever fearless and outspoken in advocacy of the right, and made it the great concern of his life to live up to the light given him. After seventy-four years of service he was promoted to dwell in the presence of his King. ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

WHY?

BY MARY LOWE DICKINSON.

You ask me why I love her,
How am I to know?
Ask the wild bees hovering over
Yon wind-drifted bank of clover,
Why they loiter so.

Ask the sunlight softly lying
On the water's breast,
Listening for the low replying
Of the wavelets at their sighing
Why it seeks this rest.

Tell the eager winds, pursuing
Fluttering leaves all day,
That the madness of their wooing
Speeds the leaves to their undoing—
Will the winds obey?

When the dark that wooes the starlight,
Moon that wooes the sea—
Wisdom of their own choice proving Breathe the secret of their loving,
Then come back to me!

—The Homeseeker.

WORDS TO GIRLS.

FRIENDSHIPS OF GIRLS.

If you write a letter to a man friend, don't put in black and white that you are "his forever," or that you send a great deal of love, even if it be only in jest, but remain either his "very cordially," or "very sincerely." Sincerity and cordiality are possible even with acquaintances that do not demand either love, or an affection that is to last forever. I wish girls knew how very ill bred it is to give, or permit familiarities in word or pen from either men or women. Learn to keep your personal affairs to yourself. Learn to believe that your first name can only be used by those connected with you by ties of blood, or having the right given by a deep love. Believe me, you will never regret your self-respect as shown in this way, and you will never cease lamenting permitting a too familiar intercourse, that in the future will rise up before you like a skeleton at a feast. A perfect friendship is like a rose; after the time of its glory is passed the leaves may be thrown into a jar, covered with spices and salt to bring out the fragrance forever, and be a delight to you wherever it is. A friendship that is too familiar may also be likened to a rose, but one that early loses its leaves; they fall upon the ground, and no one treasures them enough to gather them up and keep them as a memento of days that have gone by. For awhile there is a sickly sweet smell, and then they are blackened and discolored, and no odor comes from them. Conclude, then, in forming your friendships, to make those only that can, when time separates you two, make a pleasant memory for the future, and one that will not cause a blush to come upon your face.

FAMILIARITIES OF YOUNG GIRLS.

There is very little left to call the people you love if you lavish words of affection on every stranger whom you meet. If you call a young woman whom you have known just half an hour "Dear," and one whom you have known three days "Darling," there will be no tender, endearing term for you to address to those who have your whole heart. Girls who are not of necessity gushing, are often apt to speak in the most familiar manner. Good speech is certainly pure silver, but there are so many times when silence would outweigh it and be perfect gold. To tell of one's family affairs, to tell of one's joys and worries to some one who has a sympathetic manner and seems to invite it, is at once a weakness and a misfortune. To write a letter in which you use endearing terms, in which you discuss personal matters, is more than merely indiscreet—it is dangerous. Don't you think if you are a bit familiar in speech or with the pen to a man, that he is going to more than meet this half way? Don't you think if you call him by his first name he is very apt to call you by yours, and perhaps before people whom you do not care to have think lightly of you? If you permit him to speak of things not usually discussed, do not imagine for one moment he is going to regard the conversation as confidential. He will always tell it to somebody and you can then imagine how much further down in the esteem of two people you have gone. Don't permit any man to be familiar with you to the extent of calling you "Old Girl," or citing you as "One of the boys." You don't belong among the boys, and you shouldn't be counted there.—Ladies' Home Journal.

News from the Field.

MINNESOTA.

ETCHINGS.

The 27th of June was temperance day on old Red Rock camp-ground. It was a very hot day at the close of a hot week, but the attendance was as good as at any time during the week, particularly at the afternoon service, which was given entirely to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The state president, Mrs. Hobart, had charge of the meeting, and a number of loyal white-ribboners were with her upon the platform. Hon. John G. Woolley delivered an address calculated to show how unwise it is to consider the liquor question in any other light than as a national question, and the address was one of Mr. Woolley's most logical efforts. In the morning a gentleman tenting upon the ground was heard to exclaim, "Temperance day! well, that's all right, only why don't they give us something new? I'm sick of this 'vote as you pray' kind of talk, and all that. Why don't they give us something logical, if they can?" Mr. Woolley can, and did; and at least one man must have gone home with a few logical arguments for prohibition in his head.

The Minnesota W. C. T. U. is rejoicing in the advent of a state organ of its own, the Minnesota White Ribboner. In presenting its claims at the Hennepin county convention some time since, Mrs. Hobart distinctly said it would not be intended in any way to take the place of THE UNION SIGNAL in our homes, but to take its own place, and supply a medium of closer knowledge and communion between the state officers and superintendents of departments and the local workers; also between the different unions, that we may better share each other's sorrows and discouragements, as well as the joys and triumphs. Mrs. H E. Gallinger takes the editorial chair, which is assurance to all who know her that it is well occupied. Two numbers have been issued thus far, the second containing in full Miss Willard's address before the National Educational Association in St. Paul, which alone was worth many times the year's subscription price of the paper.

The ninth district, comprising the counties of Hennepin, Wright, Sherburne, Anoka and Isanti, held its annual convention July 29 and 30, in the pretty little town of Buffalo, county seat of Wright county. The convention opened Tuesday evening with a gold medal contest, the medal being awarded to Miss Minnie May, of Howard. Wednesday morning the first business session opened with Mrs. V. W. Voorhees, district president, in the chair, and was led in devotion by Mrs. F. Neal, of Minneapolis. The reports from the county presidents were very encouraging, showing increased interest in the work. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. V. W Voorhees; secretary, Mrs. F. V. Denton; treasurer, Mrs. M. E. Thompson. Mrs. Hobart, state president, was in attendance throughout, and gave her earnest help, conducting a parliamentary drill, which gave the delegates excellent opportunity to learn many points of usage. Our women appreciate these occasions for improvement. Mrs. Hobart also followed Mrs. Ames, of Rockford, who talked on Women in Evangelistic Work, by a few further remarks upon the same subject. "We ought all to be evangelists in our own homes and daily lives," she said. Let the women of the Minnesota W. C. T. U. keep before them this high ideal as presented by their state president, and we shall go on from victory to victory.

A mothers' meeting led by Mrs. Hobart was one of the many excellent things of the convention, and surely every mother present must have gone home wishing, as one was heard to say, that "we might have such mothers' meetings as that in our union." Miss Lottie Crawford, of Montrose, read an excellent paper, subject, "Fear Not." Miss Crawford is very young, but her paper evinced thought that would do credit to one much older. How thankful we are for these dear Y's. Two of the Y unions, the Anoka and the Pansy Y's of Minneapolis, gave most excellent reports. Organized only last May, they have large memberships, including honorary members not a few.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Howe, of Minneapolis, organizers of the Loyal Temperance Legion, presented their work, and Mrs. C. R. Newcomb read a short paper on "The Local Union; Its Mission and Management."

Wednesday evening was occupied by an address by Mrs. Hobart, on "True Standard Bearers." She spoke of how Christ had honored woman during His life on earth, and then, going back through the history of our own country, gave many illustrations to show that in all important reforms, in all movements for the bettering of humanity, women had been equally with their brothers the standard-bearers of the cause. And wherever they had failed to be such, the cause had failed, and to the extent that they had been denied the privilege of so standing, the cause of humanity had suffered to just that extent.

The place of the next annual convention was left to the decision of the officers. The time was changed by vote to the first week in June, thus avoiding the heat of midsummer.

AMY A. GREEN,
State Sup't Press Work.

A GOOD CONVENTION.

The third annual convention of district No. 2 met at Austin on the 22d and 23d of July, under the care of the district president, Miss Ella J. Cook. After the preliminaries, on the first afternoon, the following papers were read; "Everyday Work," Miss Ida Wing; "Tobacco and Narcotics," Mrs. C. J. Short; "Social Purity," Mrs. Ingalls; "Training Our Future Heroes," Miss Shelden; "Unrest," Mrs. W. M. Roberts. Each of these papers evinced a burning love for the weal of humanity.

In the evening, after the welcome by Mrs. Davidson and response by Mrs. Julia Mitchell, Mrs. Hobart, state president, addressed the convention on "The Great Issue," in which she reminded us how the rum politician toyed with the poor Congressmen.

The roll-call on Wednesday morning was answered in passages of Scripture by the sixty-nine delegates. Mrs. Bosworth's paper on "Franchise" and Mrs. Dr. Garver's on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," were listened to with interest. A parliamentary drill, including a lively discussion on suffrage, conducted by Mrs. Hobart, brought the morning session up to the noontide "hour of prayer." Miss Cook and her secretary, Mrs. Day, were reëlected; Mrs. Ingalls of Dodge Center was made treasurer.

The afternoon session included two papers, one by Mrs. C. H. Davidson, on "Woman's Work," another by Mrs. E. B. Crane on "Juvenile Work," and a talk from Mrs. Hobart about the Temperance Temple and our White Ribboner; for the latter she betrayed great affection, calling upon all to cherish it tenderly and contribute to its growth and strength.

The convention closed with a gold medal contest, in which six girls and two boys did themselves and their trainers credit; especially the little girl of seven years, who rendered the "Rumseller's Legal Rights" in a way that captured the audience. But the medal was awarded to a lad who feels the sting of the curse of strong drink in his own home, and every sentence was spoken with thrilling earnestness. The contest exercises were interspersed with fine music, rendered by the singers of Austin.

MRS. MYRA H. AVERY.

THREE GOOD LECTURERS IN WABASHA.

Since last October three leading workers of the National union have addressed large audiences in this town.

Dr. Kate Bushnell was the first to "storm the town." Those who have listened to her when exposing the social evil, and have felt the influence of her fiery vehemence when denouncing the infamous laws made to protect the destroyer and deprive the victim of all hope of justice, or have been stirred by her womanly pathos as she pleads for justice, mercy and righteousness, need no help from my pen to convince them of the prophetic power and apostolic ardor of this noble woman. She has trod the wine-press of woe, and her Wisconsin experiences have swept her soul with tempests of indignation and grief. What she has felt and seen of the "desolation of this death," she makes her listeners feel. One could not help thinking of those "who clothed in white stand before the great white throne and cry day and night, 'O Lord, how long?'" If Dr. Bushnell could speak in every town and hamlet throughout our country, the harvest of holiness following her sowing would mightily help the coming of that day "when nothing shall hurt nor destroy in all the holy mountain" of God. She could not do more needful nor diviner work.

Our next surprise was Miss Estey, Y organizer for Minnesota. She came like a breeze from Beulah land. Her happy face and enthusiastic manner captivated her audience at sight. The occasion of her coming was the assembling of the county convention for organization. Miss Estey is singularly adapted for the departmental work assigned her. Vivacious, witty, logical, theme well in hand, rapid speech, but wonderfully distinct articulation, clear, ringing voice, and clear as crystal in the presenting of her ideas, she stands well at the front as a platform speaker. Audiences will always increase at her second appearance. In business meetings she evinces the skill of the trained worker. One wonders which to admire most, her wit, wisdom, or executive ability. The Non-Partisan movement can be left with her. She is no mean foe to meet in debate. I am sure no one would have dared to have entered the lists and risked a tilt against her on either of the occasions we had the pleasure of listening to her defense of the right of women in politics.

We did not think it possible to have another surprise unless Miss Willard or Mrs. Lathrap gave us a call. But when we sat that June Sunday evening listening to the cultured, spiritual Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, we yielded our hearts to the spell of her Christian eloquence, and thanked God with increasing gratitude for the women workers who lead the W. C. T. U.

No ordinary character could have so presented the claims of the Prince of Peace; so stated and defended the peaceful principles of Christian faith, nor have shown so conclusively the right relations of humanity to these principles. It made us think of the people's comment on a speaker, who long ago took common truths, put them in their rightful position on human character and life, to the wonderment of the hearers, who exclaimed, "He speaketh with authority and not as the scribes," etc.

Her address widened the conception of the hearer to the magnitude of the work of the W. C. T. U. It was a revelation to most to learn how far-reaching and extensive is the influence of this organization. In this monument one beholds the fulfillment of the vision of the "Holy Waters." Wherever these women go they cause the desert to blossom as the rose.

Permit me to notice a rare grace in these devoted women. They are the same off the platform as when before their audiences. They are not professionals when work is over pro tem, when the hour of address expires. They are women of consecrated life. Their work is their life and their life is their work. You feel this when meeting them in private. I had the honor of so meeting them and make this note with glad emphasis.

These hasty sketches are not to be read as comparisons. That would be unjust and unkind. These women are not to be compared. They are not imitators, dancing to the same professional trumpet to outdo each other. They are not that kind of material. Each maintains with delightful unconsciousness her peculiar individuality. Each seemed adapted to her theme and work. So the rare gifts and rich graces of culture and holy character shone resplendent.

H. W. KNOWLES.

MICHIGAN.

OTTAWA COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held in Red Ribbon Hall, Spring Lake, June 26 and 27. The hall was beautifully decorated with plants and cut flowers. Though not as large as some previous conventions, there was no lack of zeal, and the president, Miss L. J. Newcomb, had the program carried out in full. The beautiful address of welcome was by Miss Maggie Bilz, and the response by Miss Lillie Blakeney. The reports of vice-presidents showed that each union had ac-compliished something, and in some cases a great deal. Mrs. A. F. Benjamin made a few remarks upon the Temperance Temple, and an offering of $8.76 was the result.

Work among Hollanders, and the need of more work in this county among them was very plainly shown by Mrs. Van Olinda, National superintendent. The needs of this county were decided to be: More prayer, more knowledge and more money. So they resolved to pray without ceasing, to take more temperance newspapers, and employ leaders in institute work. Also to make greater efforts to raise money.

As is the custom of all temperance conventions, each session was opened by devotional exercises. Some beautiful songs were rendered by Miss Lillie Blakeney and Miss Bertha Cornelius. Addresses were given by the district and county presidents.

The social event of the convention was a reception at the home of Miss Newcomb, to which all were cordially invited. Ice cream and cake were served. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: President, Mrs. Rork; secretary, Mrs. Comstock; treasurer, Mrs. Cook. The convention closed with renewed loyalty and a determination to accomplish more the coming year.

MRS. GEO. C. STEWART.

BENTON HARBOR NOTES.

We have several items which we trust have more than a local interest. We are glad and grateful for some valuable accessions to our little band of patient workers. Our new president, Mrs. Sarah Weld Hamilton, has come to us with all the zest and enthusiasm of a first love. She has only recently become familiar with the real scope of this Christian temperance work, but being a reformer by birth and education, she seems like one to the manor born. Her parents, Theodore Weld and Angelina Grimke Weld, were old-time friends of Whittier, Phillips and Garrison, in the great anti-slavery agitation. Both were distinguished for eloquence on the platform, and great fortitude in the endurance of persecution, the result of unflinching adherence to principle.

We have been much favored by the presence of Miss Margaret Wintringer, of Austin, one of Chicago's pleasant suburbs. Coming to us for a summer rest, she has given us the beautiful example of sowing beside all waters. Her efficient efforts and inspiring addresses have greatly aided in the organization of a Young Woman's union, also of a Loyal Temperance Legion of twenty members, in connection with a mission school superintended by Mrs. Bisbee.

Our union gospel temperance meetings are held monthly, and promise deepening interest and power.

Much local interest has been created by a new departure in our educational work. At a recent annual school-meeting nearly one hundred women were present, and as a reporter said, "It was apparent from the first that they had come to assert their rights." Their cause was nobly championed by some of their male friends, Rev. Mr. Lester making an eloquent plea for woman's place on the school-board. Two of their number were elected by a very large majority. So our little world, with the great one outside, goes marching on.

N. S. BLISS, Cor. Sec.

IOWA.

DES MOINES ITEMS.

The Temple W. C. T. U. sends greeting. We have now eighty-two members, a Baby Band of fifty-seven and also a Veteran's Band of nine members. Miss L. Wirick, one of our members, sailed July 30 for Akita, Japan. She goes as a missionary from the friends and students of Drake University. At a farewell social the union presented her with a beautiful album quilt and ten dollars' worth of temperance books and literature. We sent five dollars to the Nebraska fund and five dollars to THE UNION SIGNAL. We were blessed by the presence of Miss Willard with one of her excellent lectures, which was delivered to a packed house. Miss Gordon and Mrs. Bullock, also Mrs. Anna Palmer, Clara Stephens and Addie Estey, all prominent workers, inspired and helped us, together with our beloved Mrs. McGonegal and Mrs. Belanger. We are in no danger of forgetting the Temple, THE UNION SIGNAL, or anything pertaining to W. C. T. U. work.

ELLA DUNGAN, Cor. Sec.

PENNSYLVANIA.

ENCAMPMENT AT VALLEY FORGE.

A ten days' outing on the hills of Valley Forge, meetings, addresses, meals in picnic style, and a general enthusiastic rally for the cause, is the latest method employed for the furtherance of the work in Chester county. A long avenue of tents extends from a pavilion erected on the western ridge of the great hill where Washington's army put in the terrible winter of '77 and '78. Between two formidable promontories flows Valley Creek, skirted by a roadway leading through the little village to the railroad. Far up the eastern hill upon which our tents are pitched are the earthworks or "fort" of the colonial army, and below us to the north, stands the dear old house where the "Father of his Country" lived through that bitter winter. The Schuylkill river flows past the house in sinuous curves through green, fertile meadows, and the sweetest airs fan the hills.

On July 31, the Quarterly Convention was held in the pavilion. Trains brought crowds of white-ribboners from Philadelphia, and all points along the line, and carriages and vehicles were driven from Norristown, West Chester, Phœnixville, with loads of visitors and campers. A large representation of the unions throughout the county wsa present. The usual program was carried out, and an able address given by Mrs. Frances E. W. Harper, of Philadelphia. Miss Harper recited with much dramatic effect, "College Oil Cans." Dr. Caroline Dodson, of Philadelphia, conducted a School of Methods in hygiene and heredity, strengthening her points by a sort of object lesson from a bunch of grasses and wild blossoms which she held in her hand. Questions were asked and answered, and the exercise was greatly enjoyed. Master Willie Cudliff, of West Chester, recited pleasingly, "The New Fashioned Man." Mrs. Ella M. Gordon, and Mrs. Esther Cook were appointed as delegates to the National Convention at Atlanta, Ga., and committees selected to arrange the grouping of the unions for representation at the state convention at Scranton. An inviting program is arranged for each of the ten days, and prominent speakers will address the meetings at each of the several sessions. A School of Methods, conducted by state workers, will also be held every morning. Among those who are to be present are Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, Mrs. Julia R. Tomkinson, Miss H. Frances Jones, Aaron M. Powell, Mrs. Mary T. Burt, Rev. G. W. North, Rev. Wm. E. Powick, Jos. S. Walton, Mr. Edward Carswell, of Canada, and Rev. Dr. English, a warm personal friend of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, who is expected to address the meeting. Such is the "feast of tabernacles" on this historic hill—prayers and hymns, and woman's pleading voice upraised in behalf of a rum-cursed land. The newspapers report the proceedings daily, and as the bands of gentle faces file through the gateways to out-going and in-coming trains, and up the pathways to the W. C. T. U. encampment, the word goes forth that "A prophet is come"—"the voice of one crying in the wilderness;" and so amid the icy blasts of amendment defeats, and the bloody footprints of "original package" decisions, we are forcing the way forward to our Monmouth and our Yorkton.

LAURA E. JOHNSON.

TEXAS.

ONE WORKER'S EXPERIENCE.

I recently visited the W. C. T. U. of Paris. Mrs. A. P. Boyd has given the white ribbon over to Mrs. Dixon, the Dallas president. Mrs. Rosa Johnson is full of the work still. I visited Blossom, ten miles from Paris, and found no union, not even the grave of one, but saw a beautiful satin banner and much of the old fire in the hearts of the people. Blossom is hopeful and has a good excuse. Indeed, I believe that village can do what few localities can, viz: take their little excuses to Jesus and say, "I had to quit work because of these." The W. C. T. U. at Blossom without much ceremony resolved itself into a practical juvenile working society. The little village is alive with the prettiest babies you ever saw. I asked our former president, who has a little blue-eyed darling a few months old, to give me a dime and her baby's name for the Temple, and she started to do it, when she said, "No, I won't; I will go all over town and get a dime from each mother and send it myself," so look out for a few dimes from Blossom.

Our union at Dallas is starting out afresh. We have new officers, and are trying to secure $100 a month in pledges of one dollar from each person, to rent a W. C. T. U. hall where we can hold all our meetings; about twenty-five dollars had been pledged before I left, June 3. We are to give a hundred dollars to the Temple in Chicago this year. Hospital work, work among poor people, work along the line of unfermented wine, and perhaps in other ways, are all going along slowly, but I trust, surely. Miss Mary Hetherington has charge of the only working Loyal Temperance Legion in town. She is state superintendent of Loyal Temperance Legion, but is now in the North. While I was in Paris I was appointed local superintendent of Loyal Temperance Legion work, and as it is directly to my taste and the only thing I am fit for, I hope to see good results. My pastor, Rev. S. C. Hay, is in sympathy with us and seconds my efforts to do good in every direction. I find THE UNION SIGNAL in the homes all over the country, and what it is doing to bring our people to Christ, God alone can tell.

FANNY L. ARMSTRONG.

TENNESSEE.

MARCHING ON.

Our union is wide-awake and active, subscribing for about twenty UNION SIGNALS. We hold our regular weekly meetings right along through the dog days, and the monthly mothers' meetings are very well attended and much enjoyed.

The Prohibitionists have a full ticket in the field for both state and county offices, and unusual interest is manifested in the coming election. The Rev. Dr. D. C. Kelley, of the M. E. Church South, is our candidate for governor, and the political press is dreadfully shocked at the spectacle of a minister running for office. No opportunity is allowed to pass for casting reproach upon him, but the brave man, having resigned his pastorate, accepts the trust thrust upon him by five hundred of the best citizens of our state, in convention, and moves grandly onward, if not to victory, at any rate in the discharge of a duty he feels he owes his God, his country, and humanity, in the fight against the saloon.

It was the privilege of quite a number of our union to attend the grand prohibition rally and barbecue at Goodlettsville, on July 4th, where eloquent and patriotic speeches were the order of the day. Mr. Joseph Wheeless, Jr., son of one of our loyal white-ribboners, opened the exercises of the day with a fine oration, which was well received. Dr. Kelley, with his usual earnestness, animation and magnetism, set forth prohibition doctrine with great power, and was closely followed by a large and attentive audience. In the afternoon, Judge E. H. East, one of the foremost lawyers of the state, made a speech which carried conviction to the soul of many a voter. Always calm, dispassionate, logical and convincing, he surpassed himself, on that occasion, and presented an array of facts concerning the liquor traffic, which was simply incontrovertible. If it were not for the agitation of the Force Bill, the Prohibitionists would poll an astonishing vote in both county and state elections; but this is causing intense indignation, and many, who would otherwise have voted the straight Prohibition ticket, are constrained to cling to the old party through this campaign.

Our union is showing much interest in the progress of the Temperance Temple, and we have voted to pledge ourselves for one hundred dollars to aid in its erection. We believe we are moving forward in all our departments of work, and aided by the weekly visits of our beloved UNION SIGNAL and the monthly letters, both helpful and inspiring, of our noble state president, Mrs. Merriwether, we hope to accomplish greater things in the days to come.

MARY P. BANG.

KENTUCKY.

FLOWER MISSION DAY IN THE STATE PENITENTIARY.

Prison day was observed here on the seventh of June, and it was the most successful since the beginning of the work eight years ago. It is growing, and each year greater interest is manifested, not only by the inmates, but by persons who heretofore have given the matter no thought. The supply of flowers was never so abundant; delegations from Louisville, Lexington, Georgetown, Eminence and Midway were present, besides many visitors. Services were held in the woman's department at eleven o'clock, after which each one was given a bunch of flowers and a card. The negro women all wanted red. At twelve we assembled in the chapel, which was soon filled by the men until there was standing room only. The exercises were begun with the song "Jesus is Calling for Me." Mrs. Munnell read the Scripture texts and gave the origin and purpose of flower mission work; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" was sung with great effect; Miss Mary Graham delivered a short but telling address; Mrs. Clayton made a most touching and appropriate prayer which brought tears to eyes that are not much given to tears, strong men sobbing aloud. After the prayer came the distribution of flowers, cards, and literature, all of which were duly appreciated, and many of them will be carefully put away for safe keeping as mementoes of the occasion.

In the afternoon the county jail was visited; it contained twenty-four prisoners, all moonshiners but one. They seemed much surprised to have such visitors, but when our mission was explained to them, they were much more surprised to find any one who looked upon them as human creatures needing kindness and sympathy; when prayer was offered every one knelt. It was truly a strange sight to see those rough looking men (there was one woman) kneeling on the floor in the jail while Mrs. Clayton offered up another of her soul stirring prayers in their behalf. After each one had been supplied with a bouquet and card we bade them good-bye, all feeling that if no greater good had heen accomplished than taking a gleam of sunshine into some sorrowful heart, it was enough.

MARY HYDE.

CONNECTICUT.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

At the invitation of Portland union the ninth convention of the Middlesex W. C. T. U. convened in that town, July 9.

At 9:30 Miss Mary F. Burton, of Middletown, led a devotional service; subject, "The Outpouring of the Holy Spirit." This was one of the most helpful exercises of the day, and was enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. H. B. Brown, county president, took the chair at ten o'clock, and called the convention to order. The address of welcome by Miss H. E. Culver, of Portland, was hearty and to the purpose. Miss E. A. Whitmore, of Middle Haddam, responded with equal grace, and all united in singing "Blest be the tie that binds." Miss Smith, secretary, and Miss Whitmore, treasurer, gave their reports. Mrs. Forbes, state president, was introduced and gave many hints and suggestions in regard to the work. The county union now has auxiliary to it fifteen unions, two Y's and eleven Loyal Temperance Legions. There is still room for additions to all three of these organizations. Mrs. Forbes led at the noontide hour of prayer, and the convention adjourned at 12:30.

The afternoon session was preceded by a Bible reading, given by Mrs. E. A. Chapman, of Meriden, upon "Victory." This was one of the best features of the meeting, and was greatly appreciated by her hearers. The session was formally called to order at two p. m., and after the transaction of some business the time was given to the Legioners. The representatives of the Legions marched in singing, "Onward we are Marching," bearing the banners of the companies, and filled the front seats of the audience room. Reports from the Legions were given, and then followed a psycho-physical culture talk by Miss Linda L. Kimball, of Ellington, who illustrated her discourse by means of charts, and closed with a recitation which delighted the little ones.

Some fine recitations were then given by the Legioners, with songs and readings, and an address by Mrs. C. H. Fitz-Gerald, state superintendent of juvenile work, who talked to the children and at the same time interested and instructed some not so young.

At eight o'clock the evening session commenced, and after a short Scripture reading by Mrs. Forbes, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Presby, Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, National superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, was introduced, and gave an admirable address. Connecticut is proud to claim Mrs. Hunt as one of its daughters, and to have the honor of having been her early home. After a collection the service was closed, and thus ended the ninth convention of Middlesex county W. C. T. U. An invitation to meet with the Middlefield union for the next convention was accepted.

NOTES.

Portland has three Loyal Temperance Legions, an active union and a very energetic worker in Miss Culver, who is our state superintendent of scientific temperance instruction.

Stepney held its seventh medal contest June 25; the class was composed of six young ladies, and the medal was awarded to Miss Etta J. Hull. A class of young men is nearly ready to hold the eighth contest.

Company D of the Loyal Temperance Legion held their fifth annual meeting, June 28. Several prizes had been offered for attendance. The first was awarded to a boy of thirteen who had been present at every meeting.

Rockfall Legion, Company Q, held its first annual meeting July 5 with a good attendance of members and visitors. The Legion is quite enthusiastic and does flower mission and literature work. It unites with the Sunday-school in holding gospel temperance meetings, and often the young leaders have presided alone at these meetings. The weekly meetings of the Legion are carried on in an orderly manner and reflect credit on the members.

M. BELLE SMITH,
Union Signal Reporter.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

THE district and county W. C. T. U. convention for Cuyahoga county, O., will be held in Bedford, September 2 and 3, opening on the evening of the 2d with a silver medal contest, and closing the next evening with a gold medal contest. A fine program has been prepared and Mrs. H. L. Monroe, president of Ohio W. C. T. U., will attend and add to the interest of the meeting. All unions in the county are requested to send delegates.

THE West Side W. C. T. U. of Chicago have established a free dispensary for the sick at 704 West Lake street, with Dr. A. V. Hutchins in charge. Kind and considerate treatment will be given; medicines will be furnished to all without cost. For the present it will be open for patients from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

CALEDONIA county, Vt., the early home of the father and mother of the National president, has the honor of being the first county in Vermont to add the department of franchise to county work. It is now six years since the department was first added, and during that time (with the exception of two years, when disloyal influences gained the ascendency) the work has been steadily advancing in the county. At the last annual meeting, by unanimous vote of committee on resolution, and without a dissenting voice in the convention, the following resolution was passed:

WHEREAS, The experience in Kansas has demonstrated the fact that municipal suffrage is the mightiest weapon which has yet been hurled against the liquor traffic; therefore

Resolved, That we will earnestly work to secure that weapon in Vermont.

AN urgent request for temperance and White Cross literature comes from Miss Harriet N. Morris, of Alton, Ill., for the farming districts of the Adirondacks. Direct all such to W. C. T. U. Day, Summer School, care of Mrs. Milton Pease, North Hudson, Essex county, N. Y.

MISS WOODFINN, daughter of the late Judge Woodfinn, of Asheville, N. C., is a remarkable woman. Like dear Jennie Casseday, she has been confined to her room for twenty years and more, but is a most devoted Christian, the world invisible having dawned upon her more clearly as this world receded; and yet she dwells in this in a most beneficent way. She is superintendent of the flower mission for the state of North Carolina; and when her report was read recently in the convention, the women accepted it by a rising vote of thanks, and ordered special recognition through a letter to be sent and a committee to call on Miss Woodfinn and express the appreciation of the earnest and devoted sisters whom she will never see.

REV. LEWIS MCKENDREE PEASE and his admirable wife, who is his peer in all things, and most generously so regarded by himself, are remarkable characters. He was the Stanley of the Five Points, New York City, when to invade that jungle of abomination was as great a terror as to face the Congo mystery. It was owing to his great head and brotherly heart that the whole atmosphere of the Five Points was purified. The true women who stood with him for this success have reason to rejoice in his great enterprise at Asheville, N. C., where he has established an industrial school for the poorer class of white girls. Though now advanced in years, he seems as blithe and business-like as a young man, and the success of this great school, constantly adding building to building, will be his truest monument.

MRS. M. M. ALLEN, superintendent of non-alcoholics in medicine for the state of New York, recently spoke twice in Owen Sound, Ontario, first on "Beer, what it is and what it does," and again upon "Alcohol and the Body." The Advertiser said of her addresses, "She fully sustained the reputation she has won of being a high-class speaker." She spoke also at the W. C. T. U. Grey county convention at Meaford, on the evening of July 8, upon "The W. C. T. U. and its Work." This address was full of instruction and encouragement.

MRS. S. B. FORBES, president of Connecticut W. C. T. U. has changed her address from 246 to 152 Wethersfield Avenue, Hartford, Conn.

THE annual convention of the fourth district of Nebraska will meet with the Fremont union Aug. 27, 28 and 29. Mrs. Clara Hoffman will deliver an address on Friday evening, Aug. 29. Rev. Frances E. Townsley, state evangelist, will lead the devotional meetings throughout the convention.

THE First Congressional District, Illinois, comprising the southern part of Chicago, made the best record in prohibition votes of any district in the state when Rev. Harry Taylor was its nominee for Congress. It proposes to beat its own record this year, and that it may do so desires every Prohibitionist in the district to attend the caucus, at Axford Hall, corner of Cottage Grove Avenue and Forty-fifth street, Chicago, Tuesday evening, August 28, at eight o'clock to nominate the best man in the district for congressman.

REV. F. E. MOYER is a new and bright light on the temperance platform. By invitation, he occupied the pulpit of the Oakland Boulevard M. E. Church, Chicago, last Sabbath morning, giving an illustrated lecture on the effects of alcohol and tobacco. So much interest was aroused by his method of presenting the subject that the pastor invited him to preach in the evening.

A NOTE from Mrs. F. C. Hathaway, of Normal, Ill., reports the disaster that has overtaken the union there, in the loss by fire of their library of over six hundred volumes, the organ, books and badges for the Loyal Temperance Legion, and a valuable set of Yaggy's charts, which had been borrowed from the public school for the instruction of the children. A fine Legion was organized not long ago, and the union was never in such good condition as just before this loss occurred, in which all the friends will heartily sympathize. The children are very courageous, and are meeting in a tent at present.

Official Communications.

A MESSAGE TO SUPERINTENDENTS AND PRISON WORKERS.

"NOT WILLING THAT ANY SHOULD PERISH."

The time of reporting is upon us again, and the interest of the National report depends largely upon state reports, and they in turn upon county or local reports. Faithfulness in these lines will both glorify God and prove an inspiration to others. It is a time when promptness counts, and when to be "behind-hand" means necessarily to be "left out." It will not do to say, "if the work is done no matter about the reporting," for whoever accepts the office of superintendent assumes the duties of that office, and one of them has been clearly defined, "to report the work done."

This has been a blessed year of service; let us gather up the sheaves and lay them at the dear Master's feet with our thanksgiving.

Through the courtesy of Rev. F. H. Wines, secretary of the National Prison Association, our workers, and especially the state superintendents, have a cordial invitation to attend the session of the Prison Congress, to be held in Cincinnati, September 25 to October 1. I wish that many might avail themselves of this opportunity of studying the methods and plans of prison reform. We should not only be enabled to work more intelligently, but should thus gain the coöperation of those who could frequently open the way for us to do better service.

Let us also pray that God's spirit may rest upon and pervade that assembly, and that the influence may be felt in every prison in our land.

MRS. J. K. BARNEY, Nat. Supt.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

REPORT OF FUNDS TO FOREIGN WORK IN NEBRASKA.

Previously reported, $110.25; W. C. T. U., Adams, Mass., $1.50; West Philadelphia White-Ribboner, $2; W. C. T. U., Raymore, Mo., $1; W. C. T. U., Harrisonville, Mo., $2; Miss J. W. Wylie, Philadelphia, $1; Miss Grace Starring, Silvercreek, N. J., 64 cts; W. C. T. U., Lecompton, Kansas, $1; Minneapolis unions, $5; Yates Centre W. C. T. U. (Kan.) $1; W. C. T. U., Carthage, Mo., $1; Y. W. C. T. U., Fall River, Mass., $5; White-Ribboner, New Hampshire, $1; W. C. T. U., Sylvania, Mo., $1; Miss Dornblaser, Pennsylvania, $2; W. C. T. U., Plymouth, Conn., $1; Lawrence, Kan., $23.96; Alex. Newton, Rodney, Miss., $2; W. C. T. U., Bethany, Mo., 55 cts.; Miss Sturgis (for sleeve-buttons), Mansfield, Ohio, $10; W. C. T. U., Pennsylvania, $20; W. C. T. U., Altamont, N. Y., $1; Mrs. Means, Oxford, Md., Band of Hope, $5; W. C. T. U., Lebanon, Mo., $1; W. C. T. U., Trumbull county, Ohio, $2; Mrs. Crossan, Bethany, Mo., $1; W. C. T. U., Andover, N. Y., $5; W. C. T. U., Janesport, Mo., $1; W. C. T. U., Butler, Mo., 70 cts; W. C. T. U., Pomona, Cal., $1.75; W. C. T. U., San Barnardino, Cal., $2; W. C. T. U , Lincoln, Kan., $2.60; Willard W. C. T. U., Kansas City, Mo., $1; Mrs. Vegelius, New York W. C. T. U., $10; Prudence K. Sniton, Colorado Springs, $2; Anne Hethrington, Texas, $1; W. C. T. U., Idana, Kan., $1; Friend in Ohio, $50; W. C. T. U., Colton, Cal., $1; W. C. T. U., New London, Conn., $5; Tabor W. C. T. U., Charity, Kan., $1. Total, $287.95.

S. F. GRUBB, Nat. Supt.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Arkansas—Little Rock: Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Clover Bend: Loyal Temperance Legion, $5.

Arizona—Tempe: Loyal Temperance Legion, $10; Baby Band, $1.50.

California—Vacaville: Mrs. C. A. Hutton, $5; Washington Colony: Y. W. C. T. U., $5; Linden: W. C. T. U., $1; Los Gatos: Mrs. D. C. Crummry, $3.65; Healdsburg: Mrs. Peck, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Sylvester, $1 each; Geyserville: Mrs. A. P. Sylvester, $1; Arcata: Mrs. E. H. Lord, $4.98.

Colorado—Denver: Mrs. T. T. Perry, $5; Florence: W. C. T. U., $4.50.

Connecticut—Abington: Mrs. Wm. Ingalls, $1; Greenwich: Loyal Temperance Legion, $7.08; New Haven: W. C. T. U., $30.

Delaware—Harrington: Mrs. A. E. Harrington, $5.

Illinois—Cissna Park: Mrs. A. B. Colvin, 50 cts; Oakdale: W. C. T. U. and Band of Hope, $40.26; Grant Park: W. C. T. U., $9.81; Chana: W. C. T. U., $1; Prospect Park: W. C. T. U., $7; Griggsville: Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.20; Graymont: W. C. T. U., $1; Evanston: W. C. T. U., $4.63; Mrs. Lucy Vane, $5; Chicago: Central W. C. T. U., $4; Miss West, $1; Mrs. Nancy J. Hart, $50; Marissa: W. C. T. U., $14.45; Dover: Mrs. Nellie C. Robertson, $1.27; W. C. T. U., $20; Danville: W. C. T. U., $23.07; Table Grove: Loyal Temperance Legion, $5; Trivoli: H. F. Thompson, $3.65; Port Byron: W. C. T. U., Baby Band and Cherub Band, $25.70; Bloomington: Mrs. G. H. Read, $5; Onarga: Mrs. B. F. Egley, Mrs. W. C. Pierson, Mrs. W. B. Koon, Mrs. E. L. Evans, Mrs. M. R. Howard, Mrs. T. M. Pangborn, Mrs. S. F. Marston, Mrs. C. E. Pickett, Mrs. J. E. Wilcox, Mrs. D. C. Brown, Mrs. McClish, Mrs. Ellison, Mrs. J. B. Johnson, Mrs. R. Nickerson, Mrs. A. David, Mrs. L. R. Weeden, Mrs. H. M. West, Mrs. A. N. Gable, Mrs. S. A. Miller, Mrs. N. W. Thomas, Mrs. J. N. Veatch, Mr. G. B. Winter, Mr. F. Graves, Sammy Weeden, $1 each; Mr. Joseph Shaw, $5; others, $10; Gilman: Mrs. A. A. Harris, H. Kaerner, H. Houghton, Mrs. A. DeLong, $1 each; Mrs. I. Bailey, $2; Children's mite-boxes, $1.42; Baby Band, $2; others, $4.08; Ottawa: Mrs. C. E. Hills, Mrs. E. N. Myers, Mrs. D. N. Roberts, Mrs. Susan Roberts, Mrs. H. M. Anthony, Mrs. J. N. Moore, Mrs. J. E. Scott, Mrs. P. C. Weaver, Mrs. J. B. Baumgardner, Mrs. W. Day, Mrs. M. A. Hovey, Mrs. L. B. Merrifield, Mrs. J. Crotty, Mrs. W. J. Neeley, Frank Wallace, Emma Johnson, Mrs. O. Merrifield, $1 each; Mrs. Hugh Caldwell, $2; per Mrs. Hills, $1; others, $6; Irving Park: Mrs. Maria C. Madison, $100; Swan Creek: W. C. T. U., $10; Oak Park: Mrs. T. B. White, $3.66; Elburn: W. C. T. U., $6.17; Galesburg: Mrs. L. H. Losey, $1; Homer: W. C. T. U., $1; Clinton: Mrs. Mary McGill, $3; Pinckneyville: W. C. T. U., $5.77; Atlanta: W. C. T. U., $15; Elgin: W. C. T. U., $22; Tampico: W. C. T. U., $5; West Point: Mrs. H. Brady, 25 cts.; Chester: W. C. T. U., $1; New Douglas: W. C. T. U., $6.04: Prairie City: Mary Vose, $5; Hamilton: Stella D. Grigg, $4; Pittsfield: W. C. T. U., $24; Moline: Baby Band, $5; Danville: W. C. T. U., $13; Cookville: Mrs. C. A. Selden, $5.

Indiana—Fowler: Loyal Temperance Legion, $1; Monrovia: Loyal Temperance Legion, 70 cents; Centreville: Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.30; Fountain City: Loyal Temperance Legion, 95 cents; Angola: W. C. T. U., $25; Covington: Hannah Jane Coffeen, $1.75; Harlan: W. C. T. U., $5; Huntington: Mrs. C. R. McIlvaine, $1.

Iowa—Burlington: Mrs. Nancy Hilleary, $50; Wyman: per Tillie Cowie, $8.60; Iowa Falls: Rachel Marriage, $1; Cedar Rapids: Willard W. C. T. U., $1; Denison: S. J. Plimpton, $5; College Springs: Mrs. Phebe Henderson, $1.50; Ida Grove: Mrs. O. C. Thompson, $1; Algona: Mrs. C. A. Ingham, $5.

Indian Territory—Muscogee: Mrs. Laura Harsha, $3.36.

Kansas—N. Topeka: Mrs. Julia Welch, $1; Girard: W. C. T. U., $10; Idana: C. E. Henry, 25 cents.

Kentucky—Covington: Mrs. S. A. Weakley, $5; Carrollton: W. C. T. U., $19.12.

Maine—Peak's Island: W. C. T. U., $4; Fort Fairfield: W. C. T. U., $50; Hallowell; Miss Sylvina Smith, $3.65.

Maryland—Jefferson: W. C. T. U., $5.

Massachusetts—Adams: W. C. T. U., $12.21; Cambridge: C. V. Woodman, $100; Lee: Mrs. Juliet Shannon, $50; per Ella Sabin, $1; Boston: Miss R. C. Percival, 50 cents; Abington: Rev. Ada Bowles, $25; Neponset: W. C. T. U., $5; Amesbury: Baby Band, $5; N. Abington: W. C. T. U., $2; Malden: Mrs. C. F. Rand, $2; N. Easton: W. C. T. U., $3; Raynham: Loyal Temperance Legion, $2; Westminster: W. C. T. U., $12.

Michigan—Big Rapids: W. C. T. U., $1; Grand Rapids: Mrs. S. A. B. Carrin, $1; Clio: W. C. T. U., $3.

Minnesota—Elmore: W. C. T. U., $2; E. Castle Rock: E. May Van Vliet, $1; Verona: Loyal Temperance Legion, $5; Mankato: C. A. Hawley, $10; Minneapolis: Central W. C. T. U., $1.35; Winnebago City: Baby Band, $2.40; Madelia: W. C. T. U., $2.75; Lake City: Baby Band, $10; Morris: W. C. T. U., 50 cents; Alma: W. C. T. U., $3.

Missouri—Edina: W. C. T. U., $6.70; Memphis: Ruth Kays, $3.36; Kingsville, W. C. T. U., $1; Hannibal: Mrs. Frank Lee, $3.75; Palmyra: Mrs. S. J. Lundy, $6.35; Hamilton: Mrs. Jas. Houghton, $3.

Nebraska—Alliance: Anna McIntire, 25 cents; Inman: W. C. T. U. and Baby Band, $9.43; Kenesaw: W. C. T. U., $6.

New Jersey—Paterson: W. C. T. U., $6.50; Westfield: Loyal Temperance Legion, $12; East Orange: Mrs. S. A. McClees, $2.

New Hampshire—Derry Depot: Mrs. L. E. Graves, $1.55; Laconia: R. W. Beaman, $1; Tamworth: Mrs. E. S. Jackson, $1.

New York—Rochester: Mrs. E. Forbes, $4; Penn Yan: W. C. T. U., $4; Millville: W. C. T. U., $3.60; New York: Tremont Baby Band, $5; New Bremen: Baby Band, $2.50; New York: Mrs. R. Clapp, $1; Miss Kate Sanborn, $10; Webster: Baby Band, $2.50; Orwell: Baby Band, 50 cents; E. Randolph: Mrs. Davenport, 50 cents; Jamestown: Baby Band, $5; Brooklyn: W. C. T. U., No. 1, $15; Sinclairville: W. C. T. U., $11.37; Bedford: Mrs. H. C. Requa, $10; Attica: Harriet Mason, $10; Tarrytown: W. C. T. U., $42; Gilboa: W. C. T. U., $3.65; Williamson: Juvenile Temple, $5; Hulburton: Baby Band, $1.10.

North Dakota—Reynolds: Mrs. Jos. Thompson, $1.35; Leonard: Baby Band, $2.10.

Ohio—Atwater Station: M. Baldwin, $1.06; Lewisburg: Mrs. L. A. Macklin, $3.75; Pataskala: W. C. T. U. $3.15; Miamisburg: Miss E. M. Hecker, $5; Hartford: Miss C. L. Burnett, $25; Tiffin: Mrs. Harriet L. Dunlap, $100; Akron: W. C. T. U., $23; Delaware: Emma Stout, $1; Cortland: W. C. T. U., $6; Ripley: Loyal Temperance Legion, $5; Oberlin: Mrs. Jane C. Miller, $100; Columbus: W. C. T. U., $7.25; Baby Band, $3.

Oregon—La Grande: Per W. C. T. U., $20.

Pennsylvania—Edenburg: Flora Robinson, $4; Pulaski: W. C. T. U., $5; Montrose: Mrs. C. A. Lyons, $1; McKean County: W. C. T. U., $62.40; Erie: Laura Sanford, $2; Emlenton: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Plumville: Mrs. Frances Beyer, $1; Greenville: Baby Band, and Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.50; Bradford: Baby Band, $14.80; Philadelphia: Mrs. Samuel Clements, $50; New Brighton: Mrs. M. A. Stowe, $105.60; Mrs. W. B. Watkins, $4.05; Butler: W. C. T. U., $26; Wellsville: Mrs. M. A. Wells, $5.07; Wrightstown: Baby Band, $1; Penfield: Loyal Temperance Legion, $2; Sewickley: Emily Wilkins, 25 cts; Williamsport: W. C. T. U., No. 2, $2.15.

Rhode Island—Phœnix: W. C. T. U., $25; Pascoag: Mrs. L. H. Holman, $1.

South Dakota—Wessington Springs: Mrs. C. W. Spears, 44 cts.

Texas—McGregor: Baby Band, $1.50; Guide: Mrs. M. L. Goble, 75 cts.

Utah—Kelton: Mrs. Minnie Rathron, $5.

Vermont—Montpelier: Baby Band, 40 cts; Burlington, Frances Olmsted, $4; North Danville: W. C. T. U., $5.73.

Wisconsin—West Superior: Mrs. L. L. Cloyd, $3.65; Madison: Mrs. Jennie Smalley, $1; Dartford: Mrs. J. H. Brooks, $6.

Washington—Olympia: Ruth Bigelow, $3.65; Dayton: Mrs. Jane M. Range, $1; Ritzville: Y. W. C. T. U., $5.60.

Canada—Nassagawega: L. A. Milne, 20 cts.

In last receipts, $7 credited to W. C. T. U., Marissa, Ill., should have been, Willard W. C. T. U., Marissa; $1 to Mrs. Browne, Paw Paw, Mich., should have been $2. Mrs. E. H. Browne.

ESTHER PUGH.

161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill., Aug. 13, 1890.

Publisher's Dep't.

WHY THESE ODD SHAPES?

OUR

GREATEST OFFER!

We cannot longer delay reaching that 100,000 mark. We propose to "get there" by October 1st, and from now till that date only will receive old subscribers' names and new ones at 75 cents each, or

JUST HALF PRICE.

When sent in subject to the conditions. Here are : : : : : : : :

THE CONDITIONS:

1st. One old and one new name must always come together, that is, new names can be sent in at 75 cents each till October 1st by any one, but if you are an old subscriber and want to get the paper for a year for 75 cents you must send in at least one new name with yours.

2d. The money must be sent with the subscription. . . . . .

3d. You can send us $7.50 and your own name only as an old subscriber and we will send you coupons for nine new names which can be sent in any time up to January 1st, 1891. The same holds good for 2, 4, 6—any number of new names for which you want coupons. : : : : :

TO CATCH YOUR EYE— SAVE YOUR MONEY AND—

CONDITIONS Continued.

You or your union can take the new names at $1.00 after October 1st, as the price will not again be reduced to 75 cents.

4th. No money will be received by us if the envelope which holds it bears the stamp of October. The offer positively closes Sept. 30th, that is, you can mail money on that day and it will be received, but not if you mail it October 1st.

5th. No commissions will be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD

Add 30 cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. No matter when your subscription expires it will be extended a year if you will send us $1.50 with your own name and one new name.

8th. This offer holds good only for those whose subscription expires in '90 or '91. It is not meant that those who are in arrears can pay up at the rate of 75 cts. a year.

9th. Now it has all been explained—the offer is a great and generous one, don't forget it, don't pass it by. It ought to bring us 50,000 new names, sure.

Address W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

GET UP TO THE 100,000 MARK!

Dear Friends:

The above offer speaks for itself. Many have claimed it was unjust to old subscribers to take new names at a less rate than their own. Here is the opportunity to get THE UNION SIGNAL at just as low a price as to the new subscriber. If you do not accept it you cannot, again, justly criticize our system of building up the paper. Is not this true? We are trying to get the paper into homes where it would not go without these efforts to get new subscribers. A gain of 15,000 new names a year for five consecutive years, is evidence that this is being done. With one more good push from you, NOW, the 100,000 mark will be reached. Let every lover of the paper and its claims say, "It shall be so!" and it will be done. The offer is plain, so are the conditions; now, then?

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARVEY.

THE SOUND OF THE HAMMER

Is heard there. The artesian well is down 800 feet; the manufactories are being built; car loads after car loads of bricks, lumber, lime, etc., are on the ground and being unloaded; the streets are being graded, sidewalks are being laid, houses are building, and people are buying lots, lots of them! It is estimated that from six to ten thousand people will call Harvey their home within the next twelve months. Why should it grow? Why should manufactories leave present sites and go to the expense of moving here? Because the owners must follow the flood-tide of centralization. If they attempt to manufacture goods in places where there is but one or two railroads they find themselves handicapped by the factories who have the choice of ten or fifteen roads to ship by. Freight rates are always cheaper and transportation surer from a large place than from an inland town. Then more and more is it found that it pays in dollars and cents to have temperate, sober workmen. "Rushing the growler" never results in rushing the work. Beer-drinkers are sullen, ugly, lazy and slow workmen. That's a fact, and an employer who don't know it, or don't believe it, stands no show in competition with the wide-awake, alert Prohibitionist, who employs men just like himself as to personal habits. So, the lots are going, going fast, people are writing in that they will come there to open boarding-houses, stores, factories and homes. All the $180 lots are sold—the range of prices now is from $200 to $450 each lot. These prices hold good only till September 15th. You might do as a number of others are doing, write in and say, "Reserve me the best lot you have at"——naming the price you are willing to pay. I will do it. I will reserve the lot that I think is the best for the money, and send you a plat with it marked. You can then change it if you desire, for some lot not yet taken, but I think you will be well pleased with my choice for you. All of these lots face east or west. Payments are, one-fourth down, balance in 6, 12 and 18 months. A small discount will be made for spot cash. By the time you get this paper there will be only about twenty days left before the advance in price. But you can make up your mind in that time? Address

C. D. PAINE, Mgr. Adv. Dept. Union Signal,

161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Prices per lot, $200, $225, $250, $275, $300, $325, $350, $400, $450.

I refer by permission to Mrs. T. B. Carse, President W. T. P. A.; Miss Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL. Mr. Hall kindly permits me to say that, as the time named is very short, any who desire to invest can send the money to him, and he will see that the deeds, abstracts, etc., are sent promptly.

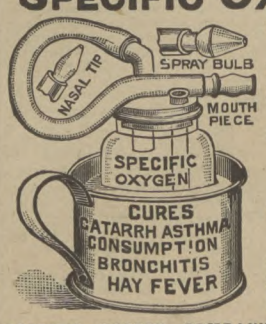
Van Houten's Cocoa. Once tried, always used.

MR. G. D. WALSTON, Wilson, N. C., says: After being a martyr for fifteen years to Sick Headaches, I discovered in Bradycrotine a true friend after taking the first dose.

RABBI MOSES P. JACOBSON, Macon, Ga., says: The effects of Bradycrotine are phenomenal and lasting.

Alice B. Stockham, M. D., well known as the author of "Tokology," is director of a slöyd institute to be opened in Chicago September 9. Slöyd is an educational work in wood, and is now being introduced into many schools. Already there is a demand for teachers of slöyd that cannot be filled. Therefore one prepared is certain of securing a position, while the time and expense of preparation is not great. For particulars address Meri Toppelius, Principal, 190 Madison Street, Chicago.

OVERMAN'S
SPECIFIC OXYGEN.



Is Medicated Oxygen.
Is a Germicide.
Is a Disinfectant for the lungs.
Is different from any other treatment for these diseases.
Is not a Patent Medicine.
Send stamp for Book telling why it is different and better than other remedies.

SPECIFIC OXYGEN COMPANY, Nashville, Tenn.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a Wash Blue have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask for it.
D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop.
233 North Second St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Cured Without Drugs.
By the "New Method." Chronic diseases of every kind either in men or women. At your own home. Something entirely new. Investigate. You can't afford to be sick. Send for Pamphlet.
HEALTH SUPPLIES CO.,
710 Broadway, N. Y.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
HALF PRICE, $5 AND UP.

POSITIVELY CURES RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting nervous DISEASES of both sexes. 100 degrees of Electricity. Guaranteed latest improved, most powerful MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Pamphlet free.
DR. W. J. HORNE, 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

THE DR. OWEN
Electric Belt
AND APPLIANCES
Cure acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. It is a stimulant and tonic, and while curing one disease does not produce another. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.
(TRADE MARK.)
THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO., 191 & 193 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Glimpses—Agents are Still at Work.

One of them says: "I was so sorry I did not get my prospectus at the time I expected, but it was no one's fault but mine. Still, I managed to take fifteen orders last week from the circular alone, and I think that was doing very well. I am sure I can sell a large number here."

Another says: "July was so hot and uncomfortable that I could not do much, but by taking advantage of spare moments I managed to secure the following order: please ship by freight 10 copies cloth, four copies half morocco, eight copies morocco. This order will entitle me to a premium copy, as I have now sold 28 copies."

One more:

"DEAR PUBLISHER: — I should have written sooner, but have been sick for some time. Still I have talked 'Glimpses,' and now shall begin work. I am determined to sell 50 copies during August, and so win the extra premiums you offered me for that number."

Large numbers of the book will be sold in the fall, and for the holidays. Apply at once for good territory.

In A Department Store

Here, a good W. C. T. U. worker has a stationery department, and to it she has added a line of our books and leaflets. As customers and shoppers go by she interests them in our wares as best she can. At first the work was very slow, but she is succeeding better and better, and as these columns are here for the purpose of telling the best ways of working we gladly tell our readers of the plan, and will add the address of the lady so that questions can be sent her directly, if so desired, viz., Mrs. L. H. Seavey, 948 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FAIR NUMBER.

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.

Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies	$ .20
100 "	1.70
1,000 "	14.00

All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

Willard Souvenir Cards.

September 28 has been set apart as Harvest Home Day in honor of its being the birthday of Miss Willard. Last year we prepared a set of twelve cards with illuminated texts on one side, and witty, wise, or winning quotations of Miss Willard's on the other side. This year we have another set ready with new words of wisdom and helpfulness. The cards are put up in packages of twelve. We offer them at a low rate in packages only, viz.:

1 package,	$ .25
8 assorted p'kgs (96 cards)	1.60

We had orders for great numbers of these pretty cards last year. Send for what you will need soon. One of the sets will have Miss Willard's new poem, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons Must Go!" printed thereon, and this will be especially useful in Nebraska. It is urged that September 28 be made a Nebraska day. See The Young Crusader for particulars.

HINTS

FOR

Y. W. C. T. U. ENTERTAINMENTS.

Price 10 cents. Explaining the mysteries of Oriental Tiffin, Kaffee Klatsch, Mother Goose, etc. Candy recipes are added to sweeten things generally.

YE HATCHET PARTIE.

Price 15 cents. By Miss Mary H. Mather, superintendent department of entertainments National W. C. T. U. The most successful shekel winner we have ever printed for young ladies' use. Other good entertainments are also given, "Mistress Mary and Her Flower Garden," "Silhouette Social," etc.

INTERSTATE MILKMAID'S CONVENTION.

Price 5 cents. By Laura J. Rittenhouse. An amusing and witty "take off" on a woman's convention. The amount of learning (?) displayed on the cow business is funny.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Pond's Extract is everywhere recommended by physicians and surgeons.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
The Original--Most Soluble.
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [65

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

HOUSEWIVES should try the Beveridge Quick Cooker. Simple and convenient, saving time and labor. No dirt, no smell, no burning. Saves fuel. Used on any stove, winter or summer. Lady agents wanted. Good pay. Ad. W. E. Beveridge, Baltimore, Md, or 23 E 14th st, N.Y

TOKOLOGY, A complete Ladies Guide. 150,000 sold. This most popular medical work can only be bought of Agents or direct from us. Agents wanted in every part of the country. Prepaid for $2.75. Sample pages free. Alice B. Stockham & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago

RUG THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. & EMBROIDERY MACHINE, is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Improve your home with our ATTRACTIVE WALL PAPER
Remarkably low prices. Enormous assortment of styles. Honorable treatment. We can refer to hundreds of well-pleased customers in every section of the U.S. Our prices range from excellent Lustre papers at 6c. a roll to elegant Iridescent Embossed Golds at 35c. For 8c. postage will send to any address, samples with borders to match. A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

INTRODUCTION LADIES. Sample Package of 24 sheets very extra elegant gilt-edged note paper (Oxford) and envelopes for 25 cts. in stamps. Box 1219. E LKHART, IND.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper,

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago

WANTS LADY AGENTS. Box 1219, Elkhart, Ind.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE Pub. Boston

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks. 10c. CHICAGO.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME. NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure. Read article in UNION SIGNAL June 5, page 13. The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.

400 RECITATIONS and Readings, Bound in Handsome Lithograph Cover, mailed to any address for 50 cents. Stamps taken. Address J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

SATIN SILK & PLUSH Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St. Richmond, Va.

SELL US your second hand books and your back numbers of magazines, of any language, of last 2 to 25 years. Send from any distance, a list of them. Without a 2-cent stamp no list considered. MURRAY TEMPLETON & CO., 835 Broadway, N. Y. Estab'd 1840.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill. We do not sell liquors in any shape.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

THE PREFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE.
The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted. SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO., 491-493 Carroll Ave., Cor. Union Park Place. Chicago.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

Is Money of Any Use to You?
You can save money on Sewing Machines. Write M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS. Give better satisfaction than any other. Are the best substitute for corsets.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at
WHOLESALE.

ASK your dealer for Water Pails Dairy Pails, Wash Basins, Cuspidors, Slop Jars, Table Mats, Slop Jar Mats, Etc. made from FLAX FIBER. Practically indestructible. Manufact'd by the STANDARD FIBER-WARE CO. Nothing will please you like this Plain and Decorated Ware. In use everywhere. None genuine without "STANDARD" Trade Mark on bottom. If your dealer does not keep it, send his address and we will mail you picture cards.

EQUIPOISE WAIST.

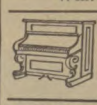
A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS, including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jenness-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue.
Mrs. S. W. Pike,
75 Madison St., Chicago.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York N. Y.



WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
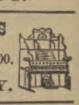
Marshal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.



CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos, it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

WANTED.
One hundred and sixty-five (165) W. C. T. U. members (or other reliable persons), who will, each, secure five (5) purchasers for FAITH,
or, EARTHLY PARADISE and Other Poems, just issued from the press of the W. T. P. A.; a volume of 528 pages, 330 of which constitute a drama, with scenes laid in Washington City, Faith being the heroine. Good, clear type, with frontispiece, and Three (3) Songs Set to Music.
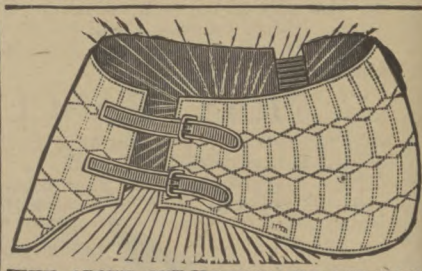
5½ by 7¾ inches in size by 1½ thick; bound in royal purple cloth, with name on back in gold letters. Price $1.25 per copy; gilt-edged, $1.50. Six copies, plain, for $6.25, cash in advance. 100 copies, plain, for $90 in advance. Ladies particularly will like the book. The Mississippi White Ribbon says:
"It especially commends itself for its fidelity to the loftiest ideals for woman and the home." Address immediately,
MRS. ELLEN E. HEBRON,
Edwards, Hinds Co., Mississippi.
SONGS FROM SOUTH,
a volume of 245 pages, by same author, for 60 cents.
Postage or freight prepaid on all books.



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions of "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Publisher's Dep't.

L. T. L'S, ATTENTION!

We are now, for a short time only—till Oct. 1st—receiving new names to The Union Signal for half price—75 cents—per year. We also will have ready in December a beautiful picture of Miss Willard—a life size water color tint portrait of Prang's best work. You want one of these pictures for your place of meeting, it will be a source of pleasure and constant inspiration to you. We know you can easily obtain one, and if you will get us ten new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL at 75 cents each we will send the framed picture to you as soon as it is ready. We wrote to Mrs. Rice about this and asked her permission to present the matter to the Loyal Temperance Legions of the country and here is what she says in reply:

DEAR MR. HALL: This last plan seems to me, from my standpoint of the children's interests, the best of all. I am very desirous that Miss Willard shall be a reality to all our boys and girls, and I am enthusiastically in favor of having each L. T. L. company immediately set about securing her picture, in accordance with your offer. Her face looking down upon them at their meetings may be made a constant object lesson to impress upon these young hearts the blessedness of right living for themselves and of service for others. I trust you will give the children the opportunity to secure the picture either framed or unframed, according to the amount of work done.

Sincerely, HELEN G. RICE.

Will you bring this matter to the attention of your officers at once? There is no time to lose—the offer will not be held open a day longer than the time named. How can you get the picture unframed? By sending the name of one new subscriber and 30 cts. extra—$1.05 in all. The other offer is the best, however, as we shall have orders for thousands of the framed pictures and shall send out handsome and artistic frames with special W. C. T. U. designs thereon. We will send a book worth having to any member of an L. T. L. who will get from his or her officers a letter saying that they have been persuaded by —— (naming you) to try for the picture and that the Loyal Temperance Legion of —— will go at once to work to win the lovely prize.

Hurry, Hurry, the Time is so Short!

P S.—If you want to, your Legion can send before Oct. 1st., $7.50 and have till Jan. 1st to get the names, which can be taken at 75 cts. or $1.00 (the rate after Oct. 1st), as you please. If taken at $1.00 your Legion would clear $2.50 and get the picture besides! Think of that!

Bargain Prices.

Books, etc., soiled by having been sent to convention, or having some slight damage in binding.

	Regular Price	Bargain Price
Ye Hatchet Partie,	$ .15	$ .07
Helping,	.10	.05
Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	75	35
" " " paper,	40	.15
Romance Nineteenth Century	1.00	35
Duties of Women,	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo,	.25	.10
Boys and Other Boys, paper,	.25	.12
Girls of To-Day,	.25	.12
Y Song Books,	.25	.20
Glorious Cause,	.30	.20
Birthday Books, plain,	1.00	.50
Birthday Books, gilt edge,	1.25	.60

Please name first and second choice, as we have only a few of some of the items. Secure your bargains promptly. They will not last long.

Address,
W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Has a circulation of nearly half a million copies each issue. We want to place it in the hands of a million families, and,

☞ As an inducement to you to send for copies, we offer for 30 days from the date of this paper (this advertisement appears but once) to mail to any address

A Copy of each of the Last Two Issues

On Receipt of only 10 Cents

IN SILVER OR STAMPS.

(Regular Price on the News-stands, 10c. per Copy.)

Also our handsomely Illustrated Premium Catalogue, showing over a thousand articles which can be obtained free of cost, or for part work and a small part of money. Also including "Hints for Artistic Needlework," by Mrs. A. R. Ramsey—handsomely illustrated; and "Designs for Needlework, from the Kensington Art School," by Jane S. Clarke, of London.

☞ ALL of the above mailed for 10 cents if ordered at once. This offer positively withdrawn 30 days from date of this paper.

THE last two issues of the JOURNAL contain some specially strong features, including "My First Sermon," by Dr. T. De Witt Talmage; an interesting article on "Promiscuous Bathing;" Gaities of Newport; "A Country Courtship,"—a full-page, handsomely-illustrated poem.

Illustrated stories and articles in these issues by

Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Harriet Prescott Spofford,
Rose Terry Cooke, Jenny June,
Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Frances E. Willard,
Mrs. Mary J. Holmes, Kate Upson Clark,
Louise Chandler Moulton, Maud Howe,
Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Julian Hawthorne,
Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Twenty-eight pages in handsome cover, filled with original matter for the JOURNAL, and profusely illustrated with the finest cuts, drawn expressly for the JOURNAL by the most eminent artists. Handsomest periodical ever issued for ladies and the family.

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.

No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.

SPLENDID PROGRESS.

Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.

PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address

The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.

Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars. Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested 1868. Book Sent Free Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

ALL FAT PEOPLE

can safely Reduce Weight and Cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without Change of Diet. An English Countess writes:—"Your Trilene Tablets act admirably."—Send Postal Note for 75 cents to THE TRILENE CO., Sole Proprietors, 334 Broadway, New York.

CANCER and Tumors CURED no knife; book free Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

MODENE will easily quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

AGENTS Male or Female can make good wages at their own home. Write for terms and Free Sample. HOBB'S MEDICINE CO., 407-415 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.

$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c. stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

THE DEAF HEAR SOUND DISCS are guaranteed to help a larger per cent. of cases than all similar devices combined. The same to the Ears as glasses are to the eyes. Positively invisible. Worn months without removal. H. A. WALES, Bridgeport, Conn.

A-CORN SALVE.

Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.

NO PAIN! NO POISON!

TRADE MARK

"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES

FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.

Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

LAST CHANCE

To Secure a $30.00 Watch for $6.50

Warranted for 20 Years.

DUEBER solid silverine, warranted to wear and keep its color better than coin silver, better in appearance, more durable, and in every respect far more serviceable than coin silver. Hunting case or open face; your choice. Fitted complete with our own celebrated full ruby jeweled, solid nickel damaskeened lever movement, stem wind and stem set, patterned and modeled after the famous which is acknowledged to be not only the finest movement in the United States, but also the highest grade and highest priced movement made. This is a watch that will last you a lifetime and you can easily sell it for twice our price after you have worn it ten years. GIGANTIC OFFER to every body for 30 days only. Cut this out and send it with your order, (no money required until after you examine it) and we will ship the watch to you by express C. O. D. You examine it at the express office and see for yourself that it is not only equal to but better than we have represented it, pay the agent $6.50 and the express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. Order to-day, don't wait, this will be your LAST CHANCE.

ELGIN
B. W. RAYMOND

Cut this out. It will not appear again.

THE NAT'L M'F'G & IMPORTING CO., 191 and 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill. (Incorporated)

Guaranteed Watch $2.97

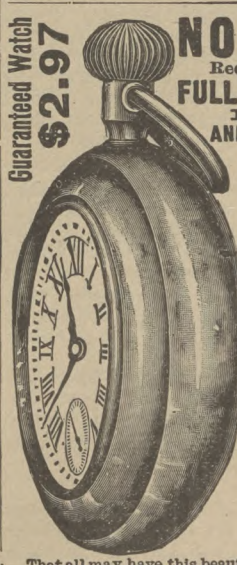
NO MONEY

Required Until After

FULL EXAMINATION.

14K GOLD

AND SOLID COIN NICKEL.



The cases are made of a plate of fine 14k gold over the finest quality of coin nickel making a case composed of nothing but fine gold covering finest quality of coin nickel. With coin nickel on the inside and 14k gold on the outside, we warrant the cases to be equal in appearance to a solid 14k gold watch. They are open face, smooth basine, finished to a dazzling brightness, dust and damp proof and warranted to wear a life time. Different from the cheap brass watches offered. The movement is a fine 3-4 plate style, finely jeweled polished pinion, oil tempered main spring which does not break, and all the latest improvements. A guarantee is sent with each watch that it will keep accurate time for 2 years

OUR 90 DAY OFFER.

That all may have this beautiful watch in their hand and fully examine and see for themselves the value and running qualities of same we will send it C. O. D. to your express office, with the privilege to examine it. If found satisfactory you can pay the express agent $2.97 or 3 for $7.50 and express charges. If not satisfactory you can refuse same and you are nothing out but your time in going to the express office. Knowing the fine qualities of this watch we make the above offer, as any one wanting a good time piece will accept same at once on examination. Order at once as our price will advance. Address W. HILL & CO., Wholesale Jewelers, 109 Madison St., Chicago.

When cash in full accompanies order we book you agent and send free a fine roll-plated chain and charm.

OPIUM HABIT.

Send two dollars to Dr. L. S. Means, Oxford, Ga., for a sure remedy for the Opium & Morphine habit.

Signal Notes.

SAID the minister, in his quiet way, in giving out the notices: "If there had been as many men as women at the last prayer-meeting, the attendance would have been about seventy; if there had been only as many women as men, the attendance would have been about a dozen." It was unnecessary for him to add any moral.—Boston Congregationalist.

THE W. C. T. U. of Concord, North Carolina, have taken an advanced step. The premium list of the Cabarrus county fair contains the announcement that this union offers a special premium of ten dollars for the best essay on the topic, "Alcohol, its Effects on the Physical, Intellectual and Moral Nature of Mankind;" length of essay not less than 1,000 nor more than 1,300 words. Contestants must be between sixteen and twenty years of age, residents of Cabarrus county or educated in schools within the county. Next year the ladies hope to have similar premiums offered in the state fair.

THE board of aldermen of New York City has issued its mandate to the police, etc., that any boys really or apparently under the age of sixteen, found smoking in any public place, are to be dealt with according to the new law of the state of New York, which forbids the use of tobacco by boys under that age, and which was secured by the enlightened efforts of a society known in the saloons in these days as the "We'll C To U."

REV. W. D. AKERS, Maryville, Ga., recently secured an admirable resolution from the Knoxville District, M. E. Church, Tenn., in which they declared themselves "in favor of the W. C. T. U., and of all other non-partisan societies." That man knew what he was about.

PROBABLY the oldest lady writer living in this country is Mrs. Elizabeth Oakes Smith, now at eighty-four in excellent health and vigor both of mind and body. A native of Maine, married at sixteen to Seba Smith, the author of the once famous Major Jack Downing letters, she has given a long life to literature and the advancement of woman. Her book, "Woman and Her Needs," published forty years ago, caused the first arrest of thought along this line to many who are leaders to-day. She not only wrote in behalf of woman's enfranchisement but spoke for it, in days when a woman lecturer was a rarity. Now in serene old age, she lives at Holywood, N. C., and no doubt looks back over the half century just passed, with thanksgiving for the fruition it has brought to her hopes, the abundant harvest to her seedsowing.

NEW YORK'S anti-tobacco law strikes at both seller and user. It declares that a person who sells, pays for or furnishes any cigar, cigarette or tobacco in any of its forms to any child actually or apparently under the age of sixteen years is guilty of a misdemeanor; also that no child actually or apparently under sixteen years of age shall smoke, or in any way use any cigar, cigarette or tobacco, in any form whatsoever in any public street, place or resort. A violation of this subdivision (of Sec. 291, Penal Code) shall be a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars nor less than two dollars, for each offense. This act shall take effect on the first day of September, 1890.

AT the celebration of the quarter-centennial of the Salvation Army in London, on July 15, General Booth said: "The army is at work in 35 different countries, and has nearly 3,000 corps and over 9,000 officers, and its strength is growing daily. There are also 85 slum officers, 188 officers engaged in rescue work, 35 rescue homes, 65 food officers and 19 food depots. Two thousand women passed through the homes in England during last year; an average of nearly 8,000 meals are served daily to the poor; 540 people are sheltered each night."

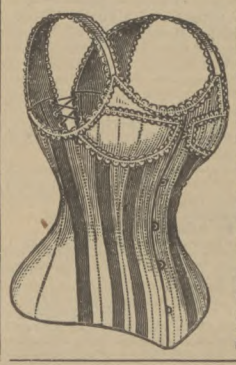
IT is a notable fact that Robert Rae, the veteran secretary of the Temperance Alliance in England, has the imperishable honor of having called out Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, our great expounder of science and alcohol. It was at Robert Rae's request, and under influences brought to bear by him that those famous experiments were made extending over twenty years, which have been the entering wedge for the new science concerning the relations of man and alcohol. He is accompanied in his American tour by one of his daughters, an accomplished woman. Another daughter who is a journalist, expects to visit America during the Columbian Exposition.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE
Mrs Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st 11 1991
Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

BROWN'S FRENCH DRESSING
FOR LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S BOOTS AND SHOES.
Awarded highest honors at
Phila., 1876 | Melbourne, 1880
Berlin, 1877 | Frankfort, 1881
Paris, 1878 | Amsterdam, 1883
New Orleans, 1884-85.
Paris Medal on every bottle.
Beware of Imitations.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY
THE PERFECTION Flour Bin and Sieve. No home is complete without it. Dispense with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops, sieves, etc. No scattering of flour; no apron or rolling up of sleeves needed. A few turns of the handle and you have enough sifted for a baking. It pleases everybody. No housekeeper will be without it after once using. Where we have no representative we will send the bin on receipt of price. To hold 100 lbs. $3.25; 50 lbs. $2.50; 25 lbs. $2.25. No goods sent C.O.D. Agents wanted.
Sherman, Tangenberg & Co., 491 & 493 Carroll Ave., Chicago.

GOOD HEALTH.


Lady Agents wanted for The THOMAS GOOD HEALTH CORSET WAIST. Thousands in use. Corded, Boned, Buttoned or clasped at front; will fit old ladies, young women and growing girls. Every lady wishing a beautiful figure and also comfort will buy The Thomas Good Health Corset Waist. HUNDREDS sent by mail to women unable to obtain them of our Agents. All mail orders promptly filled.
THE THOMAS CORSET Parlors, 465 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

TAKE AN AGENCY for the Best Utensil in the universe.
DAGGETT'S SELF-BASTING ROASTING PAN
Needed in every family. SAVES 20 Per Cent. in Roasting, and Bakes the Best Bread in the world. Address for terms
W. A. DAGGETT & CO., Vineland, N. J. or Western Office, 184 E. Indiana St., Chicago.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF Cancer & Tumors Without the Knife
Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Best Sewing Machine Made, Free!
We have an assortment of the best Sewing Machines made which we are selling lower than any other concern in the country, and as we sell more machines than any Manufacturer or Dealer, we can afford to give one free to have them introduced. Send for terms.
CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Illinois.

Bickford Family Knitter
Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired.
A. M. LAWSON,
783 Broadway, New York.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH, SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth, Minn.

EDUCATIONAL.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC at Mt. Carroll, Ill., is distinguished for thorough work. Its graduates are sought as teachers by the best seminaries, conservatories and colleges. Demand exceeds the supply. Send for "Oread" free.

MILWAUKEE COLLEGE. Milwaukee, Wis. For Young Women. For Catalogue address C. R. KINGSLEY, Ph. D., Pres't.

BUNKER HILL ACADEMY, Near St. Louis. A First-Class Boys' Home School; $280; W. C. T. U. patronize; College and Business; 8th year. Circulars of REV. S. L. STIVER, Bunker Hill, Ill.

BLACKBURN UNIVERSITY.
CARLINVILLE, ILL.
26TH YEAR begins September 4th, 1890. Write for Catalogue to E. L. HURD, President.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE
Morgan Park (near Chicago). Boarding School for Girls and Young Ladies. For catalogue address G. THAYER, LL. D., Morgan Park, Ill., or 77 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich.
Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

KNOX COLLEGE, GALESBURG, ILLINOIS.
Fifty-fourth year opens Sept. 4th, with greatly increased facilities. For catalogue and all information address NEWTON BATEMAN, President.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH
42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY
Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution. SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year.
E. F. BULLARD, A.M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

CHICAGO KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY, 2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE
NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17 Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

The St. Louis Hygienic College
OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.
Will begin its Fourth annual course of instruction Wednesday, October 1, 1890. This is the only hygienic college in the United States; it is legally chartered and officered, and has a full graded course of three years. Men and women are admitted.
Address for announcement, S. W. DODDS, M.D., 2826 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

MONTICELLO.
New Buildings, New Furniture, New Pianos, New Equipments, Beautiful Situation.
Opens Sept. 26. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art, etc. Send for information to MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal.
GODFREY, ILL.

FOREST PARK UNIVERSITY Kirkwood Seminary, 30th YEAR.
Beautiful buildings, modern, roomy and homelike with every convenience; heated with hot water and lighted with electricity. No Basement Dining-Room. FULL COLLEGE COURSE (similar to that of Wellesley, Smith, etc.) Seminary and Academic Courses, Preparatory Departments. THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC fully equipped. Instruction in Pipe Organ, Piano, Voice by a pupil of LaGrange, Paris, (the Italian method), Harmony, Theory, Counterpoint, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, etc. Thorough ART Training. FULL FACULTY. 18 Specialists from Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, and Paris. For catalogue, or to secure rooms address,
Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Forest Park University, St. Louis, Mo.
To any union sending a pupil, $20.00 remitted.

"UNRIVALLED" "WORLD RENOWNED"
IMPERIAL GRANUM
SAFE, NOURISHING, DELICIOUS, PURE
FOOD
THE GREAT AMERICAN DIETETIC PREPARATION FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN
FOR INVALIDS
CONVALESCENTS AND THE AGED.
THOUSANDS OF UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING SALES PROVE MERITED SUCCESS.
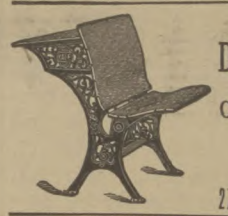
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. SHIPPING DEPOT. JOHN CARLE & SONS-NEW YORK.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

INVIGORATING LAVENDER SALTS.
(REGISTERED)

Our readers who are in the habit of purchasing that delicious perfume, Crab-Apple Blossoms, of the Crown Perfumery Co., should also procure a bottle of their celebrated Invigorating Lavender Salts. No more rapid or pleasant cure for a headache is possible. While leaving the bottle open for a few minutes, permits a most agreeable odor to escape, which purifies and refreshes the air most perceptibly.
Le Follet.—Paris.
THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,
177 New Bond St., London. Sold Everywhere



AMERICAN Desk & Seating Co.,
Manufacturers
Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for Catalogue.
270-272 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH
duplicating apparatus. Send postal card to A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, for descriptive circulars and samples of work.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

RIDGE'S FOOD
Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.
MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN,
President of the Missouri W. C. T. U., writes:
Mr. A. T. Bates, Chicago:
After trying every remedy, for years, to remove constipation and hemorrhoids, and all without avail, I have found a complete cure offered by Dr. W. Hall. I recommend his treatment to all suffering from the hundred ills arising from these causes.
C. C. HOFFMAN.
Kansas City, Dec. 24, 1889.
R. S. Machett, Esq., Star, Wis., writes, July 19th:
"Dr. Hall,—I have been using your treatment for several months, and am greatly benefited. * * * Allow me to say in a word, that could the information your Health Pamphlet contains be taken from me, no amount of money that could be named would buy it. The mere idea of the treatment itself is a small matter compared with the original and vitadiscussions of which the pamphlet is full from lid to lid. The mere treatment can be given away by disinterested purchasers of the pamphlet, but the wonderful rationale of the discovery and its application, the main things involved, can only be made known by pirating the whole pamphlet. * * *
'Gratefully yours, R. S. MACHETT."
For further information regarding this medicineless treatment call upon or send a 2-cent stamp to
A. T. BATES,
Room 46, 161 La Salle-st., Chicago.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 35.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, August 28, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Equal Suffrage in South Dakota—The Salvation Army in Chicago—Julia A. Ames—Great Britain's New President 8, 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Law, by Millie Andrews Bell—Walking in the Light, by Margaret Spencer—Relation of Bad Cookery to Intemperance, by J. H. Kellogg, M. D.—A Business Man's Opinion of Prohibition, by S. A. Kean—Call 2, 3
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.: Mrs. Leavitt in Holland—Our Second Round-the-World Missionary 4, 5
OUR BOOK TABLE: 5
CORRESPONDENCE: Temperance Temple Items 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, Curly Locks—Queen Bess's Letter 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning September 7, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, Baby's Lullaby—The Crisis of Middle Age—"The Keeping Room" 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: Poem, When the King Shall Come to His Own Again—Actions Speak Louder Than Words 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Michigan, New York, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Minnesota—News in a Nutshell—Announcements 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Sabbath Observance Department—Press Department—Juvenile Department 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Nebraska's prohibition convention met at Lincoln, August 26 and 27.

The Grand Trunk tunneling under the St. Clair river at Sarnia was completed Tuesday.

An English edition of the Ladies' Home Journal of Philadelphia is to be brought out in London.

The sculptor, Jonathan Scott Hartley, has just completed a life-like bust of Judge Noah Davis.

The American party of California has indorsed General Bidwell, the prohibition candidate for Governor.

The wheat crop of the Dakotas is so nearly a failure that good judges think it will not average over ten bushels to the acre.

Mrs. J. C. Bateham has returned to San Francisco from her very successful work for Sabbath observance in the Sandwich Islands.

The increase of Jews in Jerusalem is attracting attention, a recent census giving 150,000, one-half the population of the Holy City.

A case was brought Monday in the United States District Court, Topeka, Kansas, to test the validity of the Original Package law.

By the Tribune's showing Chicago has 5,400 licensed saloons, the licenses of more than two-thirds of them being paid by leading brewers.

Roggen-rum-and-Rosewater ring is the pat cognomen given by the Northwestern Mail to the Omaha Business Men's Anti-prohibition League.

Mrs. Anna P. Riggs, of Oregon, is the state president whose portrait and biographical sketch are given in Demorest Magazine for September.

A circular sent out to banks in Nebraska brought in returns showing seventy per cent of the bank officers in favor of prohibition on business principles.

Senator Plumb introduced a resolution to prohibit the sale and drinking of liquors in the Senate restaurant; the drinking evil there has grown to unbearable proportions.

The barley men of Canada are preparing to rush the crop over the border into the United States to head off any tariff imposed by the McKinley bill, should it become a law.

Saturday, the body of John Ericsson, inventor of the Monitor, was taken on board the steamship Baltimore, for return to his native Sweden. The naval display was the finest ever seen in New York harbor.

Mrs. Caroline B. Buell conducted a parliamentary drill at Willimantic, "Temperance Day," August 26. Mrs. J. K. Barney, Mrs. Lucy A. Scott, and Besolow, a converted African prince, were among the speakers.

Little Daisy Stoddard, who won the diamond Demorest medal at the last National convention, has turned over $2,000 into the treasury of Nebraska for prohibitory campaign purposes, the results of her entertainments.

Mrs. S. S. Weatherby, prohibition candidate for state superintendent of schools, Kansas, has been president of Coffey county W. C. T. U. for several years, and is state superintendent of press work, a position she fills most admirably.

The New York Tribune, speaking of the absenteeism which disgraces the present Congress, says there is a suspicion that much of it is caused by the attractions of a neighboring restaurant, and a certainty that more is due to card-playing in committee rooms.

In response to the action of the resolution favoring the removal of General Grant's remains from New York to Arlington Heights, passed by the Senate, Mrs. Grant sent a communication to Congressman Quinn, of New York, saying that she and her children will be governed in the matter by the wishes of the people expressed through Congress.

RAMABAI writes that she is to have three new widow pupils in her school next month. Beside these a poor, starved widow has been with her three weeks. She was a mere skeleton when received, and although still scarcely better than that, is improving, and seems happy and interested in her work. Her mother, recently widowed, has just written Ramabai begging that she, too, may be admitted.

REV. MR. HAMMER having been called to the Reformed Episcopal Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, it removes his wife, Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, National superintendent of parlor meetings, from New Jersey to Pennsylvania. After September 1, her address will be, Seminary, 43d and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, where state superintendents should send her their reports of parlor work.

IN the bureau of printing and engraving, Washington, some girls were detailed to feed presses on which men were working. The plate printers protested against working with the girls, in which protest their master workman, Moore, joined. The matter was laid before Chief Merideth, who refused to rescind the order for the girls to work at the presses. Master workman Moore forbade the men to work with them; on hearing of it Secretary Windom ordered the immediate dismissal of Moore.

WOMAN suffrage in some form is growing in favor with the Mississippi Constitutional Convention. Mr. Fewell offered a resolution that the elective franchise shall be secured to every woman over twenty-one years of age who has resided in the state six months, and who owns, or her husband owns, $300 worth of property. Delegate Hudson, of Yazoo, also offered an amendment providing for female suffrage, with a property and educational qualification. This plan also embraces the Australian ballot system.

ALL reports show that Connecticut's Prohibition Convention was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in the state. Nearly four hundred delegates were in attendance, the number of young men among them being noticeable. The platform has the clear ring, and it was adopted with striking unanimity. Phineas M. Augur, one of the best known farmers in the country, was nominated for Governor; De Witt C. Pond, who signed the first call for the organization of the Republican party, for Lieutenant-Governor; Henry Robinson Palmer, of the Providence Journal, Secretary of State; John B. Smith, State Treasurer, and Fred M. Hawley, Comptroller.

THE National Republican, of Washington, makes a good point in its recognition of the claims of the church element upon the press of the city. After stating the fact—and personal observation convinces us that it is a fact—that Washington is the most religious city in the country, if attendance on church is the criterion, it demands for the "church element," the respectable class of society, at least as much attention as is devoted to the saloon, and that the press should report the news and defend the interests of Christians with at least as much zeal and fidelity as it does those of the courts and the police stations. This the Republican does, and we wish other papers would follow its example.

THE sixth district prohibition convention of Iowa put their woman suffrage plank in this way, and a very good way it is: "We believe that Christian ethics demand the enfranchisement of woman or else her exemption from taxation. We therefore favor the submission by Congress of a federal constitutional amendment, ordaining that the right to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any state, on account of sex." It strongly favors the submission of the federal constitutional prohibitory amendment, declaring that as long as the state is deprived of the power to prevent the importation of liquors, national prohibition, through a federal prohibitory amendment, is our only efficient resort.

W. C. T. U. WORK is in the direct line of promotion, as is proved by the fact that so many who have received training in our ranks are called into other work. Now it is the National Superintendent of Press Work, Mary H. Henry, and the call comes from the Chautauquan to join its editorial staff. This removes her to Meadville, Pa., where the heartiest good wishes of all her co-laborers follow her. We congratulate the Chautauquan on securing so facile a pen for its service, and rejoice that by her going the bonds already uniting these two great movements are strengthened. Miss Henry goes Sept. 1, at which time Miss Alice Briggs, who has done excellent service in this direction before, takes up the work of the Press department to conduct it until the National convention.

CHAUTAUQUA'S "great day" was made even greater than usual this year by the fact that Alice Freeman Palmer delivered the annual oration, arousing the greatest enthusiasm. The Assembly Herald says that her address was admirable in expression and full of genuine feeling; nobody scrutinizing the eager, upturned faces could doubt that every word reached somebody's heart. She spoke absolutely without effort, yet every word was easily heard in the outer row of seats. "She said that the universities are at Chautauqua's feet. It is proper to remark that Chautauqua is at Mrs. Palmer's feet. Nobody will disagree with the assertion that Mrs. Palmer and Miss Bancroft have scored this year's successes on the platform." Six hundred graduates were present to receive their diplomas. The class of '90 numbers 6,000. John Habberton has joined the class of '94. It is now in order to name the class "Helen's Babies," and take as a class motto, "I want to see the wheels go wound."

MASTER WORKMAN POWDERLY is justly proud of the fact that he has never before ordered a strike. This makes his present order to the employés of the New York Central Railroad system of greater significance; he would take such action only from clearest convictions of duty and that all other means have failed. In his address issued Friday morning he says: "We are fighting against a power far more dangerous than that which laid down its arms at Yorktown one hundred years ago. There the fight was with one king. To-day it is against a hundred, one of whom said in an after-dinner speech not long ago: 'There are fifty men in this country who have it in their power to control the currency of the United States, control her commerce, and at a day's notice stop every wheel in the whole territory of the United States.' The struggle is far more momentous than it was during the American revolution. Then our fathers fought for liberty; now we are fighting to maintain it. Then the enemy was three thousand miles away. To-day he is intrenched in our own dominion."

W. C. T. U. WOMEN are instant in season and out, even when at fashionable summer resorts not neglecting to work for the cause. This was lately illustrated at Yellow Springs, Virginia, where Mrs. Merrick, Louisiana's accomplished president, was seeking needed rest. At the request of the local president, she held a parlor meeting in the hotel; the place, the time and the leader made it a meeting to be remembered. She introduced her hearers to the leaders of the W. C. T. U. in such an engaging manner as to make each one feel a personal interest in them and a desire to hear them speak. She then showed how this movement is founded on scientific knowledge, anchored by religious faith and pervaded by sisterly love; she ventured to speak freely of woman's ballot, reassuring them by the thought that while we are under the universal law of progress God will not suffer anything to come to us which he disapproves or which he cannot overrule for His own glory and our good. The truth shall make us free, and if ancient prejudice must disappear before this truth, we need not be panic-stricken at that. The ladies listened most attentively and doubtless many carried away truer ideas concerning the work than they had before

Contributed.

THE LAW.

BY MILLIE ANDREWS BELL.

"The strength of sin," the Savior said, "is law."
More true to-day than when He uttered it;
Law holds its very sinews from the pit.
High license with its man-devouring maw,
Received by Christian shepherds with éclat,
Devised for Satan's special benefit,
To lead submissive subjects with a bit,
Freezing men's hearts too cold for faith to thaw.

"Woe to you lawyers!" once again said He,
"Binding great heavy burdens upon men;
Touching such not yourselves, taking the key
Of knowledge, entering not therein, and when
Others would enter, longing to be free,
Ye hinder them with crafty logic then."

WALKING IN THE LIGHT.

BY MARGARET SPENCER.

"If we walk in the light as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another."

"God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labor of love which ye have showed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister."

"Mother," said Meg, seriously and slowly, "I can't see much walking in the light these days; and how much fellowship and much ministering do we get time to give, or make, or enjoy?"

"Why, Meg!" said her mother, "read it over, 'God is not unrighteous to forget your labor.'"

"Yes, mother; but what time do we get to minister in any way to saints or sinners, with nothing but drudgery and housework day and night! Such an endless routine of common things using up all our strength, patience, and time, and for what? To eat, and sleep, and—"

"Think, dear, a minute, of the home, this little spot of greenery, in a very big world, to be sure, but you and I keep it green and cheery, not only for father when he comes, but the boys and the friends, and people say they go out from us brighter, stronger and cheerier than when they came in. Now look at your class, your 'band'—"

"Mother, mother! it is all poor work, ordinary and commonplace. I do it poorly."

Again Meg read, "Walking in the light," and "do minister—"

East and west lay great fields of grain and golden corn; bits of sky and sun and shadow fell on Meg's brown head under the running roses over the doorway. The old gray farm-house was "more glad than grand." It held everybody, and had room for more. Its largeness and cheeriness told magical stories of the home ministering. The sweet smell of the hay, the gold of the sunset, the flowers by the garden path made a great light to walk by; but somehow Meg lost sight of the glory, lost sight of the home life, ruling all plans and possibilities. She wanted to climb up "some other way" to success. The discipline of plodding failed to give content.

This was long ago. "Father went with Logan" to the war, and mother, with Meg's help, kept the beautiful prairie farm-house in Illinois. The Saturday's baking and cleaning were done. The mother in her low chair on the porch sat with quiet, folded, tired hands, but a smiling, lovely face, while her eldest child, Meg, read aloud the Sunday-school lesson for the Sabbath morning. "It was so restful." Like Miss Alcott's "Little Women," "they kept hoping and keeping busy," but anxieties and burdens were many; help poor, and hard to get. The awful regularity of eating and drinking went on just the same. The dairy, the garden, the clean linen, always, Meg said, "the very same."

But a great light leaped out of the open doorways—sweet, tidy home gilded with love and all glorious with love's ministering. Meg laid down the Testament, and slowly walked down to the beds in the garden, edged with purple phlox and white with fragrant alyssum and mignonette. And that was long ago. The mother said, "Dear child, she will find the light sometime; and see how full these very days were of ministering."

"Mother Bickerdyke" wanted three good nurses from Meg's town. She was the first to go, and got no farther than Washington. The hospitals were crowded, and the dying brought in hundreds to be put in churches, halls, the Patent Office and the White House.

Meg wrote: "Dear mother, I begin to see a new kind of ministering, but the knowing how began at home, and with the mother. The 'light' was there! and if you could only know how it looks to me to-day from this great, whitewashed room full of suffering men and boys you would say, 'Ah, Meg remembers now how the "work and the labor of love" were made easy and blessed in the cool, wide kitchen, under the green leaves of the grape vines and clematis, and—then I couldn't see it! Oh, mother! how could it have been? Every hour of my stay here I feel the glory of that light! When this dreadful war ends, and dear father lives, how we will live together in that light—face to face."

Now Meg was only one little woman of thousands who had helped to make life natural, restful and complete—doing only the considerate things of every-day home life; stimulating business and play, thought, activity, and a busy world of strength and courage, and, after all, "it's only love, love, love, that makes the world go round."

Of all the young nurses Meg was the strongest, most reliable, always called upon by surgeons in bad cases. Her broad, free Western life had given her health and vigor, her Christian home had "built up character."

Just as the midnight doctor went his rounds in Meg's ward, and the other nurses had gone to rest, a pitiful cry startled them. It was outside the door. In their arms two rough drivers of an ambulance carried a small boy not more than twelve years old. "Say, doctor, them two chaps was just picked up close to Long Bridge and tumbled in. We was too full already, but here they be," pointing to another lifeless-looking boy, who was laid on the floor by the door. Together the doctor and Meg made them beds, dressed their wounds, and put them side by side—the blue and the gray.

A handkerchief, torn and dirty, was tied around the elder boy's neck. In some mother's hand was written "Edward Raymond," and on the band of his flannel shirt was sewed "E. R." The blue clothes were ragged and dusty, the boyish hands scratched and bleeding.

The morning was gray and light before Meg saw signs of life in either small, pinched face. How she worked; bathing, rubbing, giving restoratives and tenderest care. At last, in a sad fashion, Edward said feebly, "Hold on, Bob! Hold—on— It's—getting light— Bob—I hear—a wagon."

Meg knelt over the little boy and—he wondered if he had gone home—it seemed so beautiful. He drank the beef tea eagerly, and held to Meg's hands as though human power could give him back all he had lost.

"Bob! here we are! Bob! I see your mother! We've got there! Open your eyes and look!" His young voice rang through the hospital ward, and old men and boys turned their pale faces to see who it was. The little comrade in gray lay pallid and sinking. Edward grew stronger.

"Can't you bring him to? We died both together, and now we must stay together after coming to life again. Oh, Miss, do work over him." Edward crawled off his own cot and knelt by the quiet face, passing his hands over it, laying his small, brown head on the fair, curly one, sobbing, "Oh, Bob! don't die, don't die and leave me!"

Little by little the old story was told of a dreadful battle; the drummer boy in blue, wounded, and left as dead; an army driven back. The Confederates also passed him by, "dead, poor child." Bob, with a ball in his shoulder, he said, was left by his own company in the corner of the fence—"the little fellow who carried water," unable to march farther.

Just how far they had crawled, just how many hours they had lain in the sun, or just how Bob had found Edward, no one could tell; "but Bob was a dandy to me, Miss! He gave me water. O, how good it was! And he said his mother lived close by, and she was lovely, and would cure us both, and, somehow, we got here!"

"Robert Lee Carroll," marked his underclothing. Evidently named for General Lee. "Carroll" is a common name in Maryland and Virginia. Oh, thought Meg, only to find his mother! The blue eyes were so sad. He coughed and had slight hemorrhages. Edward helped Meg in the ward and grew strong; but Bob was wasting away.

July burned into August in this Southern air. Battles grew thicker; and heavier the losses. Washington was only a city of moans and pitiful sights.

"Now, Doctor," said Meg one day, "I have it. I'm going to see Mr. Lincoln myself, and am going now. All this fuss about passes, he can soon put to an end."

The next morning Miss Margaret Wright was shown into the office of President Lincoln's secretary. Nobody could ever know what an awful thumping and palpitating of the heart she had.

"Mr. Lincoln will see you, Miss."

At his big table sat a dark, quiet man. He rose, reached out his hand and said, "Good-morning, daughter. What can I do for you?"

"Daughter!" The President calling her daughter! Meg had a shock of joy! Her courage grew all in a minute, great as the world! She stood close by him as he sat down. She feared no blunder. She felt such an acquaintance, somehow, away down in the heart.

Her eyes shone as she hurriedly told the story in simple words of her two boys—the blue and the gray. "Mr. Lincoln, Bob is no bigger than your little Tad. His father, I know, is in the Rebel army, somewhere; but this child is as loyal to his old ragged, gray jacket as your Tad would be to the blue, sir! and he is sick and can never get well, and he wants his own mother, if I can find her! Please send me into Virginia protected—and—"

Mr. Lincoln asked, "Can you get through the lines in this August sun with a sick boy? You are rash, child. Sympathy is good, but you are unwise to endanger your own young life."

"Mr. Lincoln, I came from Illinois. I lived all my young life on a big farm close to you. (Meg's courage kept swelling up more and more.) I've come to Washington with all my heart in the work of taking care of the soldiers. God has thrown this little waif into my arms, in our midst, and you and I must take him home, sir! My mother taught me, away back on that western farm, in our beautiful prairie home, that we are to 'minister,' and 'to walk in the light.' Now I see this way plain, if you will only help me. Don't refuse!"

A few scratches of the pen, a messenger came in. Mr. Lincoln said, "Give this to Secretary Stanton; wait for his answer."

"Little girl, the boy shall go home, if he has one. God knows. An escort and conveyance will be at your hospital to-morrow. Go in the cool of the morning, You will cross Long Bridge with safety. God bless you, and go with you."

Mr. Lincoln rose, ran his long fingers through the straggling locks of hair on his forehead, and added, "Good-bye, may you get the boy home alive. I would be glad to know his mother had him. One's boy—is—dear."

Mr. Lincoln followed Meg to his door, and the great shining of his sad eyes, about which the world has talked so much, came at mention of little Tad, and somebody's boys.

A few years afterward, when Meg was standing on the platform of a crowded train, and the great procession of mourning moved with such wondrous love westward, she sobbed: "How good he was to me and my boys, and to all the world! God pity his lonely little Tad!"

Bob leaned against the cushions in the ambulance with his faithful nurse and friend to cheer him up. Bottles of tonic and medicine from the good doctor, and blessings showered on his curly head from all in the ward. Near Fairfax Court House, undisturbed by war, they found the Carrolls' home, and into the wildest and happiest mother's arms Meg put her boy.

A long story of illness and death, grief, desolation and pain would only be one of thousands just like the little boy in gray. The little "blue comrade" watched him to the last, and from his home in the far North, still comes to the small grave in Virginia with memories and flowers.

And that was long ago. Meg did "minister" in a wide way, but when the war was over and with her father she went back to the beautiful wide fields of grain, the golden harvests of corn, the old farm-house, like a gray nest in the vines and porches, she saw a great light! a light never to grow dim; she had walked in that light though thousands of miles away. Its clear shining made lonely places bright, and all unseen by other than God and her own heart, gave her just the strength she needed.

What proportions the clean, roomy kitchen took on! How the doors and windows, the old-fashioned paint and furnishings grew into a "palace of content" and beauty! The shining rows of tins at the door, and the little step where she read the Sunday-school lesson that Saturday night when her heart rebelled at the "narrow life."

The detail of summer and winter work, the clouds, the skies, the birds and trees, all "ministered unto her" in hymns of praise. Meg's example is but one in a great world; but don't we magnify our crosses, and walk in shadow when there is light for us? Let us open all the doors and windows, watching for the work God sends, small or great. He knows what is best for us. Thus, Christ is with us, and the significance of that is deep beyond all words.

"If we walk in the light we have fellowship one with another."

Washington, D. C.

RELATION OF BAD COOKERY TO INTEMPERANCE.

BY J. H. KELLOGG, M. D

The relation of bad cookery to intemperance is not often considered, and, in fact, not generally understood. Nevertheless it is true that intemperance and unhealthful, unhygienic cookery are often related to each other by laws of cause and effect. In the first place, bad cookery leads to indigestion, and frequently the indigestion leads to the taking of bitters of some sort to correct it—a remedy which is worse than the disease. The victim goes first to a doctor who prescribes some variety of tonic bitters, ready prepared or otherwise, and in a little time, the man gets to buying bitters for himself. I was reading the other day of a man found drunk on the streets with a bottle which had held "Plantation Bitters" in his pocket. A man can get drunk on almost any variety of the popular bitters advertised. Richardson's bitters contain sixty per cent of alcohol more than the best Scotch whisky. Saloons keep patent medicine bitters of various sorts on their shelves, for many of their customers prefer them to other drinks.

Bitter substances do stimulate the stomach, and are thus a temporary aid to digestion; but their help is simply what the whip is to an overworked horse. They impart no strength and in the end, leave the stomach worse than they find it. Using bitters to-day only makes the demand still more urgent for them to-morrow.

Spices and condiments in the seasoning of food also lead to intemperance in the cultivation of a taste for hot, smarting substances. They create a craving for more food than can be digested and for liquors as well. Persons who do not know how to cook, seek to make food palatable by using spices and condiments to hide defects. Really good cookery consists in increasing the digestibility and improving the palatableness of food. Bad cookery ignores the natural flavors of foods and adds a variety of high seasonings which render it still more indigestible than the unskilled preparations would be without them.

The more serious and deeper reason why high seasonings lead to intemperance is in the perversion of the use of the sense of taste. Certain senses are given us to add to our pleasure as well as for the practical, almost indispensable use they are to us. For instance, the sense of sight is not only useful but enables us to drink in beauty, if among beautiful surroundings, without doing us any harm. The same of music and other harmonies which may come to us through the sense of hearing. But the sense of taste was given us to distinguish between wholesome and unwholesome foods, and cannot be used for merely sensuous gratification without debasing and making of it a gross thing. An education which demands special enjoyment or pleasure through the sense of taste is wholly artificial; it is coming down to the animal plane, or below it, rather, for the instinct of the brute creation teaches it merely to eat to live.

Yet think how widespread this habit of sensuous gratification through the sense of taste is. If we call upon a neighbor, the first thing is to offer refreshments of some kind, as though the greatest blessing of life came from indulging the appetite. This evil is largely due to wrong education which begins with childhood. When Johnnie sits down to the table, the mother says, "Johnnie, what would you like?" instead of putting plain, wholesome food before the child, and taking it as a matter of course that he will eat it and be satisfied. The child grows to think that he must have what he likes whether it is good for him or not. It is not strange that an appetite thus pampered in childhood becomes uncontrollable at maturity, for the step from gormandizing to intoxicants is much shorter than most people imagine. The natural, unperverted taste of a child will lead him to eat that which is good for him. But how can we expect the children to reform when the parents continually set them such bad examples in the matter of eating and drinking?

The cultivation of a taste for spices is a degradation of the sense of taste. Nature never designed that pleasure should be divorced from use. The effects of gratifying the sense of taste differ materially from those of gratifying the higher senses of sight and hearing. What we see is gone; nothing remains but the memory; and the same is true of the sweetest sounds which may reach us through the ears. But what we taste is swallowed into the stomach, and what has thus given us a brief pleasure through the gratification of the palate, must make work in the alimentary canal for fourteen hours before it is finally disposed of.

We may smile with contempt upon the practice of the Romans in their degenerate days of providing a "vomitorium" adjoining the dining-room, where guests who had surfeited until their stomachs could retain no more, could retire and empty them by emetic; but, after all, it was better than the practice of continual eating for the sake of gratifying the sense of taste, and keeping the stomach constantly at work upon all sorts of indigestible things. Feasters of the present day are on a level with those who gathered around Nero's table.

Many people treat their stomach as if it were a pocket; in truth, they put things into it that they would be shy of putting into their pockets—Limburger cheese, for instance. But no one has a right to eat or drink except to meet the demands of the body, and wholesome, nutritious, unseasoned food can always be prepared so as to be palatable to an unperverted taste. Of course it takes more skill to cook simple foods so that their natural flavors shall be preserved than it does to rob them of natural flavors by poor cookery, and supply the deficiency by using a plentiful amount of condiments. So it behooves every one who has these important matters of health and temperance at heart, to learn scientific cookery. We have senses through which we may seek enjoyment, and which will lead us to a higher plane, but using the sense of taste for personal gratification can never be anything but debasing to young or old.

Battle Creek Sanitarium.

A BUSINESS MAN'S OPINION OF PROHIBITION.

BY S. A. KEAN.

[A. G. Wolfenbarger, Esq., of Nebraska, wrote to Mr. S. A. Kean, banker of Chicago, asking his opinion upon several points regarding the effect of the success of the prohibitory amendment upon business. The answers are so good and of such wide application that we have secured them to give our readers.—Ed.]

In answer to your first question: "What is your opinion based upon the experience and observation as a business man, as to the influence of prohibition upon general business?" I am now, and always have been of the opinion that the influence of prohibition upon business is good. I do not see how it could be otherwise. Business based upon the liquor traffic, especially as now conducted, in my judgment, is immoral and dangerous, and will in the end honey-comb the moral foundations of business in this country if permitted to continue. Business not founded upon moral principles must fall of its own weight in due course.

Second question: "Do you believe that prohibition of the liquor traffic will result in the decreasing of real estate values, stopping immigration, and decreasing the deposits in banks?" No, it will increase the value of real estate in the long run. There are even many drinking people who prefer a prohibition state, because of the better surroundings, and hence, the safety of their families; but those who are determined to carry on the liquor traffic, and the allies of the saloon, would leave a prohibition state, or keep away from it, but this number is comparatively small and their places would be more than filled with a more desirable class of citizens. If the whisky traffic was out of the way, the same property, money and energy would all be used in other business, and a larger number of men would be employed, which would increase rather than decrease values. Men who waste their money in drink, do not as a rule have money to deposit in banks. It is true that the brewer and saloon-keeper would have money, but these same men engaged in other business would also have money which they could deposit in the bank. I give the following incident by way of illustration:

Sometime ago a certain manufacturer in the East paid his men $1,000 on Saturday night, but before parting with the money marked it in order to ascertain where it would bring up. On the following Tuesday it was found that $600 out of the $1,000 had found its way into the banks through the saloon-keepers and brewers. If these men had spent that money in buying clothing and provision for their families, it would have gone into the banks all the same, through the merchants, and the clothing and provision interest, as well as the farmer, would have been advanced to that extent less the very small amount of grain which might have been "rotted" for the purpose of furnishing drink for these men.

Third question: "Do you consider prohibition an injury or help to business in cities where the same has been tried?" A help, in proportion as the law has been enforced. Atlanta, Ga., is a good illustration of this when they enjoyed prohibition there.

Fourth question: "If you were purchasing bonded securities, would the fact that the state in which these municipal bonds were issued, was under prohibitory policy in relation to liquor, have a tendency to depreciate the value of such municipal paper? No; other things being equal we should consider the fact of prohibition an advantage rather than a disadvantage. You say an Omaha paper has used the name of our firm in connection with our refusal to take certain securities in Nebraska on account of prospective prohibition. This is the first intimation I have had of any such use of our name, and it is certainly as far from the truth as possible. We purchased some bonds of your city a while ago, and there was some delay in our taking them up on account of some legal difficulties. As soon as your city officials were able to correct these points, we took up the bonds. I certainly hope the Prohibition amendment will pass, not only for the interest of your state both morally and financially, but for that of the entire country.

Let nothing disturb thee,
Nothing affright thee;
All things are passing;
God never changeth:
Patient endurance
Attaineth to all things:
Who God possesseth
In nothing is wanting.
Alone God sufficeth. —Longfellow.

CALL

FOR THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION OF 1890.

The following official documents from the state of Georgia were received during the last annual meeting of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held in the city of Chicago in the year 1889.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 28, 1889.

To the Officers and Delegates of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union:

The subscribers hereto, officials and citizens of the state of Georgia and city of Atlanta, respectfully indorse the invitation to your eminent and philanthropic body to hold its next annual National convention, in the autumn of 1890, in this the capital city of the state of Georgia.

In support of this most cordial invitation we beg to emphasize the fact that Georgia is one of the foremost states of the South and the Union in wise and efficient temperance sentiment and laws; that our people are keenly alive to the great concerns of religion, morality and good government; that they are deeply interested in all beneficent social reforms; and that they are ardent and skilled in the duties of hospitality and helpful patriotism.

Your body will find among us a sincere coöperation in your labors and every good office to further the harmony, wisdom and success of your deliberations for the general good.

J. B. Gordon, Governor.
N. C. Barnett, Secretary of State.
Wm. A. Wright, Comp. Gen.
R. U. Hardeman, Treas. Ga.
J. T. Henderson, Coms. Agr.
Jas. S. Hook, State School Com. for Ga.
F. G. Du Bigvon, Pres. State Senate.
A. S. Clay, Speaker of House.

Accompanying this was a copy of the resolution adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of Georgia, cordially requesting the Woman's Christian Temperance Union to act favorably upon the invitation, and tendering for the use of the convention the rooms and halls of the old State Capitol.

These invitations were inclosed in a letter from Sam W. Small, heartily seconding them, and saying that Mayor John T. Glenn, of Atlanta, for himself and the city officials cordially indorse and urge the invitation, and that every provision will be made for the entertainment of the delegates and the accommodation of the convention.

In response to these invitations and with gratitude therefor, the 17th annual meeting of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the city of Atlanta, Ga., from Friday, Nov. 14 to Nov. 18, inclusive.

The first meeting of the executive committee will be on Wednesday, Nov. 12. On the same day the board of superintendents will meet. On Thursday, November 13, the Plan of Work committee, consisting of the executive committee and the board of superintendents, will meet. All these meetings will open at nine o'clock a. m.

Mrs. M. L. McLendon, 117 Washington street, Atlanta, chairman of the committee of entertainment, will soon give, through The Union Signal, all necessary information concerning the entertainment of delegates, and board at hotels and private boarding houses.

Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., our faithful and efficient committee on railroad rates, will also give schedule of reduced rates at an early date.

Unparalleled peace and prosperity have been within our walls the past year, for which our hearts overflow with thanksgiving, and that we may unitedly give unto our Lord the glory, and together seek His blessing upon our membership, we ask that October 29 be set apart as a day of prayer and thanksgiving. A program will be prepared for a morning and an afternoon meeting on that day. The weekly prayer meeting of the church is usually held on Wednesday, Thursday or Friday evening. Our women are a part of the church militant, hoping with others to join the triumphant host, when we "have fought the good fight, finished the course" and "kept the faith."

So great has been our reënforcement from the church this year that we believe the children of God will gladly "lift their eyes (with ours) unto the hills from whence cometh our help." Let each union, therefore, request that at these meetings special prayer shall be offered for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon our membership, and especially upon those who may gather at Atlanta, that "the power of the Highest may overshadow" the meeting; that whatsoever we do shall be to the glory of God, in whom alone is our trust.

Frances E. Willard, Pres.
Mary A. Woodbridge, Rec. Sec.

Headquarters Nat. W. C. T. U.,
Chicago, August 20, 1890.

World's W. C. T. U.

MRS. LEAVITT IN HOLLAND.

My Dear Sisters:—I had no introductions to people in Belgium that made it seem possible to hold meetings in that country; I should therefore have passed through without stopping, had I not wished to converse with King Leopold about the Congo. Our minister was absent, but a Belgian gentleman, employed as secretary at our legation, exerted himself so effectually, that without going through the usual routine of formalities, an audience was granted, and for forty minutes we talked of those things that seem to me most injurious to the natives and most debasing to the officials and traders and therefore the greatest hindrance to the progress of the country.

As has always been the case with royal and other high personages, King Leopold was very polite, very simple in his manners. It is only low people clothed in a little brief authority who put on airs, and think to exalt themselves by debasing others.

A journey of a few hours over a perfectly level country, cut into very small fields by deep ditches, and highly cultivated, brought me to the house of Madame Klerck, at The Hague. I noticed many beautiful avenues of trees in Holland, and yet I missed the finest, which is at Harlem. These avenues seem to be a specialty in this country. On the evening of my arrival a meeting had been arranged at which Madame Klerck was to present the purity cause, and I the temperance. A small hall had been taken, under the same roof as a larger one. On arrival we found such a crowd that not half could be seated, and therefore adjourned to the larger hall, and it was full, although many had gone away discouraged before the change was made. It was a very pleasant occasion. The Countess Anna de Hogendorp, sister of Madame Klerck, interpreted for me, and most admirably, as those who know both languages told me, and as I perceived by the effect upon the audience.

Almost all the upper and well-educated classes in Holland speak English, French and German as fluently as their own language. "We are obliged to learn the languages of the large countries, as they will not take the trouble to learn ours," said Madame Klerck.

On Monday I went to Zeist, to the house of Mrs. van Loon, who lives in Amsterdam, but has a summer residence at Zeist. In Napoleon's time, his brother, the King of Holland, visited the town, saw and examined the house of Mrs. van Loon's grandfather, took a fancy to it, and ordered it vacated in one week's time for his own use. The owner had to take two houses to accommodate his large family—but the unroyal King never came to live in the house thus vacated for him.

I had taken cold on Sunday sitting in a draft in church, and my voice nearly left me; still I managed to get through with the meetings that had been arranged, one at Amsterdam, one at Harlem, and one at a fishing town near Harlem. Rev. Adama van Scheltema has been the pioneer in temperance work in Holland, and a most admirable one. He has raised money and built in Amsterdam the "William House," a substantial and handsome brick building of two stories, which is dedicated to temperance. The lower floor is mostly occupied with school-rooms; the upper, with school-rooms and an auditorium. The schools are free to the children of the poor. Careful religious instruction is given, and our own system of scientific temperance education is thoroughly carried out. Diagrams and charts in abundance were shown me. I looked with pleasure into room after room of happy little creatures, most of them as white as milk and with eyes as blue as the sky, and listened to their sweet singing. I did not hear one child bawling nor shouting. Every voice was as clear and sweet as the birds. Rev. van Scheltema's work is for total abstinence; he is himself upon that ground, but very few conceive as yet that any but drunkards and the children of the poor can be benefited by this practice. Wine was upon every table. The two charming young daughters of a pastor at whose house I was entertained, not only took wine and stout, but argued vehemently in favor of it. Apparently what I had to say produced no effect.

Rev. van Scheltema, now nearing his eightieth year, has been obliged to relinquish the care of his work to other hands mainly, but he has able and faithful helpers to carry it on, and when the founder has passed on to his rest the work will not cease. Mr. van Scheltema still writes much, and translates voluminously hymns and temperance songs, as well as prose. Mrs. van Loon bears nearly, if not quite, half the expense of the "William House." Rev. van Scheltema has founded work in most of the cities of Holland.

I was obliged to refuse an invitation to Rotterdam, and also to speak at a temperance not total abstinence anniversary, on account of the condition of my chest and voice. Hence I sat some days quite silent at Amsterdam and Zeist. At the latter place my window commanded a view of a bit of water beyond a beautiful flower garden, lawn and shrubbery, and beyond this a deer park with its pretty occupants, the whole walled in by varied, undulating lines of trees. The cool northern summer pinches me thus far, but I hope it will grow warmer as the season advances and I reach still higher latitudes. It is easy to read good print till nine o'clock now, and I can sew on black work till quarter to nine. The daylight is not out of the sky till ten o'clock, and begins to come in at two in the morning.

Could I have found one lady of sufficient age and influence to take the position of National president of W. C. T. U. I think a "following" could have been secured, but I could not find this lady, therefore, I thought it best not to appoint, nor to organize at present, as I am fully convinced it is unwise to form a union unless its officers are suitable ladies, considering the circumstances and ways of thinking in the place. Rev. van Scheltema approves of this course, though he is very anxious to have the Women's Work brought into a vital union with the W. C. T. U. Rev. van Scheltema gave me twenty-five gilders, about ten dollars, and Mrs. van Loon one hundred and fifty marks, which is about $38, beside paying my fare to Berlin.

Holland is beautiful, but it is a peculiar beauty. The broad horizon's lofty dome of sky, the wealth of verdure, the picturesque white and spotted cows up to their knees in grass, the profusion of red poppies on the edge of every ditch, and sometimes filling a field, the blue cornflowers below the heads of the ripening wheat, showing themselves on the borders of every piece of grain, whole fields of mustard in full bloom, with the substantial brick cottages always spotlessly clean, certainly are beautiful, if there are no mountains. Paris streets and houses are swept and rubbed till they shine, but Holland streets and houses are washed till they are sweet as well as bright.

I have an idea that when our Pilgrim mothers came here to live, the mode of cleaning struck them favorably. They were so godly they must have loved everything that would promote cleanliness, therefore I think they carried the fashion with them to America, and it has come down to the present time.

Among the fish-wives of the villages there are still many relics of costumes. A curious brass band is worn around the head, and on either temple a coil of brass wire, that gives the effect of rams' horns. White caps are arranged to give the same outline. With their multitudinous ample skirts, these fish-women succeed in making themselves nearly as broad as slender young girls did during the reign of crinoline, and almost as thick as these same fashionable damsels when "bustles" and "dress improvers" ruled the hour.

Again, I had no strength to explore the cities I visited. I saw only a gallery of paintings at The Hague, many of which I enjoyed because of the absence of the unsightly blotchy work that ruins so many pictures to-day; many more I enjoyed for their fidelity to nature, the admirable management of light and shade, while a few had all good qualities united to a great degree. The faces of the observers at "The Dissecting Lesson," by Rubens, are wonderful, though the lower part of the picture is distressing! "The Bull" is an admirable, almost wonderful painting of a fine animal.

On the 26th of June I bade good-bye to the last kind friend in Holland, and came straight east over a very level country, four hundred miles, to Berlin. At one of the way stations a young man entered, about six feet tall and statuesquely molded—but what a waste of material! Six feet of splendidly proportioned manhood to bear about that insignificant head, that vacant face, that eye full of nothingness! Surely four and a half feet of height would have given sufficient prominence to such a headpiece. As usual the Custom House at the frontier gave me the least possible bother, but as I had to wait for a porter to take my hand luggage back to the train, I was thrust, at the last moment, into a smoking compartment in which there was one person only, and he of the stronger sex. He lay sleeping all along one side of the compartment, and his various bags and parcels carefully placed in all the seats on the other. The conductor removed the luggage to the floor, I sat down opposite the boots. The bang of the door opened the eyes of the sleeper, and on perceiving me they shot forth angry beams. I proceeded to employ myself silently with my knitting and viewed the landscape diligently. But presently the person put one foot on the floor, pulled himself a little toward the sitting posture, drew his other foot close up to his person, and in this unseemly attitude addressed me in German in very rude tones. Although I comprehended what he said, the circumstances and the tones helping me to piece out the meaning of two or three words I knew, I said, "I do not speak German." He then said in English, for it was his native tongue, "Don't you know that this is a smoking compartment, and that you ought not to be here?" I explained the circumstances, when he said, "I was very careful to take a smoking compartment, for when I want to smoke I want to be free to do it." To which I replied, "I assure you I am not here from my own choice, but since it is a smoking car I will not be offended if you smoke." "Of course a gentleman cannot smoke in a lady's presence, and I want to be free to smoke." I turned to the landscape, and after some reiteration of sentences used above, he relapsed into silence.

When nearly ready to move on from the next station he said, "If you ask the conducteur he will find you a place in another carriage." "I was told there was no other place." He sprang to the door and began to shout in very energetic but broken German, in which I distinguished "smoking," "lady," "take out," but the crowd of officials which had collected shook their heads, and we moved off. As we were slowing up at the next station I stood at the door and asked the conductor in English if he could not find another place for me. He replied in fair English, "Come down, yes, I find place." Again it was with one gentleman, but he was one in reality, and though I did not enter into conversation on account of great hoarseness, he gave me names of places and rivers in the kindest manner, and on arrival asked if he could serve me, or if friends would meet me, raised his hat, and bade me good evening. A moment after Mrs. Willard's face beamed upon me, and Dr. Bottome, whose mother was formerly one of our National superintendents, was introduced, so, without care or trouble I was soon at Mrs. Willard's and before midnight in bed.

Mary Clement Leavitt.

(To be Continued.)

OUR SECOND ROUND-THE-WORLD MISSIONARY.

Leaving Kobe, I again took passage on the French Mail bound for Shanghai, to attend the General Missionary Conference of China. For some months I had been looking forward to this gathering as the great opportunity for the W. C. T. U. work in China. The Empire is so vast, travel so slow, and distances so great, it would take several years to visit all the places to be represented by delegates at this gathering. Much thought had been given to studying the needs of China, and what our society could do to carry on a reform among the Chinese.

The last Conference was held thirteen years ago, and at that time when a woman was called upon to bring her methods of work before the Conference the chairman left the chair, while others left the place in tears, and still others protested, saying "It is unscriptural for woman to speak on such occasions." But thirteen years have rolled away, years of progress and enlightenment. The opening of the Conference furnished conclusive evidence that the "world do move," even out here. One of the first things done was to make all lady delegates present, including missionaries' wives, "voting members of the Conference, with all the privileges of the floor." The result was greeted with storms of applause. Next day a friend of the cause introduced a resolution to this effect:

Whereas, Miss Jessie Ackerman, a representative of the National W. C. T. U. of America, is laboring in China in the interest of a society that is, without doubt, the greatest moral force outside the church,

Resolved, That an evening be given, and this Conference invite Miss Ackerman to bring her important work before us.

This resolution brought about a storm of discussion. There was strong feeling on both sides, and after a heated debate the resolution was carried by an overwhelming majority. A rare opportunity was given to bring the work before nearly five hundred missionaries scattered over four millions of square miles, and working among four hundred millions of people.

The evening meeting was crowded, and all seemed very much interested to learn of the work, its extent and methods. As a result of the meeting a resolution was passed "that a committee of seven be appointed to devise means for the suppression of the use of liquor and opium among the Chinese." A National W. C. T. U. for China was formed, with Mrs. M. J. Farnham, of Shanghai, as president, Mrs. Dr. L. Lyal, of Swatow, as secretary; other officers and fifteen vice-presidents were found ready to help carry on the work. Mrs. Farnham is a most efficient worker; for many years she has labored in China, and her thorough knowledge of the natives and their needs will enable her to carry on the work as few could. Added to this, her husband is a very warm friend of the cause, and has great faith in woman's work. He is, and has long been, engaged in translation; this will be a great advantage, as all the literature must be translated.

I must not close without saying a word about the Conference, the largest Christian body that ever gathered in a heathen land; between four and five hundred delegates, representing every hue and shade of religious belief, came from the North and the South, the East and the West, some traveling thousands of miles. Two men were some months on the way, having walked the better part of two thousand miles; one lady and gentleman came seven hundred miles in an ox cart, and were six weeks on the way. Some ladies came from the inland stations, and traveled in small house boats most of the distance; oars were the only means of propelling their boat.

Hudson Taylor, called "the Paul of the nineteenth century," came all the way from London. The delegates were some weeks in gathering, but the opening of the Conference found them all on hand. Hudson Taylor preached the Conference sermon. He is a man of striking appearance, very low of stature, with a voice soft and gentle as a woman's. His hair falls in wavy locks to his shoulders, and his mild eye says what his lips may fail to express. His topic was, "Christ feeding the multitudes." As we heard that strong sermon we did not wonder that he was able to carry on a self-supporting mission, for his faith is great.

Seventy-eight delegates from his mission were present. It was a strange sight to see these men and women, young and old, dressed in native dress; it is one of the rules of the mission that all who join them shall wear native dress; it is their belief that they can go through the land and attract less attention to themselves by dressing as the people do. Of course there is a great diversity of opinion on the subject among the missionaries, but three hundred and eighty-two of that mission believe themselves called upon to adopt this dress, and it was a very strange sight.

I cannot write at length of the Conference, it was such a great affair; two weeks of uninterrupted meetings, three sessions a day, forty-five meetings in all. It was a great drain upon our strength, but all felt they could not afford to miss anything. Two things of great moment were accomplished. The Presbyterians are divided into several branches; there was a call for union; all the bodies united and are to be known as the Presbyterians of China. There was great rejoicing among them, and a special season of thanksgiving was held.

For years the oldest workers had been looking forward to a time when they should have one translation of the Bible; heretofore any one who felt moved to translate the Word, did so, and the translations numbered a score or more; but the Conference desired to appoint a committee, every denomination to be represented, to bring out one translation to be adopted by all missions. When this was carried every one seemed overcome; old men wept like children, proceedings ceased at once and prayers of thanksgiving were offered, that this great body, representing so many creeds and shades of belief, all agreed that the Word of life must be given to this people in the very best way.

During the Conference a shocking accident occurred that filled our hearts with terror for awhile. An enterprising photographer asked the Conference to sit for a photograph, the artist erected staging, ten tiers of seats twenty feet high, and we all took our seats prepared to look our sweetest, when the props gave way and we were thrown to the ground, a great struggling mass of humanity. The scene could not be described; four hundred or more falling one upon another beggars description. After great confusion the last one was rescued from the wreck and it was learned none were killed. One lady had two ribs broken, two had their ankles sprained and another lost her memory and has never been able to recall anything in connection with that day and the accident; when taken ten days later to view the scene, even that failed to assist her in calling to mind what had happened; the Doctor is of the opinion she will never remember it. All who were able to attend service went at once to a church where a praise and thanksgiving meeting was held, all deeply grateful that we had escaped injury.

The Conference closed with a general prayer meeting; it was good to be there; heaven seemed nearer and Christ seemed dearer than ever before. "God be with you till we meet again," was sung by all present, and we parted feeling it was a blessed thing to be about our Master's work. Very soon I left for the South expecting to take passage for Australia, but am delayed some days and have come up to Canton where I am the guest of a young and gifted W. C. T. U. worker from Pennsylvania, Miss Lilian Ruth Shaffner.

The United States Minister is here to try to adjust some claims put in by missionaries for damage to property some four years ago; the minister called upon the viceroy, and after great discussion the matter was settled and the minister received the viceroy's check to cover the amount. There has been great rejoicing over this victory. The United States Consul gave a dinner to celebrate the event, some thirty Americans were present.

The American man-of-war on which our minister is traveling is stationed here. I was invited to hold services aboard last Sabbath. Dr. Sickafoose, of Oregon, and Miss Shaffner went with me; the young lady, who is but twenty-two or three years old, captivated all present by her singing.

The United States minister and consul favored us with their presence, and the service brought us very near each other. That away off here in a land of such darkness, we could gather beneath the stars and stripes in peace and safety, and worship God in our own way, sing songs of praise and offer prayers of thanksgiving was a privilege for which we were very thankful.

Since coming South I have had another attack of fever; the doctor ordered me home for a year of perfect rest and I made every preparation, and had decided to take the next steamer for America, but am so much better after this short rest that I feel moved to go on, though I feel my strength giving out, but am hoping as I reach the cool weather of Australia, I shall regain my former strength.

I find the way

"Sometimes lonely and dangerous, too,
But Jesus is able to carry me through."

I would urge upon all sisters that this mission shall be remembered in your prayers. I am often perplexed and scarcely know which way to go. I must hearken long for the voice to say, "I will guide thee with mine eye," almost fearing I may go the wrong way. The work of Australia is most interesting, and in many places where we have no work the Good Templars are preparing a way for me; they have done much to help me and I am deeply indebted to them for all their kindness. We are all praying for great work in Australia, and I hope to be able to form a hundred or more unions.

Canton, China. JESSIE A. ACKERMAN.

Our Book Table.

From Lee and Shepard, Boston, come three books widely different in character, each with strongly marked characteristics of its own. The first is SELECTIONS FROM ROBERT BROWNING, selected and arranged by Mrs. Albert Nelson Bullens. It is a book of 350 pages and the selections are made to show as well as can be done in that compass, what Browning is in his varying moods and tenses. As is fitting in such a book, the poems selected are those which will make Browning known and loved by the common reader rather than those which afford delightful study to Browning clubs. The first half of the volume is devoted to his Love Poems, whose universal language speaks to all human hearts. Here are his well known "Evelyn Hope," "James Lee's Wife," "Two in the Campagna," "Count Gismond," "A Forgiveness," and "Summum Bonum." This section closes with "Good Beatrice Signorini." In the second division of the book, Miscellaneous Poems, are some of his best short poems, as "All Service Ranks the Same with God;" "How they Brought the Good News from Ghent to Aix;" "Andrea Del Sarto;" "The Patriot," and from his longer poems selections which will make the reader desire to read the whole. A very fine portrait of Browning forms the frontispiece; paper, printing, and binding are worthy of the contents, and together make up a volume one likes to have close at hand in his library. Price $1.

The second volume is No. 1 of GOOD COMPANY SERIES, but its name promises anything rather than good company, "The Blind Men and The Devil." Name and opening are repellant; at first we read only from a sense of duty. Soon the weird, strange story grows upon us and fascinates us; and, as we read, dimly and ghost-like its characters, its deeper meanings, rise before us. The wrongs and woes that the "Crushers" are inflicting upon humanity, the pitiless battle for bread, and the cries for bread that are answered only with a stone; the grasping greed of the world's "Sour-joints," worst of all the eyes, now stone blind, that were made to take in God's sunlight—all are brought home to us in a way startling because of its newness. There are many fine bits of satire in the book, like the lawyer's "tentacles"; the water-carriers who persuaded the people to vote them the lake, on their guarantee to furnish them water "at reasonable rates"; the chamber that all doctors and lawyers were pledged to patronize, so that they need not fear hunger, "and therefore there will be no excuse for resorting to unprofessional conduct," and others. But the picture all through is dark, lighted up by few rays of sunlight. Almost the only one is that of Hill's Observation Table, where, simply for love of them and of the light, Hill would take the children that, looking afar off to the light, their eyes might not lose the power of seeing. Wrong triumphs, or, if it is overthrown, it crushes Right in its downfall. Leete, noblest of the cavern dwellers, dies in the death struggle which rids the world of Sour-joint. It pictures what the world would be with God shut out of it. A gleam of light comes at the end, prefiguring what womanly devotion may do for the sorrowing world, but only the touch of Omnipotence can open those blind eyes. The book is a good one for thoughtful people to read; none others will understand it. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.50.

The third is MARION GRAHAM, by Meta Lander, well known to our readers as the author of "The Tobacco Problem," and "Light on the Dark River." MARION GRAHAM was first written several years ago, has been held by its author "to ripen," and is now given to the public, having received its author's finishing retouches, as the product of her ripened thought. Like "Robert Elsmere," with which Dr. Peabody, of Harvard, compares or rather contrasts it, it deals with deep problems of love and of loyalty to Christ. It is needless to say to those who know Meta Lander (Mrs. Margaret Woods Lawrence) that its outcome is totally different; its infidel hero, though separated from Marion, is led out of darkness to Him who is "the Way, the Truth and the Life." Most story readers will think that its "preachments" and quotations from famous authors are too long, but through them are brought out the thoughts by which the author leads many dissatisfied with sectarian teaching or dead creeds, from these husks to the golden kernels which they often conceal—from man-made theories to God's eternal truth. Price $1.50.

PRACTICAL SANITARY AND ECONOMIC COOKING, by Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel, published by the American Health Association.

This book is the essay which won the Lomb prize of $500, among seventy competitors. The object of Mr. Lomb in offering this prize—one of many offered by him—was to secure a work which would assist in teaching people how to cook healthy and economical food. It was specified that this cooking should be adapted for three classes; those of moderate means, those of small means, and those who may be called poor. Mrs. Abel has covered the ground admirably. Her directions are explicit, clear and sensible; she teaches how to utilize to the best advantage all food stuffs, thus teaching economy. Her treatment of the subject is scientific, while giving recipes in such simple, plain language that the unlearned can understand; she arranges every bill of fare so that it shall contain the healthful proportions of proteids, fats, carbohydrates, and directs carefully the cooking of each dish. The suggestions she gives to the mother of the family, if fully carried out in every home, would save thousands of dollars and give workers more strength and greater immunity from disease. The American Public Health Association is doing immense good by its publications. They are sent out at actual cost of publication, and philanthropists cannot do better than to aid in circulating them. Single copies of the book before us can be obtained in cloth for forty cents; in paper for thirty-five cents. The German edition sells for sixty and fifty-five cents. Discounts allowed when ordered in quantities. Address American Health Association, P. O. drawer 289, Rochester, N. Y.

From the National Temperance Publication Depot, London, come two temperance songs in sheet music, LIBERTY, by Gertrude E. Smith, and THE EVERLASTING ARMS, words by Edward Faskett, music by Charles Nixon, which will prove welcome additions to the répertoire of temperance singers.

ZIONA, THE BRIDE OF THE KING, by Harriet Warner Re Qua, author of Stones of the Temple, published by Fleming H. Revell, 148 Madison street, Chicago.

The long poem from which this book takes its name gives a vivid picture of the struggles and the final triumph of Christianity under the figure used by Christ Himself, of the church, the bride of the Lamb. The maiden, Ziona, passes through the usual experience of "hewing out broken cisterns" before she will taste the Living Waters and rejects the heavenly message until she learns, by repeated failures, her own helplessness. But at last, in joyful surrender, she gives herself up to the service of her King; serves him faithfully upon earth in the person of "the least of these, His brethren," breaking the bread of life to multitudes to whom it "must needs be broken," bears persecutions and afflictions in the strength of the "Rejected One," and at last in heaven receives the coronation of her bridal crown.

The style is stately, as becomes the subject, the treatment of the theme reverent, and many of the most important facts in the history of the "church militant" are woven into the verse.

A number of short poems fill the remainder of this book's two hundred and twenty-six pages, each in the well-known pure, elevating style of the author.

A PRIMER OF DARWINISM AND ORGANIC EVOLUTION, by J. Y. Bergen, Jr., and Fanny D. Bergen. Being a new edition of the author's former work giving a narrative summary of the principles of the development theory. 12mo. Illustrated. $1.25.

No one can to-day be said to be really well educated without a knowledge of at least the cardinal principles of organic evolution. Such a knowledge can be readily gained from the perusal of this compendious little book. While it is not beyond the comprehension of the average high school pupil, it contains much that will be new to most cultivated people who are not thoroughly familiar with the voluminous works of Darwin, Wallace, Huxley, Haeckel, and the host of other European and American investigators. Lee & Shepard, Boston.

THE BUSINESS WOMAN'S JOURNAL for three past months has given fine portraits of leading women, the June number being embellished with those of Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown, president of the Federation of Clubs, Mrs. Amelia K. Wing, president of the Brooklyn Woman's Club, and Mrs. Phœbe Hearst, president of the Century Club, of San Francisco. In the August number are published portraits of Mrs. May Wright Sewall and Miss Mary Temple, vice-president and corresponding secretary of the Federation of Clubs, also of Mrs. Samuel McKinney, together with other fine illustrations. A poem by Mrs. Amelia K. Wing, and an article by Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown, also appear in this number. In the September number will appear the portraits of Mrs. Ella Dietz Clymer, president of Sorosis, and of Mrs. Laura C. Holloway Langford, president of the Seidl Society. These three numbers can be obtained by club members for twenty-five cents, or by paying fifty-five cents for one year's subscription, a fine collection can be made of the portraits of leading women of the country. Address 38 Park Row, New York City.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

For a two cent stamp, a Temple mite-box, descriptive card, and Temple Bulletin, will be sent to all who send their address to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard.

***

"Give us of your wealth, O people!
Of your nickels, dimes and dollars
That the granite may be quarried,
And the oak be hewn to timber;
That the frame-work may be welded
Strong and firm with bars of iron;
That the work may be accomplished
And the mighty structure lifted."
Then uprose the faithful people,
All the God-loved, cheerful givers;
All the grand white-ribboned army,
All the friends of home protection,
Bands of Hope and Loyal Legions,
Myriad bands of toddling babies;
Came the widow with her farthing,
And the rich man with his thousands,
Each to make some contribution
For the building of the Temple.

Thus wrote Mather D. Kimball over two years ago, in his prophetic poem entitled, "How to Make the Temple Rise."

"All the grand white-ribboned army."

We cannot yet, quite say all, but we can say the circle is rapidly widening, and we doubt not that before the great structure is finished, all will feel (no matter at what sacrifice) that they must have a part in its erection, be it ever so little.

We feel that when a union sends a gift of $10, no matter if they have not pledged any certain amount, they will keep on until the desired sum, $100 is raised, which insures the placing of their names in Willard Hall, so we feel sure that the following unions will all raise $100, although not quite all of them have pledged to do so.

***

Mrs. E. D. Kane, treasurer McKean county W. C. T. U. sends $62.40 on their pledge of $100. The following letter from Miss Robinson, of Girard, Kan., shows the spirit that should animate all unions. She writes, "The Girard W. C. T. U., Mrs. Potter, president sends $11 for the Temple, the contents of our mite-boxes which were opened yesterday. We are a small and struggling union, but want to try and raise $100 for the Temple, and wish this money to be applied as our first installment." Mrs. E. K. Gray, of Rosenhayn, N. J., incloses $10 and sends for thirty mite-boxes for the union. She writes: "I am very desirous for our union to raise $100 for a panel in our beautiful Temple." Mrs. F. A. Jones, Green River, Wyoming, sends $10 for the W. C. T. U. Mrs. K. S. Dean, Bloomington, Ill., sends $13.50 for the union, making $36.50 this union has paid on their pledge. The Chatfield, Minn., W. C. T. U., through Mrs. Alta Dickson, sends $10.44. Mrs. Flora McAchran, president W. C. T. U. Bloomfield, Iowa, sends $10 for the union. Ten dollars is sent through Mrs. M. R. Smith for the Walworth county W. C. T. U. of Wisconsin. Mrs. Sarah Knight sends $12 for the Waupaca, Wis., W. C. T. U. The W. C. T. U. of Columbus, O., sends $10.25 through Mrs. C. E. Hotchkiss. The Grant Park, Ill., W. C. T. U. sends $28.62 through Miss Hathaway, who writes, she hopes they will be able to send the balance of their $100 this year. The Dover, Ill., W. C. T. U. sends $20, and promises to send more. The treasurer, Mrs. J. P. Spaulding, writes that the union was only organized last winter. This should put to blush older unions, who have as yet stood idly by, not showing the slightest interest, either by gift or pledge, to help on this herculean undertaking, which means so much to our cause. Mrs. E. E. Schults, treasurer Elgin, Ill., W. C. T. U., sends $22; this makes $38 this union has paid on their pledge of $100. No. 1 W. C. T. U. of New York City, sends $15 through Mrs. M. A. Wilder. Thirty-six dollars and seven cents is sent by the Danville, Ill., W. C. T. U. through Mrs. Mattie A. Patterson. Miss Grace Smith sends a check for $11.37 from the Sinclairville, N. Y., W. C. T. U. Ten dollars come from the Washington, Wis., W. C. T. U. through the faithful efforts of Mrs. Sarah G. Stevens, who lives in the country and who has raised the money through bands, going from house to house.

Another noble worker is Miss Hattie Cookingham, of Dana, Iowa, who has raised a band of twelve persons who gave $1 each for the building fund. This money she desires credited to the Dana W. C. T. U. The Marissa, Ill., W. C. T. U., through Mrs. L. R. Meek, sends $14.45.

***

There is still a little coming in for the Thompson Memorial fund. We trust that many hearts will be moved to send in their $1 to this fund. Hear what the dear girls of the Y W. C. T. U., of Little Rock, Ark., have to say on this subject. Miss Mertie Besseteet writes, "We are anxious to add our mite to the fund for placing Mother Thompson's name in the future Willard Hall. It is not much, but lots of love and interest is sent with this token from the 39 Y's of Little Rock." The Y's of Emlenton, Pa., also send $1 for the memorial, through their secretary, Miss Olive McGara. Mrs. Henry Tucker, Lake Village, N. H., sends $1 for the fund, and says, "May her white head be so honored by all white-ribboners."

***

Mrs. L. E. Bailey has given out 100 mite-boxes in Nebraska. She desires to hear from those delivered in the early part of her work in that state. She hopes that all will remember that the money is to be sent to Miss Pugh, and the amount sent reported to her at Fremont, Neb. She also suggests that all local unions read, at their next meeting, the description of the Temple in THE UNION SIGNAL of July 31. Would it not be a good idea for the unions in all the states to try this plan of creating interest in the Temple?

Our Children.

CURLY LOCKS.

BY WARNER SNOAD.

Curly locks, curly locks, what angel brought you
Down to this world in your mischievous glee?
Curly locks, curly locks, what angel thought you
Just the right gift for your father and me?
Nobody wanted you; no one invited you;
You were quite welcome to stay up above;
Yet you arrived, and then who could have slighted you?
Bringing as luggage a bundle of love.

Curly locks, curly locks, tell me who taught you
That wicked glance of your roguish blue eyes?
Are you quite sure 'twas an angel who brought you,
You imp of mischief in baby disguise?
Why did the angels with kisses half smother
You, who now reign as my nursery queen?
See, here's a dimple, and here is another.
Each dimple shows where a kiss must have been.

Curly locks, curly locks, made up of laughter,
Merriment, nonsense, caresses, and fun,
Just a few tears that the smiles follow after,
Quickly as dew-drops are chased by the sun,
Knowing yet nothing of sorrow and sadness,
Guessing at nothing of envy and strife;
Long may it be ere Time, stifling your gladness,
Brushes the bloom from your innocent life.

QUEEN BESS'S LETTER.

BY JULIA MILLS DUNN.

Queen Bess sat on the big, white, fur rug before the grate, having a doll's party. She was not a real queen, of course, but her name was Bess Trevor, and her father of whom she was very fond, called her Queen Bess, because all in the house loved her so much that they were glad to do whatever she wanted them to, just as if she had been a real queen, and they her subjects.

Just as Mobile, her newest doll, was going to sit down to play on the piano, 'Rika, the nurse, came in to take Queen Bess to bed.

"It's eight o'clock, Miss Bess," said 'Rika.

"O 'Rika! I can't go just yet. Blanche has the measles, and Mobile is taken very bad with influenza right here at the piano and I must take her home in a carriage."

She pushed forward a dainty little doll's carriage, and as she stooped down to put the sick doll in, one of her long, bright curls became entangled in the wheel. 'Rika bent down to unfasten it, and at that moment Rose, one of the maids, put her head inside the nursery door

"He's at it again," she whispered, with a mysterious look at Bess, "raving as bad as ever."

Bess looked up quickly. "You mean my papa, Rose, I know you do. and you must not speak about him in that way. He's my own dear, darling papa, and if you look like that you'll make me cry."

Her eyes flashed with anger, and she brought her baby foot down on the rug with an emphasis that shook her yellow curls. 'Rika caught the child in her arms and kissed her. "That's right, Queen Bess. 'Honor thy father and mother,' the Bible says. And now come to mamma's room to kiss her good-night."

They went along the hall and entered softly at a door at the end that led to Mrs. Trevor's sick room. On a low couch, propped up by pillows that seemed no whiter than her own face, was Bess's mamma. The room was furnished with great elegance and the light from a wood fire that burned on the hearth sent dancing shadows flickering over the ceiling and silken yellow canopy above the couch. Bess ran up to the couch and kissed her mother, giving her at the same time a "hard, hard hug," as she said. Her mamma smiled.

"Have you had a happy day, dear?"

"Oh, yes!" and Bess shook her bright curls gayly. "I had a doll's party, and Mobile and Blanche and Susan played on the piano beautifully till Mobile got sick and had to be taken away in a carriage."

"Who is Mobile?"

"Why, don't you know? my new dolly that papa got me when he was down South, and I named her Mobile from the pretty song that Hicks, the coachman, sings, 'Down in Mobile.' She's black, but it is such a pretty name."

Mrs. Trevor laid her thin white hand on Bess's yellow hair.

"A very pretty name, indeed, dear. And now—"

There was a loud, angry cry from the adjoining room, and a man's voice was heard in loud oaths and threats.

"Let me alone, will you? I'll be master in my own house in spite of you all, or I'll—"

A struggle seemed to follow, then a heavy fall, followed by silence.

Bess's eyes opened wide in affright. "What was that, mamma?"

"Papa is not well, dear. Do not go in,"—as Bess started toward the door. "He would not like to have you now, but go with 'Rika to your own little room. Good-night, darling."

The child's lip quivered. "Can't I kiss papa good-night?"

"Not to-night, Bess. Papa is busy and—not well."

'Rika understood. She took Bess's hand and led her from the room. As she closed the door into the hall, a loud scream rang through the house, and Hicks, the coachman, pale and trembling, stepped out into the hall, with clothes and hair in great disorder, giving evidence of a desperate struggle.

"I'm going for the doctor," he explained to 'Rika: "I can't get along through the night without something to quiet him. He's just crazy drunk again."

He hurried along without even seeing Bess, who stood close by 'Rika's side. But the child had heard and understood. As in a flash the truth came to her. She had seen drunken men in the streets in charge of policemen, men with red, bloated faces, torn clothes, and frowzy hair. Once she had seen one beaten with a club, and dragged through the streets, as one might drag an animal, for resisting the officer who tried to arrest him. But that man was ragged and dirty, with but one shoe. Did gentlemen, like her handsome, well-dressed father, get drunk, too? And would the policeman down by the corner come to the house and beat her father as he had beaten the poor ragged man?

A hot flush of shame crimsoned her face, and she walked along with 'Rika, her head bent so that her bright yellow curls hid her burning cheeks. This was the secret then, that she had always felt, though she could not have told even to herself how she had felt it. This was the reason that her mamma and the servants sometimes acted so strangely, and she did not see her papa for several days at a time.

When Bess repeated her prayer, "Now I lay me down to sleep," instead of the petition which she usually added, "God bless papa and mamma, and make me a good girl," she changed it to "Make papa a good man." No words can express the deep humiliation that filled her childish heart as she shut her eyes, and 'Rika, who stayed in the room until Bess was asleep, noticed that the pillow on which the bright head lay was damp with tears.

A strange sound rang through the silence of the winter dawn. John Trevor, who had been quieted at last by an opiate, was roused from his heavy sleep by that frightful sound which once heard can never be mistaken, the harsh, metallic cough of a child with croup. To spring from his bed and open the door carefully, so as not to disturb his wife in the next room, to cross the hall to Bess's room opposite his own was the work of a minute. The faint light of dawn struggling through the closed blinds showed Bess, sitting by a little desk drawn up in front of the window, in her white nightdress, and with bare feet that looked blue with cold. Before her, on the desk, was a sheet of paper covered with writing in a childish, scrawling penmanship. Her father caught her in his arms. "Bess, darling, what are you doing here?" Bess answered, in a hoarse whisper, "I heard mamma crying so last night, after the house was still and 'Rika was gone, that I could not sleep. I wanted to talk to—to—some one—" she continued evasively, "and as I couldn't do that, I thought I would write, and so I fell asleep at the desk—"

A harsh, hoarse cough interrupted her. More terrified than he had ever been in his whole life, her father placed her in bed, and with bell and telephone roused servants, nurse and physician, until the whole house was in a fever of excitement.

"It is a serious case," the doctor said gravely, noting the flushed face, rapid pulse and dry, frequent cough. "What in the world was the child thinking about?"

Mr. Trevor took a piece of folded paper from his pocket and silently handed it to the doctor, who, after puzzling over it, finally read as follows:

"DeeR paPa:—I Hav Praid to God to make you a good man, but i think He wants you to tri too. Plese don't get drunk agane. Your luvinge quEEn Bess."

The eyes of the two men met. There were tears in the doctor's, and in those of the father a look of grim determination.

"Trevor, if she dies—"

"Doctor, doctor! have you no pity?" The wretched man buried his face in his hands and groaned in anguish. All the sin and folly of the past stood out before him in intense clearness. He saw only too plainly in that hour that if Bess should die he would be her murderer—the murderer of his own child and perhaps that of his wife also. Cold drops of agony stood on his forehead; his suffering was terrible to witness. But he sat by the couch, attentive to every wish, all that day and the next, while the awful battle went on between life and death. Toward evening of the second day, while he hung over her watching every breath, Bess opened her eyes.

"Papa!" She spoke in a whisper, and he was obliged to put his head down to hear. "Papa, I've been praying again, and I believe my prayer will be answered. Papa, I prayed for—for you."

He could not speak, but he touched his lips to her forehead. When he raised his head a moment after, he saw his wife beside him, leaning on 'Rika's arm.

"Husband," she whispered, "let us remember those words, 'It is well with the child.' Whether it be for life or for death, God is with us, and His loving care cannot fail us."

But Bess did not die. And when the day came that John Trevor saw her rosy and bright as of old, and his wife, now that the curse of drunkenness was removed from the household, well and happy, he said, "Thank God as I do, dear wife, that my sight is restored, that I see things in their true light, and that whereas I was blind, now I see."

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 7, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 19:1-10; Proverbs 26-31.)

Sunday, 7; Luke 19:1-10. Verse 4, The way in which Zaccheus worked out his purpose to see Jesus shows how much in earnest he was. A desire to be saved amounts to nothing unless there is with it a personal determination to put forth every effort in order to be saved. Verse 8, True repentance shows itself by the effort made to set right all former trespasses, and to be completely delivered from the dominion of sin.

Monday, 8; Prov. 26. Verses 4, 5, One should not answer a fool by saying silly things as he does; but should answer him as his folly deserves. Verse 13, Energy will put to flight the lions that lazy people are always finding in their way. Sloth invents the most absurd things as excuses for inaction. Verse 28, Beware of the smooth tongue of flattery, which is the common instrument of the devil to drag the innocent into the ways of ruin.

Tuesday, 9; Prov. 27. Verse 1, We should not rely too confidently upon our plans for the future, for God only knows what will happen. Jam. 4:14. Verse 10, We ought to appreciate old and well-tried friends, for only such can be trusted in days of calamity. Verse 23, Pastors and teachers should never lose sight of those committed to their care.

Wednesday, 10; Prov. 28. Verse 1, One may well desire and seek the quiet safety of the righteous. Verse 13, "To hide a sin with a lie is like a crust of leprosy drawn over an ulcer." The one who has sinned and does not repent, cannot hide himself from the just punishment of God, who knows all things. Verse 26, To walk wisely, is to put our trust in God, and not in ourselves.

Thursday, 11; Prov. 29. Verse 1, It is a dangerous thing for one to keep going on in a way that he knows is wrong. Verse 13, The poor laborer and the exacting capitalist have nothing between them but the accidental and temporary differences in respect to wealth. They ought to walk together in mutual kindness and good faith, for they are equally dependent on God.

Friday, 12; Prov. 30. Verse 2, One who in other matters may be keen-sighted, may seem to himself to be very stupid when he tries to comprehend the works and ways of God. Verse 5, However little we may know, we can rest forever in the blessed confidence that God's Word is pure and His ways are right. Verse 8, Pray to be delivered from all falsehood and sin, and to be content with food convenient. Very many are injuring themselves by putting temporal things before spiritual, and by giving all their interest and strength to money-making.

Saturday, 13; Prov. 31. Verse 5, What a dreadful influence is the use of liquor in turning men into the ways of lust, injustice and oppression! No one is ever safe who is related to, or is under the power of another who drinks liquor.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Why I Believe the Bible. Psalm 119:11.)

1. Because it is perfectly reasonable that God, as our Father, would make some revelation of Himself to men; and I find a revelation of God as "our Father" in the Bible, that meets the want of my spirit.

2. The Bible not only gives me the best revelation of God, but it also most faithfully represents man to my understanding, and gives me the best knowledge I have, and about all I have, of his duty and his destiny.

3. Its truths and promises have stood the test of time, and they are just as precious and helpful to millions of poor and dying mortals now as they ever were.

The Household.

BABY'S LULLABY.

BY MRS. A. GIDDINGS PARK.

Little birds in their nests are sleeping,
The winds rock them to and fro,
It is time for wee folks like my baby
Away to the dreamland to go.
In his cradle white
Like a tiny skiff,
We lay him, and kiss him thrice good-night.
And now, heave ho!
The tide sinks low,
Softly and gently the breezes blow,
And carefully over the fairies row!

The lilies are rocking and swaying,
As the ripples break the stream;
Like fairy white boats at anchor,
Their gold-laden chalices seem.
But my baby's boat,
With its precious freight
Must tarry not, but must onward float,
As high and low
The waves swing slow,
Softly and gently the breezes blow,
And carefully over the fairies row!

In that wonderful land we will leave him
Till the birds in their nests awake,
And the bright rosy gleam of the morning
Over the hill-tops break;
Then my darling's boat,
With its precious freight
Will tarry not, but will backward float
To earthland once more
From that beautiful shore,
And the tiny plash of each golden oar
Will be borne by the breezes across before.

And what will he bring—will my baby
From that soothing, slumbering strand?
Oh, his boat will be laden with treasures
He's gathered in that fair land!
There'll be laughter and play,
And dimples sweet,
There'll be something to make his heart happy and gay,
To make the eyes bright,
Gathered all through the night;
Sunshine to gleam in his golden hair,
And roses to bloom on his cheeks so fair!
So now, heave ho!
The tide sinks low,
Softly and gently the breezes blow,
And away to the Dreamland let baby go!

THE CRISIS OF MIDDLE AGE.

BY E. C.

Arthur Rivers was a busy man, and his wife wondered, therefore, to see him sit doing nothing for a considerable time one morning in the library. She was writing letters. They were both good people, cultivated and well off.

"Kate," said he, "I went to see the Training Home of the Church Army yesterday, and it has made me ponder. You and I are both getting past our youth, and though we are considered exemplary people, I very much doubt if we are as good as we were fifteen years ago. I am inclined to think that most people lose more than they gain as life goes on."

Mrs. Rivers laid down her pen; her color rose quickly, and she looked eagerly at her husband. "What do you think we have lost, Arthur?"

"A good deal. Seeing those young fellows full of the freshness and joy of self-sacrifice and service made me long to be young again. Do you remember how we were never satisfied—twenty years ago—unless we were helping at mission services, or visiting hospitals and districts? Almost every day we hoped we had won to God one or two souls. And how glad it made us. There was just the same gladness and triumph about those men and women that I saw at the Training Home yesterday."

"Yes, I remember it all very well, Arthur," said Mrs. Rivers, and she sighed, "Why did we ever leave off?"

"It was easy to leave off, and it was a gradual thing. We were disappointed in a good many people whom we had believed to be converted, and in a good many people whom we had looked up to as far better than ourselves. When we found that conversion was not generally the beginning or end of the Christian life, but only one important chapter of it, preceded by long, patient work, and sometimes followed by disaster, then I think we felt that preachers and little books had deceived us, and we tired of after meetings and of personal talk with inquirers."

"And do you think that we were wrong, Arthur?"

"Yes, I do. I think our characters have suffered spiritually. We have got weak and stunted and dwarfed. We need direct Christian work to keep us bright and happy and strong."

"But no one can say that we are idle, Arthur."

"Certainly not; we have committees and we give money and we set other people to work, and that is all right, but it is not enough. We ought not to have let our hands get slack and our knees feeble because we had foolishly made conversion everything, and had found it imperfect. We ought to have accepted the laws and facts of God's Kingdom, and so to have learned experience and not discouragement from our disappointments."

"I got so disgusted with our vicar, Arthur; I think that was what stopped my working. He was so selfish and jealous."

"Yes, my dear Kate; our disgust was natural, but our cessation from work was not justifiable. We always said we were working only for God, and therefore our vicar's faults ought not to have hindered us."

"Don't you think most people, as they grow older, get cool about that kind of work, Arthur? I think that most of the people who convert souls are rather young."

"Most of the people who claim souls as their converts are young, certainly. But a soul's conversion is as complicated and as little, in one sense, sudden as a child's birth and growth, and as long as we do our part in it we need not mind what the part is. Kindness, holy living, prayer, self-denial, are probably as important factors as straight questions and difficulties cleared. I believe a seeking soul finds God, whether he finds an eager worker to explain perplexities or not. People's work ought to be better as they grow older and more experienced in the beauty and power of God."

"Well, what ought we to do, Arthur?"

"I mean, first, to give more money to Christian work. If you are willing we won't buy that brougham, and we won't give such expensive dinners. Let us give people soup, fish, meat and a pudding, and if they are discontented they need not come twice. Why should we try to do like enormous swells? It is foolish and wicked of us. Let us give $100 to the Church Army, and $100 to its foreign fund for India and China. Let us also help some other societies that seek to save the lost. I shall certainly send checks to the Church Missionary Society and to the Church Parochial Mission Society (out of which the Church Army originally grew). And let us go, two evenings a week, to Church Army meetings, or to some sort of mission services, and get into touch again with poor, miserable folks. That doesn't seem much to do, but it will be a fresh start. I want to learn of those beginners whom I saw at the Training Home yesterday."

Tears stood in Mrs. Rivers' eyes. She felt little regret at giving up the luxuries her husband had mentioned, and she silently recorded a vow that she would burn a letter which she had just written to her dressmaker about a velvet gown.

Womanlike, she rose to the situation, and encouraged and supported her Arthur. A bright peace came to them, and something of the buoyancy of youth, without its crudeness, gave a fresh spring to their life.

"THE KEEPING ROOM."

BY A. B. G.

It is not to be supposed that any one who is not fifty years old will remember to have heard of such a room as I am now to write about. In the dear old days of New England, however, when there lingered about those spacious homes somewhat of the order and dignity of the Colonial period, there was such a room as the "keeping room."

It was not, like the parlor, too grand to be opened except on Thanksgiving occasions; but it was always open, always free. The blazing fireplace, with its shining andirons, never lacked its back-log and forestick, with its basket of chips to throw on when evening began to settle down, to give a glow and cheer to every object, and every face of the gathering family group, which furnace heat and gas lights have never been able to reproduce.

There was the mother's three-legged stand, where stood her basket of darning and knitting, which must never be disturbed. There stood the father's desk, not much like the costly and marvelous thing of the present day, but straight and stiff, with its high-backed wooden armchair before it, sacred and ready always for his use; his keeping place in the "keeping room." And, though the children must respect the belongings of their elders, they were not forgotten in this home-like provision for the comfort of all; but had their own table which they could gather about for study, with a cupboard for their books near at hand.

This was the "keeping room" of our fathers and mothers, and of our childhood, too, if as I have said, we are fifty years old. By and by, however, it changed into a sitting room, the open fire gave way to a stove, the rag carpet to an ingrain, and stylish furniture crowded out the old. But it was still the dear old gathering place of the family. It was still the "keeping room" of the affections, the fostering place of unity of sentiment, of confiding interest, and of loving sympathy. It was the place of freedom. Did any one come home tired from school or meeting or business? There he could throw himself into some easy chair, and rest, or read, or chat. There a privileged neighbor could run in without the formality of a ring of the bell.

How many blessed associations cluster around such a room, as we get farther and farther away from its pure atmosphere. As we look back upon all the devious journey which we have taken since we left the dear old keeping room of our childhood, we can see that its keeping has reached all the way. Seeds sown there in young hearts have borne such fruits as love of home, the sacredness of family ties, pure and high-minded relations between the sexes, love for God, and all right living.

The family sitting-room is still the keeping place of pure morals and tender affections in many a home in our land, especially in village and country life.

But what can be said of our cities? Is it not lamentably true, that in the four stories of our elegant "stone fronts" there is not space enough found for such a room?

I have in mind one of these city homes where it has been my custom to visit freely. The basement contains the dining-room and kitchen, hall and bath-room. It is easy to enter, and here you find the daily papers, but it is rather dark. The mother stays about here a good part of the morning; then she goes to her room, not in the next story, for that has just the two parlors; they open out of each other and are full of elegant things. To be sure the back parlor was originally intended for this same sitting-room which the heads of the family look back upon with so much tenderness in the old homestead. They stop here with their company, and if you are to stay only a little while, this is the place to visit; but if your stay is prolonged, they fall into their usual custom, which is to ascend one more flight of stairs and gather in the mother's private apartment.

In this family of my friend there were two boys growing to manhood, and one young lady. The boys roomed in the fourth story; they were made free to mother's room, of course, but mother retired early, and they were supposed then to go to their own rooms, or down into the back parlor. Their sister did sometimes go down with them and play a few tunes upon the piano, but it was an understood thing that mother and sister liked best to sit in their bed-rooms, and the practical working of it all was, that the boys soon found it more agreeable to spend their evenings out.

I presume no one will be surprised, having been told this much, that in a few years' time the family were weeping over two ruined young men. The parents were Christians, and fond of their children, and people wondered that they should be so afflicted. For myself, I never could keep this thought from rising up in my secret soul, "Alas, they had no keeping room!"

I have ventured to suggest this reason to the daughter, whose one affliction now that she is settled in a home of her own, is her two intemperate brothers, and she acknowledges that it might have been so. She says, "Father was always off on business, and mother and I did like to get up to our rooms. Then, you know, the back parlor was carpeted like the front, and if we lived there, it would fade and wear out faster, and the rooms looked so pretty open together, it seemed a pity to shut the doors, in order to keep one warm enough to sit in."

Ah! thought I again, as Dr. Vincent says in his lecture, "That boy." "There was a carpet saved, but a boy lost!" "Yes, even two boys!"

And since I saw this ruin I have been thinking much about the dear old "keeping room," and wondering if the frequent ruin of young men in our cities, yes, and of girls, too, may not be referred often, very often, to this sad lack in our homes.

There must be a family gathering place; a cheerful room of easy access, apart from anybody's sleeping room, unless it be, that the family are very poor. Our three and four story houses have no necessity of that kind.

Mothers! you are the ones to arrange the house. Do not, I beg of you, begin life without providing the cozy, cheerful sitting-room; the place where the fathers and the sons feel as welcome to come and go, yes, and to stay, too, as the mothers and daughters. And not only provide the room, but be there yourself, every day and evening when your household cares permit. Thus doing you will find the place to prove itself indeed a "keeping room." It may be that you can keep the purity and honor of your family by the help of this simple custom which you now regard of so little moment.

TRUE victory is not to crush an enemy, but to make him your friend.—Guyot.

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner-stones, polished after the similitude of a palace.—Psa. 144: 12.

A Christian is just one who does what the Lord Jesus tells him. Neither more nor less than that makes one a Christian.—MacDonald.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

There seems danger that interest in the Nebraska amendment campaign will dwarf interest in the equal suffrage campaign in South Dakota. As friends of temperance we cannot afford to let this be the case. Experience proves that prohibitory laws must have the home ballot back of them to secure enforcement. The fight is being carried on heroically by home forces and National workers headed by Susan B. Anthony, but reënforcements are needed.

The history of to-day presents no grander figure than Miss Anthony, who has passed her seventieth birthday and earned, if ever woman did, honored rest, going to that frontier state, a thousand miles from home, giving time and money, working with all the ardor and much more than the wisdom and effectiveness of thirty, to secure for the women of this new commonwealth the freedom she herself has never known.

Philena Everett Johnson, President of the Equal Suffrage Association, sends a ringing bugle call to the hosts all along the line. Fill up the treasury, distribute literature, keep up the meetings of your local clubs; carry on the campaign on the "Do-every-thing" policy. Call out local speakers; hold oratorical suffrage contests, fagot parties, yellow tea parties, suffrage dinners and teas; report every local meeting in your county papers; see that every township is thoroughly organized. SING suffrage into the people; let every club have a quartette of singers; drill the children in suffrage songs; have them, as well as the quartette, sing at every meeting. These are some of her marching orders.

A state convention was called to meet at Mitchell, August 25 and 26, immediately preceding the State Republican Convention, which meets there the 27th. State and national forces are concentrated there at this time, and it offers the opportunity of a lifetime to put in telling strokes for equal suffrage, which means purity and temperance.

Meanwhile the enemy is equally active; he has sown tares of dissension, and he is scattering broadcast his false words and false deductions. A "Remonstrance," purporting to express the views of women in Massachusetts, Maine, Illinois and other states has been largely circulated. It gives a summary of the very weak article of Goldwin Smith in the January Forum, founded on such "maybes" as these: "The women of France, some years ago, would probably have voted a war for the support of the temporal power of the Pope. The women of England might have voted intervention in favor of the Queen of Naples. In both cases men would have refused to march or act, and government would have succumbed."

Its sneering reference to Wyoming is fully refuted by the census returns and the opinion of Judge Carey, given in our issue of August 7. The fluctuating character of women's voting which it brings as an argument against giving the ballot to women is, in our opinion, one of the strongest arguments in its favor. It proves the truth of the assertion so often made that women hold the ballot sacred to moral ends. When no moral issue is involved, they stay quietly at home and let the men do the voting. But let it be a question of opening saloons, of the protection of their girls, of keeping our public schools really free, or any other question vitally affecting the home, and they are on hand with their ballots to turn the scale in favor of the right. They are the reserve forces of the nation, the Bluchers whose coming decides many a moral Waterloo.

It calls the "English Remonstrance" the most notable contribution to suffrage literature of the last year, and gives the list of its signers to awe us by their array of titles. But they only show that the remonstrance comes from women whose lives give them little opportunity to know the terrible need there is for ballots in the hands of women for their own protection. Not one of them ever had to earn her bread side by side with men, with unequal wages for equal work, or to fight for the preservation of her honor under the fearful conditions imposed by laws made by and for men alone. Nor are they women who through philanthropic work, have come hand to hand and heart to heart with their poorer sisters who must so work and so struggle. The Remonstrance truly says they are "leaders in social and literary circles," shut in by rank, fortune, environment, from the conditions that have burned into other women's souls a conviction of the need of the ballot in their hands.

One of these remonstrants is Lady Randolph Churchill; but does it not seem something of a farce—a selfish farce at that—for the leader of the Primrose League, to inveigle against woman's ballot? If it be right and womanly for her to attempt to rally the women of England under the Tory banner for the political support of her own husband, how can it be wrong and unwomanly for untitled women, out on the plains of the great New West, to have and to exercise that power which shall help to make that new land, God's land, a place where the Home outranks the political caucus in influence?

The "Suffrage Waterloo" is what it denominates the defeat in Washington. I was in that territory all through that campaign and know whereof I speak when I say that the result there was no more a fair test of suffrage than was the defeat of the prohibitory amendment in Massachusetts proof that the majority of voters in the old Bay State believed in the saloon. The defeat in both cases was due to the same cause, the domination of both old parties by the liquor power, a domination which made many honest, Christian men unconsciously do the bidding of the system they hate. To this was added such a complication of issues as was never presented in a political campaign before; four leading questions—adoption of the state constitution, of the temperance clause, of the suffrage clause, and the location of the capital; either one important enough to found an election on—and the intensely personal interests involved in the election of a full corps of state officers.

Back of these, playing upon all these strings and thus working through them its own diabolical will, was the liquor traffic, yet so concealed that many never suspected its presence. But it was there all the same, shutting the mouths of both parties and all candidates concerning either temperance or suffrage. I often spoke in towns where there was either a Democratic or a Republican rally, and met their speakers and the candidates socially. In not one instance did I know of any allusion being made at any of these rallies to either of these issues, and when, as on several occasions, I asked their speakers whom I knew in their hearts favored them, to speak, if but a few words, in their favor, the answer was always the same in substance, whether given in plain English or by a shrug of the shoulders.

"We can't do it; if we do the other party (or the other fellow) will take all the liquor vote."

And it should not be forgotten that it was not the people who, as this Remonstrance asserts, had enjoyed the supposed blessings of woman suffrage for five years, that voted down the suffrage clause. During the fourteen months preceding this election, months in which, by the decision of the Territorial Court, confessedly based on a technicality, women had been deprived of the ballot, 90,000 inhabitants had been added to the population of the territory. Saloons had multiplied unprecedentedly, each one a school to teach anti-suffrage doctrine; the hop interest had assumed unexpected proportions, and this interest was controlled largely by a syndicate of Cincinnati and San Francisco brewers, and all these ruling influences which had arisen "knew not Joseph."

The Washington which gave woman the ballot was represented by that historic group of men and women kneeling around the open Bible, while above them floated the flag of our country while they dedicated the virgin soil of that territory to God and freedom; the Washington which took from her the ballot is the one represented by Dutch Jake's famous saloon in Spokane. Choose ye, men of Dakota, this day which you will serve.

I LIKE life and I also like righteousness. If I can not keep the two together, I will let life go and choose righteousness.—Menæus.

AMERICAN TITLES.

Oliver Wendell Holmes' "Over the Teacups," is each month the attraction of the Atlantic. His "Broomstick Train, or the Witches Returned," in the August number is such a happy conceit every one wonders why nobody thought of it before; but nobody did. It is too long to quote here and altogether too good to "cut." You must therefore, go to the Atlantic for it.

Here is what he has to say, in the same article, of American titles. A capital hit on a species of snobbery that usually escapes the drubbing it deserves:

"It is a very curious fact that, with all our boasted 'free and equal' superiority over the communities of the Old World, our people have the most enormous appetite for Old World titles of distinction. Sir Michael and Sir Hans belong to one of the most extended of the aristocratic orders. But we have also 'Knights and Ladies of Honor,' and, what is still grander, 'Royal Conclave of Knights and Ladies,' 'Royal Arcanum,' and 'Royal Society of Good Fellows,' 'Supreme Council,' 'Imperial Court,' 'Grand Protector,' and 'Grand Dictator,' and so on. Nothing less than 'Grand' and 'Supreme' is good enough for the dignitaries of our associations of citizens. Where does all this ambition for names without realities come from? Because a Knight of the Garter wears a golden star, why does the worthy cordwainer, who mends the shoes of his fellow-citizens, want to wear a tin star, and take a name that had a meaning as used by the representatives of ancient families, or the men who made themselves illustrious by their achievements?

"It appears to be a peculiarly American weakness. The French republicans of the earlier period thought the term citizen was good enough for anybody. At a later period, 'le Roi Citoyen'—the citizen King—was a common title given to Louis Philippe. But nothing is too grand for the American, in the way of titles. The proudest of them all signify absolutely nothing. They do not stand for ability, for public service, for social importance, for large possessions; but, on the contrary, are oftenest found in connection with personalities to which they are supremely inapplicable. We can hardly afford to quarrel with a National habit which, if lightly handled, may involve us in serious domestic difficulties. The 'Right Worshipful' functionary whose equipage stops at my back gate, and whose services are indispensable to the health and comfort of my household, is a dignitary whom I must not offend. I must speak with proper deference to the lady who is scrubbing my floors, when I remember that her husband, who saws my wood, carries a string of high-sounding titles which would satisfy a Spanish nobleman."

THE SALVATION ARMY IN CHICAGO.

As announced in a previous issue, Commissioner Ballington Booth and his wife, accompanied by a large delegation of the Salvation Army, held two meetings in Chicago last week, the first in the down-town Methodist Church, the second in Farwell Hall. Both houses were packed, and hundreds seeking admittance turned away. Those who came expecting a "circus" were greatly disappointed. As the Inter Ocean, in its account of the meetings, said, the froth has all worked off, and the army has come to be a band of zealous Christian workers, bent on clearing the gutters and slums of human wrecks and outcasts. Mrs. Booth was by far the most interesting personality present: petite, graceful, eloquent, thrilling all hearts as she told of work done for women in the slums of London and New York. She is very witty also, and often made smiles chase the tears away on the faces of her audience. Next in interest was Lord Ratna Pavla, a converted Buddhist priest from the island of Ceylon. He is small and slight—reminding one of Ramabai, only that he is darker—and possesses much of her intense earnestness and eloquence. He told the story of his conversion, speaking in Cingalese, with great fervor, not lessened by the fact that he must reach his audience through an interpreter. Kantakella, a countryman and co-convert of his, acted in this capacity, besides making a speech and singing a song on his own account. Miss Willard attended the first meeting and spoke six minutes, expressing high appreciation for the work done by the Salvation Army among those whom no other organization can reach. But as to the assertion made by one of the daily papers that she said a movement is on foot for uniting the W. C. T. U. and the Salvation Army, that is all the figment of a reporter's brain. She certainly said no such thing, and assures us she meant no such thing. The statement was "made up out of whole cloth," like several other statements about the W. C. T. U. in the same paper. The fact that no one can join the Salvation Army who uses either alcoholic liquors or tobacco, and that it does probably more rescue work than any other organization, makes us feel very kindly toward it, but as for our amalgamating with it, each organization has too intense a personality of its own to make that possible.

JULIA A. AMES.

It was at Lake Bluff that she who now forms so large a part of my life first came into it. The evening before one of our Schools of Methods convened we had a social reunion at Hotel Irving; to break up the stiffness of the opening hour, I had arranged a little program of music and informal speeches. A gentleman came to me saying: "If you need another number on your program I have a young friend here who is a fine elocutionist, and I think she will recite for you if you wish." Now, at that time I had a holy horror of elocutionists—either they have improved or I have since then—and I was not at all pleased with the idea of having one on my program; but I could not, in courtesy, refuse to be introduced to her. He brought her to me; one sight of her face conquered my prejudice; and before he had time to introduce "Miss Julia Ames," I was ready to invite her to take part in the exercises. She accepted, modestly, yet with no affectation of reluctance—accepted as one does who receives her gift as from God to be used in His service. The recitation she gave was, "The Modern Cain," and so feelingly was it rendered that at its close, friends gathered round to congratulate her, and strangers, to be introduced. Her sweet, simple manner in receiving her friends' congratulations showed a nature too fine to be spoiled by flattery, while the quiet dignity of her reception of strangers proved her to be thoroughly at home in society.

Here, thought I, is a type of our finest young womanhood, and my heart coveted her for the work. "Who is she, and where does she come from?" was the inquiry on many lips. In answer to it I learned that she was the youngest daughter of a wealthy citizen of Streator, Illinois; just at that time the family were in Chicago, that they might afford a home for the son then in the law school here; that she was educated at Wesleyan University, being the special friend of Prof. Sue M. D. Fry, of that institution; that she was very popular in society—we did not need to be told that; she could not help being so—the idol of her parents, who were ready to gratify every wish so far as money could gratify it. Indeed, her life seemed so bright and attractive, so full of the good things of this world that I feared there would be found no place in it for the prosaic, often hard work, of a W. C. T. U. woman.

Later I learned my mistake, learned that below the sunkissed ripples of this favored life there flowed deep and strong the current of that stream whose fountain is beneath the throne of God, consecrating her whole being to His service. Already her W. C. T. U. work had begun in Streator, where Mrs. Plumb, the district president, found in her a most efficient helper. That we had not yet recognized her in Chicago was simply because she was a stranger there, too modest and unassuming to press to the front.

Now that we had discovered her, she was soon drawn into the Central Union and through it found what seems to us her God-appointed lifework. For it was through the press work of that union that she discovered herself, or more accurately, we discovered in her the journalistic faculty. For years the union had tried in vain to secure the entree of the great dailies of Chicago; now Miss Ames undertook the work and accomplished it. Some think that the fact of her father and brothers being prominent Republicans helped to open the door of these closed sanctums to her. It may have been so in the first opening; afterwards it was her own wise, sweet way, her delicate tact, and her untiring efforts to have everything presented for publication exactly right, which won the victory. Yet who shall deny that back of this wisdom and tact were the prayers which continually went up for her and her work? For her, God's promise to give wisdom was often pleaded in the union and by us who so loved her at Headquarters, and it was not pleaded in vain. Wise she is beyond her years, and wonderfully blessed with consecrated common sense. This was shown in her press work, as later in her work on THE UNION SIGNAL.

The first of the great dailies in this city to admit a W. C. T. U. department was the Inter-Ocean. In her first interviews with its editors, Miss Ames received many charges and cautions, all of which she faithfully tried to heed. Yet in spite of her care, everything she sent was sharply scanned and often mercilessly cut. At first only a few inches of space were accorded her. This was gradually increased as the editors learned they could trust her, till, before she gave the department into other hands, she usually occupied nearly a column, and editors ceased to cut her manuscript. This department became a model of its kind, filled with crisp, fresh news of the work going on, never a line of prosy dissertation, never an ill-natured fling, but always a driving away of the darkness of ignorance by letting the truth shine.

Then other work came to her hand; as the National superintendent of press work, our Queen Esther Housh, found its labor too great for her, Miss Ames was appointed her assistant. Mrs. Housh rendered invaluable service to workers in her department who were conducting W. C. T. U. columns in local papers, by furnishing them the "Bulletin" from which to make clippings. But the great papers will not use clippings, and Miss Ames set herself to the task of discovering a way by which the leading papers, especially the religious weeklies, could be reached. This is how she accomplished it: Every two weeks she compiled a sheet of the freshest, most important temperance items, wrote them out with her own hand, duplicated them by cyclostyle, and sent them out to picked papers having over ten thousand subscribers. None of these papers had a distinctively W. C. T. U. column, but every one of them used more or less of these carefully prepared items; thus hundreds of thousands heard temperance truth who, but for her, would never have heard it. The tact, the care and the labor which the preparation of these bi-weekly bulletins required, can be appreciated only by those who have done similar work. And it was all done gratuitously, and continued until her duties on THE UNION SIGNAL forced her to relinquish it to another.

Her connection with the Central Union brought into her life another molding force whose power is beyond computation; this is the friendship of that Greatheart among women, Helen Louise Hood. We sometimes speak of them as our Damon and Pythias, but the bond uniting them is more sacred than heathen friends can ever know. Like Jonathan and David their hearts are knit together in a union so close that to each the other takes, in large measure, the place of kindred; each heart is the other's home, and for years the same roof and the same room have sheltered them. When you know that this roof is that of Rest Cottage, Evanston, you will understand what other ennobling influences have chiseled their fine impress upon our Yolande's character. For "Yolande" your Miss Ames is to us; the pet name Mrs. Carse gave her when she first came among us suits her so well that we almost forget her baptismal title. At Rest Cottage Miss Ames lives continually beneath the benediction of dear Madame Willard's influence, to whom she is as a daughter beloved, and with the inspiration of Miss Willard's presence in her visits home. She is there in the center of things, the whispering gallery of the W. C. T. U., a very "Queen's Garden" in which souls can grow. And grow there her soul does; beyond all intellectual development—and that has been marked—is the spiritual development which has gone on in our Yolande. She is being continually taught of God, in ways all His own. In this spiritual development Mrs. Andrew, to whom soul-culture comes as natural as does blooming to flowers, has had large share.

When, on account of her health, Mrs. Andrew felt that she must give up her work on THE UNION SIGNAL, the vital question was, Who can carry it on as admirably as she has done? My thought turned at once to the dear girl who won my heart that evening at Lake Bluff, and who since in her press work had demonstrated her journalistic ability. Those who knew less of her shook their heads, at first, fearing she was too young for such a heavy burden, but the resident directors, to whom she was personally known, voted to entrust the work to her and she entered upon it.

How she succeeded our pages declare. Until last year her special province was the difficult one of News From the Field, and the children's department. She originated the department of Illustrated Biography and the Queen's Garden; in all her work she showed a thoroughness, patience and courtesy, absolutely indispensable to success, yet seldom found united in one person. Her forte is not so much writing, though she is ready with her pen, as it is that higher faculty which instinctively tells her what to choose and what to reject of others' writing, and the winning power to draw from them their best thoughts.

Last year during my absence she had charge of the remaining departments of the paper, Mrs. Andrew returning to take up those Miss Ames had conducted during her absence. So well did she succeed that many declared the paper vastly improved under her management, and I felt great diffidence about returning as I did the last of April, to allow her to go to Europe. For that she is now away, the presence of this sketch in the paper clearly shows; if she were here she would never allow it, but knowing how many thousands will be made glad by the sight of her bonny face, and this imperfect sketch of her, for your sakes I brave the danger of her displeasure.

Her trip to Europe has been one of unalloyed pleasure, every home letter is brimming over with happiness; indeed, she is so happy she cannot take time to write for publication. She has always been a "sunshine child," the good which others sigh for in vain, drops into her lap unasked. Her trip is made a continual joy by unexpected pleasure she had not dared to plan for. Her month in London was a continued ovation; that she did her part in return, the existence of the Press department of the B. W. T. A., organized through her inspiration, testifies. At Berlin she was the guest of Mary B. Willard, and is now "doing the continent," with a chosen party under the auspices of Mrs. Willard's School for Girls, personally conducted by Miss Sarah E. Morgan, for two years an associate of Mrs. Willard in the school.

The Passion Play, at Oberammergau thrilled her soul with a sense of the Infinite Love; Rome was a wondrous revelation to her; everywhere she goes the earnest soul looking through her glad eyes reads the story of God's love in mountains whose strength is His also; in valleys slumbering in the hollow of his hand; in cathedral spire, in speaking marble, or in the deathless colors of immortal artists. We know she will return to us with body strengthened, with mind and heart enriched. Prayer ascends from many, many hearts that the Everlasting Arms may enfold her, bearing her back to us in safety over the ocean which now rolls between us.

It is needless to say that glad welcome awaits her, not only in the editorial rooms, but in the composing room where she has won the hearts of all our employeés, and from the W. T. P. A. circle of King's Daughters, whose president she was when she went away, for our Yolande wears the purple ribbon and the silver cross as well as the white ribbon. She has well learned the lesson taught by Mrs. Browning:

> "Life means, be sure,
> Both head and heart—both active, both complete,
> And both in earnest."

GREAT BRITAIN'S NEW PRESIDENT.

Lady Henry Somerset has a beautiful passage in her address after being elected Margaret Bright Lucas' successor as president of the British Women's Temperance Association. She said: "You have done me the great honor of asking me to be your president, and as I speak to-day, a little scene comes before my eyes, which seems best to express that which is in my heart. In our own church-yard at home, we laid to rest one of our band of mothers. The little group of orphan children stood around the open grave, and when the last words of prayer had died away, there was a pause, and each wondering, grief-stricken little face looked down into that deep, dark grave in silent awe, while an almost overwhelming desolate blank crept over their baby hearts. Presently the elder sister, just a child herself, with a great effort, dried her tears, and with all a mother's tenderness shining out through the dawning of her own life, took each little mourner and clasped her to her heart, saying: 'I cannot be a mother to you like she was, but I will love you as she would want you loved.' To-day, standing as I do here in the place of one who was so tenderly loving and loved in this our grand association, I can only echo that child's words. She whom we have lost from among us has now been called out by her Master to work in higher spheres. We miss her gentle and inspiring presence, and the words rise to our lips as we see her vacant place,

> 'So many loads; so much to do;
> So little done; such things to be.
> How know I what had need of thee?
> For thou wert strong as thou wert true.'

She speaks to us still to-day, although her voice is silent; for truly all voices are eternal that have transmitted God's messages to waiting souls. The grandeur of her noble life inspires us. Although her work is laid aside down here, I can only pray, and do so fervently from my very heart, that the same spirit which inspired her gentle leadership may fall on me."

> Peace hath higher tests of manhood
> Than ever battle knew. —Whittier.

Queen's Gardens.

WHEN THE KING SHALL COME TO HIS OWN AGAIN.

The lilies are set in the garden high,
They hold up their heads to watch the sky;
They stand at their post through storm and rain
Till the King shall come to his own again.
The lilies are withering one by one,
But buds shall awake for the next year's sun;
They shall open their hearts with never a stain,
And the King shall come to his own again.

I am but weak, with no arms to fight;
Great is their strength who withstand the right;
How can I aid to burst the chain
That the King may come to his own again?
I can but watch, I can but pray,
I can but look for a brighter day;
But I know that evil shall cease to reign,
And the King shall come to his own again.

Years may be long, and I be dead;
There shall stand up worthier in my stead;
Worthy at last to join the train
When the King shall come to his own again.
O day of days! O day most bright,
White as my lilies' hearts are white;
There shall be neither care nor pain
When the King shall come to his own again.

—William Waterfield in Home Maker.

ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.

BY HELEN A. STEINHAUER.

It was a beautiful day in early spring, and the genial warmth and bright sunshine had filled Broadway with a sightly stream of pretty girls in new and pretty spring suits. Among the number was Agnes Hetherington, conspicuous by reason of her unusual height and perfect figure, and an indescribable something about her which, to her great annoyance, invariably attracted attention and caused men to turn for a second look at "that magnificent woman!"

But unquestionably the chief charm lay in the expression of her mobile countenance, which now was thoughtful and absorbed. Although elegantly and stylishly dressed it was evident that she was no mere butterfly of fashion, whose sole aim in life was to make conquests and to be admired. Our Agnes was an earnest Christian, who for two years past had labored as a teacher in a mission school, connected with the somewhat aristocratic church of which she was a member.

Now her thoughts were busied with the father of one of her pupils—a man who had known better days, but whom drink had dragged down to a very low level.

She had reasoned and pleaded with him, and done all in her power to help him rise from the depths, but to no avail. His self-respect was crushed, and when that is paralyzed it is like writing on the sands of the sea-shore, the first wave of temptation sweeps all away.

Inly praying God to give him strength and herself wisdom and opportunity, she suddenly noticed a crowd before her, seemingly gathered around some object at the edge of the sidewalk.

"Probably some terrible accident," she said to herself, and turned, thinking to cross over to the other side.

But oddly enough just then the parable of the man who had fallen among thieves and been wounded, and whom the priest and Levite passed by on the other side, flashed into her mind, and she felt irresistibly impelled to give a keen glance. As she looked the surging crowd gave way a little, and to her horror she saw lying flat on his back in the gutter the poor drunkard who had been in her thoughts but a moment ago.

Their eyes met, and she saw that, muddled as his brain was, he still recognized her, and struggled helplessly to regain an upright position.

Recognizing her opportunity, without a moment's hesitation she bravely stepped forward, as one with authority, and in clear, distinct tones said: "Let me help you, Mr. Abbey," and stretching out her daintily gloved hand assisted him to rise, the crowd looking on with curious interest as he staggered up. Then laying his mud-besmirched hand on her delicately appareled arm he calmly walked down the thronged street she steadying his uncertain footsteps with her youthful strength, nor relinquishing her kindly hold until they reached the door of his humble home.

"How could you do it, Agnes?—you, who are so proud!" said her sister to her, as they talked it over in the privacy of their luxurious bed-chamber, that night.

"I don't know, Grace," she replied with emphasis. "But there was nothing else to do, and so I just did it. You see I had been praying for an opportunity to reach his heart, and—there it was! I saw that if I turned away then I might talk forever and make no impression. But it was worse than death! I so feared strangers would fancy I was taking home my own father. I could not have done it had God not helped me."

"Actions speak louder than words." When the door closed on Agnes Hetherington's stately presence, Nathan Abbey, now thoroughly sobered by the long walk and its unusual circumstances, said solemnly: "God helping me, I will let drink alone from this hour. There must be something worth saving in me yet, or Miss Hetherington would never have done for me what she has done to-day. God bless her!"

And now, after more than half a score of years, Nathan Abbey, honored and respected, still lives to keep his word.

Battle Creek, Mich.

News from the Field.

MICHIGAN.

CIRCULAR LETTER.

At our last state convention it was voted to send Mrs. A. S. Benjamin to Nebraska for one month's labor in the amendment campaign. A circular letter was sent by our corresponding secretary, Mrs. Wheeler, asking each union to contribute according to its ability towards her expenses and support while there. A letter from our state treasurer says, "The unions are very slow in responding;" only three districts have contributed, and she adds, "It will be a pity if this is all Michigan can do, after being so liberally aided in our own amendment campaign." I saw Mrs. Benjamin at Bay View and she said she could not go until October. We all know Mrs. Benjamin, her talent, and hearty eloquence, her devotion to our cause in all its aspects, and we cannot doubt that she will aid the cause very much, and who knows but the victory may hinge largely upon what she may do, sustained by the money and prayers of the Michigan unions? I am much pressed in spirit about this. A victory for prohibition in Nebraska means onward progress towards National prohibition. Nebraska has been held up as the model high license state; has tried it twelve years, and now her people are aroused and determined to throw off the incubus. The enemy is also aroused to secure the state for permanent license. The Voice is doing good work for this campaign, and tells us that the prospects are now more encouraging for prohibition, and that the Nebraska press are largely aiding.

Dear sisters, I urge you for the sake of the cause, the homes, the mothers and children of Nebraska, to send in your contributions soon, be they much or little, to our state treasurer, Mrs. F. E. Holden, Reed City. I fear that many of our unions do not realize the great significance of this campaign, both morally and politically, in its relation to National prohibition.

A defeat will dishearten multitudes of our halting friends who are looking for progress; and a victory in Nebraska, the oracle for high license, will determine the action of multitudes in favor of the "growing cause."

I pray your hearts may be moved to do quickly what you can, that our own speaker may be sent with the money and blessing of the Michigan unions. Solicit aid of unions or of individuals.

MRS. L. M. BOISE.

NEW YORK.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY CONVENTION.

About thirty miles from New York City, on the Harlem railroad, is a place rightly named Pleasantville, and about two miles distant is the little village of Chappaqua, known as the home of Horace Greeley and also as the seat of a flourishing Friends' school, "Chappaqua Mountain Institute." By invitation of the Pleasantville and Chappaqua union the twelfth annual meeting of the county W. C. T. U. was held in the M. E. Church in the village of Pleasantville, on Friday and Saturday, June 13 and 14. When the trains arrived bringing white-ribboners from all parts of the county, private conveyances were waiting to take them to the place of meeting a mile away. As we entered the church, almost an ideal country church, within and without, we were grateful for so quiet and beautiful a spot in which to hold our June convention, where open doors and windows admit no distracting noise, but only sweet sounds and clover-scented air. A beautiful banner belonging to the Loyal Temperance Legion of South Mt. Vernon was placed among the flowers on the platform by their enthusiastic leader, Miss Victoria Bell. Each session opened with a devotional service, Mrs. E. S. Reynolds, Mrs. L. A. Griffin, Miss H. A. Rollins and Mrs. Henry White leading. Nearly the entire delegation and a large number of visitors were in their seats at eleven o'clock Friday morning, the time for the annual address of the president, Mrs. Stanton Cady. Two points were strongly emphasized: First, the work is God's; second, success is sure. The address was brief, but full of helpful suggestions and inspiration to work.

Miss Jane C. Washburn, of Chappaqua, a young lady of the Society of Friends, gave the welcome, to which Miss Maria Moger, one of the sweet Y girls of Mt. Kisco, responded. The reports of the secretary and of the treasurer were encouraging. Eighteen unions reported 463 members; four Y's, seventy-eight members. The Y's alone had raised $532.65, from which they had contributed to county, state and National work. A Y was organized at White Plains last fall by Mrs. Jump, during the session of the semi-annual convention at that place. The plans for organization during the year have been frustrated by the ill health of the president, the prevalence of la grippe, and other hindrances, but in nearly every department of work there has been advancement. The superintendent of fair work, Mrs. Robert Jackman, reported that the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicants on the fair ground was enforced, and no drunkenness was seen there. The W. C. T. U. tent, ice-water and temperance literature were appreciated, and the plans are initiated for a temperance restaurant at the county fair next fall, each union assisting. Mrs. Bullock, who was the speaker for the evening, conducted the "children's hour," and the two Loyal Temperance Legions did great credit to themselves and their teachers. At Chappaqua, Miss Gabrielle Greeley, who is gifted in character sketching, has, with her chalk pictures, greatly aided Miss Washburn in the juvenile work, while at Pleasantville, ministers and others have assisted.

One of the pleasant features of the occasion was the presence of two of the former pastors: Rev. Mr. Sager, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Mr. Welcher, of the Presbyterian Church, who accompanied their wives, the ex-president and ex-secretary of the local union, to take a part in the convention. The house was filled in the evening and the collection was good. The reports of the department superintendents and the election of officers necessarily took considerable time. A paper was read by Mrs. Troll, subject, "The Model Union." Mrs. Balch, delegate to Chicago, gave delightful jottings from the National.

In accepting Mrs. Cady's resignation as president, there was a general feeling of sorrow, but her pale face pleaded so strongly for rest that every one realized that it was but reasonable that she should be relieved from the office temporarily, at least. So Mrs. Dr. Balch, the vice-president at large, a veteran in temperance work, and perfectly capable in every way, accepted the nomination and was elected president, and Mrs. Cady vice-president at large. Mrs E. S. Underhill was reëlected treasurer, and Mrs. E. F. Fowler, secretary. The same superintendents of departments are continued with one or two exceptions. The annual meeting will hereafter be held in the fall instead of spring, so that the present officers are elected for a year and a half.

An invitation to hold our October convention at Mamaroneck was accepted.

Among the resolutions adopted were the following:

Resolved, That we recommend the unions to give their support and influence during the coming months to secure prohibition for our state.

Resolved, That we advise our local unions to hold district meetings, inviting the unions in adjacent towns to meet for that purpose.

Resolved, That we advise our local unions to hold Demorest medal contests as being highly educational.

WHITE RIBBONER.

SILVER LAKE ASSEMBLY.

The Silver Lake Assembly W. C. T. U., under the direction of its president, Mrs. L. P. Davies, and its secretary, Mrs. E. A. Cook, has been doing some good work during the three weeks of the Assembly. Every morning at ten o'clock the white-ribboners were seen wending their way toward the Hall of Philosophy, where the School of Methods was held with the following instructors: Temperance Literature, Mrs. Lena O. Morse; Heredity, Mrs. Mattie Smith Williamson; Juvenile Work, Mrs. H. A. Perrigo; Young Woman's Work, Mrs. C. J. A. Jump; Parliamentary drill, Mrs. L. F. Adams; Mothers' Meetings and Social Purity, Mrs. Anna E. Rice; Evangelistic Work, Mrs. M. J. Weaver; Scientific Temperance Instruction, Mrs. L. P. Davies; Narcotics, Mrs. T. J. Bissell; Instruction to Secretaries, Julia E. Dailey; Instruction to Treasurers, Mabel M. Perkins. Much interest was manifested in all the departments of work presented, thus proving that while we come from our homes to this delightful Silver Lake for rest and recreation, the cause so dear to us was not allowed to lose its hold upon our hearts for even a few days. July 25th was designated as W. C. T. U. day. Mrs. Rounds, of Illinois, gave one of her admirable addresses in the afternoon, on Social Purity. Unlike most speakers she took two texts; one for the men is found in Ecclesiastes 11:9; one for the women in Isaiah 32:9. As the writer was returning from the lecture she heard a gentleman say to his companion, "That is the best address we have heard yet."

Mrs. C. J. A. Jump, with the Y's, had charge of the evening session, and presented the following program, which she was unable to complete on account of a severe storm early in ths evening. Paper, "Constitutional Amendment," Miss Izora Sherwood; short address, "Social Side of Y Work," Miss Josephine Griffith; Parliamentary Drill composed of nine Y's and four honorary members. The points of discussion were, "Guide in Parliamentary Usage," "Y Course of Reading," "What part Honoraries should take in Local Work," "Best Methods of Replenishing the Treasury," "Badge," "Constitutional Amendment and our Relation to the Political Parties;" Solo, "Character Building," Miss Griffith; Reading, Miss Cook.

MRS. H. L. A. PLOUGH.

ROCKLAND COUNTY CONVENTION.

Our third annual meeting was held in the M. E. Church of Spring Valley, June 26, and praise belongs to God for the favor of such a perfect day. Mrs. J. A. Dingman presided with her usual pleasing dignity, and before the day closed was reëlected and entered upon her third year as president. Miss M. A. Cole as vice-president was also reëlected, also Mrs. L. P. Jones, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. C. A. Buckhout, recording secretary. On the resignation of our competent treasurer, Mrs. Josiah Conklin was chosen to that office. The church was well filled with earnest workers and attentive listeners at each session. The six unions of the county, the "Young People's Christian Temperance Union," and Loyal Temperance Legion of Spring Valley were well represented, also local citizens. The church was beautifully decorated. The very cordial address of welcome in the morning was given by Mrs. Alfred Smith, local president, and Mrs. E. P. Jones pleasingly responded. Rev. E. O. Howland, pastor of the church in which we convened, heartily welcomed the full house in the evening and expressed himself in sympathy with the W. C. T. U., the church and Bible temperance work.

The reports of the superintendents of the different branches of work in our county were excellent proofs that this was indeed a working organization, that "in the name of God" had they set up their banners, and in His strength and spirit had they "come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty." Most of the reports showed advancement in their special line of work, and increased opposition to the liquor traffic. We have five Loyal Temperance Legions, numbering 347 members, 109 pledged. Our Y. P. C. T. U. has thirty members, seventeen of which are pledged. Mrs. Julia C. Johnson, who has been superintendent of this work from its organization in 1886, has been obliged on account of ill health to resign, and has taken up the county press work, as it can be done at home. Mrs. Abram Blauvelt succeeds her as county superintendent in juvenile work. Our other branches of W. C. T. U. work are, Sabbath observance, temperance literature, mothers' meetings, Sunday-school work, evangelistic, county fairs, scientific instruction, organization, narcotics, prison, jail and county-house work. Mrs. J. A. Dingman was made a life member of the state by the county W. C. T. U. Our superintendent of press work also became a life member of the county W. C. T. U. by the payment of $5.

Each session of the day was preceded by devotional exercises, interestingly led by Mrs. M. A. Wight. Mrs. Austin, president of Bergen and Passaic counties of New Jersey W. C. T. U., also in the evening by Rev. Mr. Craig, of the M. E. Church of Stony Point. The grand feature of the day was the answering of questions in the evening by our state corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. A. Boole, and her brilliant address in the evening, which stirred up and enlightened, especially on the subject of home protection in its various phases. The music by local talent was heartily and understandingly rendered. We trust eternity will bear proof that the work of the day was not lost.

JULIA C. JOHNSON,
Co. Supt. of Press Work.

ALLEGANY COUNTY CONVENTION.

Our annual meeting was held in Angelica, July 23, 24. Mrs. P. A. Willard, for eight years our president, called to order, and after devotional exercises led by Mrs. Leet, directed the work of the convention, and from her address we gathered strength by the successes of the past, and the outlook for the future. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, president W. C. T. U. of Illinois was with us, and her counsel helped us to renewed efforts.

In the evening she delivered one of her clear and logical addresses. The reports from superintendents showed advance all along the lines. All the officers were reëlected.

MRS. A. M. TAYLOR, Rec. Sec.

A PLEASANT OCCASION AT CHAUTAUQUA.

Kellogg Hall is one of the very attractive points on the Chautauqua grounds, not alone because it is an imposing and beautiful structure and pleasant in all its appointments, but because of the motives which prompted its erection and the interests to which it is devoted.

Mr. James H. Kellogg, of Rochester, N. Y., presented this building to the Chautauqua Assembly as a memorial to his mother, and dedicated it to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the interests of women and children in the various departments of art and study.

It was an unusually pleasant occasion recently when a breakfast was served to Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg after their arrival at Chautauqua. The hostesses were Mrs. M. E. Layton of the W. C. T. U., Miss Eliza M. Clark and Miss Mattie Van Rensselaer of the department of industrial drawing, Miss Frances Newton of the kindergarten, Miss Laura A. Fry of the wood-carving, and Miss Isabel E. Smith, Mrs. E. C. Dean and Miss Flora E. Roberts of the China painting department.

At an early hour Saturday morning, August 9, the guests were received in the parlors of the W. C. T. U. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. George Vincent, President Lewis Miller and Mrs. Dr. Young. They were ushered into the pleasant hall occupied as a kindergarten, where Mrs. Ewing's art had prepared a dainty breakfast. The attractiveness of the occasion was greatly enhanced by the beautiful decorations, and the skill of the artist had been employed in the preparation of artistic souvenir cards. The occasion was one which will be pleasantly remembered by entertained and entertainers.

M. E. L.

NEBRASKA.

A NEW UNION AT WELLFLEET.

A meeting was called for July 2, by notice publicly given on preceding Sabbath. Mrs. Catherine M. Condon, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, a member of the Dartmouth branch of the W. C. T. U., was in charge in the absence of the state organizer. The list of officers is as follows: President, Mrs. F. E. Blanchard; vice-presidents, Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Savage and Mrs. Page; secretary, Miss Nellie Gulliver; treasurer, Mrs. Freeman Dennis.

As there has been an attempt, already, to evade the law and set up a saloon surreptitiously, the following resolution will be understood as a note of warning when published in the Wellfleet Standard;

"Resolved, That the members of the Wellfleet W. C. T. U. desire to record their firm determination to do all in their power to prevent the liquor traffic, in any shape or form, getting a foothold in the town of Wellfleet."

Let the fact that the individual against whom this resolution is aimed was only saved from conviction because the principal witness had broken a game law, make all interested punctiliously careful in their observance of all legal enactments. Meanwhile this local union will not be caught napping, nor will it allow the resolution to remain a merely empty protest. I wish to express my grateful sense of the prompt and courteous response to my letter to Miss Frances E. Willard asking for information in reorganization. I wrote from Lexington, Ky., and on my arrival here found a full outfit. No one who wishes to organize a local W. C. T. U. need hesitate, as all possible will be done at Headquarters to simplify their task.

A second meeting was held on Saturday, July 5, when it resolved that the second meeting in the month after transacting necessary business should resolve itself into a mothers' circle, and that the first topic should be, "Rejoicing in the Lord as one means of leading our children to Christ." Mrs. Condon will correspond with the mothers' circle, and with affectionate greetings the meeting adjourned. Twenty-one names are on the roll; not bad for a town of less than one hundred in population, and a spirit of deep earnestness was manifested. C.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE JOTTINGS.

At the equal suffrage association convention held at Huron, July 8 and 9, thirty counties were represented. Changes were made in the executive board, members of the former committee, whose hands were full of business on other lines, tendering their resignations that others might be elected who would make the suffrage work their chief occupation during the few remaining months of the campaign.

The executive committee now stands: President, Mrs. Philena Everett Johnson; vice-president, Mrs. Irene G. Adams; secretary, Mr. W. F. Bailey; assistant secretary, Mrs. M. L. Hammer; treasurer, Miss S. A. Richards. Miss Susan B. Anthony, Mrs. H. M. Barker, Judge Thomas, are additional members

There will be headquarters at Huron. Another convention will be held at Mitchell Aug. 25 and 26, and the workers will at that time be reënforced by Mrs. Zerelda Wallace, Dr. Anna Shaw and others. Converts are being made at all our meetings; many who had never given consideration to the question of woman's position under the law now feel it their duty to consider it. In some places more women than men attended the June school election; and in many others there was an equal number. To show the readiness of the people to work for the amendment, I will say that I have been speaking constantly since the first of April and have not failed to organize an equal suffrage club in any place where no club had been previously formed, except in one case, where a misunderstanding as to dates, and the rain together, kept away all but a few who lived near the church, and it was thought best to wait for a larger gathering from which to select officers. By invitation of the president of the state equal suffrage association, and at the request of Miss Anthony, I hope to remain in the service till the close of the campaign.

MRS. JULIA B. NELSON,
Vice President Minn. W. C. T. U.

WISCONSIN.

STATE MOTTO: "WHAT OUGHT TO BE DONE CAN BE DONE."

In my last letter I gave an account of our state convention. In May, before the state meeting, Winnebago, Waukesha, and Walworth counties held conventions, and Jackson county an institute. A little earlier, Dunn county also held an institute. These were not reported to me in time for my letter in THE UNION SIGNAL of May 29; they were all enthusiastic, helpful meetings. The W. C. T. U. Institute is becoming a valuable feature of our county work. Jefferson, Richland, Clark, and Portage counties followed in June with conventions where earnest, practical work was done.

The third district held its convention the last of May. Mrs. M. A. B. Smith, president of the district, gave an able address on "Unity of Purpose." Mrs. K. S. Lewis, state evangelist, gave strength and inspiration to all by her Bible readings and mothers' meeting. Mrs. A. K. Morse, the state president, gave a fine lecture one of the evenings.

Three new, and two reorganized unions have just been reported to me. Most of our district presidents are doing noble, aggressive work, though all have home cares that claim their full share of time and thought. Mrs. Morse spent some days the last of July and first of August in the northern part of the state, speaking at Superior, Poplar, and other places, and organizing a union at Superior. The reports from local societies show that they are at work in earnest, in spite of the very warm weather that June and July brought us.

Flower mission day at the state prison at Waupun was an interesting time. The chapel was beautifully decorated with evergreens and flowers, and over a large arch was hung a star of white flowers surrounded with green; just beneath the arch was the motto: "For God and Home and Native Land," and "W. C. T. U." in large evergreen letters, filled in with white. After the Sabbath morning services, as the men passed out to their cells, four little girls, dressed in white, handed each man a bouquet. Extracts from some of the letters written by the men to their families show their appreciation of all the services, and especially of the flowers.

Our Y. W. C. T. Unions had very helpful conferences at the state convention, and Y sentiment is growing.

The fifth district had a very profitable temperance day at the Appleton district M. E. camp-meeting, but as an account was given in the last UNION SIGNAL, I will not repeat.

EMMA J. CURTIS, Special Correspondent.

NORTH DAKOTA.

NEWS AND NOTES.

The last three months have been filled with work for the white-ribboners of our state, and we have not called a halt long enough to report. We have had a season of county conventions and general stirring up in the work. In May La Moure county held a convention at Edgeley. The general verdict was that a new interest had been awakened, and that the women would press on with greater zeal because of the inspiration of this convention.

Early in June Walsh county convention was held at Park River. This was the first annual meeting, and was well attended. The address of welcome and the response were fine. The reports and papers were encouraging, and much good work is expected of this county during the coming year. Mrs. H. Argall was elected county president.

June 12 and 13 Pembina county held its convention at Drayton, the home of its efficient president, Mrs. L. M. Wylie, and we trust much good was accomplished by the coming together of the workers from all parts of the county, the comparison of notes and the laying of plans for the future. The evening meeting was an inspiration. The Methodist Church, a large building, was filled to overflowing, and the closest attention was paid to the speakers. Excellent music was furnished, and all felt that Drayton was indeed a royal place for entertaining a convention. Mrs. Wylie was unanimously reëlected county president.

On the 27th and 28th of June the Cass county convention was held at Wheatland. Forty-nine delegates were present at this convention and much good work was reported as having been done by the local unions during the year. This county, which is the largest in the state, has nineteen unions as its working force. A gold medal contest had been arranged for the evening of the 27th. A large and interested audience assembled at the hour appointed, but for some unaccountable reason, three of the contestants failed to appear, thus leaving only five to compete for the prize, consequently the medal could not be awarded, and much disappointment was caused. Many lines of work are taken up by the unions of this county, and the reports given were of great interest and encouragement. All regretted the absence of the county president, Mrs. Baskerville, who was detained at home because of illness, but throughout the entire convention her wise planning and able management of the county work were manifested. Mrs. Baskerville declined a longer term of office, and the election resulted in the following: President, Mrs. Mattie Meacham; vice-president at large, Mrs. A. F. Johnson; secretary, Miss Mabel Wheeler; treasurer, Mrs. E. N. Dunham.

The Fourth of July was selected as the date for the Kidder county convention, which was held in a beautiful grove at Lake Isabel. The meetings of this day were a sort of partnership affair between the W. C. T. U. and a Methodist camp-meeting just beginning at the Lake. The two forces held the fort during the day and a grand celebration was the result. Mrs. M. L. Stanley, the efficient county president, was unanimously reëlected.

July 17 and 18 the unions of Ransom county held a convention at Lisbon for the purpose of organizing a county union. The ladies had made out a fine program, and the convention was a great success. Many of the papers were worthy of special mention. The papers on "Social Purity," on "Scientific Temperance Instruction" and on "Y Work" were exceedingly interesting and instructive; in fact, all were good, and the ladies of this county deserve a great deal of credit for their wise planning of this convention. The meetings were well attended throughout the entire session, the evening meeting being especially large. The music, address of welcome by Mrs. C. D. Austin, and response by Miss Lizzie Preston, were excellent. A chalk-talk, given by Mrs. A. M. Wilcox, state superintendent of juvenile work, to the children of Lisbon, was appreciated by them and also by the children of a larger growth. Mrs. Wilcox is doing a grand work throughout the state, and sowing seed which will surely bring forth much fruit. The convention was held in the Baptist Church, which was magnificently decorated with plants and flowers. Mrs. J. H. Johnson was elected county president, and Mrs. W. D. Brown, corresponding secretary.

The convention of Dickey county was held July 22 and 23 at Ellendale. This was the first annual meeting, and was a great success. One year ago this county was organized with only two societies, a W. C. T. U. and a Y, but now it claims six, all in good working order. This county suffered the loss of its chief officer during the year. In January, Mrs. Belle Buckland, the able president, heard the summons, "Come up higher," and passed "over the river" to the heavenly home. Much sorrow was felt at the loss of this beloved worker and leader, but we know that "He doeth all things well," and submissively bow to His will. The work of the remaining portion of the year fell upon the first vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Bouker, and faithfully did she discharge her duties. The papers at this convention were excellent, treating the important subjects of the day and our lines of W. C. T. U. work in a very able manner. The meetings of the entire session were well attended not only by ladies but by gentlemen as well, and all seemed much interested. Ellendale is the home of our state treasurer, Mrs. Lizzie J. Boyle, and to her lot fell the task, or privilege, of welcoming the delegates. Of this address of welcome one of the local papers in reporting the convention, said: "For brevity, point and comprehensiveness, this welcome was the best we ever listened to." All in all, the white-ribboners of Dickey county have every reason to be proud of their first annual convention. The election of officers resulted in the following: President, Mrs. J. A. Bouker; vice-president at large, Mrs. R. A. Smith; secretary, Mrs. Minnie Tibbetts; treasurer, Mrs. H. M. Ingersoll.

August 8 was the date of the Barnes county annual meeting held at Sanborn. This convention was held in the Presbyterian Church, and was well attended. Twenty-five delegates were present. The ladies of Sanborn served a most excellent dinner and supper in the Sunday-school room of the church, to all the delegates and visitors, more than forty in all. Sanborn hospitality is unbounded. A little less than a year ago this county was organized with three societies, two W. C. T. Unions and one Y, it now claims five W's and two Y's, and all are doing good work. The reports and papers were most interesting and encouraging, and the coming year will doubtless show a great increase in numbers, strength and amount of work done. The women of this county are waking up and taking hold of the work grandly. The evening meeting was filled with good things, short addresses, essays, recitations, music, etc., and the audience seemed much interested. The efficient president, Mrs. L. M. Biggs was reëlected, and we feel sure that this energetic little woman will cause much good work to be done during the year.

The annual meeting of La Moure county W. C. T. U. will be held at La Moure, August 15 and 16. Traill county is also planning for its convention. Sargent county is soon to be organized. A convention for this purpose will be held at Forman early in September.

Grand Forks county convention will be held at Grand Forks, Sept. 18 and 19. These conventions are all to occur before our state convention, our first annual, which will take place at Jamestown, Sept. 26–29.

The state president has been constantly on the wing since May 1, attending conventions and speaking for temperance. She has visited many of the towns in the state trying to do "what she could" to advance the work so dear to the hearts of all loyal white-ribboners. Many new unions have been formed during the year, and notwithstanding loss of crops and poverty, the outlook is encouraging.

In June Mrs. Marion B. Baxter came among us, and we were expecting to welcome her gladly to all parts of our state, hoping that much good would result from her stay with us, but after filling two appointments she was called suddenly home, and we were once more doomed to disappointment. Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge came to Fargo July 11, and gave us one of her strong addresses, for which we were all most grateful.

Much consternation has been caused in our state by the action of the Supreme Court, and many petitions have been sent to Congress for redress. Original package houses were opening thick and fast, but finally the long waited for relief came, and now enforcement of the law is once more in the hands of the state. One of our cities closed its three original package houses Saturday night, and now rejoices in a clean town. We trust that many others will follow suit.

ADELAIDE M. KINNEAR,
Special Correspondent.

MINNESOTA.

WORK AT CALEDONIA.

The Y's of this village, organized May 14, 1890, with a charter membership of thirteen ladies, married and single, are feeling proud of their maiden effort at money-making. On Friday evening, July 25, the average half-dozen met as usual; the subject of an entertainment for the pecuniary benefit of the society was discussed, and the idea of a sun-flower social suggested; the idea was so favorably received that the following Wednesday evening was set for the social, the committees appointed, and work begun immediately. Posters were scattered through the town, and announcements made from the churches, and when the evening came, warm and brilliantly lighted by the moon, the large hall where the social was held was thronged with young and old, and the young ladies of the Y. W. C. T. U. were kept busy waiting on the tables for two hours. The feature of entertainment for the evening, from which the social took its name, was a sun-flower chorus; a black curtain containing a cluster of twelve tissue paper sun-flowers with the centers cut out was hung at one end of the hall, behind which stood twelve singers, ladies and gentlemen, who inserted their faces in the sun-flower centers and sang college songs. Sun-flowers were freely used in decorations and a musical program was rendered during the progress of supper. The society cleared $18.20, a snug little sum, considering the fact that this is a high-license town with six saloons, and a large Roman Catholic population.

VICTORIA SMALLEY,
Cor. Sec. Y. W. C. T. U.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

MONTANA has suffered an unspeakable loss in the death of Mrs. Jane Reynolds Selway, July 7, at Albion, Mich., where she had gone last August to educate her four youngest children. In 1866 she came with her husband from Kenosha, Wisconsin, across the plains to Beaverhead Valley, Montana, and through all the years she was a leader, and her home a center of Christian work. The little church which stands a monument to her self-sacrificing devotion, was beautifully decorated with white, evergreen and flowers, when she was borne back to it for the last time. Her last request was that the W. C. T. U. banner should be displayed, and its motto, "In God we trust," was comforting to the many who tearfully asked one another, "What shall we do without her?"

THE Prohibition Convention of DeKalb county, in enthusiastic session at Sycamore, Ill., Aug. 19, unanimously nominated for the office of county superintendent of schools, Miss Sarah L. West, for many years the faithful and beloved president of the Sycamore W. C. T. U. Gentlemen in the convention gave Miss West the highest words of recommendation and praise.

THE fifteenth Illinois district convention has just closed the grandest session it ever held. One hundred and fifteen delegates enrolled. The sessions have been harmonious and the interest wonderful. The convention was held in the Opera House which was beautifully decorated with flags, banners and flowers. The district lacks but a score or so of one thousand members, and the enthusiastic delegates declared they would bring up the full thousand before state convention, in order that they may have two delegates to the National. Mrs. Replogle, the retiring president, was the unanimous choice for first delegate. The convention elected Mrs. Kate Goldman, of Newman, for its president for the coming year, and Miss Clara Parrish to continue as organizer.

MRS. MARY M. CLARDY gave two addresses of an hour each, to the Farmers' District Encampment, at Sulphur Springs, Texas. She was invited to attend their state meeting in Dallas, Aug. 19. Mrs. Clardy hopes to be present at the St. Louis National Reform Party Convention in St. Louis, Sept. 3, 1890.

AUGUST 20, the School of W. C. T. U. Methods at Hot Springs, S. Dakota, was opened in connection with Black Hills Chautauqua, Mrs. C. M. Woodward, conductor. Two sessions of one hour each were held each day. Upon the first day the enrollment of members was thirty, increasing with each session. The attendance was mainly from the unions of the Black Hills district, though Nebraska and East Dakota had quite a representation.

AT the meeting of the Southern Illinois Medical Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the twentieth district, through Mrs. Hanson, presented an address calling attention to the progress made by the principles of non-alcoholic medication, and gave to each member a copy of Miss Willard's "Doctor and Druggist." On motion the paper was spread upon the records for publication, but its principles were not indorsed. However, the discussion it aroused will be productive of great good. The district W. C. T. U. had offered to the association a prize for the best paper on the effects of alcohol. Only two papers were presented, and they were of such equal value that the prize was divided between them. The writers were Dr. O. B. Ormsby, Murphysboro, and Dr. Samuel Dodds, Anna.

THE People's Mission, of Chicago, Thomas Lavery, superintendent, has just closed its first year's work, with such gratifying results that the initiative has already been taken to form a non-sectarian church as a home for those converted through its efforts. Mr. Foss conducts a Bible class every Sunday afternoon, and every Friday evening its members meet with the Sunday-school teachers for systematic study of the lesson, under leadership of Mr. Lewis, superintendent. The mission has secured employment for over an hundred men and women during the year, and found homes for two aged people and one child.

THE Mascon W. C. T. U., mourns the death of a faithful member, Mrs. Dr. Frischkarn. She tenderly remembered the union to the last, and left a request that her name be continued on the roll of membership, and her yearly dues regularly paid. No name of state is given.

THE Waterbury, Neb., W. C. T. U. passed resolutions pledging themselves to use their influence to the uttermost, personally and unitedly, to persuade men to vote for those representatives only who have publicly pledged themselves in their platform to work for temperance bills and measures in the Legislature.

ANOTHER three days' meeting in the interest of Sunday-school and other Christian work, is this week in session at North Hudson, in the Adirondacks. A large gospel tent has been secured, entertainment is furnished at low rates in neighboring farm-houses or at a hotel three miles away. Joseph Cook is expected to be there and a very rich program is provided, Dr. H. C. Farrar, president of the State Sunday School Association, giving the address the first evening. Miss H. N. Morris, well known to W. C. T. U. workers, was a prime factor in starting this movement; at this year's session she gives a paper on "Pastor Harms and his Work," and presides over the question-box.

WYANETT, Ill., has held three Demorest contests, one in each of its three churches. Beside the medals, second prizes were offered by the W. C. T. U. at the last two; one of these was Grace Strong's "The Worst Foe," and the other "Ben Hur." The second contest drew speakers from Buda, Princeton, and Wyanett. Preparations are being made for a county contest.

MAJOR GEO. A. HILTON starts with his family this week for his third trip within two years to the Pacific coast, visiting Washington, Oregon, Nevada and California, having engagements that now run into April, 1891. During the past year through Major Hilton's efforts, fifteen hundred active, and twelve hundred honorary members have been added to the W. C. T. U.

THREE new unions have just been organized in Cuyahoga county, O., by Mrs. H. E. Hammond, county president, and eighty-three new members received. The new unions are at Nottingham, Rockport, and Fairmount. The new county president has been very cordially received by the W. C. T. U. and the pastors of Cleveland and vicinity, and every Sabbath is filled with appointments in the county.

PARSONS (Kansas) W. C. T. U., passed touching resolutions of respect for the memory of Mrs. Jane Horner, one of their most efficient members, and of sympathy with her family, especially her husband left in his declining years to finish life's journey alone.

THE W. C. T. U. of North Brookfield, Mass., and the churches there responded to the appeal for Nebraska, by sending a fifty dollar check.

REV. JAMES STOUT, of Bath, Illinois, who passed from time into eternity, May 5, was an ardent friend and earnest supporter of the W. C. T. U. Our workers were ever welcome in his pulpit. He was a strong Prohibitionist, everywhere and always standing for the principles of truth. He fought the battle of life bravely, and was triumphant over every foe. Visions of rapture and glory seemed to encircle his deathbed, and he declared repeatedly, "At even-time it shall be light." His wife, Mother Stout, an old crusader in the temperance work, was by his side administering to all his wants, and now lingers only for a time on this earthly shore, treasuring up in sweetest memories the golden truths which fell from the lips of her companion. His daughter, Mrs. Best, was Illinois' first superintendent of young woman's work.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Mrs. C. M. Woodward will return to Nebraska immediately upon the close of work at Black Hills Chautauqua, and will be at Seward county convention, Seward, August 30; at third district convention, at South Omaha, September 7; at Custer county convention, at Broken Bow, closely following.

The Michigan third district W. C. T. U. convention will be held in Battle Creek, October 1–3. Please forward Temple fund pledges and district dues (ten cents per capita) to the treasurer, Mrs. Julia D. Wareham, Grand Ledge, Mich., before September 20. Will each superintendent of department prepare a summary of work done, and prepare to conduct a drill of ten or fifteen minutes in her department? Send names of delegates to Mrs. Marion W. Upton, 281 Upton Ave., Battle Creek, for cards of entertainment. NANCIE A. BROWN, Pres.,
MRS. D. P. SAGENDORPH, Cor. Sec.
Jackson, Aug. 14, 1890.

The W. C. T. U. convention for the seventh Congressional district of Wisconsin comprising the counties of Sauk, Juneau, Monroe, LaCrosse, Richland, Crawford and Vernon, will be held at Baraboo, Oct. 21 and 22, with Mrs. Louise S. Rounds in attendance. Each union is entitled to three delegates. It is hoped there will be a good attendance. MRS. L. R. GOTT, District President.

COLORADO CONVENTION.

The eleventh annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Colorado will be held at the First Baptist Church, Pueblo, Sept. 23, 24, 25 and 26, commencing Tuesday at 3 o'clock p. m. Papers and discussions on pertinent subjects will be given. Superintendents of departments will present reports. Business of great importance will be transacted and a full representation is urged. Railroad rates will be granted. Delegates will correspond with Mrs. M. A. Patterson, 825 West Fourteenth street, Pueblo.

We urge each union to attend to the collection of dues. Send required quota to state treasurers and thus insure a correct membership "count." We also urge each local superintendent to send her report to the state, that every side of our glorious work may be presented.

MRS. C. D. H. THOMPSON, Pres.
MRS. S. J. ROBBINS, Cor. Sec.
Longmont, Aug. 15, 1890.

The second judicial district of Nebraska W. C. T. U. will hold its semi-annual convention, the 16th and 17th of September, closing the morning of the 18th. Mrs. Clara Hoffman, of Missouri, is expected to be present one evening. A Demorest medal contest will be held one evening. It is hoped every union in the district will be represented by its full quota of delegates.

MRS. ZARA A. WILSON, Pres.
MRS. M. J. WARNER, Sec

Official Communications.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE DEPARTMENT.

As I am all the time "on the wing" and greatly pressed for time, will all state superintendents of Sabbath observance pardon me for not writing the usual personal letter to each this month, and without waiting for that, each fill out the blank which will be sent her by my secretary, adding thereto as much as possible by letter? Please direct to me at Painesville, O., sending report before October 8, when I hope to reach there, and make out the annual report. If you cannot give the statistics accurately, give the best estimate you can. "Large per cent," "great numbers," "more than ever before," "a few," "several hundred," etc., can never be counted as figures in the total, but "many a mickle makes a muckle," if only the mickles are countable.

All persons having in hand our W. C. T. U. petitions for the closing of the International Exposition on the Sabbath, are hereby requested to send them in at once to the undersigned, care of the corresponding secretary, W. C. T. U., 161 La Salle street. No time can be lost if we would accomplish our object. Yours in service,

MRS. J. C. BATEHAM.
San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 12.

PRESS DEPARTMENT.

To Press Superintendents:

DEAR SISTERS:—Since my recent circular letter was sent to state superintendents, I have been offered and have accepted a position on the editorial staff of The Chautauquan. While it is with deep regret that I leave a work which has been so pleasant, I hope to be of service to our great reform in my new field of labor. I take this opportunity to thank you all most sincerely for your cordial coöperation and support, and to wish for the National press department the future success its importance deserves. It will certainly suffer no loss in the hands of Miss Alice Briggs, who has been appointed by the General Officers as National superintendent for the remainder of the year. Miss Briggs has been Miss Willard's office secretary for nearly five years, and is perfectly familiar with the press work, and the making of bulletins, having had entire editorial charge of the latter for nearly a year before my appointment. Hereafter all subscriptions to the Bulletin, and all communications in any way referring to the National press department, should be sent to Miss Briggs. Address her at Evanston, Ill.

State superintendents will please notice especially that all orders for question circulars for local superintendents should be sent hereafter to Miss Briggs; also that all annual reports should be sent in now, as soon as possible. Any state superintendent who has not preserved her list of questions for report, should send to Miss Briggs at once for a duplicate. All reports should be in by October 15 at the very latest

All local superintendents whose subscriptions are due are particularly urged to pay up promptly.

Bespeaking for my successor in office the same ready interest in new plans and the same encouragement and sympathy which have been so grateful and helpful to me, I bid you all "God-speed" to victory and sign myself now and always your comrade in the battle,

MARY HENRY.
Evanston, Ill., Aug. 21, 1890.

JUVENILE DEPARTMENT.

It will be remembered that by vote of the National W. C. T U. convention in New York, in 1888, Miss Willard's birthday, September 28, is to be observed each year by our Loyal Temperance Legion Companies. It is hoped that no company in all our vast domains will omit this celebration in the coming September. A harvest exercise, entitled "Which Road," expressly prepared for this occasion, by Miss Alice M. Guernsey, has already appeared in the Young Crusader, and the beautiful Willard Souvenir Cards of last year will again be published, with different quotations. In addition to this, each company may become the owner of a picture of Miss Willard to grace the celebration. The W. T. P. A. will send to each company which obtains six new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL before Sept. 28, a framed picture of our National President; an unframed picture can be secured for two new subscribers at $1 each, or one new name with $1.25.

Please notice the suggestions for the birthday made by our National Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, in THE UNION SIGNAL of July 31.

HELEN G. RICE, Nat. Supt.
ANNA A. GORDON, Associate.

Publisher's Dep't.

WHY THESE ODD SHAPES?

OUR

GREATEST OFFER!

We cannot longer delay reaching that 100,000 mark. We propose to "get there" by October 1st, and from now till that date only will receive old subscribers' names and new ones at 75 cents each, or

✠ JUST HALF PRICE. ✠

When sent in subject to the conditions. Here are : : : : : : : : :

THE CONDITIONS:

1st. One old and one new name must always come together, that is, new names can be sent in at 75 cents each till October 1st by any one, but if you are an old subscriber and want to get the paper for a year for 75 cents you must send in at least one new name with yours.

2d. The money must be sent with the subscription. . . . . .

3d. You can send us $7.50 and your own name only as an old subscriber and we will send you coupons for nine new names which can be sent in any time up to January 1st, 1891. The same holds good for 2, 4, 6—any number of new names for which you want coupons. : : : : :

TO CATCH YOUR EYE—

SAVE YOUR MONEY AND—

CONDITIONS Continued.

You or your union can take the new names at $1.00 after October 1st, as the price will not again be reduced to 75 cents.

4th. No money will be received by us if the envelope which holds it bears the stamp of October. The offer positively closes Sept. 30th, that is, you can mail money on that day and it will be received, but not if you mail it October 1st.

5th. No commissions will be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD

Add 30 cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. No matter when your subscription expires it will be extended a year if you will send us $1.50 with your own name and one new name.

8th. This offer holds good only for those whose subscription expires in '90 or '91. It is not meant that those who are in arrears can pay up at the rate of 75 cts. a year.

9th. Now it has all been explained—the offer is a great and generous one, don't forget it, don't pass it by. It ought to bring us 50,000 new names, sure.

Address W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

GET UP TO THE 100,000 MARK!

Dear Friends:

The above offer speaks for itself. Many have claimed it was unjust to old subscribers to take new names at a less rate than their own. Here is the opportunity to get THE UNION SIGNAL at just as low a price as to the new subscriber. If you do not accept it you cannot, again, justly criticize our system of building up the paper. Is not this true? We are trying to get the paper into homes where it would not go without these efforts to get new subscribers. A gain of 15,000 new names a year for five consecutive years, is evidence that this is being done. With one more good push from you, NOW, the 100,000 mark will be reached. Let every lover of the paper and its claims say, "It shall be so!" and it will be done. The offer is plain, so are the conditions; now, then?

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARVEY.

THE SOUND OF THE HAMMER

Is heard there. The artesian well is down 1,000 feet; the manufactories are being built; car loads after car loads of bricks, lumber, lime, etc., are on the ground and being unloaded; the streets are being graded, sidewalks are being laid, houses are building, and people are buying lots, lots of them! It is estimated that from six to ten thousand people will call Harvey their home within the next twelve months. Why should it grow? Why should manufactories leave present sites and go to the expense of moving here? Because the owners must follow the flood-tide of centralization. If they attempt to manufacture goods in places where there is but one or two railroads they find themselves handicapped by the factories who have the choice of ten or fifteen roads to ship by. Freight rates are always cheaper and transportation surer from a large place than from an inland town. Then more and more is it found that it pays in dollars and cents to have temperate, sober workmen. "Rushing the growler" never results in rushing the work. Beer-drinkers are sullen, ugly, lazy and slow workmen. That's a fact, and an employer who don't know it, or don't believe it, stands no show in competition with the wide-awake, alert Prohibitionist, who employs men just like himself as to personal habits. So, the lots are going, going fast, people are writing in that they will come there to open boarding-houses, stores, factories and homes. All the $180 lots are sold—the range of prices now is from $200 to $450 each lot. These prices hold good only till September 15th. You might do as a number of others are doing, write in and say, "Reserve me the best lot you have at"——naming the price you are willing to pay. I will do it. I will reserve the lot that I think is the best for the money, and send you a plat with it marked. You can then change it if you desire, for some lot not yet taken, but I think you will be well pleased with my choice for you. All of these lots face east or west. Payments are, one-fourth down, balance in 6, 12 and 18 months. A small discount will be made for spot cash. By the time you get this paper there will be only about twenty days left before the advance in price. But you can make up your mind in that time? Address

C. D. PAINE, Mgr. Adv. Dept. Union Signal,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Prices per lot, $200, $225, $250, $275, $300, $325, $350, $400, $450.

As we go to press August 28, there are only 3 of the $200 lots left.

I refer by permission to Mrs. T. B. Carse, President W. T. P. A.; Miss Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL. Mr. Hall kindly permits me to say that, as the time named is very short, any who desire to invest can send the money to him, and he will see that the deeds, abstracts, etc., are sent promptly.

LAST OFFERING OF STOCK

IN THE

EAST TENNESSEE LAND COMPANY

TO THE READERS OF THE UNION SIGNAL.

Of the $3,000,000 Capital Stock in this Corporation it was voted to sell only $2,000,000. A small amount of this only remains unsold. Until it is all taken, any patron of this paper may order one share (of $50 par value) at par, or more shares, remitting 20 per cent. with order, full payment to be made within 30 days. Registered Certificate will be issued as soon as payment has been received in full.

This stock has been steadily increasing in actual value since the first offerings, by reason of the great and the rich mineral developments round about. These improvements are conceded, by men familiar with new towns, to surpass, in extent and substantiality, during less than six months' time, those of any other new city in the South.

IMPROVEMENTS AT HARRIMAN,

Over 300 residences and business buildings are now erected and under contract there. The great Lookout Rolling Mills, one of the largest and most valuable industries at Chattanooga, have contracted for removal to HARRIMAN; a Hoe and Tool Factory is in course of erection there; a Tack Factory also; and these, with other established and assured industries, will require from three to four hundred more buildings as fast as they can possibly be had.

The mineral developments near by include

7 VEINS OF CANNEL COAL.

and indicate that this Company's Coal Fields alone will repay many times the cost of all its vast Coal, Iron, Farm, Timber and city site properties.

The increased actual value of the stock (shown March 31st by an actual gain in assets of about $900,000), and the fact that it can not legally be sold above par, formed one of the weighty reasons for declining to sell beyond the $2,000,000 limit. For safe and growing investment this stock is recommended by all familiar with the incomparable property valuations on which it is based, with the character of the Company's Management, and with the distinctive feature of which differentiates this from all the other great enterprises of the Country.

PROHIBITION IN TITLE DEEDS

Full particulars given free, in a new edition of the Illustrated Prospectus, on application.

Promptness will be necessary to secure any of the stock unsold.

Send all remittances to A. W. WAGNALLS, Treasurer, 18 and 20 Astor Place, N. Y.

All other communications address to THOMAS L. JAMES, Pres't. A. A. HOPKINS, Secretary. Times Building, N. Y. City.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

—?—OH!—

Can any one get subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL?

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

Yes, any one can.

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

Do all who try get the subscribers ?

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

No, they do not.

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

Since any one can and all do not, what is the trouble?

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

The right method is not used.

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

What is the right method in conventions, summer assemblies and public gatherings?

Let this letter from Miss Willard answer:

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

REST COTTAGE, Aug. 14, 1890.

BROTHER HALL:

I think our women would get very much better results at the summer meetings, and in the winter and summer audiences, if they had more method about it. Let me give Anna Gordon's plan. When she solicits subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL, she prepares a sheet of paper as follows—writing in her large, fair hand, at the top, these words: "I will subscribe to THE UNION SIGNAL, the official organ of the National W. C. T. U., and literary outgrowth of the crusade movement, which can be secured in this audience at $1.00 a year, weekly. It is a family paper, with something in it for father, mother, the young folks and the children." She then gets half a dozen young ladies to copy this on as many more sheets of paper, and to go round to the people as they are coming in, or else at the close of the meeting, each young lady having in her hand a copy of THE UNION SIGNAL. Thus, without making any fuss, she brings the facts in the case before every person, which is a thousand times better than the scatteration policy of leaving papers on the seats and making an appeal from the platform, and expecting individuals to come to the front and put down their names. Where one will do this, a half dozen will subscribe by the other mode. The same method can be followed in securing trial subscribers at ten cents for five weeks, or twenty-five cents for three months. I wish our women would lay this to heart, for it afflicts me to see golden opportunities on every hand going to waste because we do not systematize our efforts to reach the audience. We simply tell them there is a paper, and ask if they do not want to take it, expecting them to subscribe without having seen a copy or having the facts in the case brought to them personally and individually. Nothing wins, in this busy age, except the law of one to one—a personal appeal of one whose heart is enlisted to another who is ignorant or apathetic. In securing subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL the old Yorkshire motto is the only true one: "It's dogged as does it."

Ever yours, sincerely,

Frances E. Willard

Now it's our turn—Have you read Miss Willard's words, friend?

✠ ✠ ? ✠ ✠

Don't you find them full of remarkable common sense?

✠ ✠ ? ✠ ✠

Will you try the plan at the very next opportunity?

✠ ✠ ? ✠ ✠

How can you without sending in advance for sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL?

✠ ✠ ? ✠ ✠

Isn't there a combination needed, viz.:

1st. Consideration; 2d. Decision; 3d. Promptness as to ordering supplies; 4th. Action?

Address Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

No other preparation is "as good as" Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
Appetizing--Easily Digested.
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [66

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE
LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

RUG & EMBROIDERY MACHINE. THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

MY CATALOGUE of DRESS reform goods sent free to any address on receipt of stamp for postage. Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St., Chicago.

YOUR CHILD must be kept healthy, or she can not be beautiful. Sensible mothers buy the "GOOD SENSE" Corset Waist for themselves and their growing daughters.

IF YOU ARE MARRIED, or contemplate taking this important step, we can send you information which you ought to know, and worth $100. Valuable 16-page circular mailed free, by J. S. OGILVIE 57 Rose Street, New York.

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, WIS.

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.
IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.
No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.
SPLENDID PROGRESS.
Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.
PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.
Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON
QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION
MODENE
AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.

Discovered by Accident.—IN COMPOUNDING, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CAN NOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. MODENE SUPERCEDES ELECTROLYSIS.

Recommended by all who have tested its merits—Used by people of refinement.

Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail, in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. ☞Correspondence sacredly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. (ALWAYS MENTION YOUR COUNTY AND THIS PAPER.) Cut this advertisement out.

LOCAL AND GENERAL AGENTS WANTED.

MODENE MANUFACTURING CO., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A.
Manufacturers of the Highest Grade Hair Preparations.
You can register your letter at any Post-office to insure its safe delivery.

We Offer $1,000 FOR FAILURE OR THE SLIGHTEST INJURY. ☞EVERY BOTTLE GUARANTEED.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP! Beautiful song and chorus. 30c. Wm. A. May, Box 3442, New York N. Y.

$1.99 buys a $12.00 genuine Silverene STEM WIND Watch. Shipped C.O.D. and examination allowed before paying for same. Address The Nat'l Mfg. & Importing Co., 191 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME. NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure. Read article in UNION SIGNAL June 5, page 13. The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

SATIN & PLUSH SILK Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1 Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

BABY CARRIAGES FREE ARE DELIVERED to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

THE PRFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE. The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted. SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO., 491-493 Carroll Ave., Cor. Union Park Place. Chicago.

Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
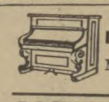
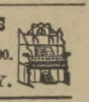
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS M'F'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.



WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.



CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless Interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

WANTED.
One hundred and sixty-five (165) W. C. T. U. members (or other reliable persons), who will, each, secure five (5) purchasers for FAITH,
or, EARTHLY PARADISE and Other Poems, just issued from the press of the W. T. P. A.; a volume of 528 pages, 330 of which constitute a drama, with scenes laid in Washington City, Faith being the heroine. Good, clear type, with frontispiece, and Three (3) Songs Set to Music.
5½ by 7¾ inches in size by 1⅛ thick; bound in royal purple cloth, with name on back in gold letters. Price $1.25 per copy; gilt-edged, $1.50. Six copies, plain, for $6.25, cash in advance. 100 copies, plain, for $90 in advance. Ladies particularly will like the book. The Mississippi White Ribbon says:
"It especially commends itself for its fidelity to the loftiest ideals for woman and the home." Address immediately,
MRS. ELLEN E. HEBRON,
Edwards, Hinds Co., Mississippi

SONGS FROM SOUTH,
a volume of 245 pages, by same author, for 60 cents.
Postage or freight prepaid on all books.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Willard Souvenir Cards.

September 28 has been set apart as Harvest Home Day in honor of its being the birthday of Miss Willard. Last year we prepared a set of twelve cards with illuminated texts on one side, and witty, wise, or winning quotations of Miss Willard's on the other side. This year we have another set ready with new words of wisdom and helpfulness. The cards are put up in packages of twelve. We offer them at a low rate in packages only, viz.:

1 package,	$ .25
8 assorted p'kgs (96 cards)	1.60

We had orders for great numbers of these pretty cards last year. Send for what you will need soon. One of the sets will have Miss Willard's new poem, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons Must Go!" printed thereon, and this will be especially useful in Nebraska. It is urged that September 28 be made a Nebraska day. See The Young Crusader for particulars.

FAIR NUMBER.

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.
Do something!

PRICES.
10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14,00
All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

Eleven car loads of Chicago business men visited the new manufacturing town of Harvey last Saturday and a large number of them became investors in lots for homes. If THE UNION SIGNAL readers desire to take advantage of the present low prices, they must make selection before September 15.

Union Pledges.

North Capitol Auxiliary, Washington, D. C.
Ashland Union, Ashland, Ill.
Mrs. A. G. Dustin, Dustin, Neb.
W. C. T. U., Calumet, Mich.

I Will Try—Singles

Emerilla Bachman, Ithaca, N. Y.
Nora Carpenter, Fillmore, N. Y.
Malvina Thornton, Pollocksville, N. C.
Amanda Scudds, Bolton, ——.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents; in package of 25 or over, to one address, one issue or assorted, 1c per copy.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Bargain Prices.

Books, etc., soiled by having been sent to convention, or having some slight damage in binding.

	Regular Price.	Bargain Price
Ye Hatchet Partie,	$ .15	$ .07
Helping,	.10	.05
Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	.75	.35
" " " paper,	.40	.15
Romance Nineteenth Century	1.00	.35
Duties of Women,	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo,	.25	.10
Boys and Other Boys, paper,	.25	.12
Girls of To-Day,	.25	.12
Y Song Books,	.25	.20
Glorious Cause,	.30	.20
Birthday Books, plain,	1.00	.50
Birthday Books, gilt edge,	1.25	.60

Please name first and second choice, as we have only a few of some of the items. Secure your bargains promptly. They will not last long.

Address,
W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

FREE EDUCATION FOR GIRLS

Offered without Money and without Cost by

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

WHAT EVERY GIRL CAN GET:

First.—A Full College Education.
(A COMPLETE FOUR-YEARS' COURSE.)

Second.—A Year at Vassar, or any other College; or,

Third.—A Cash Return in case she fails in winning a prize.

A girl, therefore, loses nothing by trying for these special offers of Free Education. She is bound to make money, even if she fails to win an education.

☞Write to us, and we will gladly tell you all about the plan. Address

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL,
433–435 Arch Street, Philadelphia.

THE EDISON

MIMEOGRAPH

Patented by THOS. A. EDISON.

Patented by Thos. A. Edison. A simple, practical and portable device for every day use. Makes 3,000 copies of the one original writing, Drawing, Music, etc. 1,500 copies of one original Typewriter Letter. Recommended by over 40,000 users. Send for circular and sample of work.

A. B. DICK COMPANY,
152-154 Lake Street, CHICAGO. 32 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.

Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars.
Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

SAVE MONEY. Our 486-page Catalogue gives Wholesale Prices on all kinds of Merchandise in any quanity. Anti-trust and Co-operative. Write for particulars. Cash Buyers' Mer. Union, Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of

THE ECONOMY CLUB,

at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at WHOLESALE.

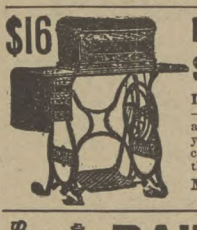
$16



FREE TRADE PRICES
No Protection! No Monopolies!
$45 SEWING MACHINES | NOW ONLY $16
We are now selling our Western Improved Singer Sewing Machine—same as cut—complete with all attachments and warranted for five years for only $16. Send for circular and see full description of this and other styles to
M. A. SCULLIN & CO.
762 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

For Gas For Oil

BAILEY'S
COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO.
113 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam.

For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express
A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE how you do it for the money.

$12.50 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine, a perfect working, reliable, finely finished Sewing Machine, adapted for light or heavy work, with all the latest improvements and complete set of attachments. A written guarantee for 5 years with each machine. Buy direct from manufacturers and save Dealers and Agents profits. Catalogue free.
OXFORD MANUFACTURING CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

AGENTS Male or Female can make good wages at their own home. Write for terms and Free Sample.
HOBB'S MEDICINE CO.,
407-415 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE.
REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St. Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.

$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

OPIUM HABIT.

Send two dollars to Dr. L. S. Means, Oxford. Ga., for a sure remedy for the Opium & Morphine habit.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

---

ALL FAT PEOPLE

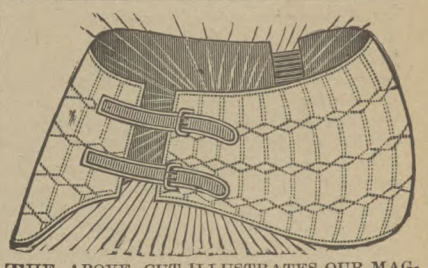
can safely Reduce Weight and Cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without Change of Diet. An English Countess writes:—"Your Trilene Tablets act admirably."—Send Postal Note for 75 cents to THE TRILENE CO., Sole Proprietors, 834 Broadway, New York.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.

Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free.

Dispels whoop, allays cough, and cuts short the disease. Its peculiar anti-spasmodic action insures sleep and is perfectly harmless. Especially effective in dry, Hacking Coughs. For the sudden, dangerous CROUP it is infallible. 40 years established in Philadelphia. 50c. per bottle. Sold at druggists

---



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Owen's Electric Belt.
FOR MAN AND WOMAN

The only practicable electric belt made. Cures Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Sciatica, Paralysis, Torpid Liver, Lumbago, Nervous Debility, Female Weakness, General Debility, Painful Menses, Saint Vitus Dance, Spinal Diseases, Kidney Complaints, Urinary Diseases. Pat. Aug., 16, 1887. Improved Aug. 1, 1889. Awarded the highest medal at Cincinnati Exposition, 1888. Gives mild or strong current of electricity which stimulates and assists nature to restore weak organs to health and vigor.

ELECTRIC INSOLES $1.00.
Send 6c for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.
DR. OWEN BELT CO., 191 & 193 State St., Chicago, Ill.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S
HEALTH PAMPHLET.

MRS. CLARA C. HOFFMAN,

President of the Missouri W. C. T. U., writes:

Mr. A. T. Bates, Chicago:
After trying every remedy, for years, to remove constipation and hemorrhoids, and all without avail, I have found a complete cure offered by Dr. W. Hall. I recommend his treatment to all suffering from the hundred ills arising from these causes.
C. C. HOFFMAN.
Kansas City, Dec. 24, 1889.

R. S. Machett, Esq., Star, Wis., writes, July 19th:
"Dr. Hall,—I have been using your treatment for several months, and am greatly benefited. * * * Allow me to say in a word, that could the information your Health Pamphlet contains be taken from me, no amount of money that could be named would buy it. The mere idea of the treatment itself is a small matter compared with the original and vitadiscussions of which the pamphlet is full from lid to lid. The mere treatment can be given away by dishonest purchasers of the pamphlet, but the wonderful rationale of the discovery and its application, the main things involved, can only be made known by pirating the whole pamphlet. * * *
"Gratefully yours, R. S. MACHETT."

For further information regarding this medicineless treatment call upon or send a 2-cent stamp to

A. T. BATES,
Room 46, 161 La Salle-st., Chicago.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Signal Notes.

ONE who recently listened to an address by Mrs. Fessenden, Superintendent of Franchise for the National W. C. T. U., writes: "There were two things that especially impressed me in her speech, first, her womanly bearing and dignity; second, the delicate rhetorical turn and beauty of her sentences. Her remarks showed careful thought, preparation and mastery of her subject, while the phraseology and arrangement indicated mental discipline and culture."

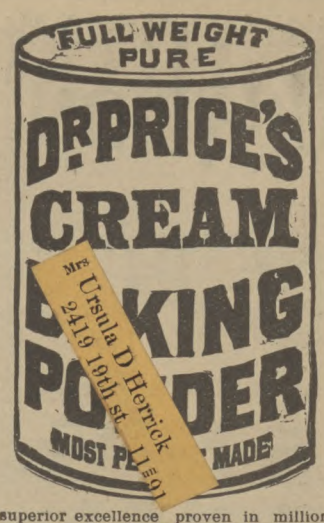
CINCINNATI is to have a new medical college, the Woman's State Hospital Medical College, incorporated by seven leading ladies of that city and with a board of trustees consisting of ladies. Its faculty consists of leading physicians of both sexes, and its course includes four years of study. It will open Wednesday, October 1. Connected with it is a strong hospital staff and a dispensary department. Its secretary, and one of its leading spirits is Dr. Juliet Monroe Thorpe, niece of Mrs. Monroe, president of Ohio W. C. T. U. She possesses much of her gifted aunt's executive ability, ranks high in her profession, and will aid greatly in making the new movement a success.

FROM Shanghai, China, comes news of W. C. T. U. meetings sustained regularly during the past year, of a gradual increase in temperance ideas, and of ground gained slowly but surely. Kindly words are spoken concerning Miss Ackerman's visit there last winter; her meetings were more largely attended than the most sanguine had dared to hope. After her visit to Japan she returned and was present at the May Missionary Conference. One evening of its session was devoted to her to present the claims of the W. C. T. U. to the missionaries gathered from all parts of the empire. This she did to a crowded house, and a most attentive audience. The Shanghai Band of Hope celebrated its first birthday, showing a membership of over fifty children. Mrs. Fryer who sends these notes, sends $12 to pay for six years' subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL.

THE National parlors in Anna Kellogg Memorial Hall, Chautauqua, are a most delightful resort. W. C. T. U. visitors take great pride and pleasure in the rooms, and as they sit down there to rest or to write, thank the noble man who provided so restful a place for them. Each day there is what is called a "greeting hour," for visitors to become acquainted; one day last week Maine, Texas, California and New York sat here side by side. Dr. Deems gave a grand rallying speech there Friday; his drink statistics were appalling, and he pressed home the sense of personal responsibility till every heart felt it.

MISS ADA C. SWEET, of Chicago, has the honor of being the first woman appointed pension agent. She fulfilled the duties of the office admirably, as all who know her efficiency prophesied she would. When a change of administration threw her out of office, she stepped down and out gracefully, and is now carrying on a very extensive business as claim agent in this city, a business for which she is admirably fitted, both by natural endowments and by experience gained while in office. Chicago people greatly honor Miss Sweet, not alone for her business ability, but for philanthropic work. She is the one who has worked so persistently to secure city ambulance service and emergency hospitals at convenient stations, where those stricken down in the street by sickness or accident can be taken.

THE quarter ending July 1 was one of the most prosperous ever known in the National Temperance Hospital. The report of Dr. Ousley, resident physician, shows forty-five cases treated within the hospital, and a number of outside patients. One case of morphine habit treated by Dr. Davis was a total wreck when she entered, but before leaving seemed thoroughly cured. A number of cases of intermittent fever—one of long standing and many relapses—were treated without alcoholics or quinine, with the best of results. One of these cases, a gentleman long addicted to the use of tobacco, determined to give it up, and writes after two or three months' abstinence from it, that he is now and always hopes to be, a free man. There was one death in the hospital of hypertrophy of the heart. The corps of nurses in the training school has been increased to nine, and they are making good progress in their studies, and gaining much practical knowledge from the lectures of the staff of physicians. Dr. Rachel Hickey has been added to the staff and warmly welcomed by the directors and the other physicians.



Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

THE NEW PENSION LAW
grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent.
Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES! Use only { Brown's French Dressing } on your Boots and Shoes.

THE KINDERGARTEN, A monthly for home and school, science lessons, stories, games, occupations, etc. Invaluable for primary teachers and mothers. $1.50 a year. On trial, 3 months, 30 cts. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle Street, Chicago.

This is the Picture of
Baby Barendse,

Three months old when cured by the use of Steketee's Worm Destroyer.
Read what its mother says:

"The undersigned has a child only three months old. It became sick with pains in its bowels and stomach when scarcely two months old. It cried and whined nearly all the time, and was completely run down in flesh. We gave it everything that we thought would relieve the child, but it grew worse all the time. We made twenty powders from a teaspoonful of Steketee's Worm Destroyer, gave it one powder three times daily. To our astonishment it was relieved of thousands of worms. We have given the child but twenty powders It is entirely cured. I shall always recommend Steketee's Worm Destroyer. MRS. B. BARENDSE,
Oakdale Park, Kent Co., Mich.

For Sale by all Druggists, and by mail, 25 Cents.
Send U. S. Stamp. Address:

GEO. G. STEKETEE,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
The proprietor of this paper knows that this medicine is no humbug, and perfectly safe to send money to Mr. Steketee. Mention Union Signal.

RUPTURE
Positively cured in 60 days by Dr. Horne's Electro-Magnetic Belt Truss, combined. Guaranteed the only one in the world generating a continuous Electric & Magnetic current. Scientific, Powerful, Durable, Comfortable and Effective. Avoid frauds. Over 9,000 cured. Send stamp for pamphlet.
ALSO ELECTRIC BELTS FOR DISEASES.
DR. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

A-CORN SALVE.
Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

Young ladies seeking employment cannot fail of finding the same if they will take a course of training at the Sloyd Institute in Chicago. Sloyd is manual training in wood, and just now there is a demand for teachers in this department of education, as all thinkers and educators are satisfied that some form of handcraft must be introduced in our schools if they meet the demands of the age. Dr. Alice B. Stockham, so well known to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL, is business manager of the Institute. In her visit to Sweden and Finland last year she became convinced that American education needed sloyd, and ever since her return she has used her money and influence to this end. For circulars and further information address Meri Toppelius 190 Madison St., Chicago.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth, Minn.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILWAUKEE COLLEGE. Milwaukee, Wis. For Young Women. For Catalogue address C. R. KINGSLEY, Ph. D., Pres't.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE
Morgan Park (near Chicago). Boarding School for Girls and Young Ladies. For catalogue address G. THAYER, LL. D., Morgan Park, Ill., or 77 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich.
Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, S. E. Cor. Druid Hill Av. & Hoffman St. The ninth annual session will begin on Wednesday, Oct. 1st, 1890, and will continue seven months. For further information or catalogue address Randolph Winslow, M. D., Dean, 1 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

KNOX COLLEGE, GALESBURG, ILLINOIS.
Fifty-fourth year opens Sept. 4th, with greatly increased facilities. For catalogue and all information address NEWTON BATEMAN, President.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH
42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

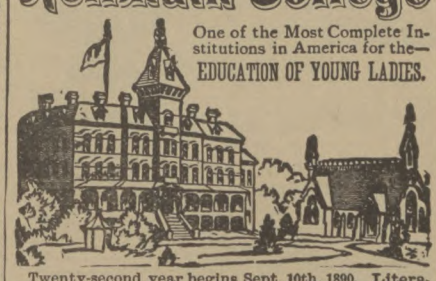
JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY
Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution. SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year.
E. F. BULLARD, A. M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

CHICAGO KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY,
2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE
NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

FOREST PARK UNIVERSITY Kirkwood Seminary. 30th YEAR.
Beautiful buildings, modern, roomy and homelike with every convenience; heated with hot water and lighted with electricity. No Basement Dining-Room. FULL COLLEGE COURSE (similar to that of Wellesley, Smith, etc.) Seminary and Academic Courses, Preparatory Departments. THE COLLEGE OF MUSIC fully equipped. Instruction in Pipe Organ, Piano, Voice by a pupil of LaGrange, Paris, (the Italian method). Harmony, Theory, Counterpoint, Violin, Guitar, Mandolin, Banjo, etc. Thorough ART Training. FULL FACULTY. 18 Specialists from Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, and Paris. For catalogue, or to secure rooms address, Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Forest Park University, St. Louis, Mo.
To any union sending a pupil, $20.00 remitted.

Hellmuth College



One of the Most Complete Institutions in America for the—
EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES.
Twenty-second year begins Sept. 10th, 1890. Literature, Languages, Mathematics, Science, Music, Painting, Elocution, Business Course, etc. Diplomas and certificates granted. Climate exceptionally healthy about same as Ohio. Comfortable buildings, beautifully situated in 150 ACRES of land. On Through Route between East and West. Passenger Elevator. Gymnasium; Riding School. Students from all parts of America. The number received limited. Charges moderate.
Illustrated Circulars sent on Application | Rev. E. N. ENGLISH, M. A., Principal.
LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT OF
STANDARD FIBER-WARE
IN NEXT WEEK'S "UNION SIGNAL."

RUBIFOAM
FOR THE TEETH
DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED DENTIFRICE.
Cleanses, Preserves, Beautifies.
LARGE BOTTLES, PRICE 25 CENTS.
Sample Vial sent free to any address.
PREPARED AND GUARANTEED BY
E. W. HOYT & Co., LOWELL, MASS.
MANUFACTURERS OF THE Celebrated Hoyt's German Cologne.

LADY AGENTS WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

RIDGE'S FOOD Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

AMERICAN Desk & Seating Co.
Manufacturers, Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for catalogue.
270-272 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

COMMON SENSE BROOM HOLDER
AGENTS WANTED.
NOTHING LIKE IT. BEST IN THE WORLD.
Sample mailed on receipt of 15c.
Over 165,000 sold.
Holds a Broom either end up: keeps a wet broom from rotting. Boys and girls can more than double their money selling them. 2c. stamp for terms. 14 Holders sent prepaid on receipt of $1.00.
Address ENGLE SPRING GUN CO., Hazleton, Pa.

CHICAGO
Real Estate Investments.
THE WORLD'S FAIR
Will bring an immense increase in population to Chicago. Real estate values are based on increase in population, commercial and manufacturing interest. Chicago is the largest grain market, stock market and lumber market, and the greatest Railroad center in the world, and its population is increasing at the rate of 100% every 10 years. Some localities have increased 500% and 600% in that time. Capital from all over the world is seeking investment here, and you cannot fail to make money if you buy now.
I can direct you to investments in lots, Blocks or Acres that will make you big and quick money.
J P. BISHOP,
167 Dearborn Street. Suite 516.
CHICAGO.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL. Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

Best Truss Ever Used.
Improved Elastic Truss. Worn night and day. Positively cures rupture. Sent by mail everywhere. Write for full descriptive circulars.
DR. HOUSE, N. Y., ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 744 Broadway, N. Y.
(Mention this paper.)

Cancer PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF & Tumors Without the Knife
Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D.
180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 37.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 1, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Does Nebraska Need a Prohibition Party—Polytechnic Schools—The Weak Link 8, 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Bears of Berne, Switzerland, by Effie Jay Bee—His Way and Hers, by Helen Campbell—The Burden Bearers, by Rev. F. S. Brush—Lottery, License, Liquor, by Joel Swartz, D D.—Plan of Organization for Cities, by Miss S. J. Vosburg—Jottings by the Way, by Clara C. Hoffman 2, 3, 4
WORLD'S W. C. T. U. A Consecrated Postal Service—Pundita Rambaia 4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Situation in North Dakota—Cumberland Presbyterian Sunday-School Assembly—Echoes from the Battle in Nebraska—She Still Lives—An Imperative Call—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, Love One Another—How Grandpa Played Truant 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning September 21, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The Home—Weariness—New Rules for Demorest Contests—Physical Culture for Girls—Where Shall She Receive Him 7
DIRECTORY: 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Western Washington, Michigan, Ohio, Nebraska, West Virginia, Kansas, Illinois, Jottings, Indiana—News in a Nutshell—Announcements 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Will Presidents of Local Unions Please Begin this Work at Once—Department Soldiers and Sailors—Industrial Homes—Lumbermen's Work. 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The Wisconsin Training School for Nurses graduated its first class last week.

Miss Willard and Miss Gordon go to Nebraska Monday, to work for the Amendment.

Dr. Pellegrini, the newly-elected President of the Argentine Republic, is a cousin of John Bright.

The carpenters' strike in Chicago ended by an agreement to make thirty-seven and a half cents per hour the uniform rate of wages.

The Sangamon (Ill.) Circuit Court, Judge Creighton presiding, declares the morphine habit is not drunkenness within the meaning of the law.

Burnham and Root have been chosen as consulting architects of the Columbian Exposition. They are the architects of the Temperance Temple.

The total number of persons injured by railroads in Michigan for the past year is 572, eight passengers, sixty employés and one hundred and ten other persons.

Miss Nelly Kelly, of the Ohio State Journal, is the only "first wire" lady operator for the Associated Press. She takes 15,000 words a night, and is paid $30.50 per week, the same as a man.

A suit involving the title to several million dollars worth of real estate in the heart of San Francisco has just been decided in the United States Supreme court, in favor of Dwight K. Tripp.

A German-American Central Society has just been formed in this city, whose object is to perpetuate old country customs, oppose the abolishment of German from the public schools and to protest against the interference of the Sunday fanatics: so says the Champion.

The suspension of Sawyer, Wallace & Co., New York, the largest commission firm in America, has some very pathetic features. Both the leading partners are over seventy years of age, and have done business thirty-seven years. They have turned over all their assets, both partnership and individual, to their creditors.

The Champion takes pleasure in calling attention to the fact that the Illinois State Protective Association, through its executive board, has carried twenty-five cases of saloon-keepers convicted under the dramshop act, up to the Appellate and Supreme Courts, and has succeeded in reversing judgment in twenty-two cases.

The City Council, of Plainfield, N. J., granted a seven hundred dollar license to a saloon under the postoffice, whereupon Postmaster-General Wanamaker cancelled the lease on the present postoffice building, and leased a new one with a clause in the lease prohibiting a saloon in the building while the postoffice remained there. All honor to such a Postmaster-General:

Hon. Henry Faxon, of Massachusetts, sends Mrs. Gougar twenty-five dollars for South Dakota work and says: "Rush on the good work with vigor, for I sincerely believe that what is most needed to advance all reforms is woman's ballot." The Daily News generously offers its columns to Mrs. Gougar for the benefit of this fund, and gives editorial sanction to the work.

Corporations are learning lessons of their employés and are forming unions to resist strikes. The Westinghouse system, the Yale Lock Company, Colts Arms Company, and several others, in all employing 60,000 men, have formed an alliance, pledging themselves, in case a strike occurs to enforce unreasonable demands, in any of the affiliated companies, that work shall stop in all.

MR. SAM WOODS, Quincy, Ill., a most honorable honorary of the W. C. T. U., and Prohibition nominee for Representative, shows his interest in scientific temperance by offering three prizes of $15, $10 and $5 to the public school children of his county, for the best essays on the effects of alcoholics and reasons for their disuse· the prizes are to be awarded at the county fair.

MRS. LETITIA YOUMANS, Canada's honorary president, who for two years has been laid aside from active service by sickness, is now at Battle Creek Sanitarium seeking recuperation. She could not seek it in a better place; thousands of hearts unite in the prayer that she may renew her strength like the eagle's, for the world cannot afford to spare her from the fields in which she has so nobly labored.

THE California Voice says: "California has made provision for six asylums for the insane. Our statesmen are liberal toward saloons and their victims. The rule is more saloons, more prisons, more insane asylums! If 10,000 saloons require six insane asylums, how many will 20,000 require? In this city saloons multiply constantly. They are practically without restraint or control, and are in perfect harmony with the city government, which is a saloon dynasty."

THERE is a child in Trenton, N. J., four years of age, who has smoked tobacco since he was seven months of age. He is quoted as a remarkable instance of hereditary taint, and was weaned early by the proud mother in order that he might give full bent to his taste. A little daily counter-irritation in the shape of spanking might turn the thoughts of this youthful monster in another and better direction.—Medical Record.

We think it is the parents who deserve the spanking.

MRS. SARAH C. ACHESON, of Texas, sends out to the presidents of her local unions these practical suggestions for making Membership Crusade Day effective: "Call your union together, even if you have not had a meeting for months; have your secretary write each member to be present, and then send the women forth on this mission, 'For God and home and native land.' Let us go to the National Convention at Atlanta with a doubled up membership. Please report to our state secretary the result of your efforts."

THE National Reform Party was formed last week in St. Louis, at a convention called by Mr. E. Evans. Its object is an excellent one, to unify the forces of the different reforms, and has our sympathy. The birthplace of the party is unfortunate, the convention being held in the largest beer saloon hall in the city. It may be that none other was available; it certainly shows some grit, amid such surroundings, to come out in their platform, as they did, for temperance and woman's ballot. Miss Willard's name appears on the executive committee, but was placed there without her knowledge or consent.

DR. R. H. MCDONALD is hard at work for prohibition, as usual, having dirtributed a million and a half of his circulars, which will be sure to tell on the election. The old parties entirely ignored the Sunday law and temperance in their platforms; for this and other reasons the Prohibition Party is growing rapidly in California. Major Bidwell will probably poll a larger vote than has ever been polled in that state for prohibition. The Democratic candidate for Governor, though personally a temperate man, made his fortune in the wholesale liquor business, and, of course, his sympathies are all on that side. Dr. McDonald thinks the Democrats will carry California this fall.

HENRY H. FAXON gives some figures concerning Quincy, Mass., under license and under prohibition which are very significant: The cost of supporting the poor for the year ending February, 1882, the last year of license, according to the report of a special investigating committee, was $15,415.07. Four years later, under prohibition, the cost was only $5,533.50. In other words, while the population had increased fifteen per cent, the cost of caring for the poor decreased more than sixty-four per cent. The deposits in the Quincy Savings Bank in 1881 amounted to $184,143.95, while for the years 1887-8 the deposits had increased to $645,150.85.

IF any further proof were needed to show that the tariff is not a party issue it was given in the Senate Friday, when, as the Inter Ocean says, all sorts of surprises accompanied the debate on the tariff amendments. Democrats and Republicans changed sides with amazing facility, Quay and Cameron voting to put hides on the taxable list, Quay trying to put quinine there but securing only fifteen votes therefor, and different Democrats voting to place or retain different articles on that list. An analysis of the votes shows that Senators voted for or against tariff, not because they were Republicans or Democrats, but because the article in question did or did not come in competition with the interests of their constituents. That is to say, the tariff is not in any sense a dividing line between the two old parties.

WANTED, AN ISSUE!

JUDGE ALTGELD, of Chicago, deserves the thanks of all good people for his sensible orders concerning young boys being taken to the county jail. Eleven boys, between ten and thirteen years old, were brought out of the jail by his order and turned over to Mr. Daniels, superintendent of the Waif's Mission and Training School, to be kept till their cases came up for trial. Judge Altgeld soundly reprimanded the magistrates who sent them. "You have no right to send boys of ten and twelve years old to jail to await trial for trivial offenses," he said. "The police are to blame in this matter; they are too willing to arrest boys. In many instances the parents are to blame for not whipping or otherwise punishing these boys." In the jail awaiting trial, these boys are learning all sorts of badness from hardened criminals, and the Judge does well to save them from this contamination.

IRONA, Texas, is another town springing into vigorous life under prohibition. Our good friend, Colonel Tanner, of Alabama, who, by the way, nominated General Fisk for the presidency, gives us many interesting facts about it. It is on the Sabine river, with good water, plenty of timber, and iron ore in close juxtaposition; it possesses the advantages that have transformed the straggling village of ten years ago into the Birmingham, Ala., of to-day. But the best thing about it is that all its natural advantages are conserved by the prohibition clause in its deeds, forever precluding the saloon within its borders. Harriman has fully demonstrated that prohibition is no drawback to a town, as old croakers are fond of declaring, but that it insures the best class of citizens. The founders of Irona show not only good principle but good business sense in basing their enterprise on the bed-rock of prohibition.

BISHOP THOBURN, of India, whose bishopric includes three hundred and ten million people, is now in this country to secure workers for his vast field. He preached in Evanston Sunday, and addressed the Gospel Temperance meeting there in the afternoon. He spoke at the Methodist Ministers' meeting in Chicago Monday morning. Bishop Thoburn has been a leader in temperance work in India ever since the tidal wave from the Ohio Crusade struck that land. In his address Sunday afternoon he gave many interesting facts concerning that work. He and his sister are pioneers in the movement for establishing the order of Deaconesses in America. She has spent two years here in the interests of this work, aiding in the establishment of the Deaconesses' home in Chicago and also one in Cincinnati. These being now on a sure footing, she starts for India this week to resume her much loved missionary work. This missionary brother and sister have been closely identified in work. It is somewhat singular that the Bishop takes the more advanced position of the two in regard to woman's work; that is, in words; though Miss Thoburn's deeds keep full pace with her brother's noble words concerning women. In next week's UNION SIGNAL Miss Willard will give a sketch of Bishop Thoburn and his work.

Contributed.

THE BEARS OF BERNE, SWITZERLAND.

BY EFFIE JAY BEE.

The town of Berne, by Zähringen,
  Was early set a-brewin',
Who fountains put in every street,
  And knew what he was doin';
The grateful birds and grateful beasts
  Came down from St. Bernard to Thu-in;
And first among the biped crowd
  Was brown and humorous Bruin.

This pleased the burgemeister well,
  Said he, "If you'll be staying,
The town will build a lair and pit
  For which you'll not be paying."
Here, ever since, at public cost
  Have lineal bears been playin';
They quaff the flowing "Adam's Ale,"
  Their spirits thus maintainin'.

A lesson this for every man
  Who thinks he must be takin'
Rhine-wine or beer, or muscatelle,
  His constant thirst be slakin';
Better, like Bruin, here at Berne,
  His fame and name be makin';

And if I were a monarch great,
  Of town, or state, or nation,
When every means of peace had failed,
  Including arbitration,
I'd have the lion, eagle, bear,
  Fight for th' administration,

And leave the men of every trade
  At home, their strength investin',
While patient women fold their hands,
  And try a spell at restin',
The cart-dogs, too, should have a chance
  To bark without molestin'.

Then let us speed the prosperous day,
  When men and beasts cease strivin';
And like the happy bears at Berne
  Domestic games contrivin',
Shall find that heaven-brewed "Adam's Ale,"
  For health the most connivin'.

HIS WAY AND HERS.

BY HELEN CAMPBELL.

Far up in the mountains of Northern Pennsylvania, where forsaken coal shafts yawn, and mounds of slag and refuse rise at every side, there is a house so small, so weather-stained and brown, so generally forlorn of aspect, that one wonders if the dwellers therein have ever had time for anything beyond the grinding toil that is the portion of most in the little settlement. For it is a settlement, as one soon sees, though chiefly a deserted one. For some of the houses shutters are nailed on, and it is plain that decay has begun and will soon work its will. From others the smoke still curls upward languidly, and white-headed children run out at the sound of wheels and stare at the new arrival.

Into this cleft of the hills rode one evening two most weary travelers, and looked about if haply inn or lodging of any sort might disclose itself. Never had "man and beast" less chance of entertainment; yet as this conviction was reached, there appeared in the doorway a woman whose face lighted as if a long expected friend had suddenly arrived.

"'Light," she called, with instant sense of the situation. "'Light and go right in, an' I'll stir up somethin' in no time. I'm used to your kind; 'light an' go right in."

She waved her arms as she spoke, as if she would remove the entire front of the house if only our getting in could be thus made easier. A boy ran round and patted both the horses as he led them away, and we entered the little door and turned into one of the two rooms that apparently made up the dwelling.

It was plain that New England had had some share in the story of the house. It was "best room" and bedroom that we entered. There were the familiar green paper curtains, the horse-hair sofa and rigid chairs, and a bed in the corner. But there was no patchwork, no ornaments of any description, and not even a family photograph on the walls. It was bare, clean and spotless, and the tiny room opening at the back and unseen from the road was equally so.

"I'd 'a' asked you to the other if I'd knowed in time," said our hostess mysteriously, as she called us to supper. "But you shan't go away without seein' the other anyhow. I shouldn't wonder if maybe you had some pattern for it. You wouldn't be very likely, though, ridin' over the country;" and she turned away to fry great pancakes, genuine Adirondack flapjacks, murmuring at intervals as she replenished the plate: "I do hope there's a new pattern."

"I'm real pleased to think it ain't dark yet," she said, as she whisked the dishes off and called to some one outside to come in and wash them. "'Tain't but a step an' I know you'll be surprised to see the other. It even surprises me when I open the door sort of unawares. An' then it's brought on such a calmness in Lysander, that he says himself it's added years to his life. Lookin' at it that way, I don't mind a mite, though I do mean to set the table there when folks happen along, or some of the folks comes over that haven't ever heard."

Feet were making as active progress as tongue, and close against the hill, and shadowed by two great pines, a house brown and weather-beaten as the first, suddenly showed itself. But it was as gay as the first was dreary. Morning-glories grew over the door, and a mass of scarlet runners, and at the side were narrow beds of gay, old-fashioned flowers.

"You see," pursued the busy talker as she took a key from under the door mat and flung open the door, "when it come to colors and fixin's of most every kind, nothin' was too much for me, and every thing was too much for Lysander. He was born kind of mournful like, an' then when he lost all his folks in a cyclone out West, he said it wasn't right to have every place so frisky you couldn't compose your mind to mourn the way you had ought to. So I took 'em every one away, an' here they be. I just run up here when I get down a mite, an' I calkilate to be laid out here, though Lysander says he couldn't never stand it."

Was it the woman's annex of a county fair, or an altar to the goddess of crazy patchwork and cardboard mottoes? On the floor was the brightest of rag carpets, and at each end of the room hung a patchwork quilt, of rising-sun pattern. Cardboard air-castles and mottoes hung over doors and dangled from nails. Paper flowers wreathed the windows, and were in gay vases all about, and the photographs of all the corpses of a generation, six different coffins, each surrounded by a wreath of colored immortelles, were the ghastly ornaments of one corner.

"Them coffins reconciles Lysander to lettin' it alone," his wife whispered as if fearful he might appear. "He says a house ain't no place for most nonsense women folks want round, and a man can't lean up ag'in anything by way o' support, without upsettin' it or goin' off with it stickin' to his coat.

"The main p'int was, though, you couldn't think seriously on your latter end, and the latter end of folks everywheres, when all this was round, and so at last, when I found it really wore on him, I just bought this house and moved out every speck o' anything that he felt was triflin' like. He's took a new lease ever since, an' I don't never have to worry about his upsettin' or sp'ilin' anything, an' so we're both satisfied better than you'd suppose, considerin' I was born lively an' he was born tearful like. You don't happen to have extra good patterns for crochet or anything, do you?"

This was the prelude to a minute history of the tidies, covers, and each individual creation in this chamber of horrors. But the owner's delight was infectious, and it ended in promising a series of patterns, and being urged to copy anything freely and fully.

Lysander did not appear. He was having a season of meditation in the tool-house by the shaft, his wife said, and she sent after him unavailingly. With early morning we rode on, our hostess refusing pay and waving a gay bandana in farewell. At the turn, a tall man with bent shoulders, and leathery, lugubrious face, looked at us solemnly but made no sign.

"That man has solved the problem of the present day," said my companion, who looked wistfully after him. "He has abolished bric-a-brac and restored the age of simplicity and unity. My heart warms to him; I shall tell Leonard, and he can talk it over with Mary. It ought to show the way out for both of them. At least it will save his pitching tidies out of the window, or tearing off the bows from the chairs and picture frames."

That was the beginning of the "Anti-Bric-a-brac Club," sometimes known as, "Lysander's Own," since without his protest who shall say that revolt could ever have begun? Its aim is to restore simplicity, and to define the province of true ornament. Its members have agreed to banish from one room at least, all fripperies and follies of modern decoration, and to admit there only what they "know to be useful and believe to be beautiful." Already the results are surprising, and it is even asserted that in a sequestered spot on a lawn where this year there is no ribbon gardening, a solemn ceremony has been held, and every gilt rolling-pin and boot-jack and milking-stool in the colony devoted to the flames, their ashes being carefully sifted at the roots of a promising rose tree, not too exuberant as to flowers, and old-fashioned in its sweetness and dainty coloring.

THE BURDEN BEARERS.

BY REV. F. S. BRUSH.

It is not the drunkard who suffers most from his wretched habit. The long train of its resulting ills falls most heavily upon women and children who are not partners of the crime but only of its miseries. Drunkenness is brazen and barefaced robbery. Shelter, food and clothing are the necessities of life. The drunkard buys the poorest and cheapest of these things in order that he may have the money to waste on rum. As for the comforts of life—such as books, carpets, pictures, periodicals, musical instruments and the unnumbered enjoyable things that in these days can adorn the humblest home, the drunkard's family must go without.

The drunkard loses his capacity and skill for labor, he does less and of poorer quality, and thus robs those whom his vows, his social obligations, his manhood, his humanity, are pledged to support. He takes every comfort from the home, the pictures on the wall, the chairs upon which his family sit, the clothes from their back, the shoes from their feet, and the bread from their mouths. There are ten thousand thieves in this land who would not steal the last loaf from a helpless woman or from hungry children. The drunkard will take the last crust from his wife and from the children of his own flesh.

It matters not where the responsibility of intemperance rests. It is of no possible concern to our argument as to how much or how little may be the responsibility of the saloon-keeper or of the drunkard himself. Those who are enduring the agonizing results of this wide-spread and frequently repeated crime are entitled to protection. They are citizens of this land; they are more, for they are our fellow-beings.

As the case stands, drunkenness is an invasion of the rights of womankind. It destroys the peace and happiness of the home of which woman is God's sceptered queen. The home, its adornment, management, welfare, peace, prosperity and blessedness—this is her kingdom.

Let us observe that it is the opponents of the temperance cause that insist so strenuously upon this very fact. Woman's place, they say, is in the home, not in politics. Then, I say, protect her in the place you assign her, or forever hold your peace. You say the home is her kingdom and you would confine her abilities to its care and management? What, then, have you to say to the man who enters that home and with vandal hand destroys all its adornments, all its sweet and elevating amusements, who makes bare its floors and its walls, who strips its closets and clothes presses, and who makes empty its cupboard and pantry? The home is woman's kingdom. He is thrice a thief who mars its beauty, or pollutes its chastened pleasures.

In proportion as women are divinely anointed priests to minister at the altars of earthly love, is, also, her need of some suitable return, some adequate fruit of her labors. What success is to the business man, what renown to the statesman, what applause to the orator, what the fruit of any honest toil to any honest toiler, all this and more are affectionate protection and provision to a woman in her home. Her reward is the adornment, the prosperity, the honor, of her house; the dignity and respectability of her husband, the education and advancement of her children. Intemperance robs her of these dear and rightful rewards of her natural place in our human economy. It is pusillanimous to say "home is woman's place," and then deny her right to protection in that home. He who throws stones into the window is adjudged by the law, but he who makes her heart a stone goes scot-free. Her domain is as much entitled to the safeguard of legal restraint as is man's. If a man's business is assailed, he has redress. The whole community has a direct interest in seeing that every man's business is shielded from unjust or hurtful annoyance. The welfare of society is staked upon the home. It is the divine unit of human life. From it must emanate all that is either to bless or to curse mankind. The instinct of the very animals obeys this law, and the nest or lair is watched with jealous care, and life itself risked to insure its safety. Man can learn a lesson from the brutes. Whatever invades or threatens the home, or diminishes the usefulness and efficiency of its management, is a menace to man's highest good. Nearly all the states do furnish some redress to women for the drunkenness of their husbands, or fathers, or brothers. The one great redress of all, however, prevention, is their clear and inalienable right.

Intemperance strikes at the best interests of her children, and thus desecrates the sacred instincts of maternity. Love for, yearning anxiety to help and improve one's children, this is the holy law of parenthood. To be able to respond to these promptings of affection, is the duty, privilege and highest joy of a true parent.

In our land, such is the freedom accorded to all, and such are the advantages enjoyed by all, any child can receive all that is necessary to a noble and useful life.

Education, books, music, elevating associations—all are possible to the poorest. Within the reach of all lie the blessings of our nineteenth century civilization. Those who are deprived of wholesome food, comfortable clothes and fair advantages of every kind, are being robbed, some how and by some one, and it behooves every honest citizen to know the "how" and the "who."

Every right of woman is invaded by the drink habit. Her home, the dominion which the lords of creation have assigned her, is blighted, her work nullified, her mission on earth reviled. Her instincts, her yearnings, her holiest anxieties, are crushed as ruthlessly as the worm is crushed under your feet. Her love for her offspring is made inoperative. The natural longings of the social instincts are made mockery, for she neither has the clothes that are decent nor the spirit that is self-respecting, for her family shame is her own. If there was one such case in this broad land, every man in the country ought to raise his voice and his right arm to shield and protect and avenge. England, or France, or Germany would not dare to place the ignominy upon a single American woman that a hundred thousand husbands annually heap upon their wives. One such outrage in any foreign land would bring a million freemen to their feet and to their arms to avenge the wrongs with swift justice.

Women are human. They come within the operation of the blessed law of Christ whereby we are to bear one another's burdens. The burdens of this liquor traffic are upon them. Any agent, any business, any instrument, whereby so large a number of our fellow-beings are grievously tormented, should be done away with. The whole weight of this business falls upon womenkind. Whatever money is in the trade goes to the liquor dealer. Whatever of sodden pleasure there may be, the drunkard gets. Whatever is terrible, poverty, shame, bruised face and body, blighted hopes, ruined prospects, and public shame, the woman gets.

Women are nearly as much entitled to protection as are men. Not long since, a leading paper in the United States came out with burning words of condemnation because Congress had passed no salutary laws with regard to car-coupling. Twenty thousand men are thus annually crippled, and over two thousand are annually killed. This record was rightly held up as appalling, and as a reproach to our civilization. So it is. I agree most heartily with what was written. But I say the half million and more women and children who are annually crippled in body and soul, are entitled to as much more regard than the 20,000 men as they exceed them in numbers, and as their wrongs exceed in severity and cruelty. I can see no reason why a woman's, or even a child's welfare, should not be as precious as a man's. If Congress can and should use our national authority to protect the lives and limbs of brakemen, it ought to do the same for the hapless creatures to many of whom death would be a sweet and welcomed release.

That Congress has no right to interfere in behalf of so many women is based on the theory that a man can do as he pleases to his wife and family. Such, indeed, has been the relative position of man and wife in all ancient systems of social order. For many centuries our own race has been gradually outgrowing that doctrine. Anglo-Saxon legislation has gradually thrown its protective arm about wife and children and has slowly reached the position of shielding both mother and child from unjust, or cruel tyranny, on the part of husband and father. A man cannot do as he pleases to his wife and children. If he abuses or neglects them; if he violates his sacred oath to support them; if he takes from them his rightful protectorate, the law should take cognizance of his crime, which is both robbery and perjury of the very worst sort.

This is no question of mere sentiment. It is a question of eternal right, of justice, and of law. Those who are bearing the burdens of so wide-spread a crime have a right to deliverance, if there are any rights in this universe.

Las Vegas, N. M.

LOTTERY, LICENSE, LIQUOR.

BY JOEL SWARTZ, D.D.

Any one who will be at the pains of looking up the history of the lottery, and will compare the arguments and the legislation by which it was defended, will find an instructive parallel in this to the manner in which moralists and statesmen are at the present proposing to deal with the liquor license problem. The arguments now employed for the license of the saloon were, until recently, quite familiar to legislators who made laws even in our own country, for the protection of lotteries. Thus, turning to article "Lottery," in American Cyclopedia, we find this statement: "Lotteries in various European states are still maintained and defended by the argument that as the passion for play is irrepressible among the people, and their money would otherwise be invested in less fairly managed schemes, the state may well assume the management of lotteries," etc. Now, why is not this argument in favor of the lottery, which is so vigorously denounced by the letter of the Postmaster-General to the President, by the President's message, by the press, religious and secular, by the pulpit and Christians generally, just as good in the mouth of saloonists for their business and its protection by the state? They say, men will drink, "the passion for it is irrepressible, and the state may as well assume the management of it," etc.

The next argument I find in the same article, is, "Under the supervision of the state the evils are diminished and their earnings are devoted to the public welfare." I find further on, that in 1778 the number of lotteries in England was 400, but that in consequence of a license fee of £50 which in that year was imposed upon every lottery, the number was reduced to forty-one, but it is significantly added that, "the mischievous influences of the system were admitted, but for the time, at least, all arguments yielded to that of its necessity as a source of revenue."

Precisely. How could the argument for liquor license be better put? Indeed, this is just the argument of politicians, ministers, church papers, and temperance people generally who fight political prohibition and want license for regulation and revenue. The license is to reduce the number and so diminish the evil which cannot be prohibited, and at the same time pay towards the bearing of the injuries which it inflicts. The beauty of this logic is that while it is fallacious for the lottery it is valid for the saloon.

Another argument for the lottery is, "The proceeds are employed for many beneficial purposes," etc. Thus: "Colleges have been founded, roads made, ferries improved, hospitals and even churches built by the aid of lotteries." Cannot the friends of the saloon make quite as good a showing? Nothing is more common than for public economists to parade the immense gains from the saloons for the benefit of the same or similar objects. If the saloon can be justified in this way, why not the lotteries? Gentlemen, you have the floor. The nation waits to hear your explanation. Please rise while we wait and listen.

Gettysburg, Pa.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION FOR CITIES.

BY MISS S. J. VOSBURG.

[The subject of organization in large cities is one of so much importance that we have secured the plan of Miss Vosburg, of Rothester, who has made a great success of it there. Like the practical woman she is, she commenced without wasting time on preliminaries.—EDITOR.]

1. That all members of existing unions, in cities not yet fully organized, be arranged in committees to hold public meetings, and by visitation among the Christian women of their own wards seek to enlist those who shall be invited to join in this work, and that as soon as practicable these be brought together and organized, the original members resident in the same ward uniting with them.

2. That when three or more such ward societies are formed, they, with any other existing unions, including Y societies, appoint delegates (one for every five or more members), and that these delegates acting for the whole, proceed to form a municipal or central city union, for the special object of unifying and directing the W. C. T. U. work of the city, and members residing in unorganized wards connect themselves with societies of adjacent territory until such time as their own wards are organized.

3. That each ward union be left to work up its own territory, having when weak, the assistance of the stronger organizations, and if desired by them, of organizers appointed by the Central Union.

4. That each such society in the wards be auxiliary to county and district unions (where such exist), thus having the same standing as unions of towns (or townships).

5. That in cases where a city constitutes of itself a county the Central Union may and should have the direction of both county and municipal W. C. T. U. work, holding its meetings, composed of delegates from the auxiliaries, quarterly, or oftener, as the city and county work may require, the city executive board to be composed of the Central Union officers and presidents of the ward unions, said committee to take general direction of the business of the City or Central Union work during the intervals between its meetings.

6. That in cities which include only part of the territory of the counties in which they are located, these counties having local unions outside the city limits, the local unions of such cities whether organized by wards or otherwise be auxiliary direct to county or district union (as now), and that the organization of a municipal or central city union be recommended for the purpose of harmonious and concerted action in city work; the constitution and by-laws of such organization to be always in accord with those of county and state.

This municipal, or central city union, should have every department of work which is found in its auxiliaries, with superintendents of the same to whom the ward superintendents of these departments shall report, quarterly or oftener.

The Central W. C. T. U. of Rochester has headquarters where all its auxiliaries may, without charge, hold meetings, entertainments, etc., and which are always open to all W. C. T. U women of city and county. The expenses of maintaining these headquarters, etc., is met by an annual donation, for which and in which work all the ward societies and the Y's who are auxiliary direct to county and state, have always done good work.

JOTTINGS BY THE WAY.

BY CLARA C. HOFFMAN.

Within the past two weeks I have spoken on "W. C. T. U. Day" at three Methodist camp-meetings. In each case the temperance, or W. C. T. U. Day, was the first day of the camp-meeting, being the only one that could be secured from the management. The grove was full of activity. Big wagons loaded with furniture, trunks, stoves, barrels and bedding jolted past. Men with straw beds on their heads gave picturesque variety to the scene; while the heavy blow of the hammer, and the melodious voice of the saw aiding in the erection of tent and refreshment counters for ice cream, melons and lemonade, furnished a steady, uniform accompaniment for the speakers engaged by the W. C. T. U. Elders and preachers were moving in, and getting settled for the real and true opening of camp-meeting, when by prayer and praise and preaching the heavens should be opened and an abundant blessing descend to fill their hearts with joy, and swell their household of faith with new recruits. Of course, with this weight of preparation on their hands they could not numerously attend the temperance services. An audience of W. C. T. U. women, pledged soul and body to temperance in everything and everywhere, and a few dear, elderly brothers, equally pledged, gathered round the speakers. The reason why the W. C. T. U. must take the first day at camp—(if they get any) is because a day devoted to temperance later in the meeting, when hundreds or thousands are gathered, would be a serious interruption which might interfere with the highest success of the meeting! Exactly!

Now a suggestion to the W. C. T. U. about summer and grove meetings. The object of these meetings is to reach the people not yet interested—possibly not yet converted. Then, the first thing is to get the people. The next is to control the grounds and surroundings during the meetings.

On the 12th of August, Delaware county (Ohio) union held a W. C. T. U. picnic. The county president and executive offered a prize banner to the largest, finest delegation in attendance from any town in the county. The delegation from Warrensburg, who won the banner, had over a hundred wagons and carriages in its procession. With streaming flags and ribbons, with echoing song and stirring music by its brass band of young men, all total abstainers, it made a brave and inspiring show. And so they came from all parts of the country until it was estimated that at least 3,000 people were on the ground.

A spirited Demorest medal contest took place in the forenoon, the contestants coming from various towns.

Then came the picnic dinner under the trees, for every family had its generous basket. At two o'clock the sharp rattle of the drum called the great audience around the speaker's stand, and thousands listened to the gospel of temperance as there set forth. Will other counties follow the example of Delaware county and "do likewise"?

***

Missouri has an Anti-Liquor League. It was born at Pertle Springs this month. (This gathering, though held at the same place, had no connection with the Sunday-school convention reported by Miss Guernsey.—ED.)

The call invited temperance people of all parties and societies to be present. All were invited to "come and reason together," and to this end the platform, or constitution, was all printed, and the organization virtually completed before any reasoning had been done in the so-called convention. A very mild resolution declared license a failure, but when a Prohibitionist moved to amend by adding, "Therefore we are unalterably opposed to license in any form," the amendment was promptly voted down. After the Prohibitionists had withdrawn from the convention, the leaders of the Anti-Liquor League seemed to realize a little that to vote down a resolution condemning license was to place themselves in an anomalous position as opponents to the liquor traffic, so they hunted up the resolution so recently voted down, and in a diluted and mutilated form, passed it.

I do not like to impugn motives, but this Anti-Liquor League looks to me very much like an ingenious covert to shield Christian men, while their votes uphold the license policy. If not, what is it?

The platform invited all temperance societies except the W. C. T. U. It was an afterthought, but no sooner had the convention adjourned, than its president began to write our unions for money, and did not hesitate to solicit liberal contributions. When I objected to this, he said, "Your organization is in the field." "So is the church," I replied; "let your Christian men who form this league apply their money here, if in their judgment this is the way to work." I trust no union will expend its hard earned funds in this way.

***

I have been one week in Nebraska and find the battle between the home and saloon in full array. So far as a worker can see, no systematic efforts are pushed outside the Prohibition Party and the W. C. T. U. As usual, these organizations are doing all they can do.

The Republican convention was absolutely dumb concerning the amendment. The People's (Farmers' Alliance) convention ditto. The Democratic convention declared for the license amendment, with characteristic and consistent stupidity.

Many leading temperance workers are confident that the prohibition amendment will carry. God grant it.

Fremont, Neb.

World's W. C. T. U.

A CONSECRATED POSTAL SERVICE.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The great question of the day in every land is, how to get the people into contact with the gospel. Anything that will tend to this result is sure to be welcomed by Christian workers, and in suggesting the use of the post as a means of conveying the gospel to many who may never be reached in any other way, I only propose doing in a more general and systematic way what is being done constantly and with most blessed results by individuals. To state the matter as definitely as I can, I will speak of India because of personal experience of some years as a missionary in that country; but the same is true to a greater or less extent in other lands, especially in Japan.

There are in India to-day several millions of boys and men, either at present studying in the government schools and colleges, or having graduated from them, who are now holding responsible positions in the various governmental departments, or in private schools, offices, etc. They readily read, and understand the English language, and speak it fluently. Many of these men have openly renounced their former beliefs. Many others while keeping up the practice of idol worship, for their families' sake, as they say, secretly condemn it, and inwardly long for the true light. In this fertile soil, so long broken up and ready for the planter's hand, the seeds of infidelity have been thickly strewn. All over India the works of modern skeptics have been freely circulated among the English speaking natives. In fact, but little else, except infidel books and vile novels, has been supplied them to read.

Many of these young men in copying European dress and manners have adopted also the European custom—quite unknown among them until introduced into their country by the English—of drinking wine and other liquors; so much so that it has grown to be a common saying among them, that to become a Christian means to "eat beef, drink wine, and smoke cigars."

Thus we behold the effect of education without the gospel—minds quickened into greater power, and that power now being used to advance the cause of evil. As, for instance, the Hindoo Tract Society, which has been formed evidently not so much to promulgate the Hindoo religion, as to oppose Christianity; they have tracts, which are widely circulated, being largely reprints of current English and American infidel publications. The lectures of Bradlaugh and Ingersoll are sold in the streets of Bombay for less than one cent each, and are bought and eagerly read by men who have never heard nor read anything in defense of the gospel. Since the enemy has been so busy in supplying poisonous food to these hungry minds, shall we be less ready to hold forth to them the Bread of Life? As a means of reaching hearts not only in India, but in other countries, especially persons living in places where spiritual help is not easily obtained, I suggest that small packages of gospel papers and tracts be sent at intervals by mail, addressed personally to the individuals for whom they are intended. As a systematic arrangement of this branch of work for the World's W. C. T. U., I propose that a superintendent of postal mission work be appointed in each country where there is a W. C. T. U.; that the superintendent find some one in each district to secure addresses and to get workers to mail packages. I would suggest that the publications sent be only those which have proved fruitful in good results: such tracts as Mr. H. L. Hastings' anti-infidel publications, which I regard the best adapted of anything published to meet the doubts caused in some minds by reading the blasphemous writings of infidels; "Come to Jesus," by Newman Hall; "Talk With an Inquirer," by Frances E. Willard; "A Saviour for You," by S. M. Haughton; "My Friend," by H. L. Hastings, and many others which have been known to result in the salvation of souls.

Mail can be sent from this country to India, or any other country in the Universal Postal Union, at the same rate of postage as to the nearest post-office in the United States. A two-ounce package, the filling of which may cost ten cents, is carried to India and delivered at the door of the addressee for one cent postage. Thus for eleven cents one may sit in her own room and preach the gospel to some grand official in India, China or Japan, whose personal influence when converted will be vastly greater in his native land than that of the foreigner who sent the message could possibly be were she on the spot.

Coöperating with Mr. H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass., I have already sent thousands of packages to India and other countries, each containing one or more of his anti-infidel tracts, with one or two others of exhortation or loving instruction in gospel truth. The students of one of the universities in India have been supplied in this manner, having the packages addressed to each by name. One of them has written asking for a Bible. Others who have received packages have been heard from, but of course for the most of the seed sowing we sow in hope, and must wait for the knowledge of results to the great harvest day. This we know, that "God's Word shall not return unto Him void," for His own promise declares it.

One young Hindoo who had been found reading a skeptical book, and whose name was sent me, after receiving one of the anti-infidel works, replied that his superstitions were all removed. He sent the names of some of his friends who had imbibed the views by which he had been troubled, asking that the same book might be sent to them, that their doubts might also be removed.

Sending Testaments and portions of Scripture by mail, presenting cards with Scripture verses, posting texts in public places, etc., etc., may be included in this department of work. Further details concerning plans of work can be given when desired.

Trusting that the wisdom of the Lord may guide you in this matter, and that His blessing may rest in abundant measure upon the work of the World's W. C. T. U., I remain yours in the Master's service,

MARY FRENCH, a returned missionary.

PUNDITA RAMABAI.

Miss Mary E. Burt who has lately been appointed a member of the Chicago Board of Education gives this estimate of Ramabai:

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—You are quite welcome to use anything for publication which I can say about Pundita Ramabai. What a scene it was, romantic, poetic, heroic, to see that little slip of a woman, in her white Indian dress, come so bravely before a great audience to beg and plead for the millions of miserable child-widows in her own land. Nowhere in literature, in poetry or fiction, have I met a heroine, or a hero, who so entirely represented the absolute in heroism.

I read a whole epic in her lecture as I listened to her. The epics of the past, each with its own Achilles sitting on the shore weeping over his lost captive or fighting to avenge his wounded pride, are nothing to the epic she is living. I learned in Boston that Louisa M. Alcott, just before her death, was planning a novel to be called "Little Widows"—(it was to be a companion book to "Little Women")—the royalty to go to Pundita Ramabai. I think the world would have been richer for such a book. I hope some talented writer will sometime carry out Miss Alcott's plan. The thought is worthy of the best writer living.

I think Pundita Ramabai is the greatest woman of our age; almost any motive for which any other woman lives, when put by the side of hers, dwindles. If it is not fair to compare motives, it is at least fair to compare numbers, and where numbers are concerned I cannot think of any one else who is reaching out for the uplift of so great a multitude. It is a secret regret with me all of the time, that I cannot be the help to her that my reverence and admiration for her would prompt me to be.

MARY E. BURT.

Correspondence.

THE SITUATION IN NORTH DAKOTA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—In writing to you of the situation in North Dakota I need not recapitulate the history of our victories and failures in the cause of temperance. You are all familiar with the story of the movement that begun with the organization in Bismarck, during the session of the Territorial Legislative Assembly in 1888, of the Prohibition Alliance, which, combining with the territorial W. C. T. U., and aided by those grand organizations of grand men, the Knights of Labor, and the Farmers' Alliance, gave us a majority in the constitutional convention in July, and a victory at the polls in October, and which resulted in the insertion of a staunch Prohibition Article in the state constitution—and in the passage of the Prohibition bill by the state legislature, in December, 1889.

All this inspiring story has been told and retold rejoicingly, but here is a chapter that has not been told. As you know, the state constitution expressly prohibited the sale and traffic of liquor in the new state, and made it incumbent upon the first state legislature to pass laws providing punishment and penalties for any violations of this constitutional provision. The Republican party had, in its platform, pledged itself to carry out that requirement, and thus prevented the formation of a third party during the legislative campaign. As might have been expected, the legislature was overwhelmingly Republican, and the bill could have been passed without opposition, to take effect as originally designed, on Jan. 1, 1890. But early in the session there were rumors of trouble. It was soon known that a very large sum of money, much of it contributed by the liquor men of the state, but the greater part sent by the Protective Association of Eastern cities, was here to be used to defeat the bill. But this money was not used, it is said. It early became known to the little group of earnest workers on our side, who prayerfully, almost sleeplessly, watched the progress of the bill from the day of its introduction and swift passage through the House, to its final troubled passage through the Senate, until it received the signature of the Governor and became a law, that all the efforts of its opponents were directed, not to the defeat of the bill itself nor against any of its stringent provisions, but solely to the elimination of the emergency clause, providing for the bill to take effect January 1st, instead of July 1st, as would be the case without it.

All the opposition of the prevailing party was directed to that one clause. "Only give us time to close up our business," said the saloon-keepers, "and we will cheerfully obey the law." "Only take out the obnoxious emergency clause, and we will gladly vote for the bill, otherwise we will prevent its passage," said the republican leaders.

"We care nothing for the passage of the bill itself," said the attorney for the liquor men. "Only give us until July 1, and we'll get a decision from the Supreme Court before then, declaring the law unconstitutional." Was he not a true prophet? Before the expiration of that time the sovereign people of the free state of North Dakota heard this decision from the highest judicial power in the land: "You have no rights that the liquor dealers are bound to respect."

As to results, a state constitution prohibiting all traffic in liquor, and the most stringent prohibitory law ever passed by any state upon our statute books, our saloons have been openly running since July 1, as before. Beer bottles and whisky flasks with the corks drawn were openly handed out at the front doors of saloons; and these violators of law, and transgressors of the will of an outraged people, openly quoted the authority of the Supreme Court, as their warrant for their flagrant defiance of law and public sentiment.

True, Congress has now come to the rescue, and our good President—whom we feel sure must be one with us—has signed the Original Package Bill. But are our hearts at rest and our fears lulled into security?

No! For again we hear the murmur of the liquor dealers that all will yet be well, that the Supreme Court will not only declare the Original Package Law unconstitutional, but assert that all prohibition laws are unconstitutional, and that Congress cannot validate them, thus again placing our grand and noble state at the mercy of law-breakers and drunkard-makers.

It is to our representatives in Washington that we must now look for aid; and to our dear sisters in all the states we commend our cause, that they may strengthen it with their prayers. MRS. LINDA W. SLAUGHTER,

State Supt. Press Work, N. Dakota W. C. T. U. Slaughter, N. Dakota.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN SUNDAY-SCHOOL ASSEMBLY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—For the sake of your Eastern readers who know so little about them, let me introduce through you, the warm-hearted, earnest Cumberland Presbyterians, and their Sunday-school Assembly at Pertle Springs, Missouri. Should they ask, as I did, "What is the difference between Cumberland and other Presbyterians?" let me answer in the language of my kind informant; "As regards creed, we stand between the Presbyterians and the Methodists—rejecting the doctrine of predestination; we believe in the final perseverance of the saints. As regards church polity, we are Presbyterian."

The church originated in 1810. Its greatest strength is in the southwest; its publishing house, with which our own has most pleasant connections, sending it monthly some 8,000 of our Sunday-School Crusaders, is located at Nashville, Tenn. Its leaders, if we may judge from those seen here, are thoughtful, scholarly, able men. But the fact that, among all others, entitles this church to mention in your columns is the utterance of its General Assembly on the temperance question. In 1888, the resolution on this subject declared,

"We . . . . hereby pledge ourselves to vote for, and to aid every enterprise that in any way looks to the overthrow of this accursed traffic." In 1889, the wording was still stronger: "Resolved, that nothing short of constitutional and statutory prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors as beverages, by the United States, and by the government of the several states, will be satisfactory, and to this end we will pray and work."

"Resolved . . . . to vote for license is sin."

"Resolved, that the manufacture of, and dealing in, or in any way favoring such dealing (this includes revenue officers, such as gaugers, storekeepers, etc.), is inconsistent with the Christ character, and should receive church discipline."

In both sets of resolutions cordial recognition and God-speed were given to woman's temperance work.

Pertle Springs, "beautiful for situation," is about a mile from Warrensburg, and is preëminently an assembly ground, several gatherings of this nature being held thereon during the season. Just preceding the one of which I write was a Chautauqua Assembly, thus enabling this to be more definitely devoted to Sunday-school work than is usual in these days of combination. The primary department was under the charge of a leading kindergartner from St. Louis, Miss Mabel Wilson. An enthusiast in her work, Miss Wilson understands how to make the ceaseless activity of the child-nature help the teacher's efforts; of her success in this direction the readers of the Sunday-School Crusader for 1891 will have the opportunity to judge, as she has promised to write for that paper notes for primary teachers. This feature alone should bring a large increase to our list of subscribers, for it will make the paper one that no primary teacher can afford to be without. The daily Christian Endeavor work was in charge of Professor Taylor, principal of the State Normal School in Emporia, Kan. In connection with this, much interest was shown in the White Cross and kindred lines of effort; several donned our White Cross pin, and the literature on that subject was eagerly taken. With the great society of Christian Endeavor helping forward the work of purity, "a white life for two," we have gained a strong ally.

Too much pains cannot be taken, it seems to me, to lead teachers to know and understand us, and to be familiar with the literature that is so well adapted to their needs. Professor Taylor said to me, "I had occasion, not long ago, to look over a long list of applicants for positions as teachers, and I was impressed with the large proportion of them who were members of evangelical churches. It was a rare thing to find one who was not a professing Christian." The state Normal school at Warrensburg is fortunate in being under earnest Christian influences. With a membership of some eight hundred, more than half of its students are actively connected with the school Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. The meetings of these societies are announced on the first day of the session as a part of the regular exercises. When first started, the board of state Regents simply failed to notice them, thus tacitly permitting them. But as the test of experience proved their value, the Regents took action on the matter, and, though some of the number were not Christians themselves, decided that they could not afford to ignore the societies considered simply as helps to the discipline and moral tone of the school; whereupon they authorized the fitting up of their rooms and provision for their expenses. It is these Christian teachers whose help we need. Shall not our "Membership Crusade Day" do good work in this direction?

I may not take of your limited space to tell of the many and varied attractions that make this Assembly, in this picturesque spot, one to be remembered; but there are one or two points worthy of mention because of their suggestiveness; organization is carried to a good degree of perfection, each vice-president having a special assignment for work; in consequence, if chalk, or pencils, or paper are wanted for the Young Folks' Section, for instance, there is one man whose business it is to see that they are provided—and he does it.

The opening exercise strikes me as one we might adopt in our conventions, if Pertle Springs will generously pass the idea along. Each Sunday-school having fifteen or more representatives present, was called, in turn, to the platform, and presented its greetings to the Assembly. Bringing their bright and varied banners, marching to music, one school filed on as another passed off the platform, each being given exactly five minutes for speech, or exercise, or song. Why not thus call the roll of local unions at a county or a state convention, or of states at a National? Certainly the idea might be admirably carried out at a Loyal Temperance Legion convention. Who will first give us this object lesson of "an army with banners"?

We are sometimes charged with expressing the fellowship of the white ribbon to a marked degree. But if there ever was a people more glad to see each other, and, at the same time, more cordial to "the stranger within the gates," I have yet to meet them.

ALICE M. GUERNSEY.

ECHOES FROM THE BATTLE IN NEBRASKA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I first came into the state in Knox county, and was told by leading men that it was the worst county in the state for political corruption, being an old and a river county. I heard the question asked by one citizen of another, "How many months school will we have this year?" and answered, "It is owing to how many saloons we have," thus giving the key-note to the situation. The farmers receive no benefit from this saloon license that pays for high-salaried schools in the towns and cities; but the farmers do help pay the expenses of the criminal docket of the county. Self-sacrificing speakers are needed who are willing to do this work, not for what their services are worth, but the least possible amount they can afford to work for. In a little over four weeks I traveled 418 miles by team and 369 by rail, organized fifteen unions, two leagues, and assisted at the birth of a Farmers' Alliance, being called to the platform for a speech at midnight, and again at three o'clock in the morning, sitting down amid calls of "go on," "go on," and that in the county of corrupt politics. Spoke for a short time before an independent county convention, my talk being well received, although I told these laboring men that they did not want to stand on a whisky barrel or beer keg to reach the ballot-box. A leading saloon-keeper, who is also a leading banker, was in the room attempting to manipulate the convention.

Knox county held a W. C. T. U. convention which was one of the best, most enthusiastic and earnest I ever was in. Farmers and their wives came from different parts of the county and stayed all day, the ladies of Creighton furnishing dinner in the large tent, tendered by Colonel Holt, who is doing grand work with his chalk-talks, tent meetings, drill of the children, etc. The papers and talks on different topics given on short notice were all good, and the discussions were lively and interesting.

I am quite sure some of the doubtful ones were astonished at what they saw and heard at that convention, and I several times heard the remark, "I will never miss such an occasion." The women arose en masse when the vote was taken on who would go to the polls on 4th of November. Rare talent has been lying idle in Knox county, which the W. C. T. U. should have preëmpted long ago. Mrs. Katie Smith, with her warm, motherly heart and sweet, smiling face, crowned with the silver hair of a grandmother, is just the woman for county president, while her daughter, Mrs. Mollie Koncher, bids fair to rival her mother in good works when the years have rolled by; and then the good, brave men who carried us over those prairies in the long drives and thick darkness of night while the wife held the lantern, or vice versa, all deserve a better fate than a home in a state where license shall become a part of the constitution.

Too much praise cannot be given Mrs. Ellen Blair, of Creighton, for her wonderful work in the medal contests. Early and late that faithful woman sits at her desk sending out instructions, until Nebraska leads the world in that line, having won 4,000 medals in eighteen months. At Madison I found two brave women "holding the fort," almost entirely alone, and brave women they are, deserving of success. The county papers are bought up, and if not openly working against prohibition, are silent. I found the saloon grip on the railroads, the banks, the schools, and some of the churches. The poor crops in some parts of the state cripple the prohibition workers through lack of funds. All friends of the cause should feel the responsibility of helping this people, and send money to Mrs. Mary Hitchcox, of Lincoln, Neb., president of Nebraska W. C. T. U., who is devoting all her time, talent and energy, together with the devotion of a loyal, consecrated heart to the cause of humanity. It is hard to resist the appeals of the people to stay on until election, but I am under marching orders from Susan B. Anthony, so I don the yellow ribbon and turn my steps towards my own South Dakota, change the combination, and set the key to the tune of "equal rights for all," while the same steamer that carries me across the "Big Muddy" to South Dakota, on its return trip carries the original packages and their venders back to Nebraska, and I imagine that my face looks less glum than the latter, because my heart is singing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," and my first greeting when I land on our shores, is, "We would much rather have you than those other nuisances." Yours for humanity,

NETTIE C. HALL, M. D.

SHE STILL LIVES.

From a private letter written by our cornetist of the National W. C. T. U., Mrs. Francis A. Bent, of Portland, Maine, we make these extracts, which will be relished by the throng of women to whom her figure and her golden voice are now familiar:

I did not know I could do or say anything to impress anybody. I once heard bright little Anna Gordon say she was traveling with an electric light, and consequently could shed no lustre of her own; and sharp, spicy Esther Pugh compared her own luminosity in the W. C. T. U. galaxy to that of a candle at the rear of a torch-light procession. If such minds emit no brighter rays, surely mine must be like the spark left in the candle after it has been blown out. I am not certain whether the exchequer will permit us to march from the sea to Atlanta, but our hearts will be there, and we can only trust that our Heavenly Father will open the way for us if he expects us to be there in propria persona.

Although my obituary appeared in THE UNION SIGNAL last December, I still live; indeed, am as chipper as a cricket. I want to tell you that somebody is very much mistaken about "little Bent," for I have been better since the last convention than in the last three years, and yet have undergone more cares and hard work than in the last five years. We set up our home this spring on Neal Street (a good name), two squares from General Dow. Indeed, our house was built by a relative of his; and I have superintended all the moving and changes and appointments; so don't you worry about me. My daily prayer is, "Give me youth and heaven," and it is coming right along. God did not raise up a Miriam for the temperance host to destroy her, but to preserve her that she might inspire the army as the waters divide, in our onward march to victory. I have been studying hard on my harp. I can play "Nearer, my God, to Thee," "Home, Sweet Home," and "America." Mr. Bent says they sound heavenly; and "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow" I can do just grand. Somehow, that seems to bring out my whole soul for the whole world. I played them for you all, after I read your dear letter, and could but hope that some of the sweet strains would pass into your hearts.

I have often said, privately and publicly, that playing the cornet in this great moral reform was preparing my fingers to play more skillfully on the golden harp in heaven, but in these later years I have learned that heaven is not so far away. It is right here and now, if we will only give ourselves up to it, and try to make the kingdom come on earth for others and ourselves. Trusting in this thought God sent me the harp, and now and then the instructor in the person of Miss Harriet Shaw, of Bar Harbor, Maine, the finest woman harpist and teacher in the world. She spent four years in Berlin, two years under Thomas, harpist to Queen Victoria, the finest pupil of the Welsh expert, Aptomas; and for two years under Loretzzie, at Florence. Was not God good to me to give me my heart's desire? And I am more happy than I can tell when playing even five finger exercises; for I know that I have been taught to do it well, and that is a good foundation for all future things. Maine sends forth sweet sounds to the world. Miss Carey is over here, you know, also Mrs. Shaw, and last and least your "little Bent," whose bugle notes, everybody says, grow sweeter as I learn better how to handle my golden trumpet. But, after all, it is my soul devoted to the cause that makes the bugle sweet.

I sometimes fancy I may live to play a cornet duet with the Czarowich, as I hear he is a great admirer of the cornet, and our Annie Louise Carey brought back jewel gifts and silverware from the Czar when she sang at St. Petersburg. I will play my bugle through the campaign of life, and when it is nearing its close I will sit by the fireside and play on the low, sweet, tuneful harp. When I can play first-rate, and have a beautiful imported harp, I will play it at the National, if you all say so.

[As we most certainly do.—ED.]

AN IMPERATIVE CALL.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I desire to speak a word in regard to the necessity of funds for the prohibitory campaign in Nebraska. I am afraid that our friends outside the state do not fully realize the desperate character of this contest, and how sorely pressed we are for funds. I am seriously afraid that unless there is a prompt and hearty loosening of purse-strings by the friends of our cause, everywhere, the battle will be lost. The liquor crowd have unlimited funds at their back, and they are using them in every possible way that evil cunning can devise. Thousands of our people have given, when giving was a sacrifice which was keenly felt, and many of them can give no more. The crop failure in the western half of the state comes with added force in this particular year.

I write this appeal entirely on my own responsibility, because of my intense interest in the outcome of this fearful struggle, and because I see just the situation we are in. Whatever is done must be done quickly. Only two months remain until election. What a grand work may yet be done if every one who can do so will give, and give promptly. Small contributions should not be withheld because the donor cannot give more. If concerted action were taken by the pastors of churches all over the country, sermons preached on the subject, and contributions called for, I believe a large fund could be raised in this way. Money sent to either of our state committees, the Prohibition, or Non-Partisan, at Room 128 Burr Block, Lincoln, or to the state W. C. T. U., or the Good Templars, would be used to the best possible advantage.

Yours for the cause,

J. M. TIPTON.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

Let no friend who reads this fail to send for a mite-box, Temple Bulletin and descriptive card, on which is the picture of the Temple. All three can be obtained by inclosing a two cent stamp addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard.

***

The corner-stone of the Temple will be laid with imposing ceremonies, Saturday, Nov. 1, 1890. It has been found necessary, in order to accommodate the great crowd which will be present at the ceremony, to have the walls up to the first floor, and have the floor laid over the entire building. This will give accommodation to the thousands who will assemble. There is to be an army of several thousand Loyal Temperance Legions, boys and girls, in line, who will march through the streets with floating banners. When they arrive at the Temple they are to sing Mrs. S. M. I. Henry's beautiful song, purposely arranged for the occasion, "Rise, Temple, Rise." A most delightful and appropriate responsive Scripture reading has also been prepared for use by Miss Anna Gordon, five thousand copies of which are now being printed. The two principal addresses will be made by Miss Frances E. Willard and Senator T. W. Palmer, of Detroit, Mich., who is president of the World's Columbian Exposition. It is also expected that Senator H. W. Blair, of New Hampshire, Senator A. H. Colquit, of Georgia, and Joseph Cook, of Boston, will be among the invited guests and make short addresses.

***

Another reason for postponing the laying of the corner-stone until November 1, is the hope that it may give an opportunity to many of the delegates to the National Convention of the W. C. T. U. at Atlanta, Ga., to be present, as they will be passing through the city about that time, on their way to the convention. The delay will also give still longer time to all unions who desire to secure autographs of members for the corner-stone. It must not be thought because the laying of the corner-stone is postponed that work is stopped on the building. This does not make the slightest change in regard to work upon it. There is now an army of men engaged upon the foundations, and the work is being pushed with all expedition.

***

The gift for the "Mother Thompson Memorial" is coming in in a most gratifying manner from both old and young. Mrs. L. A. Baker, president seventh ward W. C. T. U., Rochester, N. Y., sends $1, and adds the following beautiful tribute: "We feel that grand as our Temple will be, it will be incomplete without the name of that consecrated, courageous mother of the Crusade inscribed in one of the marble tablets in Willard Hall." The W. C. T. U. of North Adams, Mass.; the W. C. T. U. of Mt. Sterling, Ohio; the W. C. T. U. of Galesburg, Ill.; Grant Park, Ill., W. C. T. U.; the St. Bethlehem, Tenn., W. C. T. U.; the W. C. T. U. of Rochester, Pa., each send $1 towards the Memorial.

The Marathon, Iowa, W. C. T. U., a union of twelve members, only just organized, sends through Mrs. M. L. Sanders, $5; the Loyal Temperance Legion of Hillsboro, Ohio, sends $5. Mrs. H. D. Wells, Middleburg, N. Y.; Mrs. C. Martin, Woodstock, Ohio; Mrs. I. Robins, Long Branch, N. J.; Mrs. Deborah P. Peck, Centreville, Mich.; Mrs. Helen E. Babcock, Mrs. I. M. B. Gilmore and Mrs. Gilmore's little daughter, Gladys, of Trenton, Mo., each send $1 for the Thompson Memorial. Fox River union, school district No. 9, Eureka, Wis., a little union of only six members, send the contents of their mite-box, $1 of which is to be applied to the Thompson Memorial. An ex-convict of the Auburn State Prison, in loving gratitude for what the W. C. T. U. is doing for the prisoners, gave Mrs. I. C. Crossman, president of the Auburn, N. Y., W. C. T. U., $1 for temperance work. She sends it to us for the Thompson Memorial; a most admirable use to put it to, to help honor the gentle, but brave, woman, who led the Crusade that has set so many prisoners free.

***

The Y's seem to be getting a little more interested in the Temple, which is to be much more to them than to their mothers. The following Y. W. C. T. U's have lately sent gifts of money to the building fund: Carbondale, Pa., Y's; the Y's of Factoryville, Pa.; The Schoolcraft, Mich., Y's; the Y's of Easton, Cal.; the Emlenton, Pa., Y's; and the Y's of Elmore, Minn.

We wonder what is the matter with the Beech Creek, Pa., Y's. Have the girls all got married? They have disbanded and sent the balance found in their treasury, $6.77, to the building fund of the Temple. The Y's of Little Rock, Ark., send for twenty-five mite-boxes. Their secretary, Miss Mertie E. Besse, writes: "We seem to have very encouraging success with our Temple work thus far and shall continue to work for it, because we are all anxious to see the Temple finished."

***

We wish we had space in this column to tell of all the gifts lately sent in by our W. C. T. U., but we have not, so we will only mention a few of the largest sums sent in. The Sacramento Union of California, through Mrs. Chas. McKelvey, sends a check for $100. The W. C. T. U. of the second district of Michigan sends, through Mrs. M. J. Warner, $100. The Decatur, Ill., W. C. T. U., through our faithful friend, Mrs. L. M. Gay, sends $35—this more than completes their pledge of $100. Mrs. Gay writes: "If I am ever permitted to behold the great Temple in all its beauty, I believe there will be a feeling of gratitude in my heart, that I was permitted to make some sacrifice to help in this good cause."

Our Children.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER.

It was Saturday night, and two children small
Sat on the stairs in a lighted hall,
Vexed and troubled and sore perplexed,
To learn the Sunday's forgotten text;
Only three words on a gilded card,
But both children declared it hard.

"'Love,' that is easy—it means, why, this"—
(A warm embrace and a loving kiss);
"But 'one another,' I don't see who Is meant by 'another'—now, May, do you?"

Very grandly she raised her head,
Our thoughtful darling, and slowly said,
As she fondly smiled on the little brother,
"Why, I am one, and you are another,
And this is the meaning—don't you see?—
That I must love you, and you must love me."

Wise little preacher, could any sage Interpret better the sacred page?

—Good Cheer.

HOW GRANDPA PLAYED TRUANT.

BY ELLA BEECHER GITTINGS.

A True Story.

"I hate going to school every single day," said Tommy, sliding from grandpa's knee; "it's always, 'Come, Tommy, get ready for school,' just when I'm having the best time; and then I have to wash off every single speck of dirt, and stand still while Maggie uses about a hundred prickly old brushes on me ——— "

"Are you sure it is a hundred, Tommy?" asked grandpa, laughing; "that is a good many brushes, I think."

"Yes, it's a hundred, anyway, and p'raps a thousand. There's a hair brush and nail brush and tooth brush, and clothes brush, and shoe brush and —— and —— "

"Five; I think Tommy needs to go to school awhile yet to learn to count—not quite a hundred, is it? "

"Well, it seems like it when they're being used on a fellow, anyway. Did you have to be brushed that way, grandpa, when you were a boy? "

"Not quite, I think; usually it was only a hair brush. I wore no shoes in summer, and in winter they were of stout calf-skin or cow-hide. A good rubbing once a week with a cloth dipped in hot tallow was all the dressing they had."

"Oh, could you really go to school barefooted, grandpa? "

"Yes, all the boys did. It was in the country. We walked a mile to school."

"And were there trees and squirrels along the road, and water to wade in, and all that? "

"Yes, so many things along the road, that sometimes we were late to school."

"But you always liked to go, grandpa, didn't you? I should, if I could walk a mile in the soft dust barefooted, and only one brush to get ready with."

"No, sometimes I hated it as badly as you do. One morning in haying time, I made up my mind that I would not go. I wanted to stay and ride to the barn on the hay. I shall never forget that day."

"Oh, tell me about it, grandpa! "

"I knew mother would not let me stay at home without a very good excuse, so I made up my mind that I would be sick."

"But how could you be, if you were not? "

"I could make believe."

"Why, grandpa!" and Tommy's blue eyes opened wide as saucers.

"Yes, Tommy, your grandpa was a very naughty boy that day. Perhaps it was the naughtiest day of all his life, and that is why it is so well remembered. I know it was a very unhappy day—naughty days usually are, eh, Tommy?"

"Yes, grandpa."

"Well, after breakfast I began to groan and try to look very sick, and I took care to say that I was afraid I should not be able to go to school, for my throat was sore, and my head ached, and I felt badly all over. I think I was not very good at making believe. It was new business to me. At any rate, mother looked at my tongue and throat, felt my pulse, laid her hand upon my temples to see if they throbbed, and on my heart to know if it was beating naturally, and then she said, with a quiet smile: 'I do not think you will need to miss your school to-day. I noticed that you ate a hearty breakfast, and I know that you slept soundly last night. Your color is natural, and you have no fever. I will get you ready for school earlier than usual, and if you are tired you can rest on the way, under the shade of a tree.'

"It was of no use to protest. Mother was firm. I remember how angry I felt inside, what wicked thoughts about my dear mother filled my heart, as I took my dinner pail and started slowly down the road. I had not gone far before I met Sam Tracy. He was the worst boy in school—full of lying and cheating, and always at the foot of his class. He was often absent from school. 'Ask Sam how he manages it,' whispered the evil spirit within me. I did so. Sam laughed.

"'Oh, I come it over mother all sorts of ways. The best way is to play sick until it is too late for school, and then get well suddenly and go fishing, or anything you want to do.'

"'Pshaw!' I said, 'that won't work with mother. I tried it this morning, and she only sent me earlier so I could rest!'

"Sam burst into a loud laugh. 'Good enough!' he said.

"We walked on the way in silence, and then Sam suddenly spoke:

"'I know a cute trick for you, only I don't reckon you'd darst to do it.'

"'See if I wouldn't,' I answered hotly; 'I'm no coward.'

"'Well, if you was really sick or hurt your mother would have to let you stay, of course. If you had a sore toe, for instance, that hurt you to walk on, of course you couldn't go to school, but that wouldn't prevent your riding on the hay, you know.'

"'No, of course not, but I haven't a sore toe, you see.'

"'Do you see that big rock there by the road?'

"'Yes.'

"'Well, just you run an' jump and stump your toe ag'in it good an' hard so's to make it bleed, and then limp home to get it fixed up. Don't forget to limp, and take on like it hurt you awful. Ye kin do it slick's a pin. Sposin' it do hurt a leetle. What's a sore toe to a whole day in the new cut hay?'

"Seeing me hesitate, Sam laughed scornfully. 'I told ye ye wouldn't do it—come, now, I dare ye to.'

"Maybe, you know yourself, Tommy, how a boy feels to be dared?"

Tommy nodded his head with a gleam in his eyes that made his grandfather smile roguishly as he went on:

"Well, I was angry enough anyway, so when Sam gave me the dare, I ran furiously at the stone, and struck it so hard that it threw me to the ground with a somersault that I had not intended to turn. I picked myself up, howling with rage and pain. The blood was gushing from my great toe, and the nail was half torn off. Sam stood by, shaking with laughter.

"'Jolly!' he cried as soon as he could find breath to speak; 'ye've got more grit 'n I thought ye hed; couldn't 'a' done it better myself. Now limp good an' it'll fetch 'er, sure!'

"I picked up a loose stone to hurl at him, but I could see nothing but a cloud of dust raised by his flying feet. I started for home, and there was no sham about the limping, either. Mother asked no questions until she had put the toe in hot water to stop its bleeding, and had brought bandages and liniment; then she asked how it happened.

"'I—I was running and jumping, and by accident I stubbed my toe on a big stone.' My eyes were cast to the ground, and I felt the blood rush to my face when I said this. I was not used to telling lies, Tommy, and it came hard, especially as the pain was making me penitent. Perhaps if I had not put emphasis on the 'accident' she might not have suspected me. As it was, she looked at me curiously a moment, and then said, 'It was a hard knock, and must have required more violent running than I should expect of a sick boy,' and then without more words she went on binding up the toe. Mother was a master hand at such work, almost as good as a surgeon.

"When it was done, she set her lips tightly with a little half nod of the head, which meant she had made up her mind to something disagreeable. Then she gave me my cap and dinner pail and said quietly, but oh, so firmly, that I remember her look and tone, 'I am very sorry, my dear, that you hurt your foot. It will make your walk harder, and I fear you will be late; but if you let your teacher know of your 'accident,' I think she will excuse you.'

"Oh, grandpa! she didn't surely do that! Make you walk all that mile with such a toe!"

"Yes, Tommy, she did. It was a hard lesson, but I knew in my heart that I deserved it richly, and that she understood my trick and meant it as a punishment. It was two weeks before the toe was really well, and during that time I did a good deal of thinking on the subject of lying and cheating, you may be sure. Now that I am an old man I thank my mother heartily for the bitter lesson. It helped to make a man of me.

"Run now, Tommy, and dress for school, and remember if you should ever be tempted to play any tricks that your mother is said to be very much like her Grandmother Gray—she was my mother, you know."

"RELIGION is the most gentlemanly thing in the world.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 21, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 19:37–48; Ecclesiastes 7–12.)

Sunday, 21; Luke 19:37–48. Verse 37, Having seen the great works of our Lord, the disciples were ready to unite in one great volume of praise. What mighty works He has done by His gospel since that time! Should there not be more of praise in our worship? Verse 39, There will always be some who will see improprieties in our service and worship of Christ. Never mind; go on in your good work. Verse 41, Does our Lord weep over any of us because when he tries to do us good our hearts are set to go after evil?

Monday, 22; Eccles. 7. Verse 1, The "good name," is a character that will bear examination by God. We want a godly mind and life, and not mere reputation with man. Then the day of death will be better than the day of one's birth. Phil. 1:23. Verse 29, One of the things that God has arranged is that men should be free agents, and therefore they are the authors of their own wickedness. To himself alone must man look as the source of all his follies and sins.

Tuesday, 23; Eccles. 8. Verse 1, Many consider themselves wise who are only profane and vain babblers. I Tim. 6:20. If we are relying upon a spurious wisdom it will bring us into trouble at last. Verse 2, The true King of Israel was Jehovah, and His commandments we should keep. Verse 6, The wise should always have in mind the coming time of God's judgment.

Wednesday, 24; Eccles. 9. Verse 1, One who shuts out spiritual light from his soul and is in ignorance concerning the Divine government cannot see the moral meaning of events as they come to him in life. But no one, however spiritual, should go so far as to rely upon eternal things in order to determine God's love or hatred towards himself or others. Verse 10, Earthly enjoyments are to be secondary and subsidiary to the work of God, which if not done now can never be done.

Thursday, 25; Eccles. 10. Verse 1, Little faults and inconsistencies greatly injure the good influence that many might have. The sin that ultimately ruins the whole character begins with little things. Verse 8, It is an unsafe thing to do wrong to others, for the perpetrators of wrong shall at last suffer for their evil doing.

Friday, 26; Eccles. 11. Verse 1, Many deeds of charity are performed when the prospect of a permanent good thereby is as poor as that of gathering a crop by sowing seed upon water. But the seemingly hopeless character of the recipients should not keep us from doing good. Verse 9, The one who gives himself up to self-indulgence will have to suffer for it in the end. The cheerful use of God's gifts is right; but if we abuse them and abuse ourselves, we shall be called to an account in this world or the next.

Saturday, 27; Eccles. 12. Verse 1, After expressing many doubts, the conclusion is finally reached that whatever may be the mysteries about life, the highest good in it is found in serving God; and this service of God should be begun as early as possible. Verse 13, Instead of madly following after pleasure, or giving ourselves to a greedy self-seeking which ends in discontent and disappointment, we should make "duty" the law of our conduct, fear God, and keep His commandments.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Enemies in the Land. Ephesians 6:12.)

If any one has neglected to send the fifteen cents to the publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL to get the twelve Bible Reading Leaflets by Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, referred to in the prayer meeting topics for 1890, he should do so now. No one can afford to miss the Leaflet for May, 1889, which explains the topic for this week. It ought to be circulated everywhere. Get it and read it; and induce others to read it.

1. The text shows that the great enemy is Satan; and the sad fanaticism we see so rife around us in the present day exists because he has deceived ignorant and misguided souls into the belief that he is an angel of light.

2. The Bible faithfully warns us against this deceiving enemy. Deut. 13:1–4; Rev. 13:13, 14; II Tim. 2:26; I Jno. 4:1.

3. Christians ought to have common sense, and not shipwreck their faith and usefulness by taking up with "beliefs" which can have no outcome of good, but which can only give comfort to the enemies of "God and home and native land."

TIME never works: it eats and undermines, and rots and rusts and destroys. But it never works. It only gives us an opportunity to work.—Dr. Lyman Abbott.

The Household.

THE HOME.

BY EVA ST. CLAIR CHAMPLIN.

Worth more to me is the home
Than all the barrels of rum
That could float on the wide, wide ocean!
  Dearer to me are its joys,
  Its merry-faced girls and boys,
Than all wealth's vain promotion.

Fleeing corrupted Rome,
Save to the sacred home,
From Cæsar and bold Mithridates;
  Here, weary one, sheltered bide,
  Here, free from the tempter, hide
Thyself near the faithful Penates.

Remember Æneas of old,
The story has oft been told,
How he left the great city fated—
  The Penates in his embrace,
  He founded a mighty race,
Though by wind and wave belated.

So we, if we let our love
For the home rise all above,
Shall find ours a mighty nation!
  For rum will be outlawed then,
  Our men will be godly men,
And our praises will ring through creation!

Alfred Center, N. Y.

WEARINESS.

BY ELLA B. CARTER.

The Complaint of the Flesh.—I am so tired to-night. Tired of work that ends in failure, and of strife that meets defeat; tired of the discord and the babble of vain voices; tired of working for reforms that bring in return the stab of a critic's pen and the laugh of a rabble multitude; tired of hearing Shemei curse and Abishai give unwise counsel; tired of striving to arouse the careless women of my day to a sense of duty; tired of my own self-love that makes me feel pain when I see their covert sneers; tired of the dreariness that makes the very sunlight pale; tired of praying for patient grace to curb a spirit of fire; tired of a heart that neither love of God nor love of man has satisfied; tired of clinging with weak, faithless hands to our "cross of hope." I have looked and seen the stupendous misery of life and the littleness of human aims, the spite of the selfish, the cruelty of the rich, the lusts of the carnal, and I never want to look again. I have listened and I have heard hearts break and earth's bitter cry of anguish, and I would hear it no more forever. I am weary of walking alone a crooked path; weary because of the heat of the day and of bearing a burden, "overmuch and overlong;" weary of wiping away hot tears, as I miss the sound of a "voice that is still," a voice that used to say brave words of hope and cheer; weary of this sick longing for the "touch of a vanished hand," my sweet child's hand that used to wander lovingly over my aching brow and ease the pain. My service for mine own is ended; I have no work but other hands can do better than I; the weapons with which I fought for truth are broken, and I lie exhausted on the field of strife. Like the dreamer who saw in vision the gates of heaven open, while two entered in, and who, hearing the bells of the city ring for joy, and catching a note of their unending song, and a glimpse of the glory of the company of shining ones, wrote afterward for us, "which when I had seen, I wished myself there;" so I turn eager heart and wistful eye toward the blessed country, and repeat, "Would God that I were there, all well with me." I am so unutterably weary to-night I can endure the hardness of the way, the desolation of heart and life, the stress and storm, no longer, and from the depth of my soul goes up a great cry, Take me home, oh, my Father, take me home!

The Consolation of the Spirit.—Are the consolations of God so small with thee, beloved? Hast thou forgotten that He loves thee with an everlasting love, and that thy strivings to win the world to righteousness are of all things most precious in His sight? Thou art not alone; He has given His angels charge concerning thee, and all along the journey, though unseen, they have ministered to thee, smoothing thy pathway and giving courage and strength to fainting heart and weary limb, and in moments of exaltation pointing thee upward and showing thy crown. Art thou childless and widowed? He maketh the children of the desolate to be more than the children of the married wife, and thy Maker is thy husband, the Lord of hosts is his name; weep not, for sometime He will bring thy lost ones from the enemy's country. Art oppressed because of the dreariness and gloom? He will lay thy stones with fair colors and lay thy foundations with sapphires, and make thy windows agates, thy gates of carbuncles and all thy borders of pleasant stones. O thou afflicted! tossed with tempest and not comforted. Doth the way seem long? Remember that even unto the end His kindness shall not depart from thee, nor the covenant of His peace be removed, and thou shalt have quiet resting places. Art thy feet bleeding because of a rough path? He will give thee shoes of brass and iron, He sees thy way, counts all thy steps, and puts all thy tears into his bottle; He hath betrothed thee unto Himself, written thy name upon the palms of His hands, counted the hairs of thy head, no evil shall come nigh thee, He will guard thee as the apple of His eye. Fear not the tongues that rise against thee in judgment, it is the heritage of the servant of the Lord to condemn such. Dread not the fiery shafts of the wicked one, for the eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms. He comforteth those that are cast down, by giving them the fellowship of kindred souls. He will comfort thee as one whom his mother comforteth, that thou mayest be able to comfort others. Have no distrust for the future, He careth for all thy bodily wants and necessities; these forty years while walking through this great wilderness, the Lord thy God hath been with thee, and thou hast lacked nothing.

Be not troubled because of thy faithlessness and weakness, He hath chosen the weak things and despised of this world for His service. What doeth thou here? Arise, eat, and in the strength of the meat serve Him a little longer, for the time is short; canst thou not watch with Him one hour? Angels covet the work to which thou hast been called, and when done there will be a long rest and an exceeding great reward, for glorious things are prepared for thee, such as eye hath not seen, neither hath entered into the heart of any since the foundation of the world, for at last He will thrust out the enemy Death from before thee, and thine eyes shall behold the land that is very far off, they shall see the white throne, the beatific vision, the King in His beauty, and thou shalt hear the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful in a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." And then thou shalt shine as the stars, forever and ever.

The Flesh and the Spirit.—Father, low in the dust I cry; if I may, I would work for thee another day.

Newark, N. J.

NEW RULES FOR DEMOREST CONTESTS.

When no less than eight young persons, between the ages of twelve and twenty-one, shall recite before an audience selections taken from either of the two volumes of "From Contest to Conquest," the one adjudged to have made the best recitation will be awarded a silver medal in a satin lined case. When not less than eight of the silver medals are secured by as many contestants the winners will be entitled to compete for a gold medal.

When eight or more have won gold medals they may compete for a grand gold medal. When eight or more have won a grand gold medal the holders may compete for a handsome gold medal studded with diamonds. On these terms the medals will be presented by W. Jennings Demorest, free of expense.

No one having obtained a silver or gold medal will be allowed to compete again for the same kind of medal. Two trials will be allowed to each speaker for the silver medal, but only one trial for either of the gold medals or the diamond medal. No one can receive the higher prize until the lower ones are secured. In every contest a new piece must be recited. After the silver medal is won age will not be a bar to further competition.

Not less than eight will be permitted to speak for any of the medals. When there are less than eight contestants present let those who are ready recite, and a different prize may be given. Postpone the contest for the medal until the entire class shall be prepared. Contests in any church or hall must be held not less than thirty days apart. The recitations are to be taken exclusively from the books prepared for this purpose, which may be purchased at this office and of state superintendents at ten cents each, post free.

To avoid confusion and dissatisfaction our friends will please remember that these rules are imperative and must be adhered to.

The contests are designed to be educational on the Prohibition question, and it is especially requested that the prose matter contained in the books be given the preference for the competitions. All parties interested in the work are requested to read this entire circular before introducing the matter to contestants.

Circulars, recitations and medals can be obtained on application to MRS. CHARLOTTE F. WOODBURY,
General Superintendent.
No. 10 East Fourteenth street, New York City.

PHYSICAL CULTURE FOR GIRLS.

BY ELIZA PUTNAM HEATON.

"How would I bring up a girl?" I would begin when she was two years old and teach her to stand poised from the hips and slightly forward, chest up, abdomen contracted, toes turned out at an angle of sixty degrees, and neck erect, so that the collar-bone should be horizontal. You can teach a little girl to know whether she is standing properly or not by having her occasionally walk up against a door. She should touch it with lips, chin, chest and toes. A plumb-line from the shoulders should pass through the hip and ankle joints. Then I would teach her to breathe slowly, inflating the chest upward and outward, not downward, keeping the abdomen contracted. This gives a wonderful feeling of buoyancy. As she grew older she should not take above ten breaths a minute, but they should be full, vigorous ones. Good breathing and good standing are almost enough of themselves to give good health and a good figure. In walking I would show her how to keep her face and chest well over the advanced foot, and to lift the body by the muscles and the inflation of the lungs. I would see to it that she turned her toes well out. Seventy-five women out of every one hundred walk with the feet straight or toe in. This increases the tendency to an inward turn of the knees, and encourages a pelvic contraction. The weight should rest on the balls of the feet, and the ball and heel should touch the floor at the same time. In her school-days I would take pains to have her sit at her desk properly.—Babyhood.

WHERE SHALL SHE RECEIVE HIM?

One of my girls is busy all day long—busy in the shop, or perhaps the counting-house or studio. When evening comes she goes to what she calls home, freshens herself up a bit, eats her dinner, and then she waits for him to come. Home to her, just now, means a hall bed-room in which there is a tiny folding-bed, one or two chairs, a bureau, and a washstand.

At home she has been taught that her bedroom was a sacred place into which no man shall enter. In the same house with her are many more girls placed exactly as she is, and they laugh at her timidity about seeing a young man in her room. Sometimes the laughter has its effect and she plunges in boldly and asks him to come up to her little haven of rest. She thinks this is better than going out with him and taking a walk. But every now and then she sits down and wonders if she is doing right, and, if she isn't, what she ought to do. She is a girl, just like yours and mine, and she is a brave one because she has faced the world honorably and taken care of herself. She is a healthy girl mentally and physically, and it is right that she should wish to keep her men friends and have a pleasant time with them.

This seems the solution of the question. Let her make her little nest as pretty as possible, put the books, that she has saved money to buy, on top of the mantel that hides under it her bed. The photographs of those she loves may decorate the little table, and on the bureau all the belongings that a womanly girl collects, may be put here and there, wherever it seems best. A tiny screen may be folded closely about the washstand, and then let it not be a question of one hostess, but of two, for let her ask the girl who thinks as she does, to come down, and let her entertain her friends. It's true that this may make a bit of a crowd in the room; it's true that some of the visits may be shortened because of the crowd, but when a visitor goes away with the feeling that he regrets that the time has been so short, he is very apt to come soon again. If you like, make one or two evenings in the week when you and your friend are to be at home, in the little hall room, and you will be surprised to find, bright girls as you are, how popular you will make your little evenings, and how you will impress upon the minds of the special man what a good home-maker you are. I do not believe that the girls who see one man alone in their own rooms are anything but thoughtless, but the wise girl is the one who learns that, beside her own pure heart, the best protection she can have against disagreeable remarks about thoughtless behavior, is a woman friend who thinks like her, and who is equally anxious, while having a good time, to keep her name free from reproach.—Ladies' Home Journal.

WITHOUT haste, and without rest,
Bind this motto to thy breast;
Bear it with thee as a spell;
Storm or sunshine, guard it well.

Haste not, rest not, calmly wait,
Meekly bear the storm of fate,
Duty be thy polar guide;
Love shall linger at thy side.

—Goethe.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

His allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life.—2 Kings xxv: 30.

Bend not thine arms for to-morrow's load;
Thou may'st leave that to thy gracious God.
"Daily," only, He saith to thee,
"Take up thy cross and follow Me."

DOES NEBRASKA NEED A PROHIBITION PARTY?

This is a question of vital interest to that commonwealth in her present struggle for freedom from the saloon curse. Does the nomination of a Prohibition ticket "divide the temperance forces," or does it supply the needed backing to amendment work? Here is room for much honest difference of opinion among men all equally good friends to the cause. The majority in the state convention decided it was wise to put a Prohibition ticket in the field. It is but just that the reasons for their action should be known.

Let it be remembered that in working for the amendment, Prohibitionists and the W. C. T. U. have entered heartily into the non-partisan plan of action; indeed, they seem to be its most efficient workers and most liberal givers. We all hoped that when the Republican convention met it would take its stand fairly for prohibition, as was the case in Dakota. Had it done so, none would have been more glad than we to applaud its action, and our National convention would have had the pleasure this year of thanking the Republicans of Nebraska, as it did the Dakota Republicans last year. While the whole state is aflame with the amendment campaign, involving an issue of infinitely greater moment than any other, we did not think it possible for this party, which enrolls so many good temperance men, not to give some expression to temperance in its platform. What this expression would be was the only question, we thought, never imagining that this burning issue could be entirely ignored. But it was; the Roggen-rum-and-Rosewater ring had more influence than the home in that convention, and not even a resolution of "sympathy with all well-directed efforts" was passed.

This was a death blow to the hopes of Prohibitionists who in its earlier years had loved the Republican Party as their life and were yet anxious to believe it would show itself true to its origin in a great moral idea, by standing true to the moral idea confronting the country to-day. We had no hope of the Democratic Party, which in Nebraska, as elsewhere in the North, stands as a criminal condemned on its own plea of "Guilty." It does not even pretend to be for temperance, and never enters into our calculations, except as an adverse force.

But there was in Nebraska a People's party, including a large number of farmers whose interests are so directly antagonized by the licensed saloon that we felt sure they would stand for the amendment. Farmers bear the lion's share of the burdens of taxation imposed by the saloon, while the municipalities pocket the license fees; hence, simple business sense, entirely outside of philanthropy, dictates that they should take sides against the traffic. But they did not; their platform, like the Republican, utterly ignores the vital question, and expends itself on issues which even when we consider nothing but the financial interests involved, sink immeasurably below that of the Home vs. the Saloon.

This, then, was the situation: three political parties in the state where the prohibitory amendment was pending, neither one of which, in its platform or its nominations, made the slightest pretense to standing for prohibition. Ignoring the issue was virtually standing for the present policy of the state—high license. The Prohibitionists of Nebraska were thus disfranchised or forced to cast their votes where they would be counted for high license. The only other alternative was the nomination of a Prohibition ticket, and this they have wisely done, to avoid "throwing away their votes," by casting them where they would count against, instead of for, their principles. This is the only kind of "throwing away votes" which is reprehensible; bad as it always is, the present situation in Nebraska makes it not only disastrous, but criminal; a base betrayal of the cause by its sworn defenders.

The Prohibition State Committee, through its secretary, C. E. Bentley, has ably set forth the reasons for its action. These are, First, the specific purpose for which the Prohibition Party was organized is to secure by legislation, the overthrow of the legalized drink traffic, to plant prohibition in Federal and state constitutions, and to place in official power men who believe in prohibition and will insist on its enforcement. This purpose it must crystallize into votes to make it effective. Sentiment may go into the air, but votes never do. Whether few or many, votes influence all measures of public policy.

Second. Touching the situation in our own state. We have in round numbers, 10,000 Prohibition votes in Nebraska. They have been gathered as the result of years of agitation, sacrifice and persecution. Counted out of the ballot box, these 10,000 votes always mean, "The saloon shall not live in this state on any terms, nor at any price." It was the lever of these 10,000 votes that lifted submission into the last legislature for the suffrages of the people—and through faithful and persistent party work the past six years, by prohibition press, speakers, conventions and votes Nebraska has been made ready to achieve success now. Shall we in new and untried combinations imperil the success of this party?

Third. The uprising in the people's movement has had a tendency to confuse the issue and make it difficult for some of our workers to decide on party action. Now that the movement has crystallized into party form, its convention held, and nominations made, Prohibitionists must see that the People's party cannot be a substitute for our own organization. There is not a word of indorsement of the pending prohibitory amendment in its platform, nor is there in the make-up of its ticket assurance that this new party, if successful, would oppose license legislation. Claiming that the farmers are largely in favor of the amendment and publishing to the world that it was a farmers' convention, yet it remains silent on the most vital question in American politics. Denouncing monopolies, trusts and corporations in general, it passes without a protest the biggest monopoly in the world—the legalized drink traffic.

If the Prohibition Party failed to put a ticket in the field we would have the unique spectacle of a state prosecuting its greatest campaign and no allusion in any party platform to the issue at stake. What would be thought of a state which had successfully appealed to the entire country for help in carrying a campaign, while all its political platforms ignored the question entirely?

Fifth. Without a ticket, the party will disintegrate. The ticket and the platform constitute the cohesive and executive force of any party. A platform without a ticket is but a declaration of principles. A ticket without a platform can bring to the party only the personal worth and character of its candidates. This being true, the State Alliance has wisely moulded its material into party form. If they had done as they advise Prohibitionists to do, they would have put no ticket in the field this year, but just gone on making Alliance sentiment, conducting a moral and non-political crusade against the unholy combinations that beset the farmer.

If our ticket is the only one that excludes all license candidates, and our platform is the only one that indorses the prohibitory amendment, with what other party can a Prohibitionist consistently give his vote and influence? Logically every honest prohibition voter in the state is disfranchised, if our party has no ticket. Some say there is a deep-seated prejudice against our party, and if we make no ticket we shall soothe that prejudice. We cannot afford to dispel partisan prejudice at so great an expense. And no man of real principle will vote against prohibition because of any particular party action. The Prohibition Party has stood for years for every true National reform. You will find in every one of its platforms denunciations of trusts and monopolies. It stands for a just tariff revision and relief for the wage worker, advocates a pure ballot, favors the Australian system of voting, believes in liberal pensions to war veterans and their families, and asks for suffrage without distinction of sex. If the amendment is carried next November, we need our party organization intact to furnish the needed moral impulse of its enforcement. Without such a party, prohibition in Nebraska would be a poor, helpless orphan thrown on the cold charities of the license politicians. If the amendment is lost, then there is still greater need of our party standing in unbroken line, ready to move at bugle call for a speedy renewal of the struggle.

Michigan, Texas, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, are examples of what an orphaned prohibitory campaign means, a campaign which no political party will father; it is time that a different system be inaugurated.

POLYTECHNIC SCHOOLS.

So deeply do we feel the close connection between thorough preparation to earn an honest living and the great reforms of temperance and social purity, that we must emphasize it repeatedly, even at the risk of repetition. Many years' work with prisoners of all grades has left an indelible impression on our mind of the close connection between crime and unskilled fingers. Without training in something by which to earn an honest living, men, and women, too, strive to "live by their wits," and the result is very apt to be crime and disgrace.

The destruction of the apprentice system has many sins to answer for in this direction; without it or something in its place, how are boys to learn trades? But regret its destruction as we may, we cannot bring the system back; we can only look about for something to supply its place.

This the Polytechnic schools are designed to do. As the name indicates, they are schools where many arts are taught, with especial reference to practical application. The London Polytechnic, founded by Mr. Hogg twenty-five years ago, and of which he still remains the heart and inspiration, may be taken as a model of these schools. It provides technical and practical workshop classes in the various trades; carpentry, cabinet making, brick work, plumbing, shoe-making, engraving, printing, photography, wood carving, upholstering, tailoring, electric work, surveying, book-keeping, shorthand, dressmaking, cooking, plain and art needle-work, indeed, all the trades by which men and women live. Evening classes and lectures are provided for those who must work days, and day classes with a larger tuition fee, for boys and girls who can afford to thoroughly prepare themselves for their life work before entering upon it.

That its benefits are appreciated is shown by the attendance, being over twelve thousand annually. Up till 1888 instruction was not afforded to girls and women; then their greater need was recognized and special classes arranged for them. One thousand girls at once enrolled themselves as pupils, although there were accommodations for only eight hundred. The attendance on all departments of the Polytechnic is limited only by its power to receive and accommodate. Every class is always full, so eager are young men and maidens to prepare themselves to gain an honest livelihood.

The People's Palace is doing a somewhat similar work in East London. Set down in that darkest part of the world's metropolis, with no munificent patron like Mr. Hogg, entirely dependent upon gifts and its low tuition fees, it has from the start had phenomenal success. Its first year's enrollment was 4,200, of whom over one thousand were young women. The Trades Unions recognize the value of this work, and give it hearty support, the city of London gives it official recognition, as does Parliament, and well they may, for it is helping to a peaceful solution of the labor problem.

In America we have various Polytechnic schools, notably those at Boston and Troy. These institutions are doing untold good in their line, but are somewhat beyond the reach of the rank and file of the world's workers. They need to be supplemented in every great city and manufacturing center, by something like the London Polytechnic, where those too poor to give even the daylight time necessary for instruction can, by evening classes, gain that dexterity of hand which will enable them to earn better wages.

This is a work which the churches, the W. C. T. U., and especially the Y's have been doing in a small way by their industrial schools, which have accomplished much good. But their work must be a charity, and this, beautiful as it is, detracts something from the benefit, for it fails to cultivate independence and self-respect. What is needed is a school upon such a foundation that pupils can there have the needed instruction, paying therefor tuition fees sufficient to preserve their self-respect, yet not beyond the reach of those most needing its aid. This is secured by the London Polytechnic through its day classes whose larger tuition fees help to make up the deficit from the low fees of the evening pupils, all, of course, supplemented by the endowment which every great educational institution must have, for none of us ever paid in full the real cost of our college education.

Chicago has long needed more in the way of preparing its young people for the work their hands are to do. Its admirable Manual Training School, its Industrial Art Educational Association, and now its incorporation of manual training into the public school course, all attest appreciation of this need. Its latest development in this direction is the Chicago Polytechnic Institute, which this week opens at the corner of Madison street and Fifth avenue. It is modeled after the London Polytechnic and the People's Palace, which is the crystallization of Walter Besant's waking dream. It makes a small beginning, for as yet no millionaire has vied with another for the honor of being its patron saint, but this small beginning gives the more room to grow. And the patron saint seems to be not very far in the distance. William Drury has long planned to endow an institution that will enable the poorer classes of our state to gain a practical education. He offered three hundred and twenty acres of improved land for this purpose provided property of equal value could be obtained for the endowment or maintenance of the institution. Out of this originated the Polytechnic; the offer was made to F. W. Harkins, Superintendent of the Institute, last December, and can be utilized as soon as its conditions are fulfilled.

Like the sensible man he is, Superintendent Harkins did not sit down and wait for some rich man to die and will him the endowment. He and his co-laborers decided to go to work and express their ideas in practical form, feeling sure that when so expressed a generous and appreciative public would recognize their value and supply the means for further development.

Accordingly the work is begun at private expense, in a rented building. The Builders' and Traders' Exchange has indorsed the technical features of the plan, as have various other organizations; the Chicago Trade Schools have been made a department of the Institute; Miss Toppelius brings into it her Slöyd Training School; competent teachers are secured in various studies and handicrafts, including cooking, dressmaking and other womanly employments, and the enterprise is fairly launched. Every philanthropist, as well as every man of business, must desire its success, for it means great things in the line of prevention.

THE WEAK LINK.

[The National officers always have the "right of way" in THE UNION SIGNAL. As this article by Miss Pugh was received too late for the "Contributors' " department, we give it space on the editorial pages.]

When the holy fire of the Crusade descended upon the women of the nation, it did not come upon one at a time, but whole communities of them were minded to be at one time in one place, to hear the word of the Lord to them, and to do according to it. The movement was thus brought into existence in organized form, of this there is no question. Those who had wept and prayed over the great sin of intemperance alone in their closets for years, suddenly gathered into bands, leaders were providentially prepared and encouraged; helped and built up by each other, and directed by the Holy Spirit, they went out together to the wonderful work appointed to them. The local organizations with just as little human effort and planning federated into state unions, and the states as naturally gathered into one National body.

Thus was the wisdom of God vindicated. Women unused to such broad plans would have been frightened at the thought of venturing into fields requiring so much of strength and wisdom, so much time and money. But just as surely as came the call to one woman to go forth in this battle, came the call for union of forces. We were to fight a National organization, it must be met by an equally broad power. As we thus see that it is a part of the divine economy of this work that we thus band, we must see to it that no part suffers in our hands. It is intrusted to us, a holy charge, we are to cherish it, labor for it and build it up. Each day shows more and more clearly that we must hope for the success for which we pray, in a strong, nation-wide, world-encircling auxiliaryship.

As I look over the ground from my especial point of vision, the financial support of the state is our weakest point. Local unions can reach out in various ways to find means for the outlays needed. The National ought to be able to do its work, and must plan to do so, on the dues received from the states, but the local dues to states are in every instance entirely insufficient to carry on the work demanded of the state organization. A few states have made other provision, but the wail which comes to me from all directions is, What can be done for the state treasury? Temporary expedients of all kinds have been exhausted, the same friends have come again and again to the rescue. Some permanent pecuniary basis must be found. Of course in the last analysis the burden must come upon the local unions; they are nearest the pocket. The best plans which come to me are those which involve a pledge from districts or counties (in whichever form the state may be organized) of a definite sum, apart from and independent of dues. In Illinois, which has twenty districts, each district is being brought to the point to pledge $100 to the state treasury, and fifteen have already come up to the point. The district, large or small, rich or poor, undertakes the one hundred dollars, portions it out to the unions according to their financial ability, and these are expected to raise their part by any means best adapted to their surroundings. This sum comes but lightly upon any union, and gives great strength to the state. The city of Chicago has four Congressional districts, and it would seem a hard matter to organize four district unions and expect them to pay this sum. But much can be accomplished by an intelligent presentation of the object. Very frequently the unwillingness to pay to any enterprise comes from lack of knowledge of the use of the money. Not long ago I accompanied the state president and Miss West to a meeting to organize one of these Chicago districts. Mrs. Rounds remarked, "I think they will scarcely be ready to come in on the hundred dollars; there are very few unions in the territory." But after full, careful presentation of the needs for money, and of the manner of its expenditure, and an informal talk in which all questions were answered, the reasonableness of the whole business asserted itself, and the requirement was fully and cordially met.

Indiana last year passed the following by-law:

A fund for general state work shall be raised by annual assessments upon local unions, each union of less than twenty members being assessed $5, and each union of twenty members or over, $10. Assessments will be collected in alphabetical order of the unions, according to schedule made by state treasurer.

This has worked admirably, furnishing an income averaging $100 per month the past year. Fifty new unions have been organized and came up to the requirement, and one hundred are expected before the close of the year. The treasurer writes that arranging the unions alphabetically, and letting them know at the beginning of the year the time at which their assessment will be due, has proven a very good feature. The plan has fully vindicated itself on the trial.

We are confronted constantly with the expression, "But we need the money at home." Yes, the local needs are manifold, but the local work will be local and not strong even then, if the broader organization of the state is not well supported.

There are many calls upon you, this I well appreciate, but consider religiously first your duty to keep the whole in all its parts, then exercise liberality. And in the calls be wise and discriminating; do not impoverish yourselves and your work for a sentiment; consider carefully before entering upon an enterprise, as to whether it will pay. This will be a great help. I trust that as the state meetings are held this fall, the way to bring regular, certain and liberal income to the state treasuries will receive the most liberal, careful, prayerful attention, that the clearest and wisest heads may consider it. We must provide better for state treasuries or our work will come to naught, and the rock on which we will split will be our own illiberality.

LAST week's Independent is a railroad number, twelve pages being given to discussion of railway themes. Cassius M. Clay answers the question, "Shall the railroads own the people?" Edward Everett Hale, "Should the state own the railroads?" Professor Ely and a railroad manager discuss the same question; Governor Larrabee writes of railroad legislation, and the editor of "Poor's Manual of Railroads," gives four pages of statistics on railroad matters. One of the most interesting things in this interesting number is the symposium on "Temperance in the Railway Service," in which seventy railroad superintendents testify that total abstinence is generally required of railroad employés. The use of intoxicants while on duty is forbidden by nearly all roads, and many of them make visiting saloons and other places of bad repute cause for dismissal. Vermont has a state law by which a railroad company that knowingly employs as conductor, engineer, brakeman, or switchman, one who uses intoxicating liquors as a beverage, shall forfeit not less than three hundred dollars nor more than three thousand dollars with cost of prosecution, and shall also be liable for damages sustained by retention of such employé. Michigan has a similar law. Several roads prohibit the use of tobacco by any employé on a passenger train. The Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City forbids smoking by any employé while on duty or about the stations, shops and warehouses. The Union Pacific makes the same provision. The good effect of this railroad prohibition which does prohibit is incalculable.

MISS WILLARD says: "The Washington (state) W. C. T. U. has issued, in a beautiful engraving, its certificate of honorary life membership. The stately pines of that favored region are here set forth as embellishments of tumbling cataracts, and our beautiful emblematic National seal figures conspicuously, while at the top a dove bearing the white ribbon recalls the bird of peace that has so often poised itself over our National conventions. It is my deliberate conviction that if every state president would secure the publication of an equally handsome and emblematic certificate and pledge each local union to get an honorary life membership once a year, at ten dollars, this method would give a notable impetus to the receipts that are our sinews of war."

The Watch-Tower.

It should be remembered in connection with the announcement of Membership Crusade Day, September 27, that a banner has been offered by the National President, to each of the six subdivisions of the United States that should show the largest per capita increase in membership for the year. These banners will not be presented to the respective claimants as their perpetual property, but will be passed from one state to another as the years go by. At the New York convention Dakota took the banner of the National W. C. T. U., having made the largest increase of all; and last year West Washington Territory.

***

Rev. Dr. Villars writes of a new use to which the medal contest is used in Indiana. The managers of several county fairs have offered premiums for contestants, the contest to be given under the management of W. C. T. U. workers having the matter in hand. He attended two of these contests, and the first day hundreds stood on seemingly tireless feet to hear the class throughout. The next day drew not less than 1,500 people around the platform to hear a class of six little girls. In all these performances the most advanced prohibition doctrine is taught

***

Mrs. Julia A. Baldwin, President of the W. C. T. U. of Maryland, while summering at Warren, a little country place of five hundred inhabitants, conducted a Loyal Temperance Legion of about one hundred members. Mrs. Mary A. Livermore and Mrs. Ellis, of New Jersey, are to speak at the approaching convention of the Maryland W. C. T. U. Dr. Anna Shaw is reported as having been most effective in their recent outdoor meetings.

***

Miss Willard writes: "Miss Olive Schreiner, that most unique and gifted young lady who wrote the 'Story of an African Farm,' has recently contributed to the New Review, published by Longmans, Green & Company, London, a prose poem in two parts, entitled 'The Sunlight lay Across my Bed.' In the first, she pictures a vision of hell; in the second, one of heaven; and at last discovers that the earth is her place for work, growth and character. Her delineation of wine as the overmastering power in hell is one of the sublimest, most impressive allegories ever written. It deserves to outrank the famous vision of Mirza. If anything would sicken a wine drinker of wine, it would be to read this putting of the truth about it once every day, until a radical and permanent cure was effected. If ever words were made to convey spiritual nausea, Miss Schreiner has pressed them into the service on this occasion for that purpose. Her great heart and practical humanitarian views form the wind-up to this marvelous vision."

***

Among the temperance addresses at Piedmont Chautauqua few were more delightful than that of Mrs. Felton. She had the largest audience of the day and evening, and impressed every one with the loftiness and sincerity of her spirit. Her address was an earnest appeal to all to join in efforts to rid the land of the curse of drunkenness. There were flashes of wit, bits of sarcasm, keen as a Damascus blade, though softened by deep, loving interest in her subject.

***

Another leader among women has been promoted to higher service, Mrs. Jane C. Hoge, of Evanston, Ill. She and Mrs. Livermore were co-workers in the great sanitary and Christian commission. A devoted Presbyterian, Mrs. Hoge had that catholicity of spirit which enabled her to take all Christians into her heart, and yet find room there for a world in distress. She gravitated naturally to reform, and was always found at the head of every movement designed to benefit the race. She had wonderful executive ability, tremendous energy, and her "power of patient, persistent work seemed endless." She was president of the Woman's Educational Association of Evanston, an undenominational organization which did heroic service in securing funds for the Woman's College of Northwestern University. The fact that it was a Methodist institution, and she a "true blue Presbyterian," did not at all dampen her ardor. She projected, and carried to successful issue, a Woman's Fourth of July, away back in 1871, the first one ever heard of, so far as the record goes. Such a success it was that $30,000 were that day raised for the Woman's College. Probably her work for missions will be that for which she will be longest remembered. She was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Woman's Board of Missions for the Northwest, being president for many years, and retained as president emeritus when failing health and hearing prevented active service. She also left her strong imprint on the ladies' board of Home for the Friendless, in Chicago, of which she was a leading member. Indeed it is hard to find a good movement in this city which has not had her assistance. After eighty fruitful years she was garnered in as a shock of corn fully ripe.

ON DUTY.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

Founded 1883.

Motto.—For God and Home and Every Land. Object: To unify the methods of woman's temperance work the world over, and to circulate a petition for the prohibition of the traffic in alcoholic drinks and opium, and other social reforms.

All members wear a little knot of white ribbon, and remember the noon hour of prayer for all temperance work and workers, and for the coming of Christ's kingdom.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Date of Organizt'n.

1876 England, Lady Henry Somerset, 16 Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., London, E. C.
" Canada—Mrs. Fawcett, 103 Hazelton Ave., Toronto, Ont.
1884 Hawaii—Mrs. Mary S. Whitney, Honolulu.
1885 New Zealand—Mrs. Catharine Fulton, Dunedin.
" Queensland, Mrs. Elizabeth Brentnall, P. O Box 61, G. P. O., Brisbane.
" Tasmania—Mrs. Grace Saltan, Mildmay Cottage, Launceston.
" Victoria—Mrs. Mary M. Love, Armadale, Melbourne.
" South Australia—Mrs. E. W. Nicholls, Prospect, Adelaide.
1886 Ceylon—Mrs. T. S. Smith, Tillipally, Jaffna.
" Sweden—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm.
" Turkey—Mrs. Zoe M. S. Locke, Philippopolis, Bulgaria.
" New South Wales—Mrs. E. Bowes, Stanmore, Sydney.
" Japan—Mrs. Saku Asai, Tokio.
" China—Mrs. M. J. Farnham, 18 Peking Road, Shanghai.
1887 Siam—Miss Cole, Bangkok.
" Straits Settlement—Mrs. Marie Oldham, Anglo-Chinese School, Singapore.
" Burmah—Miss Ruth W. Ranney, Rangoon.
" India—Mrs. M. D. Macdonald, F. C. M., Calcutta. Nat. Lecturer, Pundita Ramabai, Chowpati, Bombay.
" Cape Colony—Miss Virginia C. Pride, Huguenot Seminary, Wellington.
Dec. 1887 or Jan. 1888. Mexico—Mrs. Margaret Taber, Zacatecas.
1888 Chili—Mrs. Ida A. T. Arms, Colejio Americano, Concepcion.
" Denmark—Mrs. Elisabet Selmer, St. Kongensgade 77 III, Copenhagen.
" Mauritius—Mrs. Bishop Royston, Bishop Thorpe, Rose Hill.
" Madagascar—
1889 Jamaica—Miss Mary Dillon, Manchioneal.
" Norway—Fru Ignase Carlsen, Nordal Bruns Gade 10, Christiania.
" Natal—Mrs. Laura Bridgman, Umzumbi.
" Orange Free State—Mrs. Janet Gray, Harrismith.
" Sierra Leone—Mrs. Bishop Ingham, Bishop Court, Free Town.
" Asia Minor—Mrs. J. E. Pierce, Bardezag.
18— Corea—Mrs. B. S. Ohlinger, Seoul.
" Bermuda—.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, care of Miss Amy Leavitt, 1226 Massachusetts Ave., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Secretaries—American—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio. British—Mrs. Mary Whitall Costelloe, 40 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W. England.

Treasurers—American—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill. British—Mrs. James Gregson, Heart's Hill, Debden Green, Loughton, England.

World's Organizers—Europe, Miss Charlotte A. Gray, Stensberggade 25 Christiania, Norway. Northern Europe—Madame Andersson-Meijerhelm, 17 Sodra Humlegardsgatan, Stockholm, Sweden. American Committee—The five General Officers of N. W. C. T. U.

Supt. Department of Bible Readings—Mrs. Hannah Whitall Smith, 44 Grosvenor Road, Westminster, London, S. W., England.

Supt. Department of Scientific Temperance Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Massachusetts.

Supt. Department of Prisons, Police Stations and Almshouses—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.

American Supt. Legal Dept.—Mrs. Bishop John P. Newman, Omaha, Neb.

Supt. Fairs and Expositions—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 519 N. Pennsylvania St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Supt. Dept. Peace and International Arbitration—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Centre, Me.

NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

PLEDGE.

"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt Liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union the sum of ——; and the receipt of the treasurer thereof shall be a sufficient discharge of my executors for the same.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

HEADQUARTERS—161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

President—Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
Miss Anna A. Gordon, Private Secretary; Miss Alice E. Briggs, Office Secretary.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Caroline B. Buell, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.
Miss Bertha G. Brown, Office Secretary.
Recording Secretary—Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Recording Secretary—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—Miss Esther Pugh, 161 LaSalle, St., Chicago, Ill.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Alabama—Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, Birmingham.
Alaska—Mrs. Jno. G Brady, Sitka.
Arizona—Mrs. L. C. Hughes, Tucson.
Arkansas—Mrs. Lydia M. Chace, 315½ W. Markham St., Little Rock
California—Mrs. R. R. Johnston, Box 288, Oakland.
California, Southern—Mrs. N. P. J. Button, Riverside.
Carolina, North—Mrs. Mary C. Woody, New Garden.
Carolina, South—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston.
Colorado—Mrs. C. D. H. Thompson, Longmont.
Connecticut—Mrs. S. B. Forbes, 246 Wethersfield Ave., Hartford
Dakota, North—Miss Addie M. Kinnear, Fargo.
Dakota, South—Mrs. H. M. Barker, Huron.
Delaware—Miss Margaret S. Hilles, Wilmington.
District of Columbia—Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, Temple Hotel, Washington.
Florida—Mrs. A. A. W. Cadwallader, Jacksonville.
Georgia—Mrs. Wm. Sibley, Augusta.
Idaho—Mrs. Susan Holbrook. Blackfoot.
Illinois—Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago.
Indiana—Mrs. J. R. Nichols, 519 N. Pennsylvania St., Indianapolis.
Indian Territory—Mrs. Jane Staples, Tahlequah.
Iowa—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, Clinton.
Kansas—Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, Topeka.
Kentucky—Mrs. Nannie A. Munnell, 427 Chestnut St., Louisville.
Louisiana—Mrs. E. T. Merrick, New Orleans.
Maine—Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, Stroudwater.
Maryland—Mrs. Summerfield Baldwin, Baltimore.
Massachusetts—Miss Elizabeth S. Tobey, 36 Bromfield St. Boston.
Michigan—Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap. Jackson.
Minnesota—Mrs. H. A. Hobart, Red Wing.
Mississippi—Mrs. Lavinia S. Mount, Greenville.
Missouri—Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Kansas City.
Montana—Mrs. R. H. Howey, Helena.
Nebraska—Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock, Fremont.
Nevada—Mrs. D. W. Van Deventer, Virginia City.
New Hampshire—Mrs. N. H. Knox, 19 Penacook St., Manchester.
New Jersey—Mrs. S. J. C. Downs, Ocean Grove.
New Mexico—Mrs. M. C. Raynolds, Las Vegas.
New York—Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 103 East 123d St., New York.
Ohio—Mrs. Henrietta L. Monroe, Xenia.
Oklahoma—Mrs. W. L. Rhodes, Guthrie.
Oregon—Mrs. A. R. Riggs, Portland.
Pennsylvania—Mrs. Mary H. Jones, 2051 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.
Rhode Island—Mrs. E. S. Burlingame, Pawtuxet.
Tennessee—Mrs. Lide Meriwether, 14 Talbot St., Memphis.
Texas—Mrs. S C. Acheson, 1419 W. Woodard St., Denison.
Utah—
Vermont—Mrs. Esther T. Moush, Brattleboro.
Virginia—Mrs. R. H. Jones, 130 Granby St., Norfolk.
West Virginia—Mrs. Jane A. Johnson, Parkersburg.
Washington, Eastern—Mrs. Lucy A. Switzer, Cheney.
Washington, Western—Mrs. M. A. Shaffer, Old Tacoma.
Wisconsin—Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse, Durand.
Wyoming Territory—Mrs. Charlotte Fisher, Evanston.

SUPERINTENDENTS OF DEPARTMENTS.

I. ORGANIZATION.

Miss Frances E. Willard. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell.

Organizers—Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.; Miss Henrietta G. Moore, Springfield, O.; Mrs. Lucy H. Washington, Port Jervis, N. Y.; Mrs. Mary Read Goodale, Baton Rouge, La.; Mrs. M. L. Wells, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Frances E. Griffin, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

American Organizers for World's W. C. T. U.—Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, 830 12th St., N. W. Washington, D. C., Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, Sacramento, Cal.; Miss Charlotte Gray, Christiania, Norway; Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, Charleston, S. C.

Work among Foreigners—Mrs. Sophia F. Grubb, Lawrence, Kan.; Secretary, Mrs. S. A. Brown, Lawrence, Kan.; Scandinavians, Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, Ogema, Wis.; Hollanders, Mrs. Mariette S. Van Olinda, Holland, Mich.; Chinese, Mrs. M. S. Carey, 506 S. 2d St., San Jose, Cal.; Sclavic Mrs. L. G. Sobieski, Neosho, Mo.; Spanish, Mrs. E. J. Harwood, Socorro, New Mexico; German, Mrs. Julia Fischer, Wheaton Ill.; Department Evangelist, Mrs. C. H. St. John, Beloit, Ka

Work among the Colored People—Mrs. Frances E. Harper, 1009 Bainbridge St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Associate, Mrs. S. J. H. Early, 260 S. Cherry St., Nashville, Tenn.

Young Women's Work—Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, 146 W. 103rd St., New York City. Department Secretary—Mrs. F. S. Evans, 155 West 48th St., New York City; Organizers, Miss Ida Clothier, 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.; Miss Jessica Morgan, Oberlin, Ohio; Miss Mary McDowell, Evanston, Ill.

Juvenile Work—Mrs. Helen G. Rice. 1597 Washington St., Boston; Associate, Miss Anna A. Gordon, Evanston, Ill.; Organizer and Chalk-Talker, Mrs. Ellen A. Blair, Creighton, Neb.; Kindergarten Mrs. E. L. Hailmann, La Porte, Ind.

II. PREVENTIVE

Health and Heredity—Dr. Orpha A. Baldwin, 216 J St., Portland, Oregon. Associates—Health—Dr. Mary Allen, Ithaca, N. Y.; Heredity—Mrs. R. A. Armstrong, Woodland, Cal.

III. EDUCATIONAL.

Scientific Instruction—Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, Hyde Park, Mass.; Literary Assistant, Miss Emma L. Benedict; Associate, Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, 165 State St., Portland Me.

Sunday School Work—Miss Lucia E. F. Kimball, 644 W. Monroe St., Chicago, Ill., or Woodfords, Me.; Secretary, Miss Julia A. Bidwell, Hartford, N. Y.

Temperance Literature—Miss Julia Colman, 47 Bible House, New York City; Advisory Committee, Mrs. Helen E. Brown, Mrs. E. W. Ruliffson, Mrs. E. M. Wymond, Mrs. Dr. A. Buchanan, Mrs. W. Vigelius, Mrs. J. C. Craw, Mrs. M. E. Morgan, Mrs. Dr. H. McLean, Treasurer, 205 Mason St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Woman's Temperance Publication Association—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, Editor Department Books and Leaflets, 161 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. T. B. Carse, Publisher; Advisory Committee, the National President and Corresponding Secretary.

Editors of The Union Signal—Miss Mary Allen West, Miss Julia A. Ames, Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of the Oak and Ivy Leaf—Miss Margaret A. Sudduth, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Editor of The Young Crusader—Miss Alice M. Guernsey, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Presenting our Cause to Influential Bodies—General Officers.

The Press—Miss Mary Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, Baltimore, Md.

Relation of Temperance to Labor—Mrs. Anna Sneed Cairns, Kirkwood, Mo.

W. C. T. U. School of Methods—Miss Mary Allen West, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Parliamentary Usage—Mrs. Anna S. Benjamin, Portland, Mich.; For Practical Training to Public Speakers, Mrs. Anna B. Curry, Boston School of Expression.

Department of Narcotics—Mrs. E. B. Ingalls, 4119 Westminster Pl. St. Louis, Mo.; Lecturer, Mrs. James Havens, 673 Broadway, Denver, Col.; Mrs. Helen L. Bullock, Elmira, N. Y.

IV. EVANGELISTIC.

Evangelistic—Miss Elizabeth W. Greenwood, 151 Remsen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; National Evangelists—Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, Evanston, Ill.; Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, Boone, Iowa; Mrs. Mary Sparkes Wheeler, Phœnixville, Pa.; Work among Miners, Mrs. D. W. English, Rushville, Ill.; Bible Study, Rev. A. A. Wright, Cambridge, Mass.

Unfermented Sacramental Wine—Mrs. R. A. Esmond, Syracuse, N. Y

Flower Mission—Miss Jennie Casseday, 216 E. Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.; Department Secretary, Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 2633 Bank St., Louisville, Ky.

Work in Prisons, Jails, Police Stations, Almshouses and Asylums—Mrs. J. K. Barney, Providence, R. I.; Department Secretary, Mrs. H. D. Walker, Providence, R. I.

Work among Railroad Employes—Miss Jennie Smith, Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Work among Soldiers and Sailors—Mrs. S. A. McClees, 24 Hawthorne Ave., East Orange, N. J.; Secretary, Miss Anna L. Davidson; Associate, Veterans' Branch, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, Tacoma, Wash.; Petition Work, Mrs. Lavinia H. Chace, 1310 I St. N. W. Washington, D. C. Evangelist, Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer, 40 Prospect St., Orange, N. J.

Work among Lumbermen—Mrs. Mary C. Upham, Marshfield, Wis. Associate, Mrs. Emma Obenauer, East Saginaw, Mich.

Sabbath Observance—Mrs. J. C. Bateham, Painesville, O.

Promotion of Social Purity—Miss Frances E. Willard; Associates, Mothers' Meetings, Mrs. Dr. J. H. Kellogg, Battle Creek, Mich.; Dr. Julia Plummer, Boston, Mass.; Department Evangelist, Dr. Kate C. Bushnell, Evanston, Ill.; Legal Adviser, Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.; Industrial Homes, Mrs. Lydia R. Clark, Northfield, Minn. Work among Mormon Women, Mrs. Angie F. Newman, Lincoln, Neb.; Lecturer, Mrs. Frances McCready Harris, 218 DeGraw St., Brooklyn, N. Y.; Purity in Literature, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, Effingham, Ill.; Travelers' Aid, Miss Maud Remington, Baraboo, Wis.

V. SOCIAL.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, 23 Rowland St., Newark, N. J.; Associate, Madame Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York City.

State and County Fairs—Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols, 673 N. Meridian St., Indianapolis, Ind.; Associate, Mrs. Marion McBride, 179 Fremont St., Boston, Mass.; Secretary, Miss Mary I. Stille, Westchester, Pa.

VI. LEGAL.

Legislation and Petitions—Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C.

Franchise—Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, Malden, Mass.; Lecturer, Mrs. Zerelda G. Wallace, Cataract, Ind.

Peace and International Arbitration.—Mrs. Hannah J. Bailey, Winthrop Center, Maine; Lecturer, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Railroad Rates—Miss Helen L. Hood, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

On Appropriations—Chairman, Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Burt, 202 W. 133rd St., New York City. Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Fannie H. Rastall, Topeka, Kan.

Advisory Committee—Mrs. Clara C. Hoffman, Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap, Jackson, Mich.

National Temperance Hospital and Training School for Nurses—Chairman of Committee, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, 343 La Salle Ave., Chicago, Ill. Treasurer, Mrs. L. H. Plumb, Streator, Ill.

THIS DAY OF THINE.

Breathe Thy pure breath, watching Father,
On this marred day of Thine,
This wandering day of mine.
Be patient with this blur and blot,
Wash it white of stain and spot;
Reproachful eyes! remember not
That I have grieved Thee
On this day of Thine!

—Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.

News from the Field.

WESTERN WASHINGTON.

W. C. T. U. SCHOOL OF METHODS AT VASHON ISLAND.

The school of methods is another consistent evolution of the National W. C. T. U., and will keep pace with Chautauqua and other summer schools till the kingdom of National prohibition shall be ushered in. So thoroughly helpful and popular, it has come to stay. Words may not picture the grand school-house of Vashon Island, with its deep green shadows of fragrant cedars and plumy pines, wildwood tangle of flowers and ferns, and the song of the waves on the pebbly beach. The soft, cool air and restful surroundings made an ideal place for an all-the-year-round out-door school. The Chautauqua Assembly and Ministerial Congress preceded the W. C. T. U. school of methods, leaving a few of their members to help. Mrs. M. L. T. Hidden, state recording secretary, conducted the school with characteristic grace and fervor, and advanced studies and better learned practical lessons is the curriculum for the next year's work.

Nearly all the departments were represented by excellent addresses or papers, followed by interesting discussion. The paper on narcotics called out as earnest, practical, and exciting discussion as any other theme, which shows that the tobacco question, with its next largest waste of health and treasure (600,000,000 per annum), is growing in the minds of the people. The excellent sermon on "Sabbath Observance," by Rev. Mr. Joslyn, of Vancouver; the fine papers on "Health and Heredity," "Parliamentary Ways," "Sunday-School Temperance," and others, besides addresses on "Juvenile Temperance," "Franchise," "Social Purity," "Scientific Temperance," "Mothers' Meetings," "Temperance Temple," "Evangelistic Work," "Soldiers and Sailors," "Lumbermen," "Jail and Almshouse," "UNION SIGNAL," "W. T. P. A. Literature and How to Use it," with earnest and rousing discussions following, show how well Western Washington white-ribbon women have learned W. C. T. U. lessons before coming to Puget Sound Chautauqua to recite.

The Seattle Y. W. C. T. U. gave a delightful evening entertainment of music, piano, violin and vocal, with extra good recitations, coming with an excursion and treating their live honorary members and friends to a supper on the steamer "Glide." An evening of sacred song conducted by Professor Cozine, of Whitman College, Walla Walla, was another pleasing digression in the W. C. T. U. week's lessons. "Woman in Politics" and the "Church and Temperance," by Rev. Dr. Thomson, of Vancouver, showed that Western Washington men keep time and step with the progressive women, and if older states are not diligent the Pacific Northwest White Ribbon will yet lead the way into the kingdom of equal suffrage and National prohibition.

The daily devotional meetings were a good barometer of the spiritual temperature of the Western Washington W. C. T. U. The Bible studies conducted by Mrs. M. F. Beavers, formerly of the Kansas state W. C. T. U., were full of spiritual help and power, and her sermon on Sabbath, Aug. 17, fitly closed the week of song, and prayer, and study. Its instruction and inspiration should reach every local union of this northern Pacific boundary. Western Washington has all her counties wearing the white ribbon. Her beautiful twin cities on Puget Sound, Tacoma and Seattle, are at the front in W. C. T. U. work, as in almost everything else. Seattle sustains a day nursery, and has a Christmas letter and flower mission in addition to the regular W. C. T. U. departments of work. Has five local unions including a very live Y. Tacoma has elegant headquarters and helps in city government. It is a clean and beautiful city, and its future is full of possibility and promise. Prohibition clubs abound in every ward of these "cities of the Sound," and outspoken temperance papers voice the sentiment of a fearless, free people. The white ribbon is seen on the streets and at church; on the wharves, ocean and Sound steamers and palace cars. The political Prohibitionist is another product, common as he is confident and courteous. There is freshness and vigor that is like the free mountain and salt sea air all about this grand new star state that has just risen on the sunset boundary of our National horizon. May it rise higher in goodness and greatness than its own great Olympics, and its equal rights and political temperance shadow never be less than its own grand old glacier-crowned Mt. Rainier!

MRS. L. H. MILLER.

MICHIGAN.

ETCHINGS.

Midsummer days—the lull in life, the pause between the birth of Nature and her decay; a time of vacation for all, and hence my letter will be only a chirp of the cricket, and yet that is a harbinger of the fullness of the harvest days of autumn.

The president of the first district, Mrs. Voorheis, sends me the following: "Mrs. E. Norine Law has been canvassing our district to see whether the people are few or many, weak or strong, in our faith. She delivered twenty-seven addresses, held twelve afternoon meetings, attended one of the regular Sabbath services at the county almshouse, and on flower mission day, on both occasions making appropriate and touching remarks. Good reports concerning her work come to me; two new Y's organized. Our district convention is to be held September 30 to October 3. Mrs. Josephine R. Nichols will give an address. There will also be a gold medal contest."

Detroit Central Union has passed a resolution to keep fresh flowers weekly on General Fisk's grave.

From second district a letter from Dundee, a live new union, writes: "We held a union temperance meeting here Sabbath evening, July 20, a number of new members gained, also several honorary. Like many other places, we are rowing hard against a strong tide, but we hope, wrestle and expect to gain at last."

Mrs. Benjamin, of the fifth district, writes from Lake

Shore Camp, Aug. 12: "I give here a one hour drill each day; two lectures in regular assembly course. Allegan county convention will be held 21 and 22; shall be there."

My own district, the sixth, in Flint, has been doing a grand work. We own, as unions, a tent for gospel services that will hold three hundred; another that we can take up and walk with, pitch where we can, and on "big days" earn money to carry on our work. Sisters, this project was the thought of one woman, made possible by the untiring efforts of four others. We alternate in having charge of Sunday meetings. Have speeches, songs and recitations. The Y. M. C. A. have been most helpful.

Fenton union is wide awake as ever. They, in connection with the Ladies' Library Association held a business men's carnival, a great success every way. The W. C. T. U. offered a prize of $5.00 to the student of Normal school for the best essay on temperance; six young ladies and gentlemen competed. Mr. G. H. Lennon won the prize, his subject being, "The Relation of the Youth to Temperance." The others were presented by the union with bouquet and card of thanks. They have monthly union meetings. The next is to be conducted entirely by members answering this question: "What are the W. C. T. U.'s Doing?" At their weekly meetings they have roll-call upon the Chautauqua plan; have contributed $5.00 to Nebraska. This secretary in closing, says: "The people are so slow to learn the truth, but I suppose we must be patient and hammer away."

Now from the eleventh district, and from my old comrade in the sixth, Mrs. M. J. Johnson. The fifth annual convention of Charlevoix county was recently held. There are six unions in this county, one a young people's society. This is the only organized county in this district, and we rejoice in the fact that from the date of our organization till the present our course has been one of steady advancement. Mrs. R. A. Bailey, National lecturer, was with us all through convention, and touched the right key when she said to us, "I do not wonder you are doing so well in your county and have such splendid meetings, for you have such a good 'Stone foundation!'" (Mrs. Stone is our president.)

Mrs. Bailey gave the best of aid in her suggestions, and her helpful address in the evening. We also had a silver medal contest; prize won by Miss Gertie Woodward; her selection being, "Failures of the Past."

Our county superintendent of press work held medal contests and raised $8.00 for her department work. We send literature to lumber camps. We find the work appreciated and beneficial results following.

Our state superintendent of physical culture, Mrs. Newcomb, writes me from Wequetonsing. She speaks facetiously of her outing, which reads like all work and no play: "At Mountain Lake Park, Maryland, three days; 'so delightful a spot must be an inspiration for workers the entire year.' Of Bay View 'a greater success than last year; sixty-three Delsarte pupils, fifty-one Indian club, and forty-six vocal, besides five lectures, was my work.'"

Every mail brings me letters of work done or inquiry in regard to Demorest medal contests. Perhaps better, surer, Goethe's motto, "Festina lente."

MRS. C. H. JOHNSON,
Special Correspondent.

ALLEGAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Allegan county W. C. T. U. met in Otsego, August 21 and 22, for their ninth annual convention with fifty-three voting delegates present and officers all in their places. Twelve unions were represented. During the convention several very interesting papers were presented. Our beloved district president, Mrs. Benjamin, of Portland, was present and gave two of her instructive parliamentary drills. The convention voted to send $10 of the county funds to the Temperance Temple. The old officers were reëlected on the first ballot. They are: President, Mrs. C. P. Hale, of Otsego; corresponding secretary, Maggie L. Smith, of Otsego; recording secretary, Agnes Ingerson, of Hopkins; treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Hoyt, of Wayland.

A gold medal contest was held the first evening. The medal was won by Miss Esther Orcutt, of Otsego, though all the contestants did fairly. Little Nellie Mitts, of Fennville, repeated her recitation, "The Martyred Mother," the second evening, and was presented a gold-lined silver cup. Mrs. P. B. Whitfield, of Grand Rapids, district treasurer, presented both the medal and the cup, making a telling little speech for our cause each time. The second evening Mrs. Benjamin gave one of her best addresses. We hope much will be done during the coming year.

AGNES INGERSON, Rec. Sec.

WORK AT DETROIT.

Willard union, of Detroit, held a very unique Fisk memorial service in Central M. E. Church, July 26. Rev. Dr. Ramsay, pastor of the church, presided. Mrs. J. Crebbin arranged the service, including a fine program of speakers. A large and appreciative audience filled the spacious church, who listened with deep interest to admirable addresses by Dr. L. P. Davis, on the Christian life of our promoted leader; "Gen. Fisk as a Soldier," by Dr. C. T. Allen; "Gen. Fisk as a Temperance and Prohibition Leader," by Samuel Plantz, Ph. D., and "His Philanthropy," by Dr. Wm Dawe.

Dr. Ramsay, in introducing the various speakers, spoke words of eulogy bearing upon the theme of each.

Beautiful flowers and palms adorned the platform and pulpit, and appropriate music was rendered by the church choir, and a solo by Rev. Mr. Hanawalt.

MRS. ANNIE ANDRUS, Sec.

OHIO.

FIRST DISTRICT.

Our annual convention was held August 19 and 20, in Huntsburg, in the Congregational Church. The convention met on the evening of the 19th, and was called to order by the president, Mrs. H. E. Hammond. A Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Kurtz, of Painesville, followed by prayer by Rev. Mr. Lanphear, of Unionville. The president then gave the evening address, which was full of helpful words, vivid illustrations, and interesting experience. As a state organizer she reported seven new unions organized, with over two hundred members. The morning of the 20th was bright and cheerful after the rain of the day before. A goodly number were in their places for morning devotions at half-past nine, after which a graceful welcome was given by the M. E. pastor, the Rev. Mr. Surdefield. This was responded to by Mrs. L. E. Lanphear, president of Lake county unions. A half hour was then given to parliamentary drill, conducted by the Rev. N. D. Lanphear.

A carefully prepared paper was read on Loyal Temperance Legion work, by Mrs. McClure, of Ashtabula, followed by various experiences and reports of the work from others. In the afternoon the president introduced the Rev. Mr. McKinney, a new convert, who gave, among other things, an experience he met with in one of our conventions before his conversion, when a little lady from New York, in reply to a self-confident speech he had made, gave him light by way of an illustration, which had never left him. A paper on "The Claims of the W. C. T. U. upon Young Women," was read by Mrs. Babcox, of Geneva. A discussion, "Narcotics," was opened by Mrs. Hale, president of Geauga county unions.

A curious coincident was that all of our officers either had or were just about removing from the district, occasioning an entire change. Our president, who has served us faithfully for seven years, has removed to Cleveland, and entered upon county work there. Our secretary, Mrs. Fenton, has taken up the study of medicine, and our treasurer, Mrs. Hills, goes to California in a few days. A rising vote of thanks was given the retiring officers. The nominating committee reported the following, who were elected: President, Mrs. McClure, Ashtabula; secretary, Mrs. Babcox, Geneva; treasurer, Mrs. Kurtz, of Painesville. The following resolution was unanimously passed:

"Resolved, That it is with regret that we part with our president, Mrs. H. E. Hammond, who has so faithfully served us for the last seven years."

The last evening was occupied by the young ladies and one young gentleman, who competed for the Demorest medal. A young lady from Claridon was awarded the prize.

MRS. L. E. LANPHEAR.

NEBRASKA.

CAMPAIGN WORK.

The work among the Scandinavians in Nebraska is doing well. A tent with a capacity of two to three thousand has been engaged and a campaign program, covering all the larger Swedish settlements in the state, has been arranged. Prominent speakers from all over the land have been called to the work. A vigorous campaign paper, the Temperance Bugle, is circulated already in 5,000 copies.

The first grand mass-meeting was held at Holdrege, August 5–7. An average daily attendance of about one thousand listened eagerly to the fervent appeals of the speakers. The evenings were occupied by Hon. Rankin of Indiana, when those understanding only the official language of the land were in attendance.

Liberal collections were taken for the prosecution of the work. By far the greatest number of the Swedes will vote for the Prohibitory Amendment.

S. M. H.

WEST VIRGINIA.

GOOD WORK.

Since the annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of West Virginia, which was held June 4–6, at Wheeling, the work has been progressing, and we feel very much encouraged by the reports which are coming in from the different unions. The change from Congressional into Senatorial districts is being rapidly accomplished.

Our president, Mrs. Jennie P. Sisson, made the first of her organizing trips August 4. A good, active union was organized at Beverly, with Mrs. Butcher, the wife of the state superintendent of schools, as president. The unions at Keyser and Elk Garden were benefited by her presence there. September will be the next date for another organizing tour.

Mrs. Jackson, of Moundsville, will organize in the eleventh district the last of September. New members have been added to the ranks since the Prohibition Assembly meetings, and we hope before the year closes to double the membership of the state W. C. T. U.

MRS. MARY CARTWRIGHT, Cor. Sec.

ILLINOIS.

FIFTEENTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

After a sojourn of two years in sunny southern Kansas I am again located in this land of corn and wine, literally speaking, beer. Arrived here, at Newman, just in time to enjoy the annual convention of the fifteenth district. Those who know good Mother Jenkin, former president of this district, remember that it was a fancy of hers to call the fifteenth the "baby district," and represent it in its different stages of growth, as creeping, and taking its first steps, etc. Well, I want you all to know that this child has gotten even beyond ankle dresses, and rejoices in the flowing robes of mature womanhood. You will find her at Rockford in October with one thousand members. The convention met in the Newman Opera Hall, Aug. 20, continuing through 21 and 22. On the evening of the 20th there was held a gold medal contest, there being eight contestants. All acquitted themselves well. The medal was awarded to Miss Anna Bowls. The hall was most elaborately decorated with flags and bunting, mottoes, and pictures. The platform was transformed into a drawing room, and all attested the interest and zeal of the Newman union. Special mention should be made of Miss Clara Parrish, the district organizer, who rendered such valuable assistance in this work.

The regular work of the convention began on Thursday morning, with devotional exercises, conducted by Mrs. Lou Harlan, followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. Sue Springer, president of the Newman Y's. The address was one of much merit. Response by Miss Allie Rogers, which exactly fitted the welcome.

The committee on enrollment reported 166 delegates and visitors. There are fifty unions in the district and 967 members.

Thursday evening was given to the Y's, who, under the leadership of Miss Parrish, rendered an excellent program, including an address by Miss Mary Mahon, which was greatly appreciated by the large and attentive audience.

The election of officers was held on Friday, Mrs. Rounds, state president, in the chair; Mrs. Replogle, who had been president for the past two years, declining to serve longer, Mrs. Kate Goldman was made president; Mrs. H. L. Gillogly, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Bradbury, recording secretary; Mrs. Rose Peters, financial secretary; Mrs. Kyger, treasurer; Miss Clara Parrish, district organizer.

Several most interesting and instructive papers were read among which were, "The Present Duty of the W. C. T. U." by Mrs. Julia Galleon; "Children's Rights," by Mrs. Maggie Wyley; "Influence of Women in Local Politics," Mrs. Clara Earhart.

At the memorial hour, six of our number were reported as having been called up higher, and Mrs. Rounds' impressive words at that time made us realize that the important thing was to live up to our privileges and duties, so as to be ready for the call when it shall come to us. Friday night the house was, as it had been before, packed, aisles and all. Mrs. Rounds gave one of her very best addresses. She speaks the truth in a way to command the respect of friend and foe, and to strengthen the ties that bind her to the hearts of her constituency, of whom I am proud to be one.

H. L. GILLOGLY, Cor. Sec.

JOTTINGS.

EVANGELISTIC WORK AMONG FOREIGNERS.

Our experience for years has been that these strangers from other shores may be reached with the gospel as easily as our own people, and it may encourage superintendents of this branch to give two facts from experience in our cities. Seattle, Wash., has a city mission, a few white-ribboners, and the same number of Christian workers outside are holding service nightly for the salvation of souls in a building called the Tabernacle. In the six nights I preached for them, I saw English, Canadian, Irish, Swedes, Hungarians, Germans and Italians, kneeling at the altar for prayer; I heard their voice in praise and song; even strong, sturdy Americans yielded to the power of their simple testimony and asked for prayers for themselves.

Minneapolis, Minn., gave just such evidence in the work there. One evening we were privileged to hear the voice of an Armenian, Irishman, Swede and German, all testifying of God's love. There are some things that we may take lessons of in their mode of teaching temperance. Every Sabbath afternoon the Scandinavians in these large cities hold total abstinence services. We have addressed them where there were from six hundred to a thousand in attendance, among these many newcomers who could not speak at all in English were taking the pledge. I am fully satisfied that this work means thousands of votes for prohibition, for in a tabernacle that seated three thousand we put it to a vote—how many would vote for prohibition, and almost the entire audience arose.

I wish whenever I am called to cities and towns for evangelistic work where there is a foreign element, that unions will see to this important work, and arrange just as far as possible for special meetings in halls and churches. Again, I feel that we should divide our tenth in giving so that there might be more helps in way of literature disseminated among them. It is an easy matter to distribute 100,000 leaflets to such people, but another matter is, where is the money to provide them? I find the people themselves will help on the good work, but if you could see the intense anxiety of the National superintendent as she waits each coming dollar, and sees how few they are compared to the vast field, you would increase their number. We hope some one who wishes to do work for the Master, whose heart is burning with love for humanity will just send to our National superintendent, Mrs. Sophia Grubb, Lawrence, Kas., in little messages, one, two, five and ten dollars, for never in the history of our work has the field been broader, the harvest larger, the need greater.

EUGENIA F. ST. JOHN.

KANSAS

ANDERSON COUNTY CONVENTION.

A brave band of Kansas white-ribboners met in the United Presbyterian Church of Garnett in annual convention August 31, at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Anna Champe, county president, led in the consecration service. Papers were read upon topics, "Pray Have Me Excused," and "Who is the Drunkard Maker?" A Nebraska meeting was held in the evening, collection to be sent to Mrs. S. F. Grubb for her Nebraska work. The ministers of the city were invited to address the convention upon the present situation in our sister state. They very cheerfully responded. The old corps of officers were reëlected.

Anderson county is losing one of her grandest citizens, Rev. C. H. Strong, who has resigned his pastorate here to go to Lawrence, this state. He has been the friend and adviser of the Garnett W. C. T. U. ever since its organization, and they feel that their loss is great. He has been pastor of the United Presbyterian Church here fourteen years, and has been identified with every reform movement in the place. He is a brave champion of the right, and were there more such men a new era of purity would soon dawn upon this sin-cursed world.

We are rejoicing at the removal of the hateful package house. Our package man is with us yet, but not willingly. He is rather more anxious to leave than he was some time ago. We thank God and take courage to go on with the work for the new year.

ADA W. UNRUH, Co. Sec.

INDIANA.

GOOD COUNTY WORK.

St. Joseph county has seven unions and two Y's. We have a lovely consecrated woman for county president. We hold two conventions each year, which are well attended, and are an inspiration to each union. At our annual convention last spring we had Mrs. Nichols, state president, with us; she gave a grand talk on the second evening; the first evening held a gold medal contest, in which contestants from Walkerton, South Bend and Mishawaka participated, Mishawaka taking the medal. The last-named has held twelve silver and two gold medal contests. Church societies and other organizations, with the W. C. T. U., have held these contests. We have two classes, senior and junior. W. J. Demorest has given a grand opportunity to the world, created a lofty monument; nothing has furthered public sentiment for temperance so much as this medal work. We have men who could not be induced to hear a temperance lecture, but who have, time after time, listened to these grand sermons spoken by the youth.

Our union has a number of energetic, wide-awake women who are willing to do what their hands find to do. All the departments that have been taken up are well looked after. Quite a large part of our time is given to flower mission work, such as visiting the sick, carrying flowers, fruit and jellies, food and clothing to the destitute. Last winter aid was given thirty families. To do this work we ask donations from the people. At Thanksgiving time we asked a thank-offering from the schools; that each child bring something, if only one potato. The result was, six one-horse wagon loads, consisting of all kinds of vegetables, bread, cakes, fruit, and a large amount of all kinds of clothing were received, giving us more than enough for our work at this time. We sent out a number of large baskets to families on Thanksgiving day, carrying comfort and cheer. We are expecting to do the same this year. All were very enthusiastic in the work, teachers and pupils.

H. M. SIMKINS.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

A DEMOREST contest was held at Eagle Rock, Idaho, Aug. 22. The house was crowded, and recitations were all well rendered. The silver medal was awarded to Minnie Gibson. Proceeds of the evening amounted to twenty dollars for the W. C. T. U.

THE Mt. Carroll Mirror says of Dr. Bessie V. Cushman's lecture at that place on "Food or Poison?" "Her reasoning was so clear and plain that good results must follow. The ladies of the Y. W. C. T. U. deserve the thanks of our citizens for the profitable and intellectual treat given them by Dr. Cushman's lecture."

AT the Annual Meeting of the W. C. T. U. of Warren, Pa., an appeal was made in behalf of the amendment campaign in Nebraska. Twelve dollars were contributed; five dollars of this sum being donated by Mrs. Betsy Alden, a staunch temperance woman eighty-eight years old. Ever devoted to the temperance cause and hopeful of its success, she is always ready to help, in every battle against the saloon.

A CORRESPONDENT from Naugatuck, Conn., writes in enthusiastic terms concerning the recent work of Mr. J. G. Woolley who spoke with great power on "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him." A gentleman of prominence was heard to say afterward, "No one will ever get another drink from my bottle." Many were awakened to duty by this earnest appeal.

A FRIENDLY paper thus notices a fact of interest regarding the Wyoming fair: "For many years this fair has been a reproach to the good name of our county, on account of the disgraceful and unlawful proceedings there. Various methods have been tried from time to time to prevent these things or to counteract their evil influences, but without any appreciable results. This year the W. C. T. U. have taken a bolder step and have purchased the exclusive right to sell all the refreshments on the grounds. They propose to serve a good, substantial dinner of hot roast meats and vegetables, home-made bread, pies, cakes, puddings, etc. They will refresh the thirsty with coffee, tea, lemonade, milk, buttermilk, milk shake, soda water, and have plenty of ice water, free to all. They will also serve ice cream, fruits and melons, and those who cannot find refreshments to suit them, will indeed be hard to please. All these delectables will be served by bright, attractive Y girls."

TRUMBULL County, Ohio, held its sixth gold medal contest Aug. 30th. This county has now fifty-three silver medals. The work is growing in interest. Erelong a contest will be held for a grand gold medal. Audiences are always large and interested.

MRS. RASTALL writes as follows: "Will you say in THE UNION SIGNAL that Mrs. S. A. Thurston, state corresponding secretary of Kansas, is seriously ill, and if any delay in correspondence is noted it is due to this cause."

THE evening of Aug. 28, the W. C. T. U. of New London, Ohio, held their fourth Demorest silver medal contest. Six girls took part. Juanita Lee took the medal. She recited "The Rumseller's Legal Right" with dramatic effect. The second prize given by our union was a "White Ribbon Birthday Book." Mamie Munholland recited "Moral Suasion or Prohibition," and the book was awarded to her. Bouquets of nasturtums were presented to each of the other speakers.

THE announcement of the Kansas annual convention, by some strange inadvertence, was placed under the heading of Missouri, in the last number of THE UNION SIGNAL; please note.

THE following has come to Headquarters from a lady resident in Monrovia, Africa: "Greeting from Mary Sharp. Who is she? Just one little body adrift on the great sea of earth. Several times I had it in mind to write you of a pretty incident that came to me. Three or four years ago I was trying to get a Liberian woman interested in a little temperance paper, entitled The Crusade, (or is it The Crusader?) and I told her of Miss Willard's story of the three children, and said that the younger sister died long ago, and the elder wrote a book about her, entitled 'Nineteen Beautiful Years.' 'Oh, I have it,' said she, and brought out the book to me, which I then took home and read for the first time. This woman was born in Africa, and I confess it surprised me to find that book in her possession. I thought it would be a pleasure for the folks at white ribbon headquarters to know this incident."

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The tenth annual convention of Kentucky W. C. T. U. will be held in Richmond, Oct. 1, 2, 3. Mrs. Caroline B. Buell is expected to address the convention on the evenings of 1st and 2d. A meeting of the executive committee will be held on the evening of Sept. 30.

MRS. N. A. MUNNELL, Pres.
MRS. M. M. GIVENS, Cor. Sec.

The second judicial district, Nebraska W. C. T. U., will hold its semi-annual convention at Palmyra, the 16th, 17th and 18th of September. Mrs. Clara Hoffman will deliver an address Wednesday evening, the 17th. It is hoped every union in the district will be represented by its full quota of delegates. Report number of delegates immediately to Mrs. Lena McGrew, Palmyra.

MRS. ZARA A. WILSON, Pres.
MRS. J. WARNER, Sec.

The annual convention of the seventh district Illinois W. C. T. U. will be held in Orion, September 24 and 25. Mrs. L. S. Rounds will give an address on "Social Purity," the first evening; the last evening a Demorest medal contest will take place. Each local union is entitled to three delegates. GRACE S. BURGESS, Pres.

The general officers of East Washington, together with the superintendent of fair work, earnestly desire that the unions will generously respond to the call for assisting in the bazar at the Exposition at Spokane Falls to be held in October. All articles for W. C. T. U. department at Exposition should be sent to Mrs. Olive H. Bowen, 841 W. Broadway St., Spokane Falls, Washington.

MRS. LUCY R. BERRY,
Supt. Fair Work, East Washington.

$25,000 FOR AFRICA.

It is desired to secure this amount for Bishop Wm. Taylor's African missions within the next six or eight months. It can be easily accomplished if a sufficient interest is aroused. Contributions can be sent to S. A. Kean, treasurer, 100 Washington street, Chicago.] In sending contributions please state whether they are to apply on above amount.

All the profits of the Methodist Young People will be contributed to this fund from now until January 1, 1891, which profit shall not be less than 25 cents on each cash subscription of 50 cents received for the paper. Should 40,000 subscriptions at 50 cents each be received, it will be seen that $10,000 will be realized from this source. Parties sending single subscriptions or clubs of five or more, will please state whether they intend it for the African Missions. All subscriptions to the paper must be sent to George C. Hall, Manager, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Parties contributing enough to found a new mission, have the privilege of naming it.

With Bishop Taylor's long and successful experience, and with the support of his friends, he will be able, with God's blessing, to accomplish within the next few years, a great work; possibly more than in all his previous life. He ought to have $50,000 within the next twelve months, to strengthen present missions, establish new ones, and later on build a boat for the Upper Congo. He has one already for the Lower Congo, which will be launched sometime in August or September.

The establishment of a mission will cost all the way from $500 to $2,000, according to circumstances, and also man it with a missionary and an assistant. The Bishop's plan is to locate at a strategic point, build a mission house, school-house, establish a farm, and later on build a church. In connection with his work, he establishes industrial schools. These farms and industrial schools not only teach the people how to be useful and care for themselves, but will aid in the support of the work of the church. The missionaries give the net profit of these farms to the work. This plan seems to be the most practical way of evangelizing the dark continent, and is the key to the situation. The Bishop's most successful work is in getting hold of the children. He gives us many interesting incidents of success in this direction.

Referring to the question of boats, the necessity is apparent when it is understood that the only mode of travel in Africa where Bishop Taylor's missions are, is on foot, not even horses are to be had at present, and his missions are reached in some cases by walking hundreds of miles.

Official Communications.

WILL PRESIDENTS OF LOCAL UNIONS PLEASE BEGIN THIS WORK AT ONCE?

A MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

Dear White-Ribboners:

The general officers of the National W. C. T. U. have set apart Saturday, Sept. 27, as a "Membership Crusade Day," and most earnestly urge every member of the W. C. T. U., whether in city or town, to prayerfully observe it.

We have a membership to-day of at least 150,000. If every one of these members in each state and local union could bring in one other on the 27th of September, what a showing could be made at the various state conventions soon to be held, and at the National convention in Atlanta, November 14th.

The design of this crusade is for every white-ribboner, to take ON THAT DAY (27th of September), pledge, pencil and pad, or little book and call on her friends and acquaintances who are not members, telling them of this Crusade Day and its object, and soliciting their name to the pledge and thereby to the local union membership. It would not be amiss to have one of the "National Annual Leaflets" (send to 161 La Salle street, Chicago), or some other literature to leave with those on whom you call.

It may be well for the president of each union to divide the town into districts, or it may be that in some places it will be better to leave each free to go where she pleases, even though two or more should call on the same person.

Think what it will be for a hundred thousand or more women to be out on the same errand! What an inspiration to know that such an army of women is on a crusade! And how easy to invite new membership when each is a part of such a great moving whole.

When three members are secured, let no one neglect to report to the local secretary and turn the dues over to the treasurer that the sum total may be correctly reported to the state secretary and treasurer, for their annual reports.

In starting out do not fail to have the three P's—PLEDGE, PENCIL, PAD, for all are necessary. If you have no pledge cards and cannot secure Membership Roll (send to 161 La Salle street, Chicago), then write a total abstinence pledge on your pad or in your little book.

Do not fail to collect the dues.

Above all do not forget the day nor the fact that ours is a sacred cause, one which should fill our hearts with zeal and one upon which we may confidently ask God's blessing.

Then let us go forth prayerfully and earnestly as unto the Lord.

Yours for our blessed cause,
FRANCES E. WILLARD, Pres.
CAROLINE B. BUELL, Cor. Sec.
ESTHER PUGH, Treas. Nat'l W. C. T. U.

DEPARTMENT SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Again our thanks are due, as an organization, to the Hon. Eugene Hale, and Hon. E. A. Morse, members, respectively, of the two Houses of Congress, for introducing the following BILL:

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sale or supplying of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage (including wine and beer) shall be, and hereby is, prohibited in all military and naval institutions under control of the United States, also in all branches of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

"SEC. 2. That the sale or supplying of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage (including wine and beer) to any soldier in the uniform of the United States, whether officer or enlisted man, within ten miles of any military or naval institution under control of the United States, or any branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers shall be, and hereby is, prohibited.

"SEC. 3. That paymasters shall be, and hereby are, prohibited from paying bills contracted for intoxicating liquors by soldiers or sailors in the employment of the United States, or by inmates of any branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

"SEC. 4. That every person who shall violate any provision of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not less than thirty days nor more than six months, or both."

The suggestion to banish saloons "ten miles" from all military reservations was made to the National superintendent by the late General Sheridan, who had seen the curse of placing temptation so near the fort and camp by civil authority and license. He was also opposed to the canteen system, as is every clear-headed army officer.

Now, let the states take up petition work the coming fall and winter months, appealing to their Legislatures to remove the sale of liquor within a certain distance from institutions named in the bill, nor forgetting the Soldiers' Homes in states where they exist either by state or national authority. In answer to superintendents of this department, who have requested me to furnish them a "form of heading" to such a petition, I would say, the proper thing is to consult with state president and superintendent of legislation and petitions, as there need not be uniformity.

Vigorous and determined effort is what we want all along the line, to protect our defenders, past and present, from their worst enemy.

Hoping every state where no superintendent of this department exists will appoint one in the coming fall convention, I am yours in this holy warfare.

SARAH A. MCCLEES, Nat. Supt.

INDUSTRIAL HOMES.

DEAR SISTERS OF THE W. C. T. U.:—Circumstances render it impossible for me to aid in efforts to secure "Industrial Homes" as indicated in the "Department Manual of Social Purity" published recently. To any who have written me or may be thinking of addressing me I regret to say that I am unable to give any information or suggestions on the subject. It is my earnest prayer that the right woman may soon be found to successfully push this important branch of preventive and rescue work. Earnestly yours, LYDIA R. CLARK.

19 N. Ashland Ave., Chicago, Ill., Aug. 30, 1890.

LUMBERMEN'S WORK.

Will all state superintendents of lumbermen's work please send me their reports as soon as possible, in order to get their record of good deeds in the National report at the Atlanta Convention. MRS. MARY C. UPHAM, Marshfield, Wis. Nat. Supt.

Publisher's Dep't.

For three weeks the above figures have taken two columns on page 13 of THE UNION SIGNAL. Here is what they said to you:

1st. As an old subscriber you can, during September only, send in your own name at half price (75 cents), providing you send in one or more new names at that rate at the same time.

2d. Money must come with the subscriptions.

3d. Coupons will be issued. That is, you can send the money for any number of new names at seventy-five cents and have coupons issued good till Jan. 1st, 1891. The names should be taken at one dollar after October 1st.

4th. No money on this offer received if envelope bears stamp of October.

5th. No commissions can be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of Miss Frances E. Willard, add thirty cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. Subscribers who are in arrears for a year or more cannot renew at the seventy-five cent rate.

No more generous offer could be made. Is there any necessity of a lot of explosives, exclamations and pleadings? And yet the old subscribers are paying but little attention to the matter. It is not pleasant to have to publicly state this, but we deem it better to do so than to let pass the opportunity of arousing your pure minds. Think what it means! If fifteen thousand of our friends would accept the above offer and get only one new name each we would gain that high mark we have written, planned and plead for so persistently. We are persuaded better things of you, dear friends, than that you will let this opportunity have a weakly half-way acceptance. And here comes a ringing word from Miss Willard. Read it! Are those that are against us stronger than those are for us? Surely not. For if this Crusade is undertaken in the spirit of prayer it carries with you the word of Him who says, "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them; for the Lord thy God He it is that doth go with thee; He will not fail thee nor forsake thee."

Here is the letter:

REST COTTAGE, Sept. 3.

DEAR BROTHER HALL:—Strike now for a Crusade UNION SIGNAL canvass. It is your golden opportunity. Put at the top of your own column every week in black letters:

1+1=2

Saturday, Sept. 27th is the Crusade Day for Memberships.

All the locals of the nation are to meet in the morning for prayer, then district and canvass the town and report results at night. Go out two by two as in those sacred days of 1874. Secure your memberships

And get subscribers for The Union Signal,

"In the name of our God we will set up our banners."

Frances E. Willard

Does Miss Willard sit in her new workshop and put in her time telling the army what to do? Is it "go" or "come" with your commander in chief? If each state president will send in as many subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL, personally secured, as has Miss Willard this year, we would have a thousand new names in short order. If each member of the W. C. T. U. would find as many new members as Miss Willard has in the past week only there would be an enrollment of over half a million names! Here, then, is a definite plan, a division of labor, a noble cause, a country bound and suffering through the power of depraved appetite, the promises of God to lean upon, and the certainty that this battle is His. Shall not "the banners be set up?"

Do the work, though, as if it all depended on you! Be sure to order plenty of sample copies of the paper, and be ready to meet the objection of "so many other papers now" by ability to show wherein—why and how—THE UNION SIGNAL will never be pushed aside unread. Let one "I can" person and one who says "I'm afraid I can't" go out side by side, and remember that a member who reads THE UNION SIGNAL is sure to be one who is alive, posted and equal to the fray.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents; in package of 25 or over, to one address, one issue or assorted, 1c per copy.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Willard Souvenir Cards.

September 28 has been set apart as Harvest Home Day in honor of its being the birthday of Miss Willard. Last year we prepared a set of twelve cards with illuminated texts on one side, and witty, wise, or winning quotations of Miss Willard's on the other side. This year we have another set ready with new words of wisdom and helpfulness. The cards are put up in packages of twelve. We offer them at a low rate in packages only, viz.:

1 package,	$ .25
8 assorted p'kgs (96 cards)	1.60

We had orders for great numbers of these pretty cards last year. Send for what you will need soon. One of the sets will have Miss Willard's new poem, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons Must Go!" printed thereon, and this will be especially useful in Nebraska. It is urged that September 28 be made a Nebraska day. See The Young Crusader for particulars.

Bargain Prices.

Books, etc., soiled by having been sent to convention, or having some slight damage in binding.

	Regular Price.	Bargain Price
Ye Hatchet Partie,	$ .15	$ .07
Helping,	.10	.05
Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	.75	.35
" " " paper,	.40	.15
Romance Nineteenth Century	1.00	.35
Duties of Women,	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo,	.25	.10
Boys and Other Boys, paper,	.25	.12
Girls of To-Day,	.25	.12
Y Song Books,	.25	.20
Glorious Cause,	.30	.20
Birthday Books, plain,	1.00	.50
Birthday Books, gilt edge,	1.25	.60

Please name first and second choice, as we have only a few of some of the items. Secure your bargains promptly. They will not last long.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

A Feeling of Security goes with every package of Pearline. It secures cleanliness with little labor; it secures comfort in all housework, and better work all over the house. It does away with danger as it does away with hard work. Pearline secures from harm anything that can be washed. Anything can be washed easily and safely by securing Pearline.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by 208 JAMES PYLE, New York.

New York via Washington.

One of the most delightful routes between Chicago and the East is over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to New York, by the way of Washington. The trip possesses many peculiar charms, especially to one whose journeyings have never taken him to the borders of the sunny Southland. The ride through the Monongahela valley, across the mountains of West Virginia, and then along the gently flowing Potomac, awakens a keen interest in the lover of natural scenery. Much of the ground traversed has unique historical associations. A large part of this region was debatable land at the time of the civil war. Across these fields and down along these dusty roads once marched now the Blue and now the Gray. These valleys once rang with cheers, now for the Stars and Stripes, and now for the Stars and Bars. These mountainous heights more than once echoed the sounds of deadly conflict. Here General Lee's army crossed the Potomac on that carefully planned invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania which ended so disastrously at Gettysburg. Here Stonewall Jackson directed his forces on that "grand hunting excursion," by which he corralled the Federal forces in Harper's Ferry and compelled them to surrender. And here at Harper's Ferry is still seen the old brick fort where John Brown took his stand in defiance of the slave-holding power. To one who remembers when these names were first written in blood, what an excitement of feeling the mention of them arouses; Antietam, Sharpsburg, South Mountain, Shenandoah, Harper's Ferry, Ball's Bluff. It is no ordinary experience to pass through a region fraught with such tragic memories.

The train hurries on; and soon there is seen dimly in the distance a white marble shaft, and then a great white dome, and then other pinnacles and spires, and Washington is reached.

Even the most cursory glance at the city is sure to be profoundly impressive. A half hour's drive through the streets will reveal more clearly than any detailed description possibly can, those features which have given the city its reputation and made it, in one sense, the Mecca of all patriotic citizens of this country. The capitol building, that embodiment of national majesty, the Washington monument, with its lofty reach heavenward, the White House, with its deeply interesting associations, the several department buildings in their massive statelines, the Smithsonian Institute, the Soldiers' Home, the broad avenues and beautiful parks,—it does not take long to view these, outwardly at least; and the viewing of them for the first time, by one who recalls what these public buildings stand for and the scenes which they have witnessed, is attended with emotions not easily described.

New York is about six hours' ride from Washington, and the road runs through a very interesting stretch of country, touching at Baltimore, Wilmington and Philadelphia. This is one of the finest sections of railroad in the world, the speed of the trains often reaching over sixty miles an hour.—Northwestern Congregationalist.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

Prices on the Harvey Lots to be advanced

SEPTEMBER 15TH.

Telegraph the price you will pay, viz.: $225, $250, $275, $300, $350, $400 or $450.

Telegraph, don't wait to write; make a remittance of from $5 upward to bind the sale.

C. S. Paine

161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

WE WANT 1,000 BRIGHT BOYS OR GIRLS.

To whom we can give employment in a way that will be easy and pleasant. The preliminary work can be done after school hours—an hour a week after that will suffice to bring in a profit of from 20 cents to $2.00 a week.

SEND FOR PARTICULARS TO
The Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n
161 LA SALLE ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOR THE
Union's Devotional Life

see that it is supplied monthly with
HANNAH WHITALL SMITH'S
BIBLE READING LEAFLETS.

They are evangelical, full of a breezy, cheery religiousness, wonderfully simple and pointed. Twelve copies to one address one year $1.00.

Address. Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Platform Voices. Price 25 cents; compiled by Miss Julia Ames, editor UNION SIGNAL. This is a collection of unusually good temperance poems and recitations. Great care has been taken in the selections, and we cordially recommend this book to all who need "something in the line of recitations" and don't know exactly what. This book fills the vacuum completely.

Crusader Programs. Price 25 cts. A book of 188 pages, full of the best of Sunday-school and general temperance exercises, largely from the Sunday-school Young Crusader, given in its columns from time to time. All are good; none need costumes or any such outside helps. An admirable book in every way. Twenty-four numbers or exercises in all are given.

Address,
W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

CHRISTIAN LIFE SONGS

For Sunday Schools, etc., by S. W. STRAUB, Author of "Beautiful Songs," "Living Fountain," "Morning Light," and 20 other popular books.

Just published! Unlike any other! Much higher grade of music and words! Great variety. Best works of English, German and American composers and writers. Price 35c. Only 20c for one sample copy. Send for it.

S. W. STRAUB & CO., Pubs., 243 State St., Chicago.
WARD & DRUMMOND, New York.

For a Disordered Liver
Try BEECHAM'S PILLS.
25cts. a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

Do you own Tokology? Mrs. M. S. Ramsey, of Cedar Gap, Mo., writes: Three years since I procured TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. I followed its teachings in two instances with happiest results. I cannot say enough in its praise. I ask every woman: Have you read Tokology? if not, then get it at once; its value cannot be estimated in money. Mrs. K. writes: "Send me an outfit for Tokology. My aunt in Dakota says, 'If you must sell books, sell Tokology, as it is, next to the Bible, the best book I ever read.'" Sample pages free. Agents wanted. Prepaid, $2.75. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

For a disordered liver try Beecham's Pills.

JAPANESE BRIC-A-BRAC

Shipped to Church Fairs on Consignment; get our circulars.

THE FORMOSA,
86 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

Publisher's Notes.

For L. T. L's Thought.

Eight Responsive Readings are now reacy for you; some of the later ones are, "Pure Temples," "Books and Reading," "Eyes Open." Each one is an 8-page pamphlet, having a Scriptural responsive reading —then one on the topic and a piece of music —with the notes. They are very bright and attractive, and you will fin l they will greatly add to the interest of your meetings. Send ten cents for samples of all. Temperance Lesson Manual, Vol. 6, No. 1, is now ready. It is on Government, and is written by Mrs. Geo. Archibald. The lessons are just what should be carefully studied by those who wish to take up a senior grade; they are adapted to those who have been through our junior lesson manuals and are ready for something farther on. All young people should know what our government consists of—how founded on a constitution—what is the right of suffrage (and some of the wrongs), etc., etc. Teachers' notes are supplied. Follow up this hint by request for sample. Don't fold your hands and say, "Oh, we can't find anything to interest our older boys and girls!" Loyal Leaflet, No. 14, is an order of service for L. T. L's—cheap, but attractive. It gives a good drill-motion, prayer, order of service, etc., etc. It also has a formula for the reception of new members. Five sent for five cents, 100 for 70 cents. For these items we ask, as is done in the drill—

—"Attention!"—

Fair Time

Is here. As in past years the W. C. T. U. will make its impress on the minds of the thousands who visit these places. It is the farmer's vacation time. He is good-humored (usually), ready for a gossipy chat with neighbors, open to any influence that may come in upon him. Now do not, do not forget

The Fair Number!

Order your copies now that you may have them all ready. It is a paper that will be read—don't let this opportunity pass to push facts and living opinions into the hands of the men who could, if they would, so demand prohibition that every politician in the land would humbly bow his head and say, "Why, yes, certainly—I wanted it all the time, but didn't like to say so!" The prices for this invaluable paper are most reasonable, viz:

10 copies	$ .20
100 "	1.70
1000 "	14.00

Then you will have a booth or a tent, and you will want some striking placards. Don't you see that our "posters" are the very thing? That if they are pasted on pasteboard, or on a bulletin board, thousands will stop and read the statements so plainly put before their eyes? Why, you couldn't have a better way to arrest the attention of the passers-by. These posters attack high license, and they ought to. They attack the government's attitude of complicity with the liquor traffic; they point straight at the voter in his attitude of complicity; they give the appalling facts and figures connected with the horrible trade of ruining men, bodies and souls. One set will cost you but fifty cents postpaid. You really should have some extra sets, so that you could meet the calls of those who are sure to be interested in this way of carrying the war into saloon-dom.

And Then

You ought to have some Timely Talks and Signal Lights ready as being small paper bullets that are available for any and all who come along. It's the only way—here a little and there a little. Being faithful in our littles and after awhile the Lord of the harvest will reward the little work with a great and abounding harvest.

"Oh, yes," some one says, "it's all very easy to tell us what to do—to spend money for this and for that, but where is the money to come from?" Yes, we know it is hard to raise the money for such work but it's as truly missionary money as though you sent it to the Patagonians—more so, for they couldn't read THE UNION SIGNAL! No reform ever found a footing except at the cost of intense self-sacrifice, self-denial, self-abnegation, and never will. Heads and hearts ache—backs, too, oftentimes, over it all, but it's the only way. Possibly some extra fine doughnuts with superlatively good coffee sold to the hungry ones would bring in the wherewithal, and lots of folks would rather give a couple pounds of coffee than fifty cents! It's odd, but it's so. But in any case seize on the "Fair Time" to make an impress. We have told you what to do it with, and the cost, after all, is not very great.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N.
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For female complaints use Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

300 Dollars
—IN—
PREMIUMS
will be offered to Purchasers through H. C. F. KOCH & CO'S Illustrated
FASHION CATALOGUE.
A Guide of how to buy
DRY GOODS FROM NEW YORK
and have them delivered free of charge—when the order amounts to a specified sum—at prices guaranteed lower than from any other house in the U. S.
Published September 10, '90, and mailed free upon application; listing and illustrating, with over 2,000 lithographs and wood-cuts, everything needed for Ladies', Gents' and Children's wear and adornment; Housekeeping Goods, etc.

H. C. F. Koch & Co IMPORTERS AND RETAILERS
6th Ave. and 20th St., New York.
In writing please mention this paper.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Largest Sale in the World"
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [62

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.
Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Caster, or Webster's Dictionary. 3½ lbs. Fine Tea by Mail on receipt of $2.
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P.O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE
LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

NOTICE.
The Records of Marion County, Oregon, show the platting of many thousand acres of land in small tracts of from 5 to 10 acres.
Capital City Fruit Farm of 640 acres, Sunnyside number 1,320 acres; Sunnyside number 2,140 acres; Sunnyside number 3,500 acres, and a number of others have been placed on the records by The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Oregon.
This Company is also doing business in Portland and Albany, and has for sale numerous other small tracts. The great advantage of this plan is that it brings together in one community the class of people who are all engaged in the same business, viz., fruit growing, consequently there springs up large Drying and Canning establishments similar to those in the city of Salem, which makes a profitable market for the fruit raised.
Consult your interests by buying of The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Portland or Albany, Oregon.

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.
IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.
No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.
SPLENDID PROGRESS.
Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.
PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.
Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are nso good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full alformation address
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH
Patented by THOS. A. EDISON.
Patented by Thos. A. Edison. A simple, practica and portable device for every day use. Makes 3,000 copies of the one original writing, Drawing, Music, etc. 1,500 copies of one original Typewriter Letter. Recommended by over 40,000 users. Send for circular and sample of work.
A. B. DICK COMPANY,
152-154 Lake Street, CHICAGO. 32 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

AGENTS Wanted. Liberal Salary Paid. At home or to travel. Team furnished free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

SATIN SILK & PLUSH Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. B. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill. We do not sell liquors in any shape.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

Good Sense CORSET WAISTS.
Fit all ages. Infants to Adults.
Are made of the best material and workmanship

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT OF
STANDARD FIBER-WARE
IN NEXT WEEK'S "UNION SIGNAL."

THE PERFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE.
The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted. SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO., 491-493 Carroll Ave., Cor. Union Park Place. Chicago.

IF YOU ARE MARRIED, or contemplate taking this important step, we can send you information which you ought to know, and worth $100. Valuable 16-page circular mailed free, by J. S. OGILVIE, 57 Rose Street, New York.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.
The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin. For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W. H. McDoel, Traffic Manager, or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent. 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

A-CORN SALVE.
Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May. Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS ORGANS
$150 to $1500. $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.

CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

PIANOS—$35—ORGANS
Examine in your HOME before PAYING. Manufacturer's Prices. No Agents. Write for particulars. Address, THE T. SWOGER & SON PIANOS & ORGANS BEAVER FALLS, PA.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Ag't., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

THE NEW PENSION LAW
grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent.
Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions. "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanita. system of building.

Publisher's Dep't.

"Missionary-ing?"

Dost remember the plan? Thus: Eight good books, extra good books, all readable, all thought inspiring; are worth $2.05 in money—a lot more in education. We send the whole lot, viz:

Frances Raymond's Investment	$ .50
Boys and Other Boys	.25
Girls of To-day	.25
Bob Gripp's Trophy	.50
Van and Vet	.10
Prove It	.10
Helping	.10
Unanswered Prayer	.25

for only $1.50 if–if–it is agreed that you will keep them moving among your friends and acquaintances. Seest? Now it means you can be preaching eight, good sermons on temperance, love, faith and purity without ever a bit of a congregation in front of you. Yea! Canst invest $1.50 in any way that will make a better impress or do more good? Nay! Have you been saying to yourself when urged to do something definitely good, "But what can I do?" Here is the answer. Try it; it's home missionary work. Over a hundred and fifty responded to the other notice of this import. Look, now! It counts up!

150x8=1,200x8=9,600!

9,600 what? Books or people? Well, you settle that. It is a straight case of the value of multiplied effort. So?

FAIR Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers. Do something!

PRICES.
10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00
All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

An advertisement on our last page may prove of interest to many of our readers. The photogravure "THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE," is a beautiful likeness of the magnificent building now being erected at Chicago under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. The nominal sum of ten cents to defray postage, etc., we think none will regret.

RABBI MOSES P. JACOBSON, Macon, Ga., says: I have never yet had anything to remove in so remarkable quick time, the severe Headaches to which I am subject, as Bradycrotine.

Ask for Van Houten's Cocoa. Take no other.

HINTS
FOR
Y. W. C. T. U. ENTERTAINMENTS.

Price 10 cents. Explaining the mysteries of Oriental Tiffin, Kaffee Klatsch, Mother Goose, etc. Candy recipes are added to sweeten things generally.

Ye Hatchet Partie.

Price 15 cents. By Miss Mary H. Mather, superintendent department of entertainments National W. C. T. U. The most successful shekel winner we have ever printed for young ladies' use. Other good entertainments are also given, "Mistress Mary and Her Flower Garden," "Silhouette Social," etc.

INTERSTATE
MILKMAID'S CONVENTION.

Price 5 cents. By Laura J. Rittenhouse. An amusing and witty "take off" on a woman's convention. The amount of learning (?) displayed on the cow business is funny.

Co-operative Housekeeping.

Price 5 cts.

By Lide Merriwether, president Tennessee W. C. T. U. An admirable allegory to show how the women of the country could clean house at Washington if they only had the chance. Telling and effecive.

Prohibition Program.

Price 10 cents. By Anna A. Gordon. Song recitations and exercises of the brightest and best kind. High license is fired at in a way that tells. A dialogue by Mr. E. J. Wheeler on "Sense vs. License," is full of vigor, fun and education!

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Balance of this Year FREE

To all who subscribe for next year (see Offer below) to

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Edited by EDWARD W. BOK.

Some of the special features for these Autumn numbers are:

Another New Story
By MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY
Entitled "A Golden Gossip."

SARAH ORNE JEWETT'S New Story,
"Mrs. Parkins's Christmas Eve."

Also, New Stories by SUSAN COOLIDGE,
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD,
ANNE SHELDON COOMBS.

With Illustrations by such Eminent Artists as W. L. Taylor, C. D. Weldon, Frank T. Merrill, C. T. Hill, E. W. Kemble, E. H. Garrett, and others.

ILLUSTRATED POEMS BY Will Carleton, Margaret Deland,
Rose Hartwick Thorpe, Laura E. Richards.

THE special articles include, "How to Train the Voice," by the Celebrated Operatic Tenor, Italo Campanini. "How I Have Grown Old," by P. T. Barnum. "The Story of a Society Girl," as told by a well-known New York fashionable belle. "Liberties of Our Daughters," by Mrs. Admiral Dahlgren. "Why Flirting is Wrong," by Felicia Holt. "How to Celebrate Wedding Anniversaries," by Florence Howe Hall. "The Courtship of General Grant," as told by Mrs. Grant. A Series of Humorous Sketches by Robert J. Burdette. With regular departments, complete in every detail, and each under the charge of editors well known as high-salaried writers.

For $1.00 We will mail the Journal from now to January 1st, 1892—that is, the balance of this year, FREE, and a FULL YEAR from January 1st, 1891 to January 1st, 1892. Also, our handsome 40-page Premium Catalogue, illustrating a thousand articles, and including "Art Needlework instructions," by Mrs. A. R. Ramsey; also Kensington Art Designs, by Jane S. Clark, of London.

N. B.—This offer must positively be mentioned when sending your Subscription, or one year only will be given.

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.
Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars.
Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express

A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at WHOLESALE.

$2.75 FREE
No Money Required

Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will send this watch by express for your examination, after you examine it and find it as represented, pay the express agent $2.75 and express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. This is positively the first Stem Wind Watch ever offered on the face of the earth at this price, and we warrant it a perfect time keeper, and will refund the money if it is not so. It is the same watch advertised by others at from $7.50 to $12, and considered then to be cheap. You can sell these watches like hot cakes at 3 times our price and make your fortune in a month. Our magnificent $350.00 premium sheet sent free with each watch, and a handsome 14 Karat Gold plated chain and charm free to those sending cash with order. An order for six of these watches with cash enclosed entitles you to one free.
THE NAT'L M'F'G AND IMPORTING CO.,
(Incorporated) 191 & 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife: book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St. Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.
$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c. stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

STOUT PEOPLE! WEIGHT REDUCED WITHOUT STARVATION OR DIET. Treatise & instruction for 6 stamps. E. LYNTON, 19 Park Place, New York

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

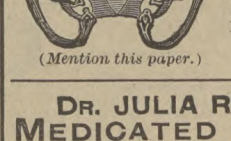
MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME, NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure. Read article in UNION SIGNAL, June 5, page 13. The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.



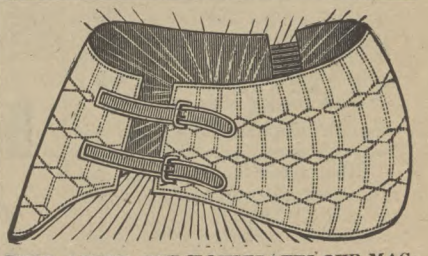
(Mention this paper.)

Best Truss Ever Used.
Improved Elastic Truss. Worn night and day. Positively cures rupture. Sent by mail everywhere. Write for full descriptive circulars. DR. HOUSE, N. Y., ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 744 Broadway, N. Y.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES
FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Owen's Electric Belt.
FOR MAN AND WOMAN

The only practicable electric belt made. Cures Rheumatism, Bright's Disease, Sciatica, Paralysis, Torpid Liver, Lumbago, Nervous Debility, Female Weakness, General Debility, Painful Menses, Saint Vitus Dance, Spinal Diseases, Kidney Complaints, Urinary Diseases. Pat. Aug., 16, 1887. Improved Aug. 1, 1889. Awarded the highest medal at Cincinnati Exposition, 1888. Gives mild or strong current of electricity which stimulates and assists nature to restore weak organs to health and vigor.
ELECTRIC INSOLES $1.00.
Send 6c for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.
DR. OWEN BELT CO., 191 & 193 State St. Chicago, Ill.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Signal Notes.

A RECENT parliamentary return shows that in 1889 there were 168,385 liquor licenses issued in Great Britain.

A JUNIOR prohibition club with fifty members has been organized in Lima, Ill.

CALIFORNIA W. C. T. U. had, in 1889, 117 local unions; it has now increased within one year to the number of 180 unions.

MISSIONARY "bands" are being introduced in universities.

THE Portland, Ohio, Baptist Church gave $600 last year to foreign missions.

A NOBLE charity but little known is the Moravian leper home in Jerusalem, which contained, at the close of last year, fourteen male and six female patients, eleven of whom are Christians and nine Mohammedans.

THE total number of Good Templar lodges in Ireland is 112, with a membership of 5,305.

IT is stated that Mr. W. S. Caine intends to devote three months next winter to the promotion of the temperance movement in India.

AN important innovation in France is the election of Madame Wiggishoff to the bureau of the school fund in Paris. This is an important board, as it has charge of forty-five schools, with about 15,000 pupils and a revenue of almost 200,000 francs a year.

THE London Weekly Times and Echo says that five hundred children, under ten years of age, were taken into custody last year in London, as drunk and incapable.

IN Great Britain there are now 16,000 Bands of Hope and similar juvenile temperance societies, with nearly two million members. The Scottish union alone has 600 societies and 130,000 members.

A MISSIONARY writes: "Evangelization among the South Sea Islands has been largely carried on by native converts. It is wonderful to see their devotion to the work. Hundreds have sacrificed their lives to carry the gospel to the heathen. Sixty from one church in the Harvey group have been killed while acting as missionaries.

CARROLL D. WRIGHT, the best authority in the United States, states that 84 per cent of all criminal cases are due directly or indirectly to the influence of liquor. Seven out of ten of the convicts at the Columbus penitentiary are men of intemperate habits. Seven out of ten of the men locked up in our county jails are committed for drunkenness. Who does not believe that the open saloon is a breeder of vice and crime? Will you vote to keep the saloon open?

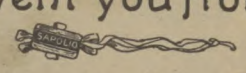
MESSRS. RUSSELL & Co., the large shipbuilders, Greenock, have recently adopted an excellent plan on pay-day in their yard. They have affixed a notice at the gate stating that change may be got there by the respective squads, so that they do not require to go to a public-house for it, which used to be the old way, and was a fruitful source of temptation.

AT the last Birmingham meeting of the British Medical Association, two eminent physicians called attention to alcohol as a cause of functional disorders of the heart. Dr. Thomas said: "Alcohol acts not only upon the heart, but upon the nervous system generally. It acts at first as a stimulant, and afterwards as a depressant, and ultimately by its presence in the blood it produces a disease of vessels, heart, and other organs. By inducing a state of chronic gastritis it gives rise to indigestion and its consequence, namely, pressure upwards against the heart."

A GOOD friend sends a correction of the Signal Note in regard to the Cincinnati Hospital Medical College, given in a late issue. Dr. Juliet Monroe Thorp is not, as stated, a niece of Mrs. Henrietta Monroe, but is something nearer and dearer—her own daughter. She is a bright woman, a graduate of Vassar, as well as of a medical college, and like her mother, is gifted with great executive ability. A brilliant and useful future is prophesied for her by those who know her powers.

FROM Senator Blair's book, "The Temperance Movement:" "Accursed is he who putteth the cup of intoxication to his neighbor's lip; then it becomes necessary for those engaged in the foul work to examine their occupation for their own good. . . . The subject is broad and high and deep. It is upon the American people and compels the attention of the whole world. It cannot be evaded. Postponement even is no longer possible, and, if it were, would but aggravate existing evils and multiply the difficulty of their removal. The operation must be performed."

Before you buy anything, ask two questions:
"Do I really want it?" "Can I do without it?"
HONESTLY ANSWERED.

these questions may make you rich: but they will never prevent you from buying SAPOLIO


Its uses are many and so are its friends; for where once used it is always used. To clean house without it is sheer folly, since it does the work twice as fast and twice as well.

Mrs Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st. Ills 91

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

BROWN'S FRENCH DRESSING
—FOR—
LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S BOOTS AND SHOES.
Awarded highest honors at

Phila.,	1876	Melbourne,	1880
Berlin,	1877	Frankfort,	1881
Paris,	1878	Amsterdam,	1883

New Orleans, 1884-85.
Paris Medal on every bottle.
Beware of Imitations.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases and Scrofulous Humors.
Almost as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who, after using it, are very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich and pure blood, in fact, rejuvenates the whole system.
FLESH, BLOOD, NERVE, BRAIN,
This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod Liver Oil: It has many imitators, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure as you value your health, get the genuine. Manufactured only by DR. AEXR. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

This is the Picture of
Baby Barendse,

Three months old when cured by the use of Steketee's Worm Destroyer.
Read what its mother says:
The undersigned has a child only three months old. It became sick with pains in its bowels and stomach when scarcely two months old. It cried and whined nearly all the time, and was completely run down in flesh. We gave it everything that we thought would relieve the child, but it grew worse all the time. We made twenty powders from a teaspoonful of Steketee's Worm Destroyer, gave it one powder three times daily. To our astonishment it was relieved of thousands of worms. We have given the child but twenty powders. It is entirely cured. I shall always recommend Steketee's Worm Destroyer. MRS. B. BARENDSE, Oakdale Park, Kent Co., Mich.
For Sale by all Druggists, and by mail, 25 Cents. Send U. S. Stamp. Address:
GEO. G. STEKETEE,
GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
The proprietor of this paper knows that this medicine is no humbug, and perfectly safe to send money to Mr. Steketee. Mention Union Signal.

SAVE MONEY. Our 486-page Catalogue gives Wholesale Prices on all kinds of Merchandise in any quanity. Anti-trust and Co-operative. Write for particulars. Cash Buyers' Mer. Union, Chicago, Ill.

Cancer PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF & Tumors Without the Knife. Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth, Minn.

EDUCATIONAL.

Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, S. E. Cor. Druid Hill Av. & Hoffman St. The ninth annual session will begin on Wednesday, Oct. 1st, 1890, and will continue seven months. For further information or catalogue address Randolph Winslow, M. D., Dean, 1 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich. Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH 42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution. SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year. E. F. BULLARD, A. M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

CHICAGO
KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY,
2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.
The Chicago Polytechnic Institute is modelled after the London Polytechnic and People's Palace. It affords instruction in all practical branches, including trades of all kinds, slöjd (free) and cooking, millinery and dressmaking. Being philanthropic, its charges are merely nominal. For free illustrated catalogue, address SECRETARY LEGG, S. E. cor. Madison St. and Fifth Ave.

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

RIDGE'S FOOD Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. It is not a medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

RUG & EMBROIDERY MACHINE THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago.

Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

For Gas BAILEY'S For Oil

COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO. 118 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

One Cent
Buys a postal card. Get one and send for a description of our famous PURE AIR HEATING STOVES and FURNACES. They warm and ventilate on half the fuel used in other kinds.
HESS STOVE WORKS, 103 Fulton St. Chicago.

RUBIFOAM
A PERFECT LIQUID DENTIFRICE DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED.
ITS USE INSURES BEAUTIFUL CLEAN TEETH.
PUT UP BY E. W. HOYT & CO. LOWELL, MASS.

Price

VAN ORDEN CORSETS

Agents Wanted. Perfect Shape
Van Orden Corset Co., 22 Clinton Pl., N. Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

AMERICAN Desk & Seating Co.,
Manufacturers
Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for Catalogues.
270-272 Wabash Ave., CHICAGO.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.
An elegant Photogravure, size 10x13 inches, of this magnificent building now erecting under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at Chicago, in which thousands of people throughout the country are interested, will be sent FREE to any one desiring same, with our compliments, on receipt of ten cents to cover postage and expense of mailing.
FOX, SHEPHERD & CO.
REAL ESTATE & INVESTMENTS,
85 Dearborn St., Chicago.

ALL FAT PEOPLE
can safely Reduce Weight and Cure Corpulency permanently by taking TRILENE TABLETS (Regd.) for a few weeks. They are small, agreeable, harmless, and never fail to IMPROVE both HEALTH and FIGURE without Change of Diet. An English Countess writes:—"Your Trilene Tablets act admirably."—Send Postal Note for 75 cents to THE TRILENE CO., Sole Proprietors, 834 Broadway, New York.

Progress at Harvey.

"The Harvey Land Association has sold during the last week sixty business and residence lots. These, with the sales reported by L. A. Gilbert, will make an aggregate of seventy-five lots at prices ranging from $200 to $1,000 apiece. Six lots have been sold on Columbia avenue, between One Hundred and Fifty-third and One Hundred and Fifty-fourth streets, for $3,300, and the contract has been let for the building of a row of two and one-half story houses. These are to be leased when completed to the Craver, Steele & Austin Manufacturing company. This work is being done by a building company, which is making arrangements to build $100,000 worth of houses to be completed by Oct. 1. The land association has given the corner of One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street and Lexington avenue, 107x175 feet, to be used as a church site. The foundations and vaults of the bank building are about completed. This building is to be two stories high and constructed of brick and stone. A hotel is to be located at the corner of One Hundred and Fify-fifth street and Columbia avenue, opposite the depot. It is reported that the Illinois Central railroad will erect a depot at Harvey to cost $6,000. A leading lawyer, versed in all the ins and outs of Chicago real estate, has been giving the Calumet River region a careful examination, and, as a result, expresses his opinion freely that it will undoubtedly be the Birmingham (manufacturing) district of the North and Northwest."—Chicago Tribune.

A manufacturer of core-drilling machinery has just purchased ground for a plant, and will erect buildings at once.

Write to C. D. PAINE, Advt. Manager of THE UNION SIGNAL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, if you want lots in Harvey.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 36.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 4, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Prohibition and Prohibitionists—Read Your Blanks—Poetry and Patents 8, 9
SPECIAL DIFFICULTIES: 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, God's Love, by Charles Brainard Botsford—Me an' Hepsy, by Harriet Francene Crocker—Public School Education, by Rev. C. C. Harrah—Woman in Journalism, by Hon. M. B. Castle 2, 3, 4
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.: Mrs. eavitt in Europe, Concluded—Temperance and the Sabbath in the Hawaiian Kingdom... 4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Salvation Army in Chicago—Chautauqua Assembly Notes—The Battle of Nebraska—The Work Among the Colored People in Kansas—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, Say "No"—A Twentieth Century Patriot—Street Car Manners 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning September 14, 1890. 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, A Woman's Praise—One of Women's Rights—Environment 7
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Oregon, Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Maine, Iowa, Kansas, New York. Indiana—One County Fair—Illinois Press Department—To W. C. T. Unions in Missouri—Missouri Convention—News in a Nutshell—Announcements 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Fair Work in State and County Unions 12
PUBLISHR'S DEPARTMENT:. 14, 15
SIGNALENOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The Southern War Claim Bill passed the House Friday.

Oliver Wendell Holmes celebrated his eighty-first birthday Friday.

The retail liquor traffic is now prohibited in seventy-nine municipalities of Manitoba.

The damage caused by floods in St. James Parish, Louisiana, amounts to $1,200,000.

The price of lottery shares has tumbled from $1,200 to $500 and the downward slide continues.

The People's party of New York has incorporated prohibition and woman suffrage in its platform.

Dr. Charles F. Deems is reëlected president of the American Institute of Christian Philosophy.

New York City has one Protestant church to every 4,000 inhabitants and one saloon to every 125 people.

Dr. W. F. Crafts and Judge C. C. Bonney addressed a rousing Sabbath observance meeting in Chicago Sunday.

M. Jules Guyot, French Minister of Public Works, has submitted to the Cabinet a plan for a sea canal to Paris.

Minerva Parker, architect, of Philadelphia, has been selected to design the Isabella Pavilion at the Columbian Exposition.

Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, president of Illinois, will deliver the annual sermon at the next W. C. T. U. National Convention, at Atlanta.

After a hot debate in the Senate, Senator Plumb's resolution to stop the sale of liquors in the senate restaurant was referred to the committee on rules.

Mrs. Wm. H. Vanderbilt and her son Cornelius propose building a people's palace in New York, after Walter Besant's plan, at a cost of $250,000.

The Inter-State Temperance Union meets in Lincoln, Neb., September 9, to take action to further work in the prohibitory amendment campaign.

The tax on opium, levied by Chinese officials with a view to suppressing the wicked traffic, has been removed in deference to the demands of England.

The Senate has agreed to put the Election Bill over until the short session, with the distinct understanding that it shall be the order of the day early in December.

Monday was very widely observed as Labor Day by great processions of laboring men. Chicago added to its very fine celebration an extensive strike among carpenters.

The Great Bend Tribune declares that in its ten years of prohibition the population of Kansas has increased fifty per cent and crime has decreased more than sixty per cent.

Mrs. Helen Campbell made a profound impression at Chautauqua by her lectures on the social and economic condition of women. The facts she stated concerning child labor brought out many startled exclamations from her audience.

Dr. A. T. Pierson, of Philadelphia, gave the College Students' Bible Institute at Lake Geneva some very fine lectures, which were highly appreciated. The Institute has proved a decided success.

E. W. Lewis, first and only president of the Western Secretarial Institute, died at the Y. M. C. A. Camp, Lake Geneva. His death casts a deep shadow over the College Students' Bible School in session there.

Nebraska Prohibitionists nominated Dr. B. L. Payne for Governor, George W. Woodby for Lieutenant-Governor, and Mrs. Mary R. Morgan for superintendent of schools. The platform adopted is a very strong one.

MEMBERSHIP Crusade Day comes Saturday, Sept. 27, instead of Thursday as announced. The notice was sent in for Thursday, but later a telephone message directed its being changed to Sept. 27. In making the change of date, the name of day was inadvertently left unchanged,

"BIBLE TEMPERANCE STUDIES" is the title of a book now in the hands of our printing department, to be issued by Sept. 15. It is by M. Josephine Griffith, B. S., and contains an analytical study of every Bible reference to temperance or intemperance. It is especially for the use of Bible students, evangelists and temperance instructors, and it is understood that Dean Wright will include it in his course of study.

THE Patrol has this to say: "The Prohibition party will reach his majority this fall, being twenty-one years of age. He is a fine young fellow, temperate, honest, with a clean record, good nerve, the pride and protector of his mother, the W. C. T. U., and his sisters, all the Y girls. Give him your votes this fall as a birthday present. Lovable, tractable and docile to his friends, he can't be bossed by the old parties."

SUPERINTENDENT PORTER gives some interesting facts concerning the efficiency of male and female clerks in counting census returns. The average number counted by women was 47,950 persons; by men, 32,935 persons. Of the forty-three who counted more than 10,000 each, thirty-eight were women and five, men. He says the women were more exact in touch, more expeditious in handling the schedules, more at home in adjusting the delicate mechanism of the machines, and apparently more ambitious to make a good record.

THE statue of Lafayette, France's gift to the United States, has been safely landed and will be placed in Lafayette Square, Washington. It consists of a square pedestal of Italian marble, elaborately carved, with bronze figures on each of the corners; the height is fifty feet. A series of steps leads from the base half way to the top. On the top step in front is a bold reclining figure of "America." Her right arm is stretched upwards, holding a sword. Opposite is a group of children. Figures of Washington and Lafayette clasp hands on another face side, and on the fourth side are figures of Count Rochambeau and an American Admiral. All the figures are bronze. The estimated cost of the statue, with transportation and erection, is about $200,000, and is borne by the French Government.

IN no previous year have so many W. C. T. U. Schools of Methods been held; their effort for good is felt not only in increased efficiency among workers, but in overcoming prejudice and winning friends for the W. C. T. U. These schools taken into the great Chautauquas, have been the means of opening many blind eyes and making them see the W. C. T. U. in its true light rather than through the party-colored spectacles supplied by the secular press. A lady attending the Kentucky Chautauqua, came there with little knowledge of our work, and not very favorably inclined toward it. A friend brought her into the School of Methods where she was a keen-eyed observer. After its close she sent Mrs. Beauchamp five dollars, entirely unsolicited, for the work another year because she was so impressed with its value.

THE death of Rev. Charles L. Brace, of New York, takes out of American philanthropy a leading figure. He was the founder of a new school of philanthropy, the school of prevention which "set a little child in the midst," as did the Great Teacher, to teach the world a lesson. Out of this lesson grew the Children's Aid Society, of which he was the founder, and which has taken thousands of neglected children out from their terrible environments in the city, to country homes and the possibilities of growing into good manhood and womanhood. Children's Lodging Houses are another invention of Mr. Brace's, where boys and girls can, at low price, find safe, cleanly shelter from the dangers of the street. The idea of summer homes and fresh air funds seem to have been born in the same fertile brain. These ideas have so grown and extended that their fruits are seen in all large cities. In New York alone more than 200,000 children have found homes in Newsboys' Lodging Houses and similar institutions. Mr. Brace was not more distinguished for what he himself did, than for what he inspired others to do, so that now he "rests from his labors and his works do follow him."

ANOTHER beautiful soul has received her coronation. Sabbath evening Mrs. Eleanor L. Smith, mother of Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, closed her earthly life of sixty-six years, a life filled to the brim with loving service to the Master, joyfully responding to His call, "Daughter, arise; come up higher." Through years of sickness no less than through years of active service, she served Him perfectly, having learned the hard lesson that "They also serve who only stand and wait." Kept thus waiting through long years, her chamber was as the very gate of Heaven; at length it opened to give her most triumphant entrance. Some of the glory of Heaven seemed to stream out and illumine that death-bed; its after-glow remains to cheer the hearts of husband and children, "left sorrowing yet always rejoicing" that to them was granted, for so many years, the inspiration of such a life which at its close had such abundant entrance into the presence of her King.

IN response to the suggestion of an old soldier at the Grand Army gathering in Boston, the W. C. T. U. did a kindly and graceful act which they have been too modest to report, but which we learned from The Woman's Voice. At four places along the route of march were stands of lemonade supplied by the Massachusetts and the Boston W. C. T. U., bearing the placards, "Free to the G. A. R." Here, all day long the women stood preparing and dispensing cool lemonade freely to the veterans as they passed. In this work they were ably seconded by gentlemen. The fact that thirty-two boxes of lemons and three barrels of sugar were used in making the beverage so freely given away, gives some idea of the quantity dispensed. That it was thankfully received was evinced by the hearty "God bless you's" of the men, and the more formal acknowledgments of the officers. "Hurrah for the W. C. T. U." often rang out from the ranks. An officer high in rank handed the ladies a card on which he had written a high testimonial to the W. C. T. U., giving it the credit of being foremost in every good work. All agreed that much drunkenness was prevented by this generous provision of lemonade. At the stands was the picture of General Fisk; we doubt not that he, looking down on these serried ranks of his old comrades, rejoiced over what was being done for them by his comrades in the peaceful war for "God and home and native land."

THE most careful preparation should be made for Crusade Membership Day, that it may stand out always as a marked era in our history. First of all, let there be fervent prayer both in the closet and by the unions, that this day may yield large harvest and that the wisest means may be used to bring this end. Let churches be assigned to ladies who will canvass the membership, both women and men, for we want honorary members. District towns, villages and rural localities, do not let a woman in the United States have the opportunity to say, "I have never been asked to become a member of a W. C. T. U." Let every W. C. T. U. woman give that whole day, let her be equipped with pencil and enrolling tablet, let her be thoroughly informed herself, that she may not only answer every adverse argument, but give every reason why every woman in this country ought at least to sign the personal total abstinence pledge, pay her membership fee and give the influence of her name to this organization. Do not go out with any discouragement from any past failure, let no past experience induce the consideration that there is any woman whom it is not "worth while to ask." Let the evening shades close on at least a doubled white ribbon membership. Do not let any woman excuse herself with the idea that some one else will do it. Thou hast come to the kingdom for this hour thyself, its labors cannot be delegated to any one else.

Contributed.

GOD'S LOVE.

BY CHAS. BRAINARD BOTSFORD.

O Infinite Father
Of infinite love!
How great Thy compassion
Revealed from above!
Its highest expression
In Jesus appears,
Whose great condescension
Its fullness enspheres.

He, kingship resigning,
Our poverty shares,
That we of his riches
May be fellow heirs.
He honor and glory
Celestial counts loss,
And takes for our triumph
The shame of the cross!

Disciples, be joyful,
And break into song!
Ye are the Lord's purchase,
To Him ye belong.
His love is amazing!
Amazingly great,
The price paid to ransom
You from your lost state!

Boston, Mass.

ME AN' HEPSY.

BY HARRIET FRANCES CROCKER.

Last night jest as I was a-puttin' my feet into my slippers an' settlin' down for a real comfortable evenin', in come Hepsy. I see right away she was all stirred up 'bout somethin' or other, but I didn't say anything. Experience has learnt me better'n that when she has them two red spots in her cheeks an' her black eyes jest a snappin', like fire-flies in summer. I know better, so I jest kep' still an' looked at her. Hepsy's 'mazin' good-lookin' when she's mad.

Well, she went straight to the bureau draw an' took out a piece of narrer orange ribbin.

"Good land!" thought I, "hain't that white ribbin 'nough for her to wear, everlastin'ly a-flauntin' that in my face, without a yeller one, too?"

But I didn't say anything.

She tied the yeller ribbin in with the white, an' says she to me, says she—"Adoniram Peabody, do you know what that ribbin means?"

"No," says I, "onless it's to make a kind o' contrast to the other."

"Well," says she, "Adoniram, I'll tell you what it means," an' she sot down by the table an' folded her arms on it an' looked right straight at me. I let the Weekly Star slip down on the floor an' crossed my legs to listen, for I knew somethin' was a-comin'.

"This orange ribbin," says Hepsy, says she—("which I'm a-goin' to wear till there ain't no use o' wearin' it any longer) means that I believe in women's votin'—that it's no more'n right that women should vote, and that I, for one, want to vote, an' mean to vote, too, before I die!"

I opened my mouth, but Hepsy give me a look that shut it up again, an' went on.

"Jest as I was a-comin' home from the store I run across somethin' that made my blood boil, I tell you, Adoniram! There was old widow Davis, one of the strongest temperance women I ever see, a-beggin' an' pleadin' with her own son, her own boy—mark you—to come along home with her, an' not disgrace 'em both. He was drunk, Adoniram Peabody—drunk for the first time in his life—an' changed from a smart, manly young feller, to a silly, gibbering, grinning idiot. He was hugged up to a street lamp with his arms around it, an' told his mother he wa'n't a-comin' home till mornin'. The poor woman! my heart ached for her—an' I pitied that fool of a Frank, too, I couldn't help it. I stopped an' tried to talk some sense into him, but land! that there lamp-post knew jest about as much as he did. 'Twa'nt no use a-talkin.' His poor, old mother was cryin' fit to break her heart, an' pullin' at his arm. 'It's that new saloon, Mis' Peabody,' says she, 'that han'some, attractive one up town that's jest started. Oh, think of the injustice of it,' says she, 'how helpless us women are, we can't vote to save our own boys from ruin an' shame!'

"At that I up an' says, 'That's so, Mis' Davis, that's so, an' I'm a-goin' to help you get Frank home; I'm a-goin' to shake him up.' An' shake him up I did till I was tired, an' I guess he must ha' ben, too. He went along after that, lookin' so surprised an' foolish that if it hadn't ben so wicked I'd ha' laughed to see him. But I didn't; one thing, I was too awful mad, an' besides there was a crowd o' young ones gethered by that time jest waitin' for a smile from some one to set 'em into a roar.

"I've ben thinkin' 'bout women suffrage quite a spell, but to-night I settled that question with Hepsy Peabody! If it ain't women suffrage it's women sufferin', an' I don't believe in that more'n they have to!

"When I see that poor drunken boy, Adoniram, I jest thanked the good Lord with all my heart, that our boy died when he was a baby—a little, innocent baby!"

I got out my pocket handkercher an' Hepsy she took a corner o' her apron an' we was both still a minute. We scurcely ever mention our boy, but our hearts is awful tender 'bout him yet. Well, in a minute, Hepsy up an' says, says she, "Women's goin' to vote 'fore long, Adoniram, you mark my words—they be, an' we'll see how long we'll let these death-traps run to catch sech boys as Frank Davis."

"Hepsy," says I, "let's argue!"

I dearly love to argue—so does she.

"Now," says I, "you know mighty well, Hepsy, that I'm opposed to women's votin'! The idee!" says I, "women want to run the universe now-days! women want to have a finger in every public pie. I own a man's fingers would be kind o' out o' place in a domestic pie," says I, (women understand sech pies better'n men do) "but they're much better 'dapted for makin' the pie o' politics. Women go to extremes in everything!"

"We would, thank the Lord, in the liquor business," says Hepsy, interruptin'.

"Well," says I, "as I was a-sayin', women are apt to go to extremes. They be, Hepsy, you can't deny it neither!"

"Adoniram," says she, "do you make any fuss when I go to extremes in gettin' up an extry nice dinner for you?"

"Now," says I, ignorin' her remark (it's a way I have with Hepsy), "now," says I, "women has a sphere to live in, their own nateral sphere—it's women's duty to stay to home an' tend the baby an' do the work. It's the mission of women to make home happy. Happy homes would make all the difference in the world, you know, Hepsy."

Hepsy flared up. "I don't know any such thing! Look at the widow Davis. She's got as pleasant a home as any one in this hull village, an' lets Frank have all the young comp'ny he wants. Look at the books in her house, an' the magazines an' papers she takes, an' the lovely organ she bought him to make home pleasant! Don't you talk to me, Adoniram Peabody! home happy, indeed! It's right to make home happy, but that ain't goin' to save the boys."

"Try moral suasion then," says I, "that's the greatest weepon 'gainst the business. Appeal to a man's higher feelin's an' try to argue him into temp'rance."

Hepsy riz right up an' looked at me; them black eyes of hern are the most speakin' eyes I ever see. "Adoniram Peabody," says she, "I'm ashamed of you! yes, actually ashamed of sech a man for a husban'! Moral suasion! moral suasion! O, yes, moral suasion's goin' to keep the boys safe! A boy's mother givin' him a dose o' moral suasion will have more effect than twenty-five saloon-keepers with their temptin' offers an' their gay music an' song an' all the rest o' God's blessin's that they pervert to ruin immortal souls! It is, ain't it? I tell you, Adoniram, you're way behind the times—you're Rip Van Winkle himself! It's the law we've got to have—the strong arm of the law to back us up, that's goin' to count. It's prohibition, an' you know it, Adoniram Peabody, an' if you wasn't sech an ignorant old Republican, you'd be a man an' vote the only Christian ticket!"

"Stop!" says I, "Hepsy, you needn't call me an ignorant Republican! Don't I read the Weekly Star clean through, advertisements an' all, every week, I'd like to know?"

Now I do pride myself on keepin' posted 'bout what's goin' on. I see Hepsy's nose lift itself up a little. Mebby she was thinkin' of all them papers she reads every week. To tell the truth Hepsy does keep posted up pretty well—for a woman. Says I, "Good land, Hepsy, the idee of women votin'! Why the women-folks is made to be took care of by the men."

"They be, be they?" says she; "you men darn your own socks, I s'pose, an' cook your own vittles, an' wash your own dishes, don't you? You always tie your own neck-tie, don't you, an' put on your own collar? Oh, yes, women are helpless, inferior, delicate little creeters, not fit to bear the hardship an' exposure of handin' in a vote at the polls! Poor creeters! It is too bad!"

I picked up the old cat, an' begun talkin' to her. I never say much to Hepsy when she gets on that sarcastic strain o' hern. Sarcasm ain't becomin' in a woman, 'cordin' to my notions, an' Hepsy's pretty well gifted that way. Well, we set there a spell longer, talkin' an' arguin' 'bout women's votin'. All of a sudden we heard a big racket outdoors, an' we both run out on the stoop to see what it was. 'Twas a dubious sight, sure 'nough. There was old Jim Fowler crazy drunk, an' screamin' an' cursin' an' ravin', an' the constable takin' him to the lock-up. I took Hepsy by the arm an' tried to make her go in, but she wouldn't.

"Hain't I got as much right to see the shows you 'an your party get up as you have to get 'em up?" an' she staid; course I staid too. Old Jim had got into trouble up town. Seems they wouldn't sell him anything in the new, high-toned saloon (they keep that jest for boys, Hepsy says), an' Jim got mad an' busted a hole through the big plate glass winder. When Hepsy heard that she said "Good!" an' I know she meant it! Women as a sex is gettin' more an' more ongentle now-days, seems to me.

Well, we staid there an' watched that crazy creeter out o' sight, an' when we come in Hepsy's eyes was blazin', I tell you; but she didn't say anything. Bime-by we went off to bed an' I dreamt o' women votin'—sech a ridiculous pictur' it was, too! When I told Hepsy 'bout it next mornin' she said, real solemn-like, "Adoniram Peabody, you mark my words—that dream's a-comin' true!"

But good land! I hope it won't! Where'll us men be, I should like to know, when the women get to votin'?

Allegany, N. Y.

PUBLIC SCHOOL EDUCATION.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

The public schools all over the country are busy at work again; and one of the pleasant things to think about is the tens of thousands of bright and happy children and youth who these pleasant mornings hurry off to school. We cannot hope to be a prosperous and advancing nation unless the children are educated. Anybody would say that a republic is not safe, if one in five or six of the voters cannot read. Yet this is the condition in the United States. There are many evils in our country that we hope to see put down, and we are working for the day when there will be more of justice and righteousness. But can we hope for final success while the illiterate vote is so large? When we consider how much is at stake in this country, and how necessary it is that the voters should be intelligent in order to meet the issues of the times, it does seem that there should be a general movement to have public schools planted in every part of the land, and that as early as possible no one should be allowed to cast a ballot who cannot read the constitution of his state or nation.

Luther taught his countrymen that "Education is the nation's best defense;" and the power of Germany to-day is largely owing to the fact that it is the policy of the government to put into the public schools whatever they wish to appear in the life of the nation. If this is a good policy in an empire, it is much more necessary in a republic. We have much to be grateful for, that the efforts to have taught in the public schools the effects of stimulants and narcotics on the human body have been successful in so many of the states. Thousands are learning there every day, the injury that is being done by the use of alcohol and tobacco. We must not stop our efforts until this becomes a part of the course of study in every school in the land.

When we consider that the public schools are supported by the government in order to prepare its future voters to meet their responsibilities, there are some things in our system of education that appear very absurd. One is the increasingly large number of young ladies that are employed as teachers, and the relation of the government to them. We believe in these teachers; but while the government discourages them from having an active interest in its affairs, by refusing to let them have any responsible share in politics, how can they be the best qualified to educate its voters? How much help does the government give in order that they may be qualified? If these teachers voted themselves, and had this incentive to study the matters of value to the government, it does seem that the future voters now being educated in the government schools would be benefited thereby.

Another perplexing thing is that there is not the least connection between these government schools and the offices of the government. It does seem that at least a member of a school board ought to be required to show the record of a good standing or graduation in a public school before he could hold such an office; but instead, many of these officers are but the ignorant tools of a political party. Why does not the government make some account of its system of public education in choosing its public servants? Have we not reached a point in the development of our nation where it would be a great benefit to the public school system and a great gain to the country, if government officers were required to be graduates of high schools or have an education that would be deemed equivalent?

It is another strange thing, that many of the state universities are filling the professions at the bottom instead of the top. Men graduate into law or medicine who never have had the preparatory study that a good high school furnishes.

Many things might be changed for the better; but, after all, our public schools never were so good as now. The country never had so good an army of teachers as that which serves it to-day. We reach out our hand to the teachers and the scholars, and wish them well in the work of the school year upon which they have now entered.

WOMAN IN JOURNALISM.

BY HON. M. B. CASTLE.

Not long since there appeared an article in an able city daily, criticising a paper on "Women Journalists," read at the Quincy meeting of the State Press Association. As this article gave voice to opinions held by many, it will serve for hooks upon which to hang the thoughts of this paper, reversing the order of presentation. The writer said, "Many women have failed where few have succeeded." If true, which we doubt, this is simply a count against human nature. In what department of work has man been an unvarying success? What trade, or profession, or calling is not shore-lined with the wrecks of men's efforts? It would be unkind to my sex to hint that a majority of women can succeed in every vocation, as we cannot. But if women can fail oftener, or more ignominiously than men, the world has yet to learn the fact.

Again the writer says, "There are few women who are competent to write on agriculture, stock-raising, science, invention, commerce, architecture, real estate, etc."

Did he not know that the most gifted and thoroughly competent writer on architecture we have is a woman, Mrs. Van Rensselaer, whose articles in a popular magazine are the delight of professionals, and the admiration of critics? It is equally true that women are fast entering the realm of invention, from four to twenty-four patents being granted them weekly, covering a large range of the useful and beautiful.

The most competent judge of stock in New York is Miss Morgan, the stock reporter of the New York Press, and a brilliant writer as well. The most successful stock breeder at the last National convention was Mrs. Henry C. Merideth, of Indiana. She was recognized as a most competent authority on all practical questions; and her paper was the most exhaustive of any read before that association. Mrs. Bishop H. Warren, said to be the richest woman in Colorado, made her own money by cattle raising, and is now worth $10,000,000.

Of course there are a few who succeed grandly. But the success of any one battling against prejudice, and in a new line, is the surest proof of possible success to the many, and here again it is quite as true there are few men who succeed in the same lines—nobly, grandly, unqualifiedly.

I know a section where four of the most successful farmers are women. Three are widows forced to the care, and one, a young lady, taking it rather from choice than necessity, and not one of these requires a day each week to loaf in a town saloon under the plea of urgent business.

We are told that women as reporters must visit playhouses, walking home late at night to prepare copy in the early morning. Well, what of that? I know girls employed in paper mills who commence at six o'clock in the evening, and continue at their work until seven o'clock the next morning, and that at the enormous salary of $4 a week, boarding themselves.

Do you believe those paper-mill cutter girls would consider it a hardship, instead, to attend the theater to listen to a Shakesperian play by Booth, or a lecture by Stoddard, or a drama personified by Mrs. Langtry, with one of the best seats, free, and a salary ranging from $6 to $24 per week, even though they had to get their sleep between the hours of 12, midnight, and 12, noon?

"But," says the critic, "some of the work cannot be performed by women; they must familiarize themselves with crime and criminals. They must attend sparring matches, and visit places where the foot of a modest woman should never tread."

If the making of women reporters will keep out of our daily journals the news from the slums—will put an end to the education of our young men and young women to crime through the records in the daily or weekly family paper, in the name of humanity and humanity's God, give us women for reporters. If making women reporters will keep men from visiting places "where the foot of a modest woman should never tread," in the name of home and home's God, give us women reporters. The menacing danger of the times is the debauching of the nation through familiarizing it with crime and criminals.

Again our objector says, "Few women can conduct a department, and make home pleasant for their husbands, oversee their households, and train their children."

So the ladies might say, "Few men can run any department of a paper, and oversee their homes; or train their children." And as for making home pleasant, there are men who cannot do that even if they exclude all other employments. We know men who do nothing but sit on a dry goods box, or visit in a corner grocery, or play pool in a country saloon, who are utter failures in making home happy for their families.

But let us hear from the women. Mrs. Clara B. Colby, of Beatrice, Neb., is well known as one of the leading journalists of the nation. She says: "My success came because I have been patient, persistent, and indefatigable. I have trained myself to expect the smallest returns from the most arduous efforts, content to remove prejudice, and build pure sentiments in the public. I find in my numerous exchanges the departments conducted by women are among the ablest, and most read, and those papers which, like the Boston Traveller, have a woman on the editorial staff, have the widest influence. There is one journalistic field I think peculiarly fitted for women, and that is country newspapers. The best thing about journalism is that it is reasonably compatible with the tastes of women for a sheltered and domestic life. For instance, all my work for the Tribune is done in my home library which is the rallying place of my family clans, so I am with them, and of them all the time." I doubt if a man could attend to all the business writing and editorial work of a paper with one eye on the barn, and the other on the baby; with one ear for the kitchen, and the other for the door bell, and no moment secure from interruption. But here the woman, the hereditary mistress of a hundred trades, has the advantage.

Mrs. Harbert made a delightful home while conducting a newspaper department. In Mrs. Myra Bradwell's experience as editor and housekeeper, many have been in doubt as to which department was most carefully and successfully managed. Nothing in the realms of mind and matter is more thoroughly proven by experience than that women can be successful journalists, or successful business conductors, model family trainers, and model housekeepers.

Mrs. Leslie, conducting a dozen journals, Mrs. Demorest with a large publishing business; Mary Mapes Dodge, chief inspiration of the most chaste and entrancing magazine of the world; Miss Mary Booth, editor of Harper's Bazar; Marion Harland in Babyhood, evidently know no natural law which debars them from magnificent journalistic success.

Our critic opens his meeting by remarking: "Since the recent advance of women into the domain long occupied by men, a determined attack has been made on the field of journalism with a view of capturing and holding it," and he closes with the benediction, "The average woman may be possessed of as much information as the average man, but it is not likely to be of a character that will aid her in becoming a journalist. It may be very useful in its place, but its place is outside a newspaper office."

Where has this Rip Van Winkle slumbered? Why, bless his dear soul, woman has captured and is holding the field of journalism. She has proven that her place is inside the newspaper office, and if either must leave, it will surely be my lord.

As civilization extends, so the world learns the value of women as teachers, and that periodical, journal, or magazine which proposes to eliminate the woman element, and attract general readers and a wide circulation, may well commence its duties by attaching to its salutatory the epitaph:

"One more unfortunate Rashly importunate"—
Gone to the dogs.

Women have captured journalism, and he is rash without discretion, who courts their lances in the tournaments of mind.

Miss Jeannette Guilder, of The Critic, New York, writes: "My father was an amateur journalist, and I inherited the taste. At fourteen years, in 1869, I wrote 'Katie's Escapade.' I took the name 'Katie' from an intimate friend, and the word 'Escapade' struck me as appropriate. When it appeared in The Dispatch I was surprised that it filled only a short column, when I thought it would fill half the paper." Miss Guilder early wrote paragraphs for a daily, and also took charge of the musical criticisms of the same, and since has been doing constantly what our critic says a woman cannot do—reporting concerts, theaters, etc., until she was asked, like a certain guest in the olden time, "to come up higher." Miss Guilder was reporter for The New York Tribune, on Scribner's Magazine, literary editor of the Herald, writing book reviews, reporting lectures, until 1880, she started The Critic, which has become a permanent and paying enterprise.

Alice Stone Blackwell, junior editor of The Woman's Journal, Boston, says: "It is hard work, yet it has its compensations; in college phrase, it is fun. The opportunity is great, so is the responsibility. As a profession for women it has grand advantages." To the advice to cultivate veracity, courtesy, charity, and avoid that flippant cynicism which is the leprosy of modern journalism, she adds, "and keep a scrap book." Miss Blackwell did not need to "capture journalism." She was born into it. She is there by the right of heritage, for long before many of the callow males who court journalistic fame and sneer at woman, had entered their paths to glory, her mother, Lucy Stone, with a few other noble women, had given new trend to the ambitions and achievements of her sex, through journalism.

Mrs. Laura C. Holloway, formerly of the Brooklyn Eagle, was of an old Virginia family, but born at Nashville, Tenn. As a young lady she was intimately associated with President Johnson's family, leading to her being a welcome guest at the White House. Here she gathered the material for her famous book, "The Ladies of the White House." While still quite a young lady she was invited to a place on the Eagle, but previously was of the Union force under Henry C. Bowen, and associated with Mary Clemmer Ames. On the Eagle she remained thirteen years, leaving for rest and Europe. She edited Miss Cleveland's first book, George Eliot's poetry, and various other books, but is now devoting her time and talents to The Women's World. Mrs. Holloway commenced journalism young and frail, but not having learned that a woman's place was "outside a printing office," she has won success. She is a typical Southern woman in her tastes, and as truly a born journalist as though she wore a mustache and pompadoured her hair.

The editors of the Boston Traveller have not learned that Lilian Whiting's place is "outside a newspaper office." An Illinois girl, raised on a Bureau county farm, she has fought her way to fame, until cultured and exclusive Boston bows in homage to the Prairie state maiden.

Mrs. Esther T. Housh, of the Women's Magazine, of Brattleboro, Vt., is another lady who did not "know her place," and became a journalist. She was a clergyman's daughter, reared in an atmosphere of books. So before leaving college she became a writer for the press. About 1876 she organized this magazine at Louisville, Ky., five years later removing to Vermont, where she now resides. Any one who has seen this magazine will be assured that one woman, at least, is not out of place.

Marion A. McBride, of Boston, has been recognized, even by some men known to fame, as a newspaper success. To her, as to many another girl, Susan B. Anthony was the inspiration of her life. She desired "to do something," and as between kitchen work at $2 per week and being out of place in a newspaper office at $24 per week, she chose the latter. In 1880 she was on the Boston Post, and was detailed to report the Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Fair. She thought she could not, as there were fifty firms to write up, and their specialties were dynamos, motors, meters, mill gates, etc., covering many things she did not know at sight, and more she had never heard of. But she took her place and made so good use of eyes and ears and pen, as to lead to her permanent oversight of that department for four years. There she organized a department of woman's work, interesting Julia Ward Howe, Mrs. Livermore, Mrs. Walcott, Lucy Stone and others, to give an immense impetus to the recognition of woman's fitness for something higher than domestic service.

She says: "Women in journalism are a necessity, for they read between the lines of daily life, and if they will go forward determined to be at all times thoroughly unselfish and true, the world will bless the feminine side of the journalistic profession."

"The sense of impartial justice is not strong in woman," says our writer. Shade of Helen Hunt Jackson, whose earnest pleadings for justice to the red men revolutionized the policy of a great nation, enlighten the understanding of this our critic! Woman is the conscience of civilization, and "impartial justice" is her pride, her defense, her life.

"Some women can write very sweet spring poetry," says our friend. "Ah!" says Mrs. Sigourney. "Indeed!" whispers Elizabeth Oakes Smith. "Can this mean us?" asks Lucretia and Martha Davidson. "And is this fame?" sighs Lydia Maria Child; while Mrs. Browning, Mrs. Hemans, Mary Howett, Mary Clemmer Ames, Julia Ward Howe, and a host of others review the immortal songs which have made them famous while touching the hearts of nations, and wonder if these are known to this age of culture and elegance, as "spring poetry."

"Woman no mission in journalism?" queries Harriet Beecher Stowe, as she looks upon a race whose enfranchisement was made possible by the pathos of little Eva, and the prayers of Uncle Tom. "Woman no mission in journalism?" asks Miss Frances E. Willard, as with pen and speech she pleads for human advancement and home purity, an organizer whose influence has developed a dormant force into an active, aggressive, herculean political power.

"Should women stay outside the printing-office?" queries all that noble, self-sacrificing band of humanity-loving women, who during the last half century have been in the advance, leading a forlorn hope against debauchery and drunkenness, until now there seems to come the breaking dawn of a brighter day—a day when justice and purity, and a broad philanthropy shall rule the nation. In the light of history it is an error. Women have found a mission in journalism, and right plainly do they intimate an intention to occupy the field.

For one I yield to the inevitable. I even believe that the verdict of the future will sustain their right, and honor those who led the advance guard. When many of the great men of to-day shall be remembered only in family legend, when many of the nations of to-day shall be remembered only in their unread histories, when city hall and custom house and state capitol, with many other boodle efforts of the genius of our manly age shall have crumbled into dust, then will the history of woman's progress during the last forty years be written in glowing words of eulogy, an illuminated page in the history of the race, a broad development of human force, wherein woman asserted her right to share in the world's industries, a right to rise above dependency. I welcome the age. I am ready to yield the place—not because it is a woman, but for the better reason that I own her power to grasp and hold it.

Sandwich, Ill.

World's W. C. T. U.

MRS. LEAVITT IN EUROPE.

(Concluded.)

Mrs. Stuckenberg, the wife of the minister at the American Church, called a meeting at her house, and this was the only gathering possible in Berlin in summer. This was a most agreeable occasion to me, and I hope will be the means of opening up more work in the autumn on my return from the North.

Baron Knoblesdorp, a colonel in the army, has become a total abstainer, and has resigned his commission and given himself up to temperance work. He holds meetings once a week in different quarters of the city, but makes no effort for any but the poor. He kindly invited me to three of these meetings, and I promised to go. A German who teaches English was to be at one of them, and it was supposed he would interpret for me, but he said he did not understand English well enough. The second night, rain, considering the state of my health, prevented me from going, but the third, weather, health and an interpreter were in conjunction, and I spoke to a small chapel full of earnest-faced people, some keen, some heavy, but all intent.

In this chapel, as in all others I have entered in Germany, there is back of the pulpit, or altar, a carved figure of Christ on the cross. The first feeling was painful. "How Romish," I said to myself, but my second thought was more correct. The Romish thought is of bringing others into co-partnership with Christ, for salvation, for help, for worship, and even putting Mary above Him in fact, however it may be in theory.

I was sufficiently rested and recovered at the end of ten days to go on to Copenhagen, but Mrs. Selmer could not receive me till a week later. This delay gave me an opportunity to see something more of the city than I otherwise should. One cannot but rejoice that the present Emperor will build a new cathedral instead of another palace, as there is a plethora of the latter and very few churches, only fifty for a city larger than New York. I tried to attend service at "The Dome," but after standing fifteen minutes before service began, and half an hour after, and seeing no signs that the locked pews would be opened, I went away. I heard afterward from one who was more patient or stronger than I, that the pews are unlocked just before the beginning of the sermon. It was with real regret that I left Mrs. Willard's, and the small vacation circle I found there. The school is a blessing to all the young ladies who avail themselves of it. The number of pupils being limited, there is never crowding; the rooms are large, airy and beautiful; the situation in the healthiest and most beautiful part of this fine city.

I was very much pleased to meet Miss Ames and make the acquaintance of another of my correspondents. Long may she flourish the editorial quill and snip with the editorial scissors. The journey to Copenhagen lasted twelve hours, and is wearisome, as there are many changes, three trains and two steamboats being employed, but it is very interesting. The country rises into some gentle swells in Germany, and after entering Denmark, there is still more variety of surface. A most pleasing feature is that the villages are isolated houses, each in its own garden, and far enough from all neighbors so that a child may cry, or children may laugh or shout without fear of being hushed lest they disturb others. In England and France, the long line of houses all under one roof, with a plat of ground as big as a sheet behind the house and the pavement under the windows in front, were a painful sight. We human beings need a little more elbow room, a little more family privacy.

A recent letter from Rev. Mr. Johnstone reports that the committee of gentlemen in Free Town, Sierra Leone, which was formed at my last meeting there, has organized, with Bishop Ingham as president; Rev. Mr. Johnstone, vice-president, and Rev. J. C. May as secretary, and with the name of "Evangelical Reform Association of Sierra Leone." Its avowed objects are "to promote all Christian and moral reforms, and especially total abstinence and purity, and to seek to influence the government to prohibit the traffic in intoxicants on the west coast of Africa." At the first public meeting, May 6, 1890, forty-nine signed the total abstinence pledge, and forty-two the purity. Of these thirty-two signed both pledges. Knowing well the spirit with which this work is undertaken, the plans of work, and also the peculiar circumstances of the town, I believe this society of men, in connection with the W. C. T. U., by the blessing of God, will work a great reformation in Sierra Leone. Let it be remembered that the "mission" of Rev. Mr. Selwyn, of London, was the first means of bringing about these results. As he said, "organizations must conserve the results of your work and mine." These organizations, by the blessing of God, are thus effected. It was worth the while to suffer a little from fever, and to be, perhaps, permanently weakened, if one may be the means of securing such an end.

I cannot close this letter without a word more about our great petition. And still, I have spoken of it so many times that I fear I shall weary you. It will be the great awakener and educator of the governments. The news of the starting of the company of ladies that present it will flash around the world, reaching these eastern lands before you are reading the report of proceedings at Washington. And when the ladies leave Canada for the dear old mother country, we know what preparations will be made, and what reception awaits them there. If the masses of educated, influential people do not notice one American woman, going quietly from one country to another on this continent of Europe, they must, and will, notice such a company as we shall send; thus this petition will be the educator of the educated.

If we could hope that all the governments would act upon it at once, I suppose there is not a member of the W. C. T. U. who would "run her legs off" to get names. But that is too much to expect. Should no government act favorably upon it, still it would have a great influence in bringing about the time my heart is almost broken with longing for, when the natives of Madagascar and Africa, of Ceylon, Burmah and Hindostan shall no more be debauched and slain by drink, sent from Christian United States, Christian England, Christian Germany.

There ought to be a million, nay, five million signatures in the United States. There were, some years ago, six millions of women in the Christian church in the United States. Why not, then, at least five million signatures?

I know you are busy. I know what it is to snatch an hour from a day crowded full of home duties, to do a bit of temperance work. I know what it is to be obliged to neglect some things of less importance to accomplish something of greater moment. As in the sight of God, I ask you to take up this work at once, and do it thoroughly, that the result will be all that we hope. And now I shall not speak or write of it more to my American sisters, to the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL. When calls come from so many lands for me to write them tracts suited to their needs, I must not take time I might use for them to reiterate my poor, weak call to you, who have so many stronger voices at home.

I am sure I shall not be forgotten in your noontide prayers. You all know too well how I need them, need the answers that will come, for strength of body, strength of will, wisdom, purity of purpose to do all things that rest upon me. As ever your sister,

MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT.

Copenhagen, July 23, 1890.

TEMPERANCE AND THE SABBATH IN THE HAWAIIAN KINGDOM.

THE AVA; HIGH LICENSE AND LIGHT DRINKS; SABBATH LAWS.

HONOLULU, July 30, 1890.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—This gem of the ocean is full of attractions, and not least in interest is the fact that here is the vigorous first-born child of our World's W. C. T. U. It has a difficult field. The seven islands comprising the Hawaiian Kingdom have a cosmopolitan population of 80,000, one-half natives, one-fourth Chinese, and of the remainder only 1,300 are English speaking.

The W. C. T. U. has its membership exclusively among the last class, but its influence is felt beyond. It receives and disburses $600 a year, keeps a missionary at work among the natives, and watches over the entire temperance interests of the islands. Its popular and wide-awake president, Mrs. Mary Rice Whitney, in whose charming home I am entertained, is one of the loveliest "all around" women I ever knew; I have known her from her childhood, and her husband and children are worthy of her.

The native intoxicant is ava, a root which is cultivated and chewed socially, a group sitting round a central dish, each chewing his root and spitting into the common receptacle. When enough has been accumulated it is strained and drank. In its effects it resembles both opium and liquor, and one teaspoonful will produce as much effect as a glass of whisky. The King is said to have his ava chewer, and the government derives a considerable revenue from its sale and that of alcoholic liquors which are consumed at the rate of five gallons yearly for every man, woman and child.

Latterly the sales of spirituous liquors have decreased, while those of vinous and fermented liquor have largely increased, and the crimes and arrests for drunkenness have increased in the same ratio, showing that light drinks produce as bad effects as whisky.

The Sabbath question is attracting much attention. Some members of legislature were elected on the distinct pledge that if possible the Sabbath law should be greatly modified. The foreigners were more desirous of this than the natives, but the danger was so great it was thought best to forestall the effort, and my help was engaged. The W. C. T. U. petitioned the legislature to grant me a hearing; they replied courteously asking the union to name a time, which was done. Besides this address, several others were given on the temperance and Sabbath questions, both in English and Hawaiian, and the outlook is good for preservation of the Sabbath laws.

The ocean voyage of a week was delightful, and the five weeks spent in this city and touring among the islands gave me new impressions of the attractiveness and importance of these islands. The climate is perfect, the scenery beautiful, grand, unique; but all else pales before the boiling lake and fountain of fire 5,000 feet up the side of Mauna Loa, the largest active volcano in the world, and perhaps the grandest manifestation of God's power the world can show.

One week more and I shall take up the work where I left it in California, and pursue my winding way via Portland, St. Paul and Chicago to our National convention at Atlanta, Ga.

MRS. J. C. BATEHAM.

THE SALVATION ARMY IN CHICAGO.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I recently attended a meeting of the Salvation Army in Chicago, and was profoundly impressed by their wit at getting money. They charged fifteen cents admission, and had Clark Street M. E. Church packed. Their publications were passed from pew to pew for sale, all quietly, and without interrupting the proceedings. When they came to take the collection, the charming little Buddhist priest (converted to Christianity, and only twenty-one years of age, reminding me strongly of our Pundita Ramabai) made a speech in broken English that was enough to capture every cent in the audience. Then he and others of their human menagerie went along the aisles, taking whatever people would give, and offering every one a blank to be filled out at leisure with a promise to pay any sum they might think proper. The amounts were read out when they were one dollar and over, and then Captain Booth said, "Pelt us with silver, if you like," whereupon quarters, half dollars, and dollars were flung from the galleries on the platform, and the Army people bobbed for them like boys for cherries. "You may fling gold, if you want to," said Captain Ballington Booth. All was in the best spirit, without confusion, but with ever so much most harmless fun; and the meeting had life in it without a question, and was to me a great refreshment after the exceedingly cut and dried ways and manners that I have been used to in other assemblies. When somebody made a good point, and stopped to take his breath, Captain Booth in his stentorian English voice would call out, "Fire a volley," and hundreds of "amens" in chorus would rouse up the speaker to go himself a good many better on his next point. Yet there was nothing uproarious. I do not know when I have enjoyed a meeting more. Mrs. Ballington Booth is a beauty, in spirit, mind, and body. If she had gone on the stage she would have had her picture hawked in the tobacconists' windows. As it is, that lovely face is at a premium in the homes of the purest and best. She is the daughter of a rector in the Church of England, and a woman of great accomplishments, but simple as a child, and laughingly informed the audience that she had been stoned in the streets of Chicago.

The Army was organized twenty-five years ago, and has recently celebrated its quarter-century birthday by a street procession in London, where forty-five thousand Salvationists fell into line. It is now in working order in thirty-six nations, countries and colonies. No movement in modern times has done so much for the two-fold causes of temperance and social purity. While we may not warmly approve every person and peculiarity of the Salvation Army, I believe every Christian heart must sincerely indorse its purposes and results. Mrs. Ballington Booth has the entrée of the finest drawing-rooms in New York City, and has produced such an effect, through her Bible readings there, that New York Christians among the rich are warming toward the Salvation Army. A leading stock-broker lately said, "I am converted; I'd even take off my hat to the big drum;" "And well he might," said Mrs. Booth, in her lovely, earnest way, "if he knew what it has been with its drum-beat around the world, and its loving invitation to those who thought themselves lost and forgotten." One of the East India workers said that twenty-five dollars would support a Salvation Army missionary for one year in those countries, food and clothing are so cheap, and because the Salvationists adopt the customs of the natives, wearing their simple costume, living on rice, having the primitive houses, furniture, etc., which suffice for the aborigines in that warm climate. This brings the workers from England and America very much nearer to the hearts of the population they desire to reach. I have never heard a finer motto than this, which has in it the spirit of their movement: "Bring the people to Christ."

Another feature that I admire is the new world of holy endeavor this Army opens to the comparatively illiterate. I am told that a hired girl from the home of one of our professors in the University at Evanston, was converted and joined the Army at its Evanston headquarters. She went forth with them and has become a leader, having great native ability. That is a new and wonderful thought in missions, to send to each class men and women who come from an analogous stratification of society in our own country. Send out carpenters, masons, shoemakers, and let them ply their vocation on the other side of the world, meanwhile preaching Christ to the people, by their lives as well as their lips.

The Buddhist priest from Ceylon who spoke to us with such a vim, in his own language, was publicly consecrated to the priesthood when eight years old, ordained at eighteen, whereupon he assumed the sacred garments, white and yellow, that he wore on this occasion, and had become, before he was twenty, famous among the Cingalese as a sort of Talmage, by reason of his phenomenal zeal and eloquence. He has a beautiful, kind face, bright withal, and his gestures are most expressive. At the end of every two or three sentences another convert from Ceylon, a fine fellow of the lower class, I judge, translated into English, having been longer under the influence of those who spoke that language. It was a delightful little discourse, of which this figure stays with me. He spoke about the nightingale, which does not sing when it is dark, but with the coming of the sweet light of morning sets its wonderful orchestra in motion. "So," he said, "my soul was dark, my heart could not sing when I was a Pagan; but now, when the light of Christ has shone into my soul and shown me there is one God and one mediator between God and man, I have become a hallelujah nightingale." The audience was in such sympathy with these two dark-faced brethren from far away, that we obeyed their request to sing in Cingalese the chorus, "I am clinging to the cross," and one hardly knew whether to laugh or cry at seeing twenty-five hundred Chicagoans keeping time with their hands, calling out "Kurusinga langa den mama," as the priest wished them to, and singing that sweet old tune in the guttural words of Ceylon, that country concerning which we have so often sung, "Where every prospect pleases, and only man is vile." Here we were, led by precentors from that island, whose lives and characters are such that, as I told the audience when invited to speak, if we could import the whole island over here, and they would live as true and pure as these men, we should soon cease to sing our ancient missionary hymn.

Profiting by their example in raising money, let me warmly commend to our local unions the printing of a blank, setting forth in a few sentences, our work, and having at the bottom something like this: "Approving the above mentioned methods, I hereby agree to give ——— dollars monthly to forward this work in my own town."

I suggested that a fraternal delegate be sent by the Salvation Army to our annual meeting, as is the custom of Good Templars, Knights of Labor, etc., that we might understand each other better, and some political papers misrepresented my utterances—as their custom is!

God bless the Salvation Army, with its warm hand of welcome for "the great humanity that beats its life along the stony streets." FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Sky Parlor, Evanston, Aug. 22, 1890.

As the absurd story started by a Chicago daily concerning a union of the Salvation Army and the W. C. T. U. has spread like wildfire, as the manner of false reports is, we add to our denial of it the testimony of Mrs. Ballington Booth, contained in a personal letter to Miss Willard.—ED.:

Upon returning to New York City, I found that the New York press had made a statement that the W. C. T. U. had amalgamated with the Salvation Army; I thought I would just pen you a line to say that this statement shall be corrected by us, and that we will be careful to inform the press that you only occupied the Army platform a few minutes to show your good will toward our work, and that there has been no union of the two movements. . . . . I shall certainly try to be with you at Atlanta so that I can then publicly express the warm and sisterly relations which exist between the two movements, and also explain a little to those assembled there the real aim and object of the Salvation Army, and the work it is accomplishing in the suppression of vice and the advancement of the dear Kingdom which is, indeed, more than life to us.

Yours affectionately in the Holy war for God, the Army and America. MAUD B. BOOTH.

CHAUTAUQUA ASSEMBLY NOTES.

The thousands of white ribbons seen at Chautauqua, through the Assembly, testify eloquently to widespread interest in W. C. T. U. work. No woman's toilet seems quite complete without the bit of ribbon which silently voices her principles. White-ribboners have cause for congratulation upon the fact that no other organization has such generous treatment from the general management at Chautauqua as theirs. The beautiful Anna M. Kellogg memorial building gives elegant headquarters where kindred spirits gather from all parts of our great land.

W. T. P. A. publications have had a remarkably large sale at the W. C. T. U. tent, and whoever has gone away from this beautiful place none the wiser or better for the W. C. T. U. privileges afforded, can have had very little interest in the work. Mrs. S. M. I. Henry has had in charge the W. C. T. U. conferences held at the 8 o'clock Woman's Club meetings, from Aug. 14 to 23. The attendance from the first has been large and not entirely made up of ladies; some gentlemen, too, made the discovery of the Woman's Club from which they were not shut out. A witty speaker put the query, "Whoever heard of a man's club meeting at 8 o'clock in the morning?" The name "club" was decided to be eminently fitting, for was not this the place we came to learn to use our weapons (clubs)? Of all the enjoyable features of Chautauqua life from day to day, this early morning meeting has been looked forward to with the most interest by many. Topics of special interest connected with almost all lines of our work were discussed, the discussion usually being opened by some able speaker. A special interest was manifested in the subject of physical training as a means of prevention of intemperance. Dr. Anderson, of Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, was present on two mornings, giving the women much valuable information. So much interest was shown that the ladies were invited to the gymnasium where they were given an illustrative lesson. Mrs. Henry enthusiastically proclaimed Dr. Anderson a "minister of the gospel." Dr. A. is devoting his life to giving "the ounce of prevention" which will obviate the necessity of "the pound of cure."

Mr. Habberton, the "Lion" of Chautauqua this year, for everybody has in hand his touching little story, "All He Knew," which every W. C. T. U. woman ought to read, was warmly received while he told the women about what he knew of slöyd, and his ideas of how it could be used in juvenile temperance work. Mrs. Henry's right hand woman has been Mrs. Hon. W. H. Palmer, whose husband stood at the head of the temperance hosts in the Pennsylvania amendment campaign. She is the mother of Mrs. Geo. Vincent. She is ever ready, very aggressive, and right to the point in her remarks. She thinks one of the problems we have to solve is the one of disorganized temperance sentiment. There are women who are sort of "still-life" landscapes, negative temperance workers who, like the negative of a photograph, must be brought out. It must be our business to bring them out, to put a soul into the landscape. This can be done by wise, womanly, patient work. Organization is to the work of individuals what a company of trained soldiers is to a mob of civilians. Many attending the meetings are not members of our organization, but it is safe to predict they will soon become such. The conferences are open, and many other distinguished ladies have taken part. Dr. Deems gave a cheery, inspiriting talk the morning after his address, which was a rare treat indeed. If the people generally knew the advantages of a season at Chautauqua the attendance already very large would be vastly increased.

Year after year a great influence for temperance (as for every other good thing) goes out from Chautauqua, for on her popular platforms appear from time to time our most eminent apostles of reform. This year the place of honor was given to Dr. Charles F. Deems who, on Friday afternoon, August 15, presented the liquor problem to an immense audience that he deeply impressed by his facts, figures and fancies. He treated the question from the standpoint of a political economist as one of the greatest importance. He touched up the political situation in these words: "I find two parties, the Republican and Democratic. The rum-sellers constitute a third party. They have bound themselves together, and they do not care for either Democrat or Republican, so he will do what the rum-sellers wish. You and I, and the rest of the citizens of this country take for Governor of any state or President of the United States any gentleman the rum-sellers will let us have." He closed by saying: "I see the difficulties of prohibition. There was once an old Roman senator, who was accustomed to conclude every speech he made in the senate with these words: 'Carthago delenda est'—Carthage must be destroyed. He knew that as long as Carthage existed Rome would have woe. For the Prohibition Party he would have the watchword, 'Caupona delenda est'—the saloon must be destroyed; and I would set aside every other issue until our country did see the saloon destroyed." Dr. Deems came in place of our beloved Clinton B. Fisk, deceased.

The W. C. T. U. conference this year is a new departure for Chautauqua, but it is hoped that it may be a feature hereafter that may draw together large numbers of our women. Too much praise cannot be given Mrs. Henry for the masterly way in which she has conducted this conference. There has been the greatest freedom of speech, but utmost harmony has prevailed. So-called nonpartisans and regulars have sat together and discussed plans of waging war against the saloon and for the protection of the home.

Chautauqua has been said to be "vitalized organization," and there is much that we can learn from the methods used here. To very many white-ribboners the mystic symbols C. L. S. C. are only less dear than the magic ones W. C. T. U. LUCY PAGE GASTON.

THE BATTLE OF NEBRASKA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Seven months have come and gone since we sounded our first note for prohibition in Nebraska. We have spoken in thirty counties and their principal towns. We have followed the Big Muddy (Missouri) crossed and re-crossed the Platte, the Elkhorn, Big Blue and Little Blue rivers; touched the famous Niobrara with the rod of prohibition truth, glanced at Covington, opposite Sioux City, Iowa, known as the nearest approach to hell between the seas; lectured in Omaha, and studied it for future use, and now with only two months before the final struggle can simply say:

The amendment battle in Nebraska is fierce and furious. We expect no quarter—we give none. On one side are ample means, low devilish cunning, artifice and avarice, mendacity bordering on insanity, so glaring, so flagrant, and so shocking is it; violence manifested here and there in personal attack and destruction of property; moral cowardice most despicable, desertion and treason, this, and much more on the side of —— WRONG.

This is more than matched by honesty and fair dealing, with patience and forbearance, with prayer and Christian song, with unbounded trust and faith in God and the right; with figures, facts, statistics, logic, argument, open and full discussion, a stubborn insistence that will admit of no retreat, an invincible determination, rising to the sublimely heroic; all this, and much more on the side of——RIGHT.

When the last hour of this amendment battle shall be fought on the 4th of November, will the stars shine on a commonwealth with the black flag of the drink traffic shaking its death folds over it, or will the white banner of peace and purity be borne in triumph across this Empire state of the West—golden Nebraska? An awful responsibility rests on the church of the living God and all professing Christians, for they can answer this question and can settle it. If the church does its duty now, the death knell of the gigantic iniquity of Nebraska will be sounded.

Armed with God's eternal truth we intend to battle with this deadly and damning foe to mankind. The Master says: "He that is not for me is against me," and there can be no doubt as to which side He is on in this irrepressible conflict. Christian brother! under which banner are you fighting? Shall we battle with the Lord against this giant rock of evil, bringing against it the battering ram of truth, or shall we act the moral coward, cringing still to the rum-seller, and allow him to continue to rule us? E. T. SCOTT.

THE WORK AMONG THE COLORED PEOPLE IN KANSAS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—This department, under the direction of its able superintendent, Miss M. J. Mitchell, is receiving just now, considerable attention. An organization called the Protective Home Association has been formed, having for its object the erection of a home for aged and orphans among the race; and while possessing its own charter and own officers, it stands as the recognized work of the W. C. T. Unions in the state. A great impetus has lately been given the project by the donation of a piece of valuable land in the city of Leavenworth, by one of its lady citizens. This gift is subject to certain conditions, and Miss Mitchell is making heroic efforts to meet the requirements and thus secure this generous donation. One thousand dollars are needed almost at once. The project ought to attract the attention of the colored race and its friends everywhere, and help should be extended at once. The need of such a Home is apparent everywhere, and nowhere more so than in Kansas, the home of so many thousands of negroes. In every town may be found aged colored people dependent entirely upon home charity, which many of them find cold indeed. In every town there are scores of orphans who are the wards of their own race. State orphan asylums are not overflowing with colored children notwithstanding the clause which declaims against condition, race or color. It is to be hoped that the colored people of every state will feel that this is their own special opportunity and lend a hand to the colored work of the Kansas W. C. T. U. S. M. HARTOUGH.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Dear white-ribbon sister, brother, boy or girl: Have you a Temple mite-box on your table? If not, write to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, inclosing a two-cent stamp, and it will be promptly sent you on condition that you will drop into it a cent a day, or its equivalent, during the next twelve months. Mite-boxes in quantities will also be sent to unions for the cost of transportation.

Temple bulletins and descriptive cards always accompany the boxes.

***

Mrs. H. B. Schwomaker, Wauwatosa, Wis., is deeply interested in the erection of the Temple. She writes: "I wish there might come a Temple wave of enthusiasm over all our women." I want to say to her and others equally interested that the wave is sweeping in, and we believe before long it will become a tidal wave. The letters daily received give evidence of this, and they also evince a spirit of self-sacrifice which is most refreshing in a world where so much selfishness predominates. Mrs. Jane C. Miller, Oberlin, Ohio, writes: "I have an undying interest in the Temple, but could not get matters in shape to help you until now. By making a sacrifice I am able to do so. Inclosed find draft for $100, which it gives me great pleasure to forward. I am grateful to my Heavenly Father for the privilege; it is His cause. I am coming to the World's Fair, and hope to see the Temple with my own eyes." J. W. Allyn, Cleveland, Ohio, sends for a mite-box, and writes: "I am a hard-working compositor, but think I can at least promise you $25 per year towards the funds for that grand Temple, which will be one more tangible proof of woman's capabilities and powers." The following letter comes from an earnest soul, Mrs. S. J. Bedell, Atlanta, Ga. She sends for two mite-boxes, and says: "I am a dress-maker. I am going to keep one of the boxes in my reception room, and one in my fitting room. Maybe I can get a few mites. I preach temperance to my customers, work-hands, and everywhere I go. I am slipping my UNION SIGNAL in wherever I can get persons to read it. May God hasten the time when rum shall be no more."

***

Mrs. C. A. Selden, Cooksville, Ill., writes: "Ever since the Temple has been talked of, I have hoped to be able to send a little donation. I could not bear to think that the Temple should go up with never a mite from me. I got a mite-box, and have been saving not pennies alone, but just what I could spare. I am a widow with a little boy to educate by my own hard work. I am now so thankful to add to my mites enough to make it $5, which amount please find inclosed. This with my prayers is all I have now to give." Five dollars from this widow is probably a much larger sum for her than $500 would be to many a rich woman who may read this, and who thus far has not given anything.

Mrs. Harriet Mason, of Attica, N. Y., writes: "Enclosed find $10, my first installment of a $100, which I hope to send for the Temple. I am greatly interested in the building and have been from the first. I think it the grandest undertaking of the W. C. T. U., although they have done so many grand things. I consider it a privilege to have a hand in the building." Mrs. E. H. Lord, of Arcata, Cal., writes: "The children and I have $5 in our Temple box, so will send it and not wait the year (October 16). Will try and have as much more by that time. We are very much interested in the Temple and hope one of my boys, if not more, will see it at the World's Fair." Can't we have more such united family giving as this? Mrs. C. A. Ingham, Algona, Ia., sends $5, and says: "In reading the 'Temple Items' in THE UNION SIGNAL, something seemed to say to me, 'Perhaps you can make a little offering to help in this great work.' I would not be silent when so noble an enterprise calls for help. Enclosed please find my gift." God grant that other dear white-ribboners may hear and respond to the small, still voice which calls them to give either out of their abundance or from their poverty, a suitable gift for the great building. Remember $6 from each member of the W. C. T. U. would entirely pay for the Temple.

***

Mrs. S. A. Packard and Mrs. B. A. Leeds, Santa Clara, Cal., each send $1 for the Mother Thompson Tablet.

***

A Temple wave of enthusiasm has touched the Loyal Temperance Legion, evidently, as their interest in the Temple seems to daily increase. Miss T. Greaves, superintendent Westfield, N. J., Loyal Temperance Legion, sends $12; she says, "A part of this money was raised from a magic lantern exhibition given by one of our boys. The children are much interested in the progress of the Temple." Table Grove, Ill., Loyal Temperance Legion sends, through its superintendent, Miss Prudence E. Berry, $5 for the autographs of fifty of its members to be placed under the corner-stone. The following Loyal Temperance Legion have lately sent money, the amounts being all under $5. Most of the money sent is for autograph lists for the corner-stone. Wallkill, N. Y., Loyal Temperance Legion; Northville, Mich., Loyal Temperance Legion; Rock Falls, Ill., Band of Hope; Yorkville, Ill., Loyal Temperance Legion; Idlewood, Pa., Loyal Temperance Legion; Williamson, N. Y., Loyal Temperance Legion. Miss Myra Plummer, secretary of the Bradford, Ill., Loyal Temperance Legion, sends for fifty mite-boxes. Miss Claire Day, superintendent of the Moweaqua, Ill., Loyal Temperance Legion, sends for one dozen mite-boxes.

***

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

SAY "NO."

[This poem, which will soon appear in "Pollard's Third Reader," shows a good way of teaching temperance to school children.]

In the battle of life you have started, my boy,
And it lies with yourself to succeed;
You can be what you will if you only resolve
To ask for advice and take heed;
There are foes to resist; there are tempters to shun;
These will meet you wherever you go;
But conquests are made, and life's triumphs are won,
By boys who have strength to say, "No."

There are billows to breast, there are tempests to brave,
There are crosses and burdens to bear;
On highway and by-way the unwary feet
Are prisoned by pitfall and snare.
So many have perished who started aright,
Allured by earth's glitter and show;
But the conquering heroes who stood in their might
Were those who could firmly say "No."

Then choose at the onset, and write while you may
The record no hand can efface;
Your name may be wreathed with a garland of bay
Or blotted with shame and disgrace.
Be warned by the thousands who stumble and fall;
Be watchful, wherever you go,
And when you reply to the tempter's low call,
Have courage, my boy, to say "No."

A TWENTIETH CENTURY PATRIOT.

BY MRS. OLIVE A. CURTIS.

[A story founded on the G. A. R. Encampment, held at Boston, August, 1890.]

The police had gone through Washington street, beating the people back, back, close up against the massive buildings and into the narrow cross streets. Then the mounted horsemen had followed to complete this work, filling with terror the hearts of women and children and even stalwart men, who would gladly have made room but could find no farther inch of standing place. And now the great procession is passing, first hushing the vast crowds into silence, and then forcing them into loud huzzas, as the deep significance of the scene surges in upon them.

How like a hero every old veteran looks! and how sacred the tattered battle flags seem! No wonder they are carried proudly even by those aching, aged hands, for as they grasp the precious standard, does it not seem that they are giving themselves right over again to their country—yes, ready again "to die to make men free, while God is marching on!"

Harry Walters and his mother were sitting in an upper window on Washington street, where they could look back into the face of the procession and see it approaching before it reached them. Mrs. Walters had been explaining to her eager boy, who the mounted soldiers were, and what all the banners and various insignia meant. He had listened intently and then sat quietly for some time, with his hand clasped tightly in his mother's, and his eyes fastened on the passing ranks of men. He was thinking of his own brave brother, whom he had never seen, who had given his life for his country and died on the battle-field. He had often seen his beautiful, young face in the round gilt frame in his mother's room, with the stars and stripes always hanging over it.

And this morning just before they left home, for the first time in his life, his mother had shown him the suit of blue, and the sword, which his brother had worn on the field. How proud he felt of his brother at this moment! and how he wished he could say something to comfort his dear, gentle mother, for the tears were falling very fast from her pale cheeks.

At last he said, moving closer to her, "Mother, I wish I could do something for my country, as brother did," and then added musingly, "I'm sorry I didn't live in time to do something for my country."

The mother smiled fondly into his face, as she took it caressingly between her hands, and questioned him, "So my boy thinks there is nothing he can do for his country?"

"No, what is there? The slaves are free and there will never be another war, you have said," and Harry looked very sober over this condition of national affairs.

"No, I believe my boy will never be called upon to serve his country in war. But yet our country needs loyal citizens more than it ever did before, perhaps."

"What to do, mamma?"

"There is a slavery worse than the slavery of the black man, Harry. For it not only miserably destroys men, but ties up the hands of the men who are free from this slavery, so they do nothing to help the poor, poor slaves."

"I think you mean the slavery of rum, mother."

"Yes, my boy, that worst of all slavery. Oh, how I loathe and hate it!"

They were quiet for a few moments, until the mother grew calm again. Then she went on.

"I want you, Harry, to grow up to be such a patriot that you will not be afraid to risk everything for your country, even the good will of your friends and neighbors. It isn't always so easy to enlist in this kind of warfare, as in the battles these brave men fought in. Do you understand me, Harry?"

"I think I am beginning to, mamma."

"And do you think you will be brave enough to take a firm stand against this terrible slavery, and fight against it even with your votes, when you are older?"

"Oh, yes, mamma, I want to."

"Do you remember all I told you about that good man, Clinton B. Fisk, who died a few weeks ago? How he offered even his name to this great cause, at the risk of his reputation? and how he gave his time and work and money to every reform his country needed? So that when he died it was said, 'It is a national loss.' That is just the kind of a patriot I would like my boy to grow up to be. For it is the patriot our country needs to enlist under her banners to-day."

Half an hour later, Harry was standing on the curb-stone below, for his mother had given him permission to go where he could get "close up to those old soldiers for a little while," as he said. He attracted the attention of many a mother as he stood there so alert and manly, his face kindled with enthusiasm, and every fiber of his body aglow with life and animation, while he was wholly absorbed in watching the procession filing slowly past him.

Soon among the troops there came down the street, perched fearlessly upon the shoulder of her soldier papa, a dainty little two-year-old girl, clad all in white. How it pleased and rested every one to see her, and how proud her father looked! Harry watched her with sparkling eyes. Just then he became conscious of some one making a disturbance near him, and as the little girl's father came opposite him, the half-drunken fellow rushed out as if intending to trip him up and unseat the little maiden.

A murmur of horror came from those near by. Quicker than thought Harry rushed in between them, pushed the drunken man aside, and stretched out his arms toward the little girl whose father had well-nigh lost his footing in the suddenness of the encounter.

Heedless of the approval of the crowd about him, Harry asked breathlessly, "Is the little girl all right? She isn't hurt, is she?"

When satisfied that she was safe, he went slowly back to his mother, with a fresh wonder in his young heart as to why drink, which could make a man do a deed so base, had been allowed so long in his country! He told the story to his mother, in his frank, boyish way, little realizing his own bravery in the affair, and as he settled down in his old place by her side to watch the still oncoming ranks of men, she murmured, "Yes, thank God, he will love his country and live for her as his brother did."

"Oh, Land of lands, to thee we give
Our love, our trust, our service free;
For thee our sons shall nobly live,
And at thy need shall die for thee."

Boston, Mass.

STREET CAR MANNERS.

Dear mamma has been visiting me, and every time she comes I am more and more impressed with the thought that I shall not have her always. Her hair grows more and more silver, and her step a little less elastic, and my heart sinks within me at the thought of living without her. I took mamma out one pleasant afternoon to see our new boulevard and as I do not support a carriage I took the electric car, and I am ashamed to say it cost me a little bit of a pang to take mamma in a street-car, for you know she isn't used to street-cars. The first dart that entered my heart was when the conductor gave her an impatient pull because she was a little slow and hesitating as she tried to step up on the platform; then as we entered we found the car quite full of young people—a picnic party, I judge, on a real frolic. I waited a moment supposing of course some one would rise and offer mamma a seat, but as no one stirred I ventured to ask one of the young men if he would kindly give his seat to my mother, as she found it difficult to stand, the car moved so rapidly.

He rose reluctantly, and the girl by his side said to the one next her, in a loud whisper which I could perfectly well hear: "I do wish I could ever go anywhere with Jo that he didn't have to offer his seat to some old woman."

This was too much! I bit my lips and swallowed my tears, and felt for a moment as if I could annihilate the whole company. Mamma sat quietly and apparently unconscious of all that disturbed me, and when we reached our destination and she arose to alight she said, in a very dignified tone with her most gracious manner: "I thank the young gentleman very much for his courtesy to an old woman, and the young lady for the sacrifice she has made. If she should live to be an old woman, I trust some young man will treat her with gentle courtesy and respect."—Mrs. Claflin's "Margaret-Patty Letters," in September Wide Awake.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 14, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 19:11-36; Eccles. 1-6.)

Sunday, 14; Luke 19: 11-36. Verse 11, While this parable of the pounds teaches us that our Lord is to return again, we should carefully avoid any of those earthly-minded Messianic expectations which deceived the disciples, and so many since their time. Verse 13, There is no one that has not received from God gifts, which he is required to use in His service. Verse 21, It is a terrible mistake of sinners to undertake to divert from themselves the guilt of their own wickedness.

Monday, 15; Eccles. 1. Verse 2, When the worldly kingdom of Israel had reached the summit of its glory, its king declares, in this book, the vanity of all earthly objects, pursuits and designs. Verse 9, The world finds no new source of happiness, but from generation to generation goes the same round of petty pleasures, cares, business, study, wars, etc. Is it not time that men should stop looking to the world for happiness, and admit that they need a life hid with Christ in God, and should set their affections on things above? Col. 3:2.

Tuesday, 16; Eccles. 2. Verse 1, Why will not men profit by the experience of Solomon, and stop their vain efforts to obtain happiness by the pursuit of possessions and pleasures? Verse 3, Life is so short that every one should settle the question as soon as possible, What is the true end and chief good of life? Verse 17, When one finds himself weary in his course of life, if he is wise, he will repent and go to his Father. Luke 15:18. Verse 24, God alone bestows all blessings, and we should remember, when we are enjoying the fruits of our toil, that even this is from the hand of God.

Wednesday, 17; Eccles. 3. Verse 1, Like the seasons, the experiences of life come and go. In all of them we should be governed by our reason and God's Word, and keep from all excesses. Verse 17, The objections that had been raised to the existing order of things are met by the fact that there is a coming judgment in which God will vindicate His righteous ways.

Thursday, 18; Eccles. 4. Verse 1, Let us follow the example of our Saviour, and find a blessed use for life by doing all we can to help the poor and oppressed. Luke 4:18. Verse 6, The happy mean between ruinous indolence on the one hand, and the laborious, covetous acquisition of wealth on the other, is that quietness which neither overdoes nor is idle. The course of the idler is foolish; the greedy pursuit of wealth is folly also.

Friday, 19; Eccles. 5. Verse 1, We should have a considerate and reverent mind when we go to worship; and we should avoid the hasty and thoughtless utterance of words in prayer. Verse 11, The advantages of comfort and happiness are not all on the side of the rich; it is not so great a misfortune to be poor, as many in these times make it out to be.

Saturday, 20; Eccles. 6. Verse 1, Wealth, which is usually regarded as so great a good, often proves to be, both to individuals and families, a great evil. Verse 6, Many a rich man finds no good by having riches in this world; and when he dies, he has to leave all behind and go into eternity as the poorest beggar. I Tim. 6:7. Verse 12, Many doubts have been expressed thus far in this book, as to what is good for a man in this life; from this on, we will see more of faith, and truth, and reverence for God.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(God's chosen soldiers and their march to victory. Judges 8:4.)

1. There are only a few in each generation that God is able to use at the front in the battles of this world. It does seem that Gideon ought to have had an army of more than 300; but out of the many, that was all that God chose. God selects His chosen soldiers as He will; and no one should be discouraged because they are few in number, for the history of all reforms shows that in moral conflicts numbers never count.

2. The onward march of God's chosen soldiers may be attended with weariness. Gideon and his 300 men were faint, yet they kept on pursuing. The prophets of the Old, and the apostles of the New Testament, all had their hard times; but God expected them to go forward all the same.

3. When God calls his soldiers He calls them to final victory, and not to defeat. The Lord is their Captain, and they will come at last to victory. In due season we shall reap if we faint not. Gal. 6: 9: Rom. 14:11; Phil. 2:10.

The Household.

A WOMAN'S PRAISE.

BY SARAH K. BOLTON.

They sat upon the rocks beside the sea;
He still a youth, while gray had touched her hair;
She praised him, as a woman may, who, fair,
And strong, and kind, with gentle ministry,
Knows well how great her influence may be.
"I watched your thoughtfulness and tender care
Of a young stranger. In my heart you bear
The name of gentleman, for courtesy."

Years passed, and years divided, as they will,
The boy and woman; yet, from that glad hour,
Sweet deeds of goodness came his life to fill.
Ah, who shall estimate the wondrous power
Of woman's praise—her words for good or ill!
She sowed the seed—eternal blooms that flower.

—Youth's Companion.

ONE OF WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

BY LILY SHERMAN RICE.

The right of private judgment—I mean my right to spend my time or strength or money as I think best, Mrs. Smith's right to do the same. It seemed an obvious right enough. One would say we had it already, Mrs. Smith and I, and all the rest of us. In theory, I suppose we have. But, practically, our habit of association is continually interfering with it. Our organizations—societies, clubs, leagues, chapters, halls and what not—claim the disposal of our time so constantly as to leave us little room for voluntary action. Part of the work they impose, it is true, can be counted on, and planned for, and made to fit in among our other occupations. We could get on with that, if that were all. But the unexpected is always happening.

To me, the unexpected wears the bodily likeness of Mrs. Smith. To her, I fear, it resembles me. Mrs. Smith is president of the "Ladies' Literary League." I am chairman of the executive committee of the "Health and Hygiene Association." I belong to her organization and she to mine—I say "belong to" advisedly, for accuracy, not elegance—and, as the fates will have it, we live directly opposite each other. But I ought not to cast any reflections on the fates. One expects one's neighbor to be president or chairman of something these days. It might as well be the L. L. L. and the H. & H. A. as anything else.

But you can imagine, living opposite, and having each a society written on her heart, that we fly back and forth across the street pretty constantly. "La grippe" breaks up the performance that was to have been given at the League's annual supper, and Mrs. Smith posts over to tell me I must be a committee to "get up" a shadow pantomime instead. Then back I fly with the news that the H. & H. A. is to hold a union meeting with the children from the public schools, and that it falls to her to ask permission of the board and notify the teachers. And so it goes. I never make my plans for the day without the mental proviso, "unless Mrs. Smith should want me to do something else." I suppose she recognizes the same uncertainty about hers. It amounts to Mrs. Smith's laying out my work for me and my laying out hers for her. My soul is weary of this altruism. I should think hers must be.

I ought not to give the impression that Mrs. Smith and I live wholly at each other's beck and call. There are times when my own personal concerns seem to have claims paramount even to those of the shadow pantomime. But under such circumstances I always tell Mrs. Smith exactly what the claims are—confess and receive absolution, as it were.

"I'm very sorry," I say, with a timid, deprecating accent that ill becomes the free-born American; "I'm very sorry, but I don't see how I can. You see, I've got a dressmaker coming to-morrow, and I've put her off once already on account of the bazar, and I don't think I ought to do it again." "But you can run round to-day," says Mrs. Smith, "and get things started, and after that they'll go along of themselves." Fancy a shadow pantomime going along of itself! Then I make answer in yet deeper humility that I wish I could, but the fact is I have to rip apart my old dress to-day and wash it in soap-bark. This last excuse Mrs. Smith, being an economist herself, can't well refuse to accept. But what if I hadn't cared to give it? There are people who prefer to keep their soap-bark enterprises to themselves. Suppose I had been one of them?

Or suppose the excuse had been of a different sort—that I had planned to take an invalid friend out driving, for example, or to call on some new neighbors. Or, suppose again—if one may venture so violent a supposition—that I had confessed to wanting a quiet afternoon, the first in weeks, with my Browning? Mrs. Smith would have made short work with an excuse like that. What are one's personal pleasures, indeed, compared with the interests of a literary league!

And so, at Mrs. Smith's insistence, I spend a great deal of my time tithing mint and anise and cummin; and I neglect—I am sure I do—the weightier matters of the law. And yet I do not blame Mrs. Smith. (I should hope not, indeed! I that judge a sister, and do the same things myself!) She is only acting for her society. I blame that universal scape-goat, public sentiment. But for public sentiment I do suppose Mrs. Smith and I, and all the other women who find it easier to be "obliging" than independent, are partly responsible. We ought to make a stand. The pressure grows more intolerable every day. We can't keep up this hop-skip-and-jump much longer. We must be allowed to fall back into some sort of steady natural gait. Surely an individual has some rights that a society is bound to respect. And surely the right to plan her own work—not idly and selfishly, but conscientiously—is one of them. If our societies cannot make their claims consist with a right, so much the worse, I venture to think, for our societies.—The Congregationalist.

ENVIRONMENT.

BY MRS. M. A. CUMMINGS.

I remember to have read somewhere lately that "he was a weak man, who followed heredity unless he so desired;" or in other words, God has so made us the architects of our own characters, that we may sit before the image of our inner selves, and decide that with divine aid we will cultivate this trait, hold in rein, or cut off that propensity and ask the Creator to give us outright those qualities of mind and heart which are altogether lacking, that to His glory we may stand forth the perfect creatures He first planned.

We hold as a holy heritage a family escutcheon so nearly stainless it may pass for that, but whatever the rightful claims of heredity, and however perfect the descendant of four or five generations of upright men and women, for philanthropic ends, heredity must stand aside until through a right appreciation of a good environment future generations shall understand the meaning of a good heredity.

Many a mother has learned to her astonishment and horror that a good heredity has not been able to cope with the saloon environment of business life; and many a Christian mother, through a morbid and altogether mistaken fear of hampering individuality, has allowed her sons and daughters to form for themselves an anti-Christ social environment that has balked her later efforts to lead them heavenward. Let us by no means underestimate the power of heredity, but let us realize that in it we have but the tiny seed of a future plant, which under differing conditions holds almost infinite possibilities.

Many traits of character which we call inherited may with equal fairness be ascribed to environment. Let us suppose a case. Two babes are born on the self-same day, one in a home of honesty and Christian graces, the other in an atmosphere so foul, there must be parts of hell purer. Now imagine the two exchanged, and the one of spotless lineage must henceforth pillow her head on the dishonored bosom of one who was trained to vice before she knew the meaning of virtue, and the same unseen, unheard messenger carries back the little one who holds no right the good recognize to the breath she draws, and lays her in the loving embrace of an honored wife, who counts it her highest privilege to train an immortal being for eternal life. Ah, sisters! which babe think you will mature into a noble womanhood?

Remember, neither the world nor the parents are to know of the change, else the test is not a fair one, for often, we believe, the curse of "bad blood" might be lost, but for the taunts that are sure to meet such an one, and the "I-told-you-so's" and the "what-can-you-expects" that are to be heard on every hand at the slightest misstep.

But to go back to our illustration of the exchanged babies. Nothing can here be ascribed to heredity that does not survive their changed conditions, yet if each had remained in her natural station we doubt not the list of (supposed) hereditary traits would have been greatly augmented, for the character of the care-taker begins to stamp itself upon the child long before it can either walk or talk. The tones used in addressing an infant, the manner of handling it, that which meets its daily vision, the first toy and how it is allowed to use it, all impress its tender spirit.

If it is indisputable that we all grow toward our ideal it is also true that this ideal begins to take shape in our very earliest consciousness.

To be sure later on in life we may demolish the old ideal and set up a new—God pity us if it were not so!—but in proportion as the conditions of our lives are true either to good or evil, will our first ideal be found to be of adamant and difficult to destroy. But here lies our hope, both as mothers and reformers. As mothers let us see to it that the environment of those we love is as good as love, guided by the hand of God, can make, and then let us hold the conditions steady until the ideal hardens. Do not let us send our youth out into the world to choose for themselves in eternal interests sooner than we would send them out to choose for themselves in temporal affairs. As we would not dare to intrust millions to the spending of a child, so we dare not intrust him with the spending of himself, the loss of which would be infinitely greater. As reformers let us remember the principle laid down that in proportion as the conditions of our lives are true either to good or evil will our first ideal be found to be of adamant and difficult to destroy. Now if a child is reared in vice and taught nothing of goodness and purity, he will see men and women hardened and selfish, with no desire to elevate themselves or to benefit the world, and with parental love degenerated into something like, though often inferior to, a bear's affection for her cubs. His ideal will be built to meet the wants of self—his animal self. But let him be brought under the benign influence of unselfishness and love, if only for an hour, a week, and the building of this ideal cannot progress uninterruptedly. It may go on. It no doubt will, if this influence cannot be extended somehow into the remaining one hundred and sixty-seven hours of the week, but its demolition in later years will be made easier because of the small interruptions, and if we do not see its downfall, another may. If it is possible to retard the evil building oftener and longer at a time, in God's name do it, and in every possible way better the environment of heart and home and nation, that in future ages the race may reap the harvest of a good heredity. Our Woman's Christian Temperance Union wisely asks for a temperance environment that will make men Prohibitionists whether they will or no, and if we could but get it the great-grandson of the most inveterate sot would look back upon the liquor traffic of 1890 with horror.

We firmly believe that if nine-tenths of the money and effort spent yearly in charities were spent in bettering the conditions of life among the poor, more would be accomplished. We cannot but believe with Nicholas Minturn, that a great deal of the time the Lord expects us to be ploughing we are wantonly scattering the seed, and then we vaguely wonder at the smallness of the harvest. Lungs cannot become strong without plenty of fresh air to breathe, be their inherited capacity however large, and if there is a tendency to weakness, barrels of medicine will do no good if the patient is kept in a garbage cellar. Go down some of Chicago's worst alleys and streets and tell us, if you can, whether their condition is due to the vice of the inhabitants, or the vice to the filth reigning everywhere? This one question answer before God: Would you be what you are to-day if, heredity unchanged, you had been reared in such an atmosphere?

We have strong doubts whether there is such a thing as a pure moral atmosphere where there is a constant insufficiency of oxygen. Many an audience has sent their minister home disheartened because they did not have enough pure air to enable them to say Amen! The proper conditions of life, moral, mental, and physical, God supplied in the Garden of Eden. Man thought he could better them and added to his dietary. Our chief concern now, is to restore those lost conditions. Let no one mistake my meaning. A pure physical environment is not enough. A pure mental and physical environment will only help us toward our ideal, but it will help, and when we have a pure moral, mental, and physical environment the race will again mount to the place God intended it to occupy. Our bodies we will realize to be the temples of the Holy Ghost, the mind God so nobly planned will be able to understand Him more perfectly, and the soul will take on a new beauty, even that of the Crucified One. Ah! would such a beatific state overspread the earth now. With faith in God let us work to such an end, and in these days of woman's power, humbly accept the poet's lines:

"As woman from the Garden of the Lord,
Led fallen man in sorrow, fear, and shame,
To where, unblest, he saw the burning sword
Between lost Eden and the desert flame;
So still she leads, and though at times from good,
She now supremely holds the sacred power
To win from deserts where the exiles brood
And lead them back within their ancient dower."

"FAILURES are only the little valleys between the foothills through which we must pass in order to ascend the mountain, and every little descent, as well as every little ascent, takes us nearer the grand height."

"FEAR is the complete inversion of trust. It is a belief in the power of evil, in the supremacy of evil over good. God does not create nor perpetrate evil, for evil is but our own perversion of good."

UNION SIGNAL

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.

MARY ALLEN WEST,

JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.

161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Keep yourselves in the love of God.—Jude 21.
The longer we live, the less we care to speak of our love to God, and the more we dwell on God's love to us.—F. B. Meyer.

PROHIBITION AND PROHIBITIONISTS.

There is more force in the principle that underlies the formation of a third political party than those who have adopted this action fully apprehend. The controlling causes run deeper than the thoughts of those who announce them. This principle is that a new and difficult undertaking in the social and civil world will demand, in its execution, corresponding time, intensity of purpose and persistency of effort. As a rule, prohibitory laws have not been dishonestly passed, nor has support been designedly withheld from them by the majority of any party in any way committed to them. Their partial failure has been due to the fundamental fact in personal and social morals, that stringent resolutions cannot be carried out in a lax spirit. It is much easier to resolve on a difficult undertaking than it is to accomplish it. The accomplishment calls for a measurement of energy with obstacles, of patient pertinacity with perverse, inherent tendencies. The case in the action of men collectively in moral improvement, is not different from the same case in individual progress. Civic resolutions require the support of determined effort through long periods of time. Deep-seated evil can be overcome on no lighter conditions.

It was irrational, contrary to human experience, to expect that a vice of such long standing as the use of intoxicating drinks, appealing to so many feelings, and involving so many interests, should give way at the first or second assault. One-half of those who are ready to vote for prohibitory laws are not ready for the sacrifices involved in supporting them. A difficult law, left for execution to the usual officers of law, simply discloses the balance of moral forces in the community, the determined disposition to disregard it, and the determined disposition to sustain it. This balance is by no means the same as that indicated by the vote in its favor. This vote sweeps in many under a popular current who count for nothing in the later struggle, which is the real measure of comparative strength.

We have, more than once, had occasion to test temperance sentiment in a community, by an effort to enforce the restrictions of existing laws. When the effort is proposed, the evils of laxness being evident, and opposition to the execution of the law not as yet awakened, encouraging words and cheerful promises are abundant. All temperance men believe and affirm that something should be done, and profess themselves prepared, as they honestly think they are, to support any undertaking in this direction. Let the leadership of the league fall into the hands of a few determined men, and if it does not it comes to nothing; let these men make a vigorous and successful effort to sustain the law, and immediately public sentiment undergoes a severe trial. Deep hostility is excited, and makes itself felt in many ways. The timid reconsider the question, and are anxious to withdraw from the conflict. Purpose and passion tower up on either side. Misrepresentation and perversion are rife. The necessary methods of enforcement are sharply criticized. The real, underlying, moral state begins to declare itself; and the traffic, more deeply entrenched of the two in the interests or indolence, or timidity of men, overcomes or wears out the corrective impulse. Moreover, correction, when the evil is great, is never an unalloyed good. The person or the community subject to it is convulsed and rent by the spirit of mischief, and left half dead before it departs.

Many men, when they see these new and unexpected evils are disappointed and discouraged by them, and apprehend that the entire effort has been a mistake. Every moral battle, therefore, must be fought out twice; once in theory, and once in practice; and the last struggle discloses many difficulties, many reactions, many new make-shifts of transgression, not duly weighed in the earlier one. A person is a mere speculator in the kingdom of heaven who is ready to trace the logical results of sound action, but is not prepared for the rough and tumble of the fray in which they are achieved. Our temperance measures hitherto have partially miscarried, as was inevitable, because the second battle, always more difficult than the first, calls for another class of men, for more men and better men than have yet been enrolled.

There has probably not been a single state in the Union in which in a close grapple, the combatants rolling in the dirt, the contest to be fought out to the end, the moral impulse has had more grip, more patience, more toughness than the immoral one. Yet, many Prohibitionists, still failing to apprehend this fundamental fact, entertain the fallacy, not only that this or that state could, under certain circumstances, be successfully carried for prohibition, but that the law could be enforced in it. Hence, they experience weariness and disappointment when these hoped-for circumstances fail them. They have not measured the depth of the controversy, and the strength of the enemy. We certainly must win success as we can get it; but premature success is only a momentary breaking of clouds before the storm has passed by. Weak moral forces will betray us with just the same certainty, and in much the same way, as they have betrayed those who have gone before us. We attribute more influence in this matter to politicians than we wisely ought. Politicians are weather-cocks who show which way the wind blows; they do not create the wind. If the hidden currents had actually been with the temperance sentiment, they would have pointed in that direction. The politician, as a political register, does not record enthusiasm, moral soundness alone, he feels as well inertia, secret dislike, indirect methods, cunning, patient, persevering effort, supplied by passion, appetite and avarice, all tending to subvert law; and he measures up the entire sum of available, efficient forces on this side and on that, not without a good deal of shrewdness and correctness. To be sure, the politician is likely to have an affinity with the inferior sentiment, and so to favor it in his estimates, but he does not mean to deceive himself on the side of sin. Even if the politician were a more independent power than he really is, we shall always have him with us, and must reckon, when we in turn win success, with the careening tendencies he gives the vessel that is not weighted with moral ballast.

A moral conflict must be fought out to the bitter end. Every last unit of inertia, as well as the entire sum of momentum adverse to us must be overcome. Our duty is plain. Our battle is a fair one. We cannot shrink from it, or shorten it any otherwise than by unsparing effort and real victory. We have more occasion to fear precipitate success than anything else. This has been the danger of temperance hitherto. The fire, not quite extinguished, breaks out in a second conflagration, more fatal than the first. We must take a certain delight in the heat and ashes and turmoil, till the work is done.

Some are ready to say a little change here, a re-direction of the line of assault there, will give us the victory at once. Nothing will give us a permanent victory but profound conviction in popular thought, and wide support in popular action; nothing but a working majority, an effective balance of moral forces on our side.

We shall have time before the great struggle is over, to take in many social questions. Moral forces have their affiliations, and we do well to avail ourselves of them. Our center, our left wing and our right wing; our advance, our main body and our reserves, may be troops of different arms, drawn from different quarters. To turn aside great spiritual energies that are now working with us in this wide and deep conflict in which we are engaged, with the vain hope of thereby shortening it, is to overlook the magnitude, the composite character, the manifold resources of the evil we have to encounter. Our battle is not primarily one of strategy, but one of strength. Our leading measure is only one measure in a general reconstruction of society. While the processes which go to the making of a great edifice have a certain order of succession, they also concur with each other and overlap each other in many ways, and are forwarded by one and the same purpose. The question with us is one of the balance of moral power in the community, and we may well accept every just weight that is ready to drop into our pan of the scale. It is not cunning methods, but sound thought, supported by all the affiliations of truth, and deepening its hold in many ways on the popular mind, that is to give us the victory, since victory with us is not primarily an achievement at the polls, but social reconstruction and national training.

READ YOUR BLANKS.

The time for making reports has come. Throughout the length and the breadth of the land blanks for reports are being sent out by National and state superintendents. Upon the accuracy with which these are filled out, and the promptness with which they are returned to the proper persons, depends the value of state and National reports. On each blank are plainly printed directions for filling out and returning; if followed, everything will go well; if neglected, all things will be in a muddle.

The interests at stake are so important, involving as they do the truthful presentation of the year's work to a gainsaying world, and the capacity for making mistakes which lies in the average mind is so astonishing, that we feel moved to make a little preachment on the matter; its text is, "Read the directions on your blanks and obey them." Your National and state superintendents are clear-headed women, at least supposed to be, with sufficient command of the English language to say what they mean. They have the broad outlook over their field which you may not possess, hence, doubtless see necessities that you do not recognize, and provide for them. Trust them to do this, and if you do "not see any sense" in some of the directions given, believe there is sense in them beyond your seeing, and carry them out, on faith.

The regular order of procedure is for local superintendents to report to county or district superintendents; they to their state superintendent, and she to the National. Where this order is observed, and all the reports are sent in at the specified time, there is no clashing. But let one cog in this great wheel be out of place, and a great whizzing is the result, a whizzing which results in anything but a forward movement. Here is an illustration: A state superintendent who justly prides herself on her power of putting things clearly, has just come into our sanctum with a very long face.

"Do you think I know how to write plain English?" she asked in a very forlorn voice. "I always thought that your strong point," was the reply. "But just look here, and here," she said, pointing first to the headings of some blanks she had sent out to her local and district superintendents and then to some letters in her hand. At the head of the blank to local superintendents was printed in large letters: "Please fill out this blank and send immediately to your district superintendent of this department," but in spite of this, the morning mail had brought six of these blanks, filled out and sent direct to her, the state superintendent. "You see I did not put my address anywhere on the blank, on purpose to avoid this danger," she said, "but they knew it, and sent to me; now I must squander a two-cent stamp apiece, in sending them where they belong, and perhaps the delay will prevent the district superintendent's report being on time, that will make mine to the National late, and may cause our state to be left out of the National report. And some of these women have not signed their names, so I have no means of knowing who they are or where their reports belong."

The letters showed a more deplorable state of affairs, for they were from district superintendents of whom more is naturally expected. On the blanks sent them was distinctly stated the fact that the state superintendent had sent blanks to all local superintendents to be filled and sent to the district superintendents; yet one-tenth of these district superintendents wrote, by return mail, to the state superintendent for blanks to send to their local unions. "What the next mail will bring I sigh to think of," said that state superintendent. "Could I have made the directions any plainer?"

We read them carefully, and could but assure her that we knew of no words in the English language which would better express her meaning. This being so, there is but one explanation of these blunders made by intelligent women—they had not read the directions. It would have been just as easy to carry them out as to do what was done, but the good women, intent on their own work, and thinking they knew how to do things, went about it their own way, without a thought that they were making anybody trouble by so doing. "But evil is wrought by lack of thought;" in this case the evil is the doubling up of unnecessary work and postage bills, upon the state superintendent, and clogging the whole machinery. These things ought not so to be, and we so trust the good sense and good hearts of our women, we are sure they will not be, when once the women are brought to see the result of their thoughtless doings.

POETRY AND PATENTS.

Not a close connection between the two, you say; yet now we find them united. To tell it all would be the story of seventeen years of heroic struggle and devotion, of the outreaching of a poet soul to the downtrodden and outcast, of wondrous communings with God and guidance by Him into ways which even a poet's imagination never pictured, and their prosaic ending in—a canning factory. All of this poetry, this pathos, this devotion is hidden away under the business looking charter of the American Woman's Canning Association which last week perfected its organization and began its work.

Its heart and inspiration is a slight, gray-haired woman, now moving about on crutches, the result of a fall on Chicago sidewalks, Miss Amanda T. Jones.

She is a poet, born, not made, some of whose poems, published in the Atlantic and other magazines, will live while the English language endures. And she is that higher thing, a Christian woman, with heart aflame with love to her fellow women, and a desire to seek and to save that which was lost. In ways by which God leads His own she was led to work, in quiet fashion, for fallen women; her philosophic mind could not rest in simple present relief, but reached back after the causes, and forward in search of a cure. Looking for causes led her into a study of the industrial conditions surrounding working women, and Mrs. Helen Campbell herself, does not know better than she, the terrible environments of these "prisoners of poverty." Her investigations led her into the great canning establishments of the country, and in many of them she found girls working on such mere pittances of salaries that they could scarcely keep soul and body together, honestly; the result can be imagined. All these things sank deep into the sensitive soul of our poet, and her prayer day and night was, "Lord, open the way of relief." That prayer was answered, how, is too long and too sacred a story to tell here, but to Miss Jones the answer seemed as plain and as audible as was the call to Saul on his way to Damascus. The germ thought of the inventions which led to the patents of our title was a part of that answer.

But like all germs it must grow, and it has been growing, in the brain in which it was first planted, in the laboratory of the chemist, the workshop of the mechanician, till now it has burst into full bloom. The poetry has become practical prose, and the charter which voices it creates an association for the purpose of canning all sorts of fruits, fruit juices, vegetables, etc., without cooking or the use of chemicals, also to can and preserve meats by a new process, said processes and machinery to carry them on being invented and patented by the said Amanda T. Jones.

Under this charter the stockholders met last week and organized by electing a board of eleven directors, all ladies of proved ability. This board elected as its president, Mrs. Louise Rockwood Wardner, widely known for her executive ability, as well as her philanthropy; Miss Eliza W. Bowman, of the Chicago Newsboys' Home, vice-president; Mrs. Jeannie Sanford Lewes, who in managing her own affairs and as treasurer of philanthropic boards disbursing hundreds of thousands of dollars, has proved her ability as a financier, treasurer; Miss Caroline Huling, president of the Illinois Woman's Alliance, secretary, and Miss Jones, business manager. It is a somewhat singular fact, not thought of at the time of their election, that all these officers are members of the Illinois Woman's Press Association, and that their first interest in Miss Jones was awakened by a paper read by Miss Bowman, chairman of its committee on philanthropy, before that association. As the principal canning works of the association will be in Chicago, it was necessary that the executive and business committee should be here; other members of the board are in various states from New York to Missouri.

The capital stock of the association is $100,000, in shares of $25 each. One half of the stock is, by vote of the association, held by Miss Jones; the dividends to accrue from it are by her sacredly devoted to the purpose to which she has dedicated her life, the salvation of our lost sisters; the other $50,000 is sold, or on the market for sale like any other stock, except that it can be bought and held only by women. Women will be employed in the work; for one great object is to give work with fair wages, and under healthful and pleasant surroundings, to women.

The association commences work, in a small way to make sure of every step, on Archer avenue, Chicago. For the present the work will be confined to putting up lunch tongues; very favorable figures on the "raw product" have been secured from a leading packer, and arrangements made with a wholesale grocer to take the completed product, as rapidly as it can be prepared. It was deemed best at this season of the year and in this stage of the work to confine it to one specialty, lunch tongues, but as the work progresses it is planned to keep the machinery busy all the year round, canning fruits and fruit juices in their season, then dairy products, infants' and invalids' foods, breakfast dishes, lunch tongues and other meats. Next season probably branch establishments will be opened in different fruit growing regions, that the fruit may be canned right from the trees without delay and transportation. We shall watch the growth of this enterprise with great interest.

LOVE refrains from judging.

Special Difficulties.

PLEDGE.—"I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including Wine and Cider, and to employ all proper means to discourage the use of and traffic in the same."

Jennie L. Olmstead, Ohio's new superintendent of social purity, in a letter to Miss Willard, makes so many good points on themes which give rise to many special difficulties, that we have asked the privilege of giving her letter to our larger audience:

Are you ever asked for a prescription to rejuvenate dying unions? If so, please recommend mothers' meetings as an infallible "resurrector." When everything else fails to interest, to attract, to dispel prejudice, a skillfully conducted mothers' meeting, in most instances, will accomplish it. We must leave margin for exceptions enough to prove the rule, of course.

If we can make mothers feel that while one child is in danger, all children are in danger, and that they owe personal instruction to their little ones, the citadel is fairly won. A little mother, with her baby in her arms, said to me, "I feel wicked to think of what I have told my children, but I didn't know that mothers ever talked with their children about these things; I didn't know I ought to do it, and I didn't know how." The mothers' meeting supplies the "ought" and the "how." It is a hard-hearted woman who fails to respond to this blessed, sacred truth, for it touches the mother in one.

In tuning my guitar I key up the A string to the correct tone, then tune the others to chord with it. Women are something like a guitar; tune the "mother chord" carefully, skillfully, don't snap the delicate string, and when it gives the clear, correct tone, twist the others up to it. To be sure, this is not the easiest thing in the world to do. A successful mothers' meeting is not a "happen so." It may require personal invitations, a postal or a note. Many times this method will bring the poorer class of wemen, who sadly need this home missionary work. Possibly it will be necessary to "sugar coat" the meeting with a social or white-ribbon tea. Certain it is that the leader, topic, time and place of meeting should be announced. Our publishing house sends out a line of leaflets and helps, that make the work simple and within the reach of the most inexperienced.

I have in mind a small town where the local union was sadly in need of some sort of an "elixir." I was to speak Saturday evening on "Our Work." Before service, one of the faithful women called my attention to a lady and said, "I hope you will convert that woman." And I set about it. I enthused over the Crusade days, I waxed warm over our departments of work, I described the great convention at Chicago, and used my entire stock of adjectives—had to—in telling of the splendid women who are our leaders, I appealed to the women to do their duty. I expended all the eloquence I possessed, and some I didn't—and sat down thinking, "Well, if that doesn't convert her I'll give it up and say it's not the fault of the adjectives or the cause."

But there was no intimation that I had phased my victim a hair's breadth. The service Sabbath morning was announced as a mothers' meeting. However, husbands, fathers and children were there. Sometimes it is necessary to utilize our adaptability, if we have any. I did my best; felt what I said, said what I felt, and asked God to make them feel. In the evening spoke on social purity. All the time was wondering if my lady was "converted" the night before. The next day who should call on me but this woman; she walked in the hot sun, a half mile, up a sand hill at that, to talk with me, but lo, neither the cause, the eloquence, nor the adjectives did it, but the mothers' meeting. I learned that she was a "backslider," but she announced her intention of taking up the work again and getting the women interested in the social purity work among the children. I gave her pledge cards, leaflets, and the last I knew the union was on the verge of a revival.

No work can the W. C. T. U. take up that is more truly for "God and Home" than this work, helping mothers to help the children. God help us not to fail Him.

EMILY GILMORE ALDEN, in Mid-Continent, has a bright article on "Donna Quixote," as some like to call "the woman who dares." Speaking of the success of women in colleges, she says:

Donna Quixote should be christened St. Persistence, the coming saint in the twentieth century calendar. The truth is, thought is normal, even to women—the testimony of distinguished medical experts to the contrary notwithstanding. Study, close study, even, is healthful. Tight lacing, late hours, high heels, and the various dissipations of modern life, send a girl to school a preëstablished invalid, and she is soon removed upon the ground that her intense mental application is undermining her precious health, while the probabilities are that she hasn't entertained either an original or an acquired idea (even like an angel unaware) for months! But woman is, however Quixotic it may seem, emancipating herself.

The Watch-Tower.

A fact is something done. A truth is the working hypothesis by which it was done. A truth is a fact in the realm of mind and spirit. A fact is a truth in the realm of material things. They are two sides of the same entity. In the last analysis they are one, the two terms relating to two different realms, the visible and invisible, the ideal and the real. God is not a fact, but a factor; not a work, but the worker: not a poem, but the poet.

***

Mrs. Narcissa White Kinney, of Astoria, Oregon, recently sent fifty dollars to Miss Willard, to be used as she might think best, in furthering the W. C. T. U. work. The amount was promptly forwarded to Mrs. Barker, president of South Dakota, as a gift from the National W. C. T. U., to help forward the campaign for equal suffrage in that young state. Mrs. Kinney has been elected a delegate to the Atlanta Convention, and her husband, a leading business man of Oregon, will accompany her.

***

Prof. Lester F. Ward, in his plea for the thorough education of women, recently published in the Forum, has the following suggestive sentence: "Man has displayed more genius than women, largely because he has been in possession of a wider range of facts, a greater supply of the only material out of which genius can construct and create, namely, knowledge; and if woman is ever to display equal creative power, she, too, must be supplied with the same kind of raw material, for which no qualities of mind can ever stand as a substitute; but thus supplied, there is no reason to doubt that very high flights of genius may be made by women, and their greater familiarity with the social microcosm may give to their genius a character of its own."

***

Miss Addie M. Kinnear, president of the North Dakota W. C. T. U., has taken the field as a lecturer, and leading judges declare their belief that she will become a platform speaker of first rank in the W. C. T. U. Miss Kinnear lives in Fargo, and has been known as a most enterprising business woman, associated with her father in a large boot and shoe manufactory.

***

The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle will begin its fourteenth year of reading this autumn. The course will include English language, history and literature, geology and readings from French literature. Among the writers who will contribute the required readings, are: Prof. Edward Freeman, Prof. George P. Fisher, Prof. A. S. Hill, Harriett P. Spofford, Prof. Alexander Winchell, and Bishop John F. Hurst.

***

Mrs. Harley R. Walter, one of the pioneers in South Carolina, has been giving Bible readings in Rome, Ga., to some of her fellow-patients in the Sanitarium, endeavoring to awaken their interest in our cause. It shows no ordinary zeal when the Christian devotion of one who is not well leads her to gather about her the good women who, like herself, have grown weary in the race of life, and on the cool veranda on Sunday afternoons prove to them out of God's Word that the W. C. T. U. is a vine of the Lord's right hand planting.

***

A well-known W. C. T. U. worker relates a recent dream of hers, so droll and "pat" in view of some panegyrics uttered by temperance women on such occasions, that it wouldn't be fair not to pass it around. She thought she was in the midst of a state convention. (Why not a National?) Introductions were the order of the day. A leading worker was brought forward, the delegates rising as the custom is on such occasions, whereupon the presiding officer thus complimented the one just introduced: "Beloved sisters of the white ribbon, this glorious worker is full of longitude, and at the same time permeated with all the latitude there is."

***

A blind lady whose closed eyes seem only to make thought more active, presents a plan for a postal ballot by which the wishes of their women constituency shall be made known to legislators in national, state or municipal government. Her plan is that when any question comes up in which women are particularly interested, the women unite in sending to those who have the deciding of the matter their wishes on the subject in the form of a postal ballot, yes or no. She says: "A certain knowledge of the women's wishes would surely have some influence on their individual and collective action." Those who have been before legislatures with petitions which gave this certain knowledge of their wishes and have seen those petitions scoffed, have not much faith in the movement; others, more fortunate, to whom has been granted their request, will have greater faith. At any rate, the plan is worth trying in a village or small town; let it be tried and the result reported to THE UNION SIGNAL. ON DUTY.

News from the Field.

OREGON.

Soon after the state convention our president, Mrs. Riggs, started on an organizing and building-up tour with Mrs. Fanny Montgomery, state evangelist. Monmouth, the location of the State Normal School, was the first place visited. The date seemed unfortunate, as many ladies were on committee work preparatory to the Fourth of July celebration. Still, she says, in noticing the apparent delight at the little "school of methods" drill she introduced at the closing meeting, "I have made up my mind that success does not always depend upon numbers, for I sincerely believe that real good has been done. Mrs. Montgomery spoke beautifully at the opening of the meeting, taking the twenty-first Psalm as the subject of her talk. The audience evidently enjoyed it." An afternoon meeting had been held for the ladies, when ten members were added to the already existing organization under the leadership of Mrs. Adkins. She is a choice spirit, but in the past her material to work with has been poor enough. But with the five bright, promising young ladies who, I believe, are going to make things move, she will have a better chance. Having been over large portions of the state, Mrs. Riggs says:

"What a missionary field is Oregon! There seems so little conviction in people's minds in regard to personal responsibility. The more I see of W. C. T. U. pioneer work the more I feel it is a great work, and that it needs more patience and talent than I have." (We know of no one better fitted for it). Two curious coins were found in the collection at Monmouth. Mrs. Riggs proposes using them as a nucleus for an exhibition of curiosities at our next convention, charging a small fee of admittance, for state work. At Independence, after holding similar meetings, eleven new members were added, who we trust will infuse fresh zeal and energy into the work.

At Dallas a cloud of discouragement had hovered over the scene. It was a curious coincidence that at the time the ladies gave up their prayer meeting, first one saloon and then another crept in, so that now there are several, one a very gilded palace, in full blast. The ladies are grieved and very repentant over this failure, and in this place a new union of thirty-four members was organized. Mrs. Montgomery had preceded here, while Mrs. Riggs held Sabbath meetings at Cochraine. That place, Louisville, Airlie, Buena Vista, Dixie and Shuver are all country communities, where, with the exception of Buena Vista, it did not seem at present advisable to plant unions—the ground not being sufficiently broken up to warrant the hope of their flourishing. They are mostly off the railroad, have been visited by no temperance orators, but where the farmers and their wives seem eager for the plain "gospel of temperance." Mrs. Riggs says she believes "the W. C. T. U. does right in hunting up these farming communities where votes count up one to a voter, as they do in the towns, and where the farmer is not afraid of hurting his business by voting according to his conscience; where he is not afraid of being boycotted by the saloons, and where people are not gospel hardened." These small places are all in the same county, and it was the county president, Mrs. Whitaker, who lives herself on a farm, that made such work possible. She had herself made a journey ahead to almost every point, paving the way for our state workers. Mrs. Montgomery then appeared first in the field preparing, with gospel truth and the waterings of prayer, for the introduction of the temperance methods of the W. C. T. U. Three or four Loyal Temperance Legions were, with the help of Mrs. Whitaker, organized, and these, by and by, will grow into the mother unions.

After returning for a little rest and sight of the dear ones at home, the same "two" set out on another journey, this time into Southern Oregon, our land of the peach and the grape, and where the mountain air, on levels of over 2,000 feet, with a warm, dry climate, revives the consumptive and teaches him to breathe again aright as he can do in no other town atmosphere. From these considerations several of these southern towns are growing apace; and industries are multiplying amain.

At Oakland five new members were added. One of these, a complete novice, accepted, to the surprise of her friends, the superintendence of flower mission work. She had been much interested in the way Mrs. Riggs had spoken of that department with its incidents of souls being reached by the silent preaching of the flowers and their Scripture texts attached; she deeply felt that a man, a stranger, who had lain sick and alone at the hotel, dying without choosing to hear a word of religion, might have had his heart touched by such a messenger. She therefore gave herself to this work. The union at Medford was encouraged and good work done by Sabbath meetings on July 29.

It was a significant fact, illustrative of the country versus the town that at Rosebury the largest city, by far, on the route, was the only place in which no meeting could be held. The union was not prepared to make the announcements, owing to "lions in the way," and our "two" were bound to proceed in order to keep engagements according to the almanac.

Grant's Pass, one of the high, level towns of great push and enterprise, received a second visit on the return journey, where the preparatory work of the first, issued into a promising union of sixteen members. Here this aforesaid enterprise has started no less than six saloons. But much temperance interest seem to have been in abeyance. Mrs. Riggs felt amply repaid for a most fatiguing all-day journey in a freight train, by a closely packed and deeply attentive meeting. It was held in the court house, the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches having adjourned their Sabbath services in order to lend a hand. Next day Mrs. Riggs was warmly thanked for her plain speaking to church members who vote to have these saloons carried on, then pray that they may be extinguished! Energetic pioneering work was done in the country places of Phœnix, Central Point, Eagle Point, and Myrtle Creek, and Point, where we trust a good harvest may be reaped at another visit.

Yam Hill county convention should have been reported as taking place the previous month at McMinnville. Our sisters from the Friends community at Newberg, near by, are always the life and soul of their county, as they used to be of their district conventions. At the evening session a medal contest took place, the prize being carried off by Mary Cook.

A second medal contest was held about the same time at Corvallis, which brought out much interest among the young people, and their elders as well. Our state loses, for a year or two only it is hoped, one of its most active workers, Mrs. L. H. Additon, sometime secretary to the National department of the relation of temperance to capital and labor. She has gone with her family to California.

L. A. Nash, Special Correspondent.

MISSOURI.

PUTNAM COUNTY CONVENTION.

Our second annual convention met in Red Ribbon Hall, at Unionville, Aug. 1. After devotional exercises Mrs. Harford gave a short address on parlor work. In the afternoon a short address was given by Mrs. Hoffman, our state president. The address of welcome, by Miss Una Brasfield was responded to by Mrs. Eliza McLane. Mrs. Harford read a letter from Mrs. Dobyns, concerning parlor work. Reports were received from Unionville, Hartford, Powersville, Lucerne, Mendota, St. Johns and Central City unions. Mrs. Taylor read an interesting paper on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," followed by a discussion of the same by Prof. L. A. Olinger and Mrs. Hoffman. Mrs. Mary E. Sickles, county president, reported seven unions with 108 active members and 75 honorary members. The report of county treasurer, Mrs. Williams, followed, and a song by Mrs. Whitmer.

Remarks were made by Mrs. Harford, on "How to Conduct Local Unions," and additional remarks were given by Mrs. Hoffman. A paper was read by Mrs. Sickles, on "Alcohol in Medicine." Committee on resolutions reported the following, which were adopted:

Resolved, That we welcome to our unions all temperance women, assuring them of perfect freedom of thought and action in politics and religion. We stand upon the non-partisan, non-sectarian platform and pledge our loyalty to both state and National W. C. T. U., as they make but two constitutional requirements, viz: Signing the pledge and payment of membership dues.

Believing that prevention, through the education of the people as to the nature of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics, is the antidote for the vice, intemperance, while recognizing whatever good may have been accomplished through our present evasive statute, we, the W. C. T. U. of Putnam county, will respectfully petition our Legislature to so revise the law of Missouri relating to instruction in the nature of alcoholic drinks and other narcotics as to their effects upon the human system in connection with relative physiology and hygiene that this subject shall, as in other states, be made a regular study for all pupils in all schools, supported wholly, or in part, by public money or under state control.

Believing that all women of thoughtful minds earnestly desire a widening of the old path into a new world of progress; therefore be it

Resolved, That while we would not dictate, we would urge every union in the county to take up the subject of franchise for women as a branch of study, and give it their most careful consideration.

Whereas, It is announced that arrangements are made for a match game of base ball to be played in our city on Aug. 3, therefore be it

Resolved, That it is an insult to the moral sentiment of the town and community, and that we heartily condemn and enter a protest against it, and all such Sabbath desecration.

Resolved, That we will work for the advancement of social purity and the better protection of women and girls; that we will try to raise the standard of morality in society; will endeavor to impress upon men and women the truth that only clean lives are acceptable to God, and that the law of purity is equally binding upon men and women.

Resolved, That we will use our influence to discourage the use of fermented wine for sacramental purposes.

Resolved, That we oppose all forms of license, high or low, and favor an amendment to the National Constitution that shall forever outlaw and prohibit the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That we tender our thanks to the union for their hospitality to visiting members, to the trustees of the Red Ribbon Club for use of their hall, to the committee on decoration, and to all who assisted in making the convention interesting and profitable.

Mrs. Hoffman introduced the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That in a government whose "political power inheres in the people," and is derived directly from the people it is the baldest contradiction and a continued injustice to deprive one-half of the people of all voice and power, we demand the ballot for that half—the women.

Resolved, That the tobacco habit is degrading and destroying the boyhood of our land. Therefore all Christians should use their influence against it. Ministers and teachers who use it should not be tolerated, and Christian men should not sell it, but all Christian men and women, by precept and example, should oppose it.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs. Mary E. Sickles, president; Mrs. Ella Helferstine, secretary; Miss Myra Hume, treasurer. In the evening Mrs. Hoffman gave us a very able address.

Elizabeth E. Conger.

STODDARD COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held in the M. E. Church at Dexter, May 15, 1890. The convention was called to order by county president, and devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Broadfurer.

Reports of unions showed that earnest work is being done. Three new unions have been organized and one reorganized, all doing good work.

In the afternoon interesting papers were read, and after lively discussion, which was participated in by the men, some very healthy resolutions were passed. A large audience assembled at 8 p. m. and listened to addresses of welcome from Rev. Lowe and Miss Clara Carter which were responded to by Miss Nannie Harrison, of Bloomfield. Carrie Lee Carter, president of fourteenth district, then delivered an address in which she cheered us by an account of work being done in our district.

Thus ends our second annual convention, and we feel that all have been benefited by it.

County President.

TEMPERANCE AT THE COLUMBIA SUMMER ASSEMBLY.

The Boone county agricultural fair having failed to pay expenses the past year, the directors determined on a new enterprise more in keeping with the spirit of the times, and on August 1, the Rev. Sam Jones inaugurated the first "Columbia Summer Assembly." This proved to be a modernized camp-meeting, with Chautauqua features. The program was arranged by a committee of Methodist ministers who courteously granted a day, August 8, to the W. C. T. U. At the request of the local union, Rev. B. F. Boller, the eloquent pastor of the First Congregational church at Sedalia, a brother in hearty sympathy with the organization, was chosen as orator. Sickness in his family preventing his attendance, he sent as his representative, Rev. H. H. Russell, of Kansas City. The latter preached a fine sermon in the morning, which captured his entire audience, and lectured at night, taking the question, "Who is to Blame?" E. O. Excell conducted the music on both occasions. The program was pronounced a success, both the committee on program and directors of the Assembly together with many outsiders, thanking us for the part we had contributed.

On Sunday night the last day of the assembly, Rev. J. H. Jackson, the local Methodist minister, preached a powerful temperance sermon. These various influences have stirred up the officers of the town who have begun a vigorous enforcement of the local option law. This is Missouri's great educational center, the State University and two state denominational schools for the education of young ladies being located here. No saloons have been in the county for the past two years, though as elsewhere drug stores have multiplied. The assembly will be much enlarged the coming year, with new features, and we are again promised a place on the program.

E. P. Babb.

ILLINOIS.

W. C. T. U. NOTES FROM THE FOURTEENTH DISTRICT.

The annual temperance camp-meeting, beginning July 31, at Decatur, had on its program two W. C. T. U. days and one for the Y's. Mrs. Sanford, president of the fourteenth district, has a happy faculty in preparing W. C. T. U. "bills of fare," and hence something good was sure. We are particularly glad that help along the line of scientific temperance instruction was secured. Mrs. Daisy Carlock had charge of that line of drill. Miss Cowen and Miss Mahan had charge of Y day, which concluded with a gold medal contest. Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. C. H. St. John were among the popular speakers there. A number of names have been added to the white-ribbon list each year at this encampment. The Decatur union had charge of the dining-tent for the convenience of attendants and in the interest of W. C. T. U. finances.

The Normal Y celebrated its anniversary with appropriate exercises on the evening of August 2, under the canopy of a wide-spreading tent. The young people believe in utilizing anniversaries. They believe in missionary work, too, and $50 were sent by the Normal Y to the Nebraska amendment fund.

Speaking of the Y's reminds me of the white ribbons I saw at the recent Sunday-school convention at Le Roy. One might have been easily led to believe it was a Y convention so numerous were the little bows of white, adorning members of the orchestra, choir, ushers, and young folks generally. Even the presiding officer was thus ornamented, and when I shook hands with a Sunday-school superintendent who wore a white ribbon, I "thanked God and took courage." I was told that the Le Roy Y represents the best society element in the place. It has reached that point where to those who have more shall be given. It need hardly be said that "Temperance Instruction in the Sabbath-school" was on the program, with one of the radicals to deal with that topic. This theme is becoming quite popular on Sunday-school programs. The Christian Endeavor societies find that the temperance topic is not a "dry" one, as was proved July 27, although the general verdict was in favor of the "dry" side of this question. Demorest medal contests in the fourteenth district have been a specialty lately; and so the battle for the home goes forward.

Mrs. G. H. Read,
Special Correspondent.

TEXAS.

JOTTINGS.

In company with Ida C. Clothier, one of the National workers in the young women's department, I have passed the last few months, and it is of her part of the trip north I would write. Six enthusiastic meetings were held in San Antonio, Texas, letters written, literature distributed, Demorest contests planned, which were carried out all through the state by her secretary, Miss Meader, who has done grand and persistent work in Texas and Colorado; last but not least, as all workers know, ways and means devised for raising funds with which to push the work.

Leaving San Antonio in May we proceeded northward to Tyler, the floods preventing the holding of meetings at some intervening points, for which plans had been made; four days were passed here in the restful home of our noble white-ribboner, Mrs. Col. Herndon, and two meetings held, while many pleasant "talks" were enjoyed with the workers.

The rain continued to fall at intervals as we resumed our journeying. Trains were delayed, railroads submerged, or only just above the surging waters which lay upon the meadows and woodlands. Land slides and "washouts" were among the encouraging features of the trip. Meetings were held at Mineola, Sulphur Springs, Greenville and Gainesville, in northern Texas; Fort Worth and Cleburne having been visited earlier in the season. From Gainesville we took the train over the new Santa Fé route through the heart of the Oklahoma country, from which a call for help had come. We wondered but little, as our train glided into this beautiful land of promise, that there should have been the rush for each square foot of ground. The high rolling country with its bright red and rich black soil, bearing alike their brilliant covering of verdure, the sparkling streams, the translucent atmosphere, all were charming enough to make us see the home-seekers' wisdom, and to make us wish to tarry and lend a hand in the grand work before them.

We were given a warm welcome by the dear white-ribboners at Oklahoma City, where a stirring meeting was held, which told of the power and executive ability of the workers in bringing their beloved cause before the people. At Guthrie, that beautiful little city of a year's growth, the workers are also thoroughly alive, and though burdened with the world of things to be done, are standing bravely in the front. Many incidents were given us of meetings held on the open prairie, or in partly roofed buildings which had neither windows nor doors. One dear sister walked in to our meeting from her "claim," four miles out in the country, though the day was excessively warm. The young women hope soon to organize a Y and gather the children into a Loyal Temperance Legion.

We went on our way with many loving wishes from these friends, while we prayed the Father that this country may be kept as pure and beautiful as God made it, and that the curse of rum may never blight its homes.

Up through the Indian Territory our train sped on its way into Kansas, where we were left at Arkansas City. Enthusiastic workers and a crowded house greeted us here, and we tarried three days. Sunday evening the pastors of the different churches waived their own services and joined with the ladies in making this meeting a grand success. Monday we were driven out to the Chilocco Indian school, Indian Territory—and after being shown through the building and visiting different classrooms, Miss Clothier addressed the pupils, and our hearts were touched as we watched the changing expression on the dark faces. Some were affected to tears, and gazed into the face of the speaker intently, losing no word, and when later our carriage came, watched her with loving interest as we drove away.

From Arkansas City we journeyed northwest to Sterling, Kansas, where two days more of busy, enthusiastic work were entered upon. Four meetings were held, and a band of earnest young women pledged to organize a Y the following week.

At Garden City a severe hail and rain storm prevented the meeting, and our next halt was at La Junta, Colo., where two public meetings were addressed. The Sunday evening meeting under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E., and on Monday afternoon the W. C. T. U., which had had no meetings for a year, was reorganized, and the Monday evening meeting held under their auspices. La Junta is a great railroad center, and its population is largely made up of railroad officers, employés and their families, and a great work can be done here.

At Rocky Ford, our next stop, the public meeting was held in a hall which was formerly occupied by a saloon, and across the street was another saloon, still running. There was no union here and only one minister, but the little city is growing, and came out en masse to attend the meeting, showing deep interest throughout. One earnest white-ribbon sister from the East was found, and she and other interested ladies are anxious in the near future to organize the much-needed union, and we hope soon a Y may be gathered from the members of the Y. P. S. C. E., lately organized.

From Rocky Ford we made our final trip to an altitude of nearly seven thousand feet, at Colorado Springs and Manitou, the gem of the mountains. Here we are resting in our cosy cottage, where all weary workers are welcome. But in this three weeks' resting time our indefatigable Miss Clothier has already attended the W. C. T. U. convention of the southern district of Colorado, presenting her department of work and giving help wherever and whenever needed. She has also addressed the state convention of Y. P. S. C. E. on her heartfelt topic, and has a week's work planned by the state W. C. T. U. at the Glen Park Chautauqua. Besides this she has organized a Y at Manitou Springs to take up the work for the summer, hoping thus to awaken thought and interest among some of the thousands of young women who visit this resort, an interest that shall result in Y's all over the country, as these young women carry the newly-awakened thoughts to their homes. This, with letter writing, reading and study, preparatory to the coming busy weeks, constitutes our white-ribboner's rest.

MAUDE LORENE GREEN.

MAINE.

In no state does the W. C. T. U. prosper better than in Maine. The state president is a skillful general, keeping her eyes on every town and hamlet, and letting no opportunity escape of organizing new unions.

I came to Cape Elizabeth for rest during the heated term, but the work came to me and I have given twenty-two lectures and organized two new unions. The latter at Gardiner last evening, with thirty-three members. Rev. A. S. Ladd and wife will see that this union lives and thrives. They are watchmen on the walls, and give the alarm at the approach of any enemy to the home, and have bravely borne persecution for their adherence to principle.

The temperance people are now mourning the loss of Mr. S. S. Knight, of Portland, a leading Good Templar, and an upright Christian gentleman. He will be sadly missed in all this region.

S. M. PERKINS.

IOWA.

WORK AT MOUNT VERNON.

For some time considerable friction has existed in the W. C. T. Union at Mount Vernon, between those who held to the National union and those in sympathy with the seceders. By degrees those favoring the National ceased to attend the meetings as they could not do so in peace. As they felt it not right to be taking no part in temperance work when so much needed to be done, inquiry was made and it was found that there were forty-five women who would enter into a union auxiliary to the National.

As far as was possible under the condition of affairs existing in the state, a reorganization was effected. Miss E. Hyndman was chosen president; Mrs. S. W. Heald and Mrs. Sargent, vice-presidents; Mrs. Hambleton, secretary; Mrs. Alden, treasurer. It was named the Lucy Hayes union.

No organizer has visited the town, but all has been done by the women themselves and they feel much encouraged by the success which has crowned their efforts.

W. C. T. U.

SIOUX CITY.

There are three unions in Sioux City, that are pushing the work to the best of their ability. In May the county convention was held here. Miss Willard and Miss Gordon were with us for one day and evening, Miss Gordon speaking to the children in the afternoon, Miss Willard in the evening, topic, "Social Purity."

May 25 Mrs. Annie M. Palmer, National evangelist, commenced a series of meetings under the auspices of the West Sioux City union, which were productive of great good.

The eighth annual convention of the eleventh district was held here June 3, 4 and 5 at the First M. E. Church, forty delegates in attendance. Mrs. Johanna B. Schneslan was reëlected president. On August 15 a Demorest medal contest was held under the auspices of the West Sioux City union; this, the first contest ever given in the city, was a success in every way, Miss Marian Nivling winning the medal; topic, "The Martyred Mother." The West Sioux City union have received a Temperance Temple mite-box, and with every penny thrown in a prayer ascends for the success of the Temple and the uplifting of God's people.

MRS. L. A. WELDON.

KANSAS.

CHEROKEE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The fourth annual convention of the county was held at Weir, August 6 and 7. The convention was most heartily welcomed by the ladies of the W. C. T. U., the ministers of the various churches, and the citizens of the town. Our president, Miss Rose Haworth, and our beloved state president, Mrs. Fanny H. Rastall, were with us. She gave an address on the evening of the sixth, giving "the old, old story, ever new" of the Crusade. Our district president, Mrs. M. E. Price, was also with us. Excellent music was furnished throughout the convention by the young ladies and gentlemen of Weir. Eighteen new members were gained by the Weir union, and a Y. W. C. T. U. of thirteen members was organized. Reports of superintendents showed work done along the various lines. Just before noon on the seventh, news was brought to the convention of the passage of the Wilson Bill, and the noon hour of prayer was a season of thanksgiving and praise, led by Rev. Mr. Smith, of Weir.

After dinner came election of officers, then an hour was given to the children. The question drawer, presided over by Mrs. Rastall, was instructive as well as interesting. The second evening was filled with short talks from various ministers, teachers, Sunday-school workers and others interested in temperance. The convention closed with the benediction, to meet again in November.

W. C. T. U.

ANOTHER COUNTY ORGANIZED.

For the past three years there has been a small union at Pratt, the county seat of Pratt county, and it has been believed that the county was too new to admit of more organizations. But when Mrs. Annie Holloway, of Kingman, was appointed as organizer in the seventh district, she turned her eyes in the direction of this new and unoccupied field. The officers of the Pratt union made appointments for her through the county, and she succeeded in organizing a union at every place in which she spoke, with one exception.

At last on Tuesday, August 19, a white-ribbon mass-meeting was held, which resulted in the organization of a county W. C. T. U., with nine unions belonging. Mrs. Holloway's labors have resulted in securing eighty-three white-ribboners in the county, besides honorary members, and in a general awakening of interest in the work. She has proven herself a most efficient and earnest worker, and we thank God for her labors among us.

N. M. M.

MEDICINE LODGE.

On the 12th inst., Mrs. Emma Smith, state evangelist, gave a delightful lecture, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., before the one hundred and eighty-five students of the Normal Institute. The large court room in which it was given was filled to overflowing.

A Loyal Temperance Legion has been organized under the superintendence of Mrs. Cain and Miss McNeal, and we expect great things in the future from it. We feel encouraged on all sides. Our local paper has allowed us a column for our own, and we hope to do much good through it. More anon.

M. M. NORTH.

NEW YORK.

CLINTON COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held at Schuyler Falls, June 20. The hearty hand clasp and smiling faces of our entertainers assured us of our welcome.

The convention was called to order at 10 a. m., by our county president, Mrs. F. B. Hall, who presided with her usual grace and dignity. We, as a county organization, owe everything to her energy and devotion. Mrs. Hunt, National superintendent of scientific instruction, was with us, and in a very impressive manner led the devotional exercises of the morning. She proved a help and inspiration all through the convention. The address of welcome was gracefully and cordially given by Mrs. J. D. Everest, and was responded to by Mrs. E. A. C. Shedden. The "Review of the National Convention" by Miss Laura L. Shedden, and the paper on "Woman's Influence," by Mrs. Woodruff, were well received. At noon we were invited to the basement of the church where a bountiful dinner had been provided. Lunch was again served at six. Never has the hospitality of Schuyler Falls been exceeded.

After the devotional exercises of the afternoon Mrs. Hunt gave a very strong and forcible talk on "Scientific Instruction." Mrs. John L. Clark gave a paper entitled, "Difficulties in Enforcing the Excise Law, and Methods of Overcoming." Her explanation of difficulties and suggestions as to methods met with hearty applause. Excellent papers were read by Miss Mary Bigelow and Mrs. O. K. Smith. Clinton county is highly favored in having two such able and indefatigable workers.

Y work was presented by Miss Taylor and Miss Florence McFadden. Both ladies are anxious for the advancement of this branch, and were greatly pleased with the interest shown and with the prospect of the organization of several new societies. The reports of unions were very encouraging. Several clergymen were present and expressed interest and coöperation.

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt spoke in the evening to a full house. She afterwards spoke in Plattsburgh to a large and interested audience. Her plan of work met the approval of many who have before been indifferent.

The convention was one of the most interesting if not the best convention yet held in Clinton county.

COR. SEC.

LAKE SHORE TEMPERANCE CAMP.

The eighth season of the Lake Shore Temperance Camp, near Olcott, in Niagara county has just closed, and while for various reasons it has not been as successful financially as we had hoped, yet we all feel greatly benefited by what we have seen and heard during the ten days. Owing to the failure of crops this year, many families were unable to tent as formerly, and the farmers generally complain of hard times. The W. C. T. U. of the county came to the front, however, and again assumed the management of the board and lodging privileges. About $100 was thus added to the county treasury to carry on our work, and the ladies have returned to their homes, resolved to work with renewed energy for the upbuilding of our glorious cause.

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, our National superintendent of parliamentary practice, conducted the School of Methods which was a source of great profit to all, and was not confined to one sex by any means. The good brothers seemed to enjoy it fully as much as we did. Mrs. Benjamin also gave two fine addresses during her stay. Among the speakers who were most enjoyed was our grand John P. St. John, who delivered the finest address of the season. True to his convictions of right and justice, he stood grandly for the truth, and his words of eloquence carried conviction to every heart. One man was heard to say on leaving the grounds, "Well, I'm a convert to prohibition from this day and forever, and I'm not ashamed to say so." Speeches that convert men are what we need.

Mrs. Helen M. Gougar gave two powerful addresses, one on the work of the W. C. T. U., the other on woman's suffrage. All who have heard Mrs. Gougar can well realize the power of her words, and all who have not heard her, should do so. At the close of her last address she made an appeal for South Dakota which resulted in a collection of $10 55. James Clement Ambrose was on the program for three lectures. He came to us a stranger, but when he left it was as a friend whom we hoped soon to meet again. His style is unique, his blows against the liquor traffic are telling, and woman's suffrage receives a great uplift in his clever address on "My Partner." Jahu De Witt Miller, of Philadelphia, addressed the people on the subject of "Love, Courtship and Marriage." This was Mr. Miller's first appearance on our Assembly grounds, but all hope it will not be the last. Dr. Mann, of Brooklyn, Grand Chief of the Good Templars of New York state, was present on Good Templar's Day and delighted large audiences with his telling words. Hon. Will Cumback, of Indiana, gave three popular lectures during the first two days, and the Ladies' Rescue Quartette, of Rochester, made sweet music during the entire session. Dr. A. M. Purdy, of Tonawanda, if named last, was not least by any means, for his three magnificent lectures were highly enjoyed, and were of great profit to all who heard them. So, for another year we have said good-bye to old Ontario Lake, and go to our homes to take up the duties lying nearest.

FRANCES W. GRAHAM.

INDIANA.

JOTTINGS.

Warren county W. C. T. U. mourns the loss of a mother in Israel, Mrs. Jane M. Swisher, who departed this life on the 15th inst. Thus we lose from our membership a faithful, helpful and sympathetic mother and sister. Mrs. Swisher bequeathed $1,000 to our Orphans' Home at West Lebanon.

The fair week has just closed, and the county union, as usual for the last six years, conducted the dining hall, thus adding to their funds for future work. Gospel meetings were held each evening, according to previous arrangement. The meetings were fairly attended and much interest manifested. Rev. J. H. Kemp spoke upon the following subjects: Monday evening, "The Devices of Satan;" Tuesday evening, "The Effects of Physical Sin and its Cure;" Wednesday evening, "The Effects of Spiritual Sin and its Cure;" Thursday evening, "The Effects of National Sin and its Cure;" Friday evening, "The Free Gift." The subjects were presented in a clear, logical, forcible manner, by our faithful and unflinching young brother.

Warren county Prohibitionists have for the first time placed a full county ticket in the field, all pure, clean men, who ought to be elected.

At the Vincennes camp-meeting ninety dollars was paid in prizes to the best glee club. We have not yet heard which club won. The prizes were awarded Aug. 23.

August 7, Mrs. Helen M. Gougar and Captain Ritter opened the campaign for the ninth Congressional district, at Frankfort, the occasion, the district Congressional convention which sends out Milton Hanson, of Hamilton county, as her standard-bearer. Mrs. Balch assisted by bringing out one of the best Demorest medal classes it has ever been my pleasure to hear contest. Miss Hala Nelson, of Boone county, won the gold medal.

Mrs. Jennie Myers, president of Adams county, W. C. T. U. has just removed to Tuscola, Ill. Our loss will be their gain, and sorry are we to lose her.

The Organizer of August 21 contains the call for the state convention to be held at Terre Haute, October 10 to 14.

Mrs. Balch is also out in a letter explaining Demorest's revised rules.

Mrs. Hattie Newlin, county superintendent of Scientific Temperance is doing active work in her department. She has secured the services of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, for the County Institute, on Sept. 4.

Gibson county holds its first fair this week, and the Oakland W. C. T. U. will have a check room there.

New Albany reports a most enjoyable picnic given by the colored Loyal Temperance Legion, on Silver Heights, near that city. The superintendent, Mrs. Bassett, aided by the W. C. T. U., made this picnic almost delightful one. These colored Legioners are very loyal to their pledge and their Legion. They have secured five subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL, which entitles them to a framed picture of Miss Willard.

Columbus reports a Loyal Temperance Legion numbering two hundred members. The W. C. T. U. of that place also hopes soon to open a free reading room for the youth of the city.

Miss Frazer, state superintendent of Y work, has been very busy teaching in county institutes this summer, but also plans well for her Y work, and the Y evening of the state convention promises to be one of the best of the meetings.

Steuben county holds its convention August 27, 28, and has its full program published in the Organizer of last week.

Indianapolis, Meridian W. C. T. U., organized two Loyal Temperance Legions a short time ago.

Indiana is ablaze with prohibition work. Contests, school-house canvasses, which will continue through September and October.

We hope to see permanent headquarters established at our different summer resorts and assemblies, Bethany, Acton, Island Park, Maxinkuckee, Spring Fountain Park. Why not?

We note with joy the increasing donations to the Temperance Temple fund from Indiana. May they increase until Indiana shall have proportionate standing in this mighty monument to our cause.

SADIE B. WHISTLER.

ONE COUNTY FAIR.

We give this timely news withholding, by request, the locality, but vouching for the accuracy of the account:

As the time for our county fairs has come around again perhaps a short account of what happened last year, at a certain fair in our state, will be of interest to your readers and instigate them to be on the watch. As the time approached for the fair to open it was reported that there would be a saloon licensed on the grounds. The women who had the fancy departments in their care, and upon whom depended, in a great measure, the beauty and attraction of the fair, learning of this report, visited the fair directors and asked if it was true, and were assured that it was not. They went on with their work and when about half through they saw signs "of coming events casting their shadows before," and inquired again and were told most positively that no saloon should be opened on the grounds. They went back again to their work in Art Hall and finished a most beautiful display of flowers and fancy articles. When the fair was opened it was found that a saloon had been opened also, and was in full operation. The women still had a little piece of work that they held in reserve until affairs developed. They had had an old log cabin built on the grounds, for the purpose of decorating it in primitive style of a settler's home of fifty years ago, with its pumpkins and apples hung up to dry, its old-fashioned fireplace, spinning wheel, loom, tallow candles, etc , etc. An old gentleman and lady dressed in homespun garments quaint cut and make, were to be the inmates, the old lady sitting, knitting, happy in her rude home; her respected husband with horn-bowed spectacles, carefully studying the latest almanac. All was to be so peaceful, quaint and happy. The little ones of the rising generation were to see how their forefathers dwelt.

But another thought came like an inspiration to these busy women. The lesson on the life of the pioneer must give way for the present. Another lesson was to come first. The children must be taught to hate the saloon that had come among them, claiming the patronage of their husbands, sons and brothers. They had been duped; they would now be as wise as serpents. The old log cabin became the saddest of all objects—a drunkard's home. The pioneer mother came out strong in her new role of the drunkard's wife, while the old frontiersman materialized into a beastly drunken sot. Over the door was a placard bearing this legend, "This was Caused by Licensing a Saloon on our Fair Grounds." The superintendent of the women's department (who by the way is not a W. C. T. U.) was ordered to put a stop to the foolishness that was going on over there by the cabin, because "somebody's feelings would be hurt," "the fair would be ruined," but no one seemed to be responsible for the drunkard's home any more than any one seemed to be for the saloon. Like Topsy, "they just growed." We are all looking forward to their next fair to see how it will come out. Which will they do without, the women or the whisky? *

ILLINOIS PRESS DEPARTMENT.

Let me remind all W. C. T. U. workers that the time for reports is at hand. I ask every one who has received any press favors for our work to report it through the proper channels. I ask each local president to see to it that a summary of all press work done in her union during the past year is forwarded to me, if the address of county or district press superintendent is not known. Superintendents will, of course, be busy gathering up the records of the year. I will send a duplicate of questions sent out early in the year by me, if desired. Let me hear from every union. Even confession is better than silence.

MRS. G. H. READ, Supt.

Bloomington, Ill.

TO W. C. T. UNIONS IN MISSOURI.

Every union not having ordered state minutes of 1890 should do so at once. More than five hundred have been sent out within the past week; it is the best report we have ever had, and you cannot afford to be without it. Send orders at once. Price ten cents, and postage.

ELLEN D. MORRIS, Cor. Sec.

MISSOURI CONVENTION.

The annual meeting of the Kansas W. C. T. U. will be held in Sabetha, on September 24, 25 and 26, convening at 9 o'clock a. m., on September 24. The executive committee will meet on the evening of September 23.

It is hoped every union in the state will be represented. Let us have a grand rally of the forces which have done so much to purify our state and develop a sentiment which will not tolerate liquor shops, give thanks for what has been accomplished and pledge ourselves to continued effort.

Each union is entitled to one delegate and one additional delegate for every twenty-five paying members. State executive committee and state superintendents of departments are ex-officio members of the convention.

The credential cards, properly filled and signed. are to be brought to the convention by some member of the delegation, not sent by mail.

Representatives of the Y. W. C. T. U's will have charge of the exercises one evening, and Mrs. Clara Hoffman, Missouri's talented state president, will deliver an evening address.

The treasurer's books close September 10. No union will be allowed representation that has not met the demands of the treasury prior to that date.

Let us meet every requirement, and come together to learn what more we can do for God, Home and Humanity.

FANNY H. RASTALL, Pres.
S. A. THURSTON, Cor. Sec.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

THE Asheville Assembly enrolled 120 leaders from eighteen states.

REV. DR. A. J. GORDON, of Boston, speaks of three steps from grace to glory. He says we are first translated, then transformed, then transferred; the change being first one of condition, second of character, third of country.

ALL SOULS' Universalist Church, Minneapolis, which lately substituted water for wine in the communion because its wine had caused the downfall of a reformed man, has lately shown its principles concerning advertising liquor in a like practical way. One Sunday the pastor, Rev. Sample, announced that The Record, a paper taken by many of his congregation, contained an advertisement of wines, that he had written to the editor protesting against this; the answer was that the advertisement had been paid for for a year, and the only way to get it out was to refund the money, eighteen dollars. He proposed to raise that money forthwith and send to the editor; he started the subscription with five dollars.

A NEW prohibition paper called The Sun, has been started at Freeport, Ill., and invites the W. C. T. U. and Y's to fill a column every week. Each society has appointed a lady to have this matter in charge.

THE People's party in Kansas follow the example of the Prohibitionists in nominating a lady as State Superintendent of schools; their choice is Miss Fannie McCormick. It is a pity the two parties could not have united on one candidate.

IN Dillsborough, N. C., a woman decreed in her own mind that there should be a W. C. T. U. They had no money whatever, and nobody cared to form a society. This woman invited sundry kindred spirits to her house, and they set in to make rag carpet for the church. While they made it, a nice young lady read aloud to them from temperance books, and they opened their eyes wider and wider. They were now more than ready to band themselves together for the protection of themselves and loved ones against the howling saloons of that town. They then set in to make another carpet for the W. C. T. U., which was sold at an entertainment given, where temperance talk was had. After this, all was comparatively easy. In Wynesbridge, same state, the license was raised to a thousand dollars. A saloon-keeper was debating whether he would take out the license or move to another town. One of our National organizers arrived on the scene, put together a W. C. T. U., and though it had not done a stroke of work, that decided him, and he moved on.

THE Chicago West Side W. C. T. U. has opened a free dispensary at 704 West Lake street, Dr. A. V. Hutchens in charge; his wife, Mrs. Hutchens, is the efficient treasurer of the union, and her husband gives his services to this work.

AT Chautauqua this year ladies took part in every department represented and many declare that the Assembly was the better for it.

AT the Prohibition camp-meeting at Charleston, Ill., Aug. 20–31, the W. C. T. U. was well represented. Mrs. Addie Northam Field conducted a "Juvenile Session" each day, Mrs. Gougar and Mrs. C. H. St. John lectured and in other ways electrified the people.

THE Demorest medal fever has reached Colorado. A contest was held at Durango under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., the contestants all being members of the Loyal Temperance Legion. It was a close one, Miss Stella Russell winning the medal by only one-tenth of one per cent in marking. Mr. Callie Copeland, who stood next her, was accorded first honors and Miss May Kisling, second honors. A second contest is on the tapis.

THE New York state W. C. T. U. is raising money for the erection of a distinctively temperance building upon the fair grounds of the New York state agricultural society. The society has offered land rent free and other privileges. An exhibition hall, reading room, literature stand, offices and large dining hall, will be features of the building.

MRS. A. E. GARRISON, of the Garrison House, Sulphur Springs, Tex., gave an elegant free trade and Australian ballot social, July 26. Mrs. Garrison presided at the organ, opening the exercises with "The wonderful words of life." Mrs. Mary M. Clardy conducted devotional exercises. She then presented free trade in the light of practicing the Golden Rule and admitting to brotherhood all the peoples of the earth, and described the Australian ballot, showing its value in purifying elections. Lively discussion followed. After singing "God be with you till we meet again," and joining in the Lord's Prayer, the guests departed, showering thanks upon Mrs. Garrison for her unique entertainment.

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Singapore has organized a mission for the benefit of European sailors who visit that port.

MT. KISCO, New York, Y. W. C. T. U. has suffered a peculiar loss in the death of its corresponding secretary, Miss Maggie L. Knapp, of whom they write as "our best worker." That she was so proves how an intrepid spirit, fired with love divine, can overcome physical defects, for Maggie was literally without hands, a congenital defect. During her early infancy it was the prayer of her friends that God would take her to Himself, but He had a grand work for her to do here before calling her up higher. She was a precocious child, and early manifested those traits which later made her such a marvel. What other girls could do with hands, she determined to do without them, and she did, learning to sew, write, draw, and many other things, with wonderful dexterity. While a school-girl of twelve she was converted, and ever after lived a beautiful Christian life. When the W. C. T. U. was organized there, she with several of her classmates united; a year later, Miss Elizabeth Greenwood came and organized these girls with others into a Y. Maggie became one of the most efficient workers of this new organization, being its corresponding secretary for two years preceding her death. Her religious life was steadfast and consistent, and she was in labors abundant; member of the choir, teacher in Sunday-school, for seven years financial secretary of the church, always in her place in class, in Sabbath school, and in public worship—who can fill her place?

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The state convention of Idaho W. C. T. U., will be held at Blackfoot, Idaho, Sept. 19, 20, 21 and 22. An interesting program is being prepared and we hope the temperance cause will receive a new impetus all over the state.

MRS. S. E. HOLBROOK.

The seventeenth district, Illinois, annual convention will meet in Vandalia, Sept. 23, 24 and 25. Mrs. Grout, of Rockford, will address "our girls" on the first evening, a popular lecture the second, and a Demorest contest the last evening. A full delegation and a grand, good convention will be the result.

A. V. BOULTER, Pres.

Official Communications.

FAIR WORK IN STATE AND COUNTY UNIONS.

So many letters come to the National superintendent of this department asking for details of fair work, that it is impossible to answer them singly. I give here a few extracts from a report sent by the state superintendent of the Kansas W. C. T. U. She writes: "We have 1,200 papers ready to be given out,—UNION SIGNALS, 500, The National Economist, Orange Judd Farmer, The Farmer's Voice, Hoard's Dairyman, Woman's Journal. Each paper has three leaflets folded inside, one on woman suffrage, one on tobacco, and one on general temperance. Each paper is folded and tied with a white or yellow ribbon.

"We always put temperance posters on the outside of our building, as many will read them who will not come in. I have expended for literature and picture cards, forty dollars. The 700 agricultural papers cost nothing but expressage." She adds that the Fair Headquarters were appropriately decorated with banners, etc. A Demorest Medal Contest banner attracted a great deal of attention last year. Besides these she had a number of posters and other attractions from the W. T. P. A. at Chicago.

These are but a few of the details given of the work of preparation and of past work. Let me urge upon every fair committee the great necessity of a generous and careful distribution of literature this year. The people are stirred as never before upon the liquor question. There are thousands of assertions made in the secular press that are misleading because the question is not well understood. Correct ideas must be implanted in the minds of the masses before these erroneous ones take root. No money can be so well spent as in putting the truth before the world of sight-seers at our fairs. Five millions a day will be in attendance upon the regular annual state and county fairs alone, not to mention the millions who will crowd the grounds where other harvest gatherings are being held; and this is not for a week or a month, but from the middle of July to the first of November.

The Fair number of THE UNION SIGNAL this year has a number of articles prepared especially for enlightening the agricultural population upon matters of great interest to them. The editorial matter is full of strong argument that ought to convince the farmers that the prohibition of the liquor traffic is of the gravest importance to them. If even five hundred were given out at a fair, as will be at the Kansas fair, the large edition issued would supply but three hundred of the fifteen hundred regular fairs.

Every state W. C. T. U. ought to print an extra edition of their official organ for fairs. The Indiana state W. C. T. U., two years ago, had printed ten thousand copies of their state paper, The Organizer, and they were given away in three days, at the state fair, with very little effort. Since that seed sowing the union has increased and strengthened as never before. At the Paris Exposition THE UNION SIGNALS were kept put back where the crowds could not reach them, they were considered of such value, and were given out with the greatest care and discrimination; and some that were sent to other countries were hoarded up to be given out only upon great occasions, although they were more than a year old Order from the W. T. P. A. every kind of literature that will give the facts to the people who gather at the fairs, and it will promptly respond to such calls.

JOSEPHINE R. NICHOLS, National Supt

Publisher's Dep't.

WHY THESE ODD SHAPES?

OUR

GREATEST OFFER!

We cannot longer delay reaching that 100,000 mark. We propose to "get there" by October 1st, and from now till that date only will receive old subscribers' names and new ones at 75 cents each, or

JUST HALF PRICE.

When sent in subject to the conditions. Here are : : : : : : : : :

THE CONDITIONS:

1st. One old and one new name must always come together, that is, new names can be sent in at 75 cents each till October 1st by any one, but if you are an old subscriber and want to get the paper for a year for 75 cents you must send in at least one new name with yours.

2d. The money must be sent with the subscription. . . . . .

3d. You can send us $7.50 and your own name only as an old subscriber and we will send you coupons for nine new names which can be sent in any time up to January 1st, 1891. The same holds good for 2, 4, 6—any number of new names for which you want coupons. : : : : :

TO CATCH YOUR EYE—

SAVE YOUR MONEY AND—

CONDITIONS Continued.

You or your union can take the new names at $1.00 after October 1st, as the price will not again be reduced to 75 cents.

4th. No money will be received by us if the envelope which holds it bears the stamp of October. The offer positively closes Sept. 30th, that is, you can mail money on that day and it will be received, but not if you mail it October 1st.

5th. No commissions will be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of

MISS FRANCES E. WILLARD

Add 30 cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. No matter when your subscription expires it will be extended a year if you will send us $1.50 with your own name and one new name.

8th. This offer holds good only for those whose subscription expires in '90 or '91. It is not meant that those who are in arrears can pay up at the rate of 75 cts. a year.

9th. Now it has all been explained—the offer is a great and generous one, don't forget it, don't pass it by. It ought to bring us 50,000 new names, sure.

Address W. T. P. A., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

GET UP TO THE 100,000 MARK!

Dear Friends:

The above offer speaks for itself. Many have claimed it was unjust to old subscribers to take new names at a less rate than their own. Here is the opportunity to get THE UNION SIGNAL at just as low a price as to the new subscriber. If you do not accept it you cannot, again, justly criticize our system of building up the paper. Is not this true? We are trying to get the paper into homes where it would not go without these efforts to get new subscribers. A gain of 15,000 new names a year for five consecutive years, is evidence that this is being done. With one more good push from you, NOW, the 100,000 mark will be reached. Let every lover of the paper and its claims say, "It shall be so!" and it will be done. The offer is plain, so are the conditions; now, then?

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

"Thrift is a good revenue."

Great Savings

results from cleanliness and SAPOLIO:

It is a solid cake of scouring soap.

Try it in your next house-cleaning and be happy.

CHEAP COMFORT

Can be secured by the small investment in one cake of SAPOLIO when you have a house or kitchen to clean. From the paint to the pots and pans, and including the windows and floors, it is the very best labor-saving soap for scouring and cleaning. All Grocers sell it.

HARVEY.

A MARVELOUS RECITAL!

Given in a few words. Less than six weeks ago I told the readers of THE UNION SIGNAL that the sale of 240 lots in Harvey, two miles south of Chicago, had been placed in my hands. I also said that an advance of prices would be made on September 15th. I considered that a sale of 50 of the lots would be all that could be expected in the short time given before September 15th.

BUT 146 LOTS HAVE BEEN SOLD, and promises for at least 24 more! There's no reason whatever why the whole 240 cannot be disposed of before the time named.

THEY WILL BE! THEY WILL BE!

If you have been hesitating and considering, hasten to decide. Send word what priced lot or lots you will take, and do it at once. The prices are $225, $275, $300, $325, $350, $400, $450 per lot. Terms of payment one-fourth down, balance in six, twelve and eighteen months. (Each lot 25x171 feet.) A telegram will meet prompt attention; all you will have to do will be to telegraph saying what you want reserved and I will put apart the very best and choicest lot or lots left for you. But the advance is so close at hand you must decide quickly. Address

C. D. PAINE, Mgr. Adv. Dept. Union Signal,
161 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Look up back numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL for full information as to the character of this temperance manufacturing town.

I refer by permission to Mrs. T. B. Carse, President W. T. P. A.; Miss Mary Allen West, Editor of THE UNION SIGNAL, and to Mr. Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of THE UNION SIGNAL. Mr. Hall kindly permits me to say that, as the time named is very short, any who desire to invest can send the money to him, and he will see that the deeds, abstracts, etc., are sent promptly.

P. S.—As we go to press we learn that the prices of lots in other parts of Harvey have been advanced 25%. Also that a church and a school have been located and will be built at once.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
25 Cents a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

The responsible position of President of the East Tennessee Land Co., once filled by the late Gen. Fisk, is now occupied by Gen. James L. James. Both the company and the General are to be congratulated upon the new business relationship thus entered into. The company's reputation for integrity and enterprise are too well established to require eulogium, while the business ability of the General, combined with his untiring energy, will, we think, prove the wisdom of selecting him for so responsible a place.

"The greatest labor saver of the age. Practical and Simple; every lady must have it."—Bazar.

100 PERFECT EYELET END Button Holes

in ONE HOUR on any material!

With the

EYELET BUTTON-HOLE ATTACHMENT.

Sent on Receipt of Price $6.00

Is easily operated on any sewing machine. Does strong, handsome and stylish work. Send for circular. In ordering, name your machine. If your sewing machine Agent does not keep it, address

EYELET BUTTON-HOLE ATTACHMENT CO.,
Lincoln Bldg., 1 Union Square, N. Y.

SALESMEN WANTED at once. A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale & retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For terms ad. Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago.

SENSIBLE WOMEN
all want FERRIS'
GOOD SENSE
CORSET WAISTS.
THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.
Best for Health, Economy and Beauty.
BUTTONS at front instead of CLASPS.
RING BUCKLE at hip for Hose supporters.
Tape-fastened Buttons—won't pull off.
Cord-Edge Button Holes—wont wear out.
FIT ALL AGES—Infants to Adults.
Sold by Leading RETAILERS everywhere.
Send for Circular,
FERRIS BROS.,
Manufacturers,
341 BROADWAY, New York.
MARSHALL FIELD & CO., CHICAGO,
WHOLESALE WESTERN AGENTS.

AGENTS Wanted. Liberal Salary Paid. At home or to travel. Team furnished free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

Publisher's Notes.

What Our Agents are Doing with "Glimpses of Fifty Years."

"I worked two afternoons the past week and sold eight books. I think I shall do nicely with 'Glimpses,' as everybody I see is interested in its author."

"I find a keen interest in my book wherever I go. Miss Willard is so extensively known that the disagreeable part of canvassing, introducing the book, is already done. My last week's work is fairly good, eleven cloth, six half and five full morocco books. I shall place one hundred copies in the territory you have assigned me."

"I have been selling a book called '——,' for the last three months, but have been told by so many people that they would take my book if it were 'Glimpses of Fifty Years,' by Miss Willard, that I have decided to order an outfit and give my whole time to the work. In fact, I already have seven orders, provided I get the agency."

"The thirty-eight copies of 'Glimpses' you shipped me on the 4th inst., came in good condition. I never had so pleasant a time delivering books. Every subscriber was as anxious to get the book as I was to get the pay for it. I wish to thank you for the lovely premium copy you sent me and shall try hard to earn another one with my next order."

"I did not expect to do much with my book when I ordered the outfit, but have been happily disappointed. I have worked only at odd hours during the last three months, but find that I have over fifty orders for delivery in September and October. If I can secure others I shall do so."

What a Reader of "Glimpses" Says.

"I have just finished reading 'Glimpses of Fifty Years.' Few books have ever touched my heart like this one, and helped me to be a better friend, wife and mother. Miss Willard cannot be other than an inspiration to every thoughtful woman, and there is one woman here in the great West that returns thanks every day to our Heavenly Father for raising up such womanhood as she represents. God bless her!"

Willard Souvenir Cards.

September 28 has been set apart as Harvest Home Day in honor of its being the birthday of Miss Willard. Last year we prepared a set of twelve cards with illuminated texts on one side, and witty, wise, or winning quotations of Miss Willard's on the other side. This year we have another set ready with new words of wisdom and helpfulness. The cards are put up in packages of twelve. We offer them at a low rate in packages only, viz.:

1 package,	$ .25
8 assorted p'kgs (96 cards)	1.60

We had orders for great numbers of these pretty cards last year. Send for what you will need soon. One of the sets will have Miss Willard's new poem, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons Must Go!" printed thereon, and this will be especially useful in Nebraska. It is urged that September 28 be made a Nebraska day. See The Young Crusader for particulars.

Methods vs. Hit or Miss.

The real work of the W. C. T. U. is done, not in conventions, nor assemblies, nor popular convocations of whatever name, but in the education received in the home work, in the effort to get laws passed or laws obeyed that will help the neighborhood where you live and in preparing for local meetings where topics are discussed that widen out from neighborhood bounds to world-wide interests. The last Monthly Responsive Reading is on "Music," and is written by Mrs. Mather D. Kimball. It teems with suggestions which many people would never think of, touching music in public gatherings, at L. T. L. meetings, in local unions, etc. The music at the National W. C. T. U. Convention in Chicago last fall was under Mrs. Kimball's charge, and was exceptionally well taken care of. You will do well to use this (the July Reading) and the August one on "Fairs" by Mrs. J. R. Nichols, at your meetings. The cost? A trifle compared with value received, only

$1 for 13 Copies to One Address One Year.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For insect bites use Pond's Extract.

CHICAGO SHOPPING FREE. Send for circular. Mrs. Shergold, 3524 Lake Ave., Chicago Ill.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.
The Chicago Polytechnic Institute is modelled after the London Polytechnic and People's Palace. It affords instruction in all practical branches, including trades of all kinds, slöjd (free) and cooking, millinery and dressmaking. Being philanthropic, its charges are merely nominal. For free illustrated catalogue, address SECRETARY LEGG, S. E. cor. Madison St. and Fifth Ave.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

LADIES! Use only Brown's French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

VanHouten's Cocoa
"BEST & GOES FARTHEST."
The purest, most soluble—the original cocoa. Invented, patented and made in Holland. Delicate, stimulating, nutritious, much better for the nerves than tea and coffee. Ask for VAN HOUTEN'S, take no other. 161

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
CHANCE FOR ALL TO enjoy a cup of Perfect Tea. A trial order of 3½ pounds of fine Tea, either Oolong, Japan, Imperial, Gunpowder, Young Hyson, Mixed, English Breakfast or Sun Sun Chop, sent by mail on receipt of $2.00. Be particular and state what kind of Tea you want. Greatest inducements ever offered to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder. For full particulars address The Great American Tea Co., P.O. Box 289, 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York

AGENTS MEN OR WOMEN To sell Teas, Spices, etc., to families in towns and cities. NO CAPITAL REQUIRED. Also Salesmen to Wholesale Groceries to Farmers, Hotels, etc. No License to Pay. Good pay. Steady work. Janes Bros. & Co. Wholesale Grocers, 263 & 265 Wabash Av. Chicago.

THE NEW PENSION LAW
grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent.
Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

American Scenery.

There is probably not another ten-mile stretch of railroad in the world more varied and majestic in its surroundings than that from Point of Rocks to Harper's Ferry. The Valley of the Potomac narrows, the hills on either side rise to the stateliness of mountains, and the river flows swiftly in ripples and eddies. Just below the ferry, the river, increased by the Shenandoah's volume, becomes a torrent. On the opposite side is Loudon Heights, a sentinel of the Blue Ridge, dark and frowning. Beyond Virginia and into West Virginia, the base of the two states, and ending in the swift flowing stream which separates them, Bolivar Heights start abruptly up with Harper's Ferry at their feet. The train, still upon the opposite side, winds beneath Maryland Heights, thirteen hundred feet high. The meeting of these three mighty forest-crowned masses, the two rivers becoming but one, the long vista up the Potomac, in the foreground the steel bridge and behind it John Brown's Fort and the old-fashioned houses of the town, the ruins of the arsenal whose two tall chimneys alone remain, Jefferson's Rock high on the heights, and over all a September sky—expression fails the theme.

The scene described above can be viewed from the windows of the Vestibule Trains running between the great cities of the east and west via Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. All B. & O. trains run via Washington.

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS! ✣ $35. ✣ ORGANS!
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

400,000 THE LARGEST CIRCULATION of any periodical in the world. "The Philada. Ladies' Home Journal and Practical Housekeeper." ☞ Sample copies FREE. CURTIS PUB. CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

DRESS SILKS The very best. Send 8c. in stamps for fine lot of samples to select from. The beautiful silks and low prices will astonish you. Chas. A. Stevens & Bros., Silk Store, Chicago, Ill.

SATIN SILK & PLUSH Pieces for Crazy Patch, large pkg. of beautiful pieces, 10c. Pkg EMBROIDERY SILK all colors 10c. 100 Best SONGS words and music complete 10c. All three articles 25c. including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, may be sent to 5 names $1. Adr THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES' FINE JERSEYS pure Wool, only $1. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded. Sent postpaid upon receipt of price and size. Mrs. L. Shrier, Jr., 256 Main St., Norfolk, Va.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

400 RECITATIONS and Readings, Bound in Handsome Lithograph Cover, mailed to any address for 50 cents. Stamps taken. Address J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

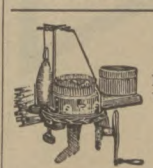
THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH
duplicating apparatus. Send postal card to A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, for descriptive circulars and samples of work.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St. Richmond, Va.

THE BEST SINGER. We claim to have the best Singer Machine made. For reasons write, M. A. Scullin & Co., 762 W. Lake St., Chicago

RUG THE FORSYTH COMBINATION. & EMBROIDERY MACHINE is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalogue and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn St., Chicago.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.



Bickford Family Knitter
Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired.
A. M. LAWSON,
783 Broadway, New York.

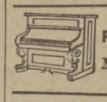
WANTED ACTIVE PARTY—SALARY $100—to represent ASSOCIATION incorporated to supply, at co-operative prices, general merchandise and articles for home and family use, in each small city, town and place. Paid up Certificates $100.00 CASH, 80,000 members. CREDIT WELL RATED. References Exchanged. Empire Co-operative Association (P. O. Box 1610) N.Y.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.

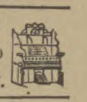
The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin. For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W. H. McDoel, Traffic Manager, or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent, 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May. Box 3442, New York, N. Y.



WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500
Marchal & Smith Piano Co., 235 East 21st St., N. Y.



CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO., Washington, N. J.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. it sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

Baby's Complete Wardrobe Only 21 patterns first outfit 40cts.
Directions for making and trimming stylishly. Number, kind and amount of material required. Hints on care of baby.
RELIABLE PATTERN Co. Lodi, Ohio.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Braces are the best selling goods made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory. Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

A FULL LINE OF DRESS REFORM GOODS, including the Equipoise Waist, and all the Jennes-Miller specialties. Send stamp for Catalogue.
Mrs. S. W. Pike,
75 Madison St., Chicago.

NOTICE.

The Records of Marion County, Oregon, show the platting of many thousand acres of land in small tracts of from 5 to 10 acres.

Capital City Fruit Farm of 640 acres, Sunnyside number 1,320 acres; Sunnyside number 2,140 acres; Sunnyside number 3,500 acres, and a number of others have been placed on the records by The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Oregon.

This Company is also doing business in Portland and Albany, and has for sale numerous other small tracts. The great advantage of this plan is that it brings together in one community the class of people who are all engaged in the same business, viz., fruit growing, consequently there springs up large Drying and Canning establishments similar to those in the city of Salem, which makes a profitable market for the fruit raised.

Consult your interests by buying of The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Portland or Albany, Oregon.

DR. WILFORD HALL'S

Hygienic Treatment is being used and indorsed by thousands of the leading physicians, lawyers, clergymen, and thinking people throughout the country.

It takes directly hold of the worst cases of constipation, dyspepsia, liver complaints, headaches, heart disease, incipient consumption, diabetes, and Bright's disease of the kidneys, rheumatism, fevers, and inflammation of the lungs and of other internal organs, not by attacking these so-called diseases directly, but by radically neutralizing and removing their causes, thus allowing nature herself to do her work unimpeded.

For further information regarding this medicineless treatment call upon or send a 2-cent stamp to A. T. BATES, Room 46, 161 La Salle St., Chicago

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

Pledge Cards.

The single pledges are against drinking only. The triple include drinking, profanity and use of tobacco, per 100, 50 cts.

German pledge cards, same as above.

Sunday-school class pledges, for a whole class to sign, per 100, 50 cts.

Loyal Temperance Legion pledge, adopted by the national departments of juvenile and Sunday-school work. This is to take the place of the Sunday-school scholar's pledge; has a place for witnessing by Sunday-school teacher, pastor or parent. Is a folder with a new and specially prepared design, and is very attractive throughout. Order blue when pledge without the words, "as a beverage," is wanted. Order the buff when words, "as a beverage," are wanted. Price per 100, $1; per 1,000, $7.

Wall pledge, designed for Sunday-school and Loyal Temperance Legions. In colors, as above. Price, 25 cts.

Honorary membership cards for Loyal Temperance Legion. Price per 100, 50 cts.

National W. C. T. U. pledge cards, per 100, 50 cts.; per 100 (perforated), 60 cts.; white ribbons for tying, per 100, 40 cts.

Social Purity pledges: White Cross (two colors), per 100, 50 cts,; Silver Cross and White Shield (two colors) each per 100, $1; Daughters of the Temple, per 100. $1; White Shield pledge on paper, per 100, 50c.

R. R. Temperance Association, per 100, $1

Praying League pledge, per 100, $1.

Y. W. C. T. U. Illinois pledge, per 100, $1; Y. W. C. T. U. membership card with pledge, per 100, $1.

FAIR

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.

Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00

All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

MR. ALFRED ROBINSON, Wilson, N. C., says: "Bradycrotine is a never failing compound for Headache."

MR. T. D. TINSLEY, of the firm of S. R. Jaques & Tinsley, Macon, Ga., says: "I have never know a single case of Headache that Bradycrotine did not cure, and that within the time stated."

An institution which should be known to every W. C. T. U. lady in the United States is the St. Louis Hygienic College of Physicians and Surgeons under the charge of Susanna W. Dodds, A. M., M. D., Dean. Their advertisement appears in this paper, and all interested should send for catalogue.

Van Houten's Cocoa. Best and goes the farthest.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy.....	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each.....	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each.....	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms....	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents; in package of 25 or over, to one address, one issue or assorted, 1c per copy.

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

Platform Voices. Price 25 cents; compiled by Miss Julia Ames, editor UNION SIGNAL. This is a collection of unusually good temperance poems and recitations. Great care has been taken in the selections, and we cordially recommend this book to all who need "something in the line of recitations" and don't know exactly what. This book fills the vacuum completely.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS

Beware of Imitations.
NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

---

300 Dollars
—IN—PREMIUMS

will be offered to Purchasers through H. C. F. KOCH & CO'S Illustrated

FASHION CATALOGUE.

A Guide of how to buy

DRY GOODS FROM NEW YORK

and have them delivered free of charge—when the order amounts to a specified sum—at prices guaranteed lower than from any other house in the U. S.

Published September 10, '90, and mailed free upon application; listing and illustrating, with over 2,000 lithographs and wood-cuts, everything needed for Ladies', Gents' and Children's wear and adornment; Housekeeping Goods, etc.

H. C. F. Koch & Co IMPORTERS AND RETAILERS

6th Ave. and 20th St., New York.

In writing please mention this paper.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

THE PERFECTION Flour Bin and Sieve. No home is complete without it. Dispense with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops, sieves, etc No scattering of flour; no apron or rolling up of sleeves needed. A few turns of the handle and you have enough sifted for a baking. It pleases everybody. No housekeeper will be without it after once using. Where we have no representative we will send the bin on receipt of price. To hold 100 lbs. $3.25; 50 lbs. $2.50; 25 lbs. $2 25. No goods sent C.O.D. Agents wanted

Sherman, Tangenberg & Co, 491 & 493 Carroll Ave Chicago.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.

Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars.
Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY

anything in Chicago, secure the services of

THE ECONOMY CLUB,

at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at

WHOLESALE.

Improve your home with our ATTRACTIVE WALL PAPER

Remarkably low prices. Enormous assortment of styles. Honorable treatment. We can refer to hundreds of well-pleased customers in every section of the U S. Our prices range from excellent Lustre papers at 6c. a roll to elegant Iridescent Embossed Golds at 35c. For 8c. postage will send to any address, samples with borders to match.
A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1206 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.

Its merits as a Wash Blue have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask for it.
D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop.
233 North Second St., Philadelphia, Pa.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00

Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores.

Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express
A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00

Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

STANDARD FIBER-WARE COMPANY Trade STANDARD Mark. MANKATO, MINN.

ASK your dealer for Water Pails Dairy Pails, Wash Basins, Cuspidors, Slop Jars, Table Mats, Slop Jar Mats, Etc. made from FLAX FIBER. Practically indestructible. Manufact'd by the STANDARD FIBER-WARE CO. Nothing will please you like this Plain and Decorated Ware. In use everywhere. None genuine without "STANDARD" Trade Mark on bottom. If your dealer does not keep it, send his address and we will mail you picture cards.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME. NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure.
Read article in UNION SIGNAL June 5, page 13.
The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.

No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.

SPLENDID PROGRESS.

Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.

PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address

The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; a perfect working, reliable, finely finished Sewing Machine, adapted for light or heavy work, with all latest improvements and complete set of attachments. A written guarantee for 5 years with each machine. Buy direct from manufacturers and save Dealers and Agents profits. Catalogue free.
OXFORD MANUFACTURING CO., Chicago, Ill.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents earning $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chi.

Dr. R. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St. Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY.

$5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c. stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG. CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

OPIUM HABIT.

Send two dollars to Dr. L. S. Means, Oxford. Ga., for a sure remedy for the Opium & Morphine habit.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

---

MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

A-CORN SALVE.

Removes the Toe-Corn Every Time.
NO PAIN! NO POISON!
"After using it my feet are in a better condition than they have been for a year." Mrs. E. A. Collins, Havana, Ill
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS OR SEND 15 CENTS TO THE GIANT CHEMICAL CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

Cured Without Drugs.

By the "New Method." Chronic diseases of every kind either in men or women. At your own home. Something entirely new. Investigate. You can't afford to be sick. Send for Pamphlet.
HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 Broadway, N. Y.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT

HALF PRICE, $5 AND UP.

POSITIVELY CURES RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting nervous DISEASES of both sexes. 100 degrees of Electricity.
Guaranteed latest improved, most powerful
MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Pamphlet free.
DR. W. J. HORNE, 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

THE DR. OWEN
Electric Belt
AND APPLIANCES

Cure acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. It is a stimulant and tonic, and while curing one disease does not produce another. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian.

(TRADE MARK.)
THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO., 191 & 193 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES

FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.

Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE.
REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

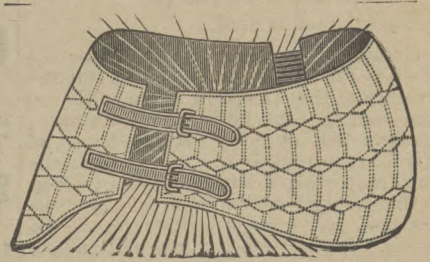
25c

AAABBBCCCDDDEEEFFF
GGGHHHIIIJJKKLLLMMM
NNNOOOPPPQRRRSSSTT
TUUVVWWW...XYYZZ

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions of "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.

MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

GOLD PLATED
WARRANTED GENUINE.

$4.95

Don't buy a common looking silver watch when you can now obtain for the small sum of $4.95 a handsome genuine 14 karat gold plated hunting case, full engraved watch with a first-class full jeweled movement a perfect timekeeper, genuine lever and full plate handsomely damaskeened and ornamented, fully equal in appearance to the watches regularly sold by jewelers at from $25 to $35. In carrying this watch you have the credit of carrying a solid gold watch, as the plating process is got down so fine now-a-days that it is almost impossible to detect the difference. The engraving on the case is just the same as on the high priced watches, and is in the very loveliest and latest patterns. Some will doubt our ability to be able to supply such a watch at this price, and to convince you that we mean just what we say we make the following most extraordinary offer for the next 30 days.

READ!

Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will promptly ship the watch to you by express C. O. D. with instructions to the express agent to allow you to examine it at the express office. If on examination you are convinced that it is a bargain, pay the agent $4.95 and the express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. We could not afford to make such an offer as this, unless we were confident that the watch will not only please you, but be a surprise to you. Bear in mind this price will be for 30 days from the date of this paper only.

14k 14k

THE NAT'L M'F'G AND IMPORTING CO.,
(Incorporated) 191 & 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,

181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Signal Notes.

MRS. I. J. HOWARD, superintendent of jail and prison department, New York City, found time and spirit, amid her hard, sorrowful work, to write a sprightly parody on "Who Killed Cock Robin?" upon the doom of the Endres Bill:

"Speaker Husted, Thoroughly disgusted," dealt the death blow;

"A whisky bribed scout
With a 'Ring' in his snout
He laid it out."

"The votes of the brave,
They dug its grave."

Governor Hill was chief mourner.

"Great Dr. MacPharson
He acted as parson."

"The brewers with fear,
Their end being near
They carried the bier."

"The New York World, of course
It followed the hearse."

"But a loud song of praise
The people will raise,"

because the bill is dead.

GEORGE T. ANGELL says that nine out of every ten dollars thus far paid into the treasury of the American Humane Education Society have been paid by women; nineteen out of every twenty Bands of Mercy are presided over by women, the same proportion of letters showing interest in the work are written by women, and the best book ever written for the protection of horses, "Black Beauty," was written by a woman.

THE Annual Report of the United Kingdom Band of Hope gives a total of 16,724 societies and 1,975,696 members; an increase of 2,072 societies and 171,576 members during the year. Seven lecturers are employed to lecture in schools on the effects of liquor, hold conferences with teachers and in other ways promote the cause of scientific temperance teaching. The funds to pay them were largely raised at the annual Bazaar at Cheltenham.

PENNSYLVANIA Prohibitionists, gathered six hundred and fifty strong in state convention, adopted a strong platform and nominated Charles Miller for Governor, and Charles E. Hyatt, Lieutenant-Governor.

DR. RAZIE KOUTLOIAROFF-HANUM, a Mohammedan woman born in the Crimea, has passed a brilliant examination as physician and surgeon before the college authorities at Odessa, and is admitted to practice. Dr. Koutloiaroff-Hanum is the first Mohammedan woman physician regularly graduated. Women, too, are now being employed for the first time by the Mohammedan government as telegraphic clerks and ticket agents on the Trans-Caspian railroad.

THE graduates from the Yale divinity school have been under the instruction of a woman professor of elocution. It is said that the recent class was of remarkably good character in their bearing and the quality of their performance.

COL. WOODFORD has been doing grand work on the Pacific Coast. He gave four weeks to Port Townsend, commencing with small audiences which grew till the Opera House could not hold all who wished to hear him. Fully sixty per cent were young men, just the class he is most successful in reaching. The Leader of Port Townsend says in regard to his meeting: "The results of this series of temperance meetings are beyond calculation. It is probably the first time in the history of Port Townsend that the town was moved by work of this character. Even Moody failed to touch the right chord here and was compelled to leave without accomplishing much." At the close of the series, the organization employing him found that the collections had paid all expenses and left them with eighty dollars in their treasury.

GENERAL NEGRIER, of the French army, has just issued an order to the garrison at Nantes containing the following paragraph: "Officers and non-commissioned officers are reminded that in no part of the 'theory' are military commands accompanied by swearing or blasphemy; consequently the General orders that henceforth such coarse words be omitted from commands."

MR. GOSCHEN'S licensing proposal seems likely to cause a serious division in the Church of England Temperance Society. Canon Wilberforce has already left it. Other ecclesiastics are following his example; and the Guardian begs them to hasten their departure if they imagine that the Church of England will not accept temperance reform unless it includes the ruin of the publicans.

FULL WEIGHT PURE
DR PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER
MOST PERFECT MADE

Mrs Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st 11 1891

Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest, and most Healthful. Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime, or Alum. Sold only in Cans.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.
NEW YORK. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

ACME CORSET & DRESS PROTECTOR
A complete garment worn under the corset or flannels, protecting the clothing from perspiration. Cheaper than dress shields, one pair doing the work of six.
Misses' bust measure, 28-33, $ .80
Ladies' " " 34-39, 1.00
M. DEWEY, Mnfr., 1397 W. Monroe St., Chicago. } AGENTS
Send Money by P. O. Order. Catalogue free. } WANTED

EDUCATIONAL.

Education in American Homes.

The famous Chautauqua Reading Circle now beginning its fourteenth year has become a power in the land. Thousands of busy people are reading in home, shop and railway car. This winter English History, Language and Literature will receive special attention. The readings are by leading authors of the day. A woman writes: "I wish I had more time for study. I am a busy mother; our family numbers eleven and we have no servants. Still, where there is a will there is a way, and I often take my sewing or knitting in hand and my daughter reads to me." Address John H. Vincent, Drawer 194, Buffalo, N. Y., for full details.

"The Oread" free, tells how students of small means may gain a Normal, Collegiate, Art or Musical education or a Course in Stenography and Typewriting at Mt. Carroll (Ill.) Sem.

MILWAUKEE COLLEGE. Milwaukee, Wis. For Young Women. For Catalogue address C. R. KINGSLEY, Ph. D., Pres't.

CHICAGO FEMALE COLLEGE
Morgan Park (near Chicago). Boarding School for Girls and Young Ladies. For catalogue address G. THAYER, LL. D., Morgan Park, Ill., or 77 Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

MICHIGAN FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich.
Opens Sept. 11, '90. College, Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH
42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

JACKSONVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY
Preparatory and Collegiate Courses, Modern Languages, Elocution, SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS. 60th Year.
ILLINOIS CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC
All departments of Musical Instruction. 20th Year.
E. F. BULLARD, A. M., Prin. & Supt. Jacksonville, Ill.

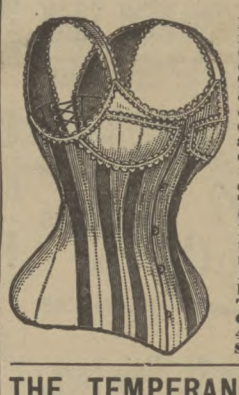
The St. Louis Hygienic College
OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.
Will begin its Fourth annual course of instruction Wednesday, October 1, 1890. This is the only hygienic college in the United States; it is legally chartered and officered, and has a full graded course of three years. Men and women are admitted.
Address for announcement, S. W. DODDS, M.D., 2826 Washington Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE
NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON.
A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue.
W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

PURE TEA
GET ORDERS
FOR TEAS, BAKING POWDER AND PURE SPICES.
We are the only Tea firm who give Premiums to Club Raisers and, at the same time, Presents to Consumers. We give Gold Watches, Silver Ware, Tea, Dinner and Toilet Sets, Hanging and Stand Lamps, and hundreds of other useful articles. 3½ lbs. any kind of Tea by mail, $2.00. Agent wanted in each town. Big Pay. For terms address YAMASHIRO TEA CO., Pittsburgh, Pa.
List of 500 Presents for Consumers.

RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH, SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth, Minn.

GOOD HEALTH.


Lady Agents wanted, for THE THOMAS GOOD HEALTH CORSET WAIST. Thousands in use. Corded, Boned, Buttoned or clasped at front; will fit old ladies, young women and growing girls. Every lady wishing a beautiful figure and also comfort will buy The Thomas Good Health Corset Waist. HUNDREDS sent by mail to women unable to obtain them of our Agents. All mail orders promptly filled.
THE THOMAS CORSET Parlors, 405 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.
An elegant Photogravure, size 10x13 inches, of this magnificent building now erecting under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at Chicago, in which thousands of people throughout the country are interested, will be sent FREE to any one desiring same, with our compliments, on receipt of ten cents to cover postage and expense of mailing.
FOX, SHEPHERD & CO.,
REAL ESTATE & INVESTMENTS,
85 Dearborn St., Chicago.

CHICAGO KINDERGARTEN TRAINING SCHOOL.
ELIZABETH HARRISON, - - - Principal.
Re-opens Sept. 15, 1890. For circulars and other information apply to MISS ALICE McROY,
2323 Indiana Ave., Chicago Ill.

JAPANESE BRIC-A-BRAC
Shipped to Church Fairs on Consignment; get our circulars.
THE FORMOSA,
86 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

"UNRIVALLED" "WORLD RENOWNED"
IMPERIAL GRANUM
SAFE, NOURISHING, DELICIOUS, PURE
FOOD
THE GREAT AMERICAN DIETETIC PREPARATION FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN
FOR INVALIDS
CONVALESCENTS AND THE AGED.
THOUSANDS OF UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING SALES PROVE MERITED SUCCESS.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. SHIPPING DEPOT. JOHN CARLE & SONS-NEW YORK

LADY AGENTS
WANTED for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular.
VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

NEW ENGLISH PERFUME,
Crab-Apple Blossoms.
(Malus Coronaria.)

Chief among the scents of the season is Crab-Apple Blossoms, a delicate perfume of highest quality and fragrance.—London Court Journal.
It would not be possible to conceive of a more delicate and delightful perfume than the Crab-Apple Blossoms, which is put up by The Crown Perfumery Co., of London. It has the aroma of spring in it, and one could use it for a life time and never tire of it.—New York Observer.
Put up in 1, 2, 3 and 4 ounce bottles.
THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO.,
177 New Bond St., London. Sold Everywhere.
Send 12 cents in stamps to Caswell, Massey & Co., New York, who will mail a trial Bijou sample bottle of the above delicious Crab-Apple Blossom Perfume to any address.

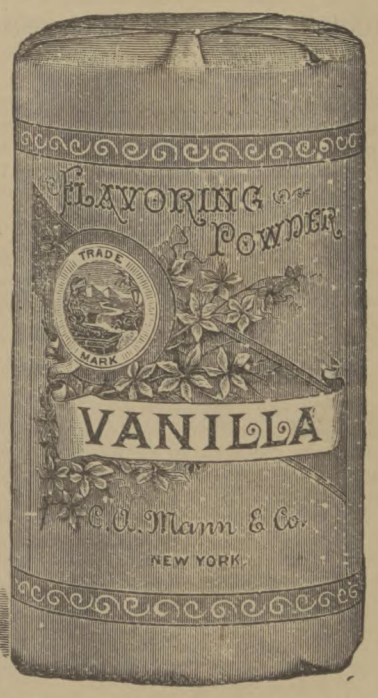
RIDGE'S FOOD
Will be found invaluable for Cholera Infantum and all Summer Complaints, children or adults. His note medicine but will be retained & sustain life when everything else fails. 4 sizes 35 cts. up.

Flavoring Powders.



What's the use of Flavoring Powders? Liquid Extracts are good enough? Well, we don't think you would say that if you had tried the powders. Liquid Extracts might, perhaps, be as good if we could always be sure that the real stuff was used in their composition. But alcohol is a powerful disguise, and the temptation to adulterate is too often irresistible to manufacturers. The result is often the poorest excuse for a flavor. Mexican Vanilla costs ten times as much as Tonka Beans, and notwithstanding that the latter is as different to the real stuff as chicory is to coffee, it goes for Vanilla Extract, dependence upon the strength of the alcohol used with it being unlimited. Why not go back to first principles? In some instances it would be better, as, for instance, in grated Vanilla Beans, or nutmeg. Essential Oils of some flavors are delicious, but they take a steady and skilled hand to use them. Too large a quantity would ruin the article flavored.

Some have said to us that they had no use for Lemon, as the grated rind is preferable. Perhaps it is, but then you only use the outside of the fruit, and the pulp is apt to be wasted, unless you make lemonade of it immediately. Take off the outer rind, and the lemon dries up very quickly. Our flavorings can't be adulterated. You would detect it at once. But they contain all of the active principle necessary. Try them. Send us 50 cents, and we will mail you a 1-ounce bottle each of the Lemon and Vanilla.

(Inducements to Agents.)

C. A. MANN & CO., 48 Murray St., NEW YORK

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 38.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 18, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: What the World's Fair Means to the W. C. T. U.—The Hindu Barbers 8, 9
OUR BOOK TABLE: 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, W. C. T. U., by John G. Woolley—A Brand from the Fire, by Mindah E. Merrifield—A Chief in Tennessee, by Frances E. Willard—The National W. C. T. U. Training School, by Alfred A. Wright—Equality in Creation, by Rev. J. H. Byers 2, 3, 4
WORLD'S W. C. T. U.: The Work in India 4
CORRESPONDENCE: The Ministry of Music—Oklahoma's Needs—Columbian Fair Portrait of Miss Anthony—A Word Concerning the Convention—Our Prison Work—A Traveling Man's Testimony—Membership Crusade Day—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, The Tragedy of the Tay—To the Boys 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning September 28, 1890. 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, The Two Worlds—Every-Day Life—Words to the Wise; The Lion Shall Lie Down With the Lamb—Invisible Weights and Measures—Consecrated Christians—Undrawn Poultry 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: The Parted Ways 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: World's W. C. T. U., Montana, Southern California, Wisconsin, Kansas, New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Missouri—Announcement. 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Parliamentary Usage—Woman's Lecture Bureau 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Kentucky's Constitutional Convention is in session at Frankfort.

Reports from the south show prospects for the cotton crop unusually good.

Thirty-eight saloons have been closed by the sheriff in Deadwood, South Dakota.

Gov. Hill, of New York, has vetoed the bill establishing the system of police matrons.

The first state election in Wyoming resulted in the election of the entire Republican ticket.

Miss Willard and Miss Gordon went to Nebraska Monday, to give two weeks' work in the campaign.

The National Prohibition committee have secured the $1,000 a month and is now working to raise it to $1,500.

The Lever last week printed nearly three columns of names of Nebraska business men who protest against saloons.

The Photographers' Association of America, at its late meeting in Washington, gave to the National Museum a statue of Daguerre.

Dakota Republicans showed their appreciation of good service by renominating Representative Pickler for Congress, by acclamation.

The Westinghouse-Pullman combination for manufacturing electric cars propose putting in a half million dollar plant at Pullman.

General Cailor Ezeta who has been provisional president of San Salvador is elected President, receiving thirty-six out of thirty-seven votes.

The Grant Monument Association, of New York, has adopted the plan for the memorial presented by John H. Duncan. The cost is to be $500,000.

The People's Municipal League, of New York, is promised the support of ninety per cent of the clergy of that city, in the effort to elect an honest mayor.

Ex-president White of Cornell University, late Minister to Berlin, was married last week to Helen Magill, daughter of the president of Swarthmore College.

Rev. Samuel Plantz and his wife, Myra Goodwin Plantz, a favorite contributor to W. T. P. A. publications, sailed for Europe last week, for a year's study in Berlin.

General Booth of the Salvation Army announces a gigantic scheme for the reclamation of social outcasts, including homes of refuge, industrial education and religious instruction.

Hon. Henry Wade Rogers, LL.D., the newly-elected President of the Northwestern University adds another to the list of laymen called to the presidency of great educational institutions.

The United States man-of-war Baltimore, conveying the remains of Captain Ericsson arrived in Stockholm, Friday, having made the run from New York to Gothenburg in seventeen days.

The Rock Island, Ill., Prohibitionists have nominated for county superintendent of public schools, Mrs. Mary E. Metzgar, president of the district W. C. T. U., one of the most efficient white-ribboners of the state.

The first state convention of Washington Prohibitionists met at Seattle, nominated Robert Abernathy for Congress, elected Judge Range chairman of state central committee, and raised $2,000 to prosecute the campaign.

The census returns show that Kansas has increased in population from 996,000 in 1880 to 1,680,000 in 1890. Kansas farmers have been more prompt in paying for farm implements than those of either Nebraska or Missouri. So says the record.

Emperor William recently ordered a thorough examination of all children in the manufactories and offices of the German government, and sent all the delicate ones to the seashore, at government expense, for a fortnight's enjoyment of the sea breezes.

The directors of the Columbian Exposition voted unanimously to retain the dual site for the Fair, the Lake Front and Jackson Park. The tendered resignation of Vice-president Bryan was not accepted, much to the gratification of all who know that gentleman's ability.

The Commonwealth Club of Durham, N. C., lately gave an elegant banquet to the State Press Association, and made a decided innovation by excluding wine. The Press Association so appreciated this action that it tendered its hearty thanks for this mark of Durham's regard for the cause of temperance and for the testimony such action bears to the sobriety of North Carolina editors.

Chicago was greatly shocked Saturday to find that saloon men had secured options on eight blocks just at the north entrance of Jackson Park, the site of the Columbian Fair. The park is surrounded by "prohibited districts" with the exception of these eight blocks which, for some reason, were exempt, though few knew it, until saloonkeepers discovered the fact, and pounced down upon the property. So says the Inter Ocean.

WYOMING W. C. T. U. holds its convention at Cheyenne, October 2 and 3. All unions in the state are urged to send delegates.

MRS. C. B. BUELL has returned from the East, and is to give the address at the eighth Illinois district convention at Wheaton, the evening of Sept. 25. This convention opens with a social on the evening of Sept. 23 and continues two days, including School of Method Drills in its program.

THE good ship Werra with Miss Ames on board arrived at New York safely early Friday morning. Miss Helen Hood, who had gone on to meet Miss Ames, was at the wharf to receive her and they came directly on to Chicago, arriving Saturday night. It goes without saying that a glad welcome awaited the home coming of our associate editor, who returns full of inspiration and health to resume her work on THE UNION SIGNAL.

WHILE making plans for the Membership Crusade, remember to plan for increased subscription lists to THE UNION SIGNAL. Seek to secure the name of each new member as a subscriber to the National organ; in no other way can you do so much to insure intelligent interest and efficiency among the new recruits as by bringing them into touch with the work being accomplished through this organization all round the world. Secure names also for the World's Petition. Send to Miss Alice Briggs, Evanston, for blanks.

A PASTOR writing from North Dakota says that their saloons went out July 1st, but business has not suffered as it was prophesied it would. On the contrary it has improved, and the change for the better in men coming there to work in the harvest fields is very noticeable. This time last year drunken men were to be met on every corner, and drunken rows among foreigners were of common occurrence. This year the "drunk and disorderlies" have vanished with the saloons, and the harvest was gathered without hindrance because of drunken workmen.

ALL will be glad to hear that our National recording secretary, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, is recovering from her five weeks' illness which has kept her close prisoner to her bed. Her recovery is slow, as her strength was quite exhausted; the thousands who love her unite in thanksgivings to God for the present improvement, and earnest prayers for complete restoration to health. Her first returning strength was spent in work on the World's Petition. A communication concerning it is received too late for insertion this week, but will appear next. Meanwhile let the work of securing signatures to the petition be pushed.

EVERYWHERE Dr. Kelley speaks he is greeted with great audiences and produces a profound impression; Tennessee was never so stirred before. The Issue gives a list of nearly forty appointments for him, covering the time till Oct. 25, and says that by force of argument and appeal he is winning hundreds to prohibition. His is heroic treatment of public matters and people love to follow a brave thinker. The Southern people are a thinking people, and he appeals directly to their judgment and moral sense. The fight he is making in Tennessee is the fight that will yet deliver the South from the Bourbon rule of whisky politics. His shots are hot and heavy, and good dodgers as his political opponents are, they cannot dodge them.

THE Congregationalist, Boston, makes a very practical suggestion concerning work for Sunday closing of the Columbian Exposition. It says what we all know to be the fact, that if the Fair is kept open at all, it will be as a money-making arrangement. The way to close it is to show that it will not pay. To accomplish this it is not petitions to the commissioners that are needed, but appeals to the really Christian portion of the public which shall tell on the receipts. Let there be a great league formed all over the land, which shall pledge its members, first, to have nothing to do, as contributors of machinery, or goods, or in any other manner whatsoever, with this Chicago Exhibition, unless it be solemnly pledged beforehand that it shall be a Sabbath-keeping exposition; and second, not to visit it, or to aid others to visit it, if it shall be kept open seven days in the week.

"VAUNTING ambition doth o'erleap itself." This seems to be the fate of the cigarette picture. Every firm manufacturing cigarettes has striven to outdo every other in the number and the nastiness of the pictures with which it tries to coax custom. This has come to such a pass that every firm spends a fortune each year on its pictures. One lithographic firm in Philadelphia last year furnished one cigarette company with 15.000,000 pictures, besides 100,000 albums for prizes, as we explained a few weeks ago, for buying the greatest number of cigarettes. It did a similar amount of work for other firms. It is estimated that for the last five years the leading cigarette manufacturers have paid, in the aggregate, at least $2,000,000 annually for these pictures. Now they have gone into a "combine," whose central object is to reduce the expense of advertising cigarettes. As the pictures have been the most expensive part of this advertising, work in this direction is to be largely curtailed, if not dropped altogether. Thus a little good will come out of all this badness; there will not be quite so much impurity mingled with the fumes of the diabolical cigarette.

PROF. SWING, writing to the Chicago Journal, says: "'Bottled goods' are dependent for their existence upon the general ignorance of the human race as to the reason and value of water. Not all men, women and boys would ask much happiness or profit from bottled goods did they know the goodness and absolute joy of water. Even ginger ale and apollinaris are poor, false, painted creatures compared with good, pure water. When the English, German and American physical machinery has become clogged with the sediment of all kinds of alcoholic and diabolic drinks it is taken to some natural springs to be washed out. Gallons of water will sometimes wash clean all the human filters and send back the machine to new life and new happiness. When the old lady in the dimness of her eyesight oiled the kitchen clock by means of a feather dipped in the gum-arabic jug, the pendulum felt fresh for a time, but the false oil soon closed in on the wheels and the timepiece ceased to mark the hours. When the old lady's son, home from college, learned all the facts of the case he took down the machinery and soaked it for two hours in a tub of warm water. Thus men, half-dead by means of 'bottled goods,' can often have life extended by means of most copious draughts of good water. The water washes the soiled fabric of the flesh." His conclusion of the whole matter is that "Water is the best thing."

Contributed.

W. C. T. U.

BY JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

[A lady in New England asked: "What is the W. C. T. U?"]

You ask me who "these temperance women" are;
I speak from hearsay, partly; but I'm told
That if a man be so enslaved to drink
That his whole nature is a mass of dregs,
Infiltrated with muddy alcohol
And grosser poisons, they will lend a hand—
A woman's hand—to lead him back to life.
And that seems noble to my mind. The more,
As I was such some thirty months ago,
And might, perhaps, be in like case again.
"Might be," I say—as better men have been,
For even now the million-headed asp
Of drink coils ambushed in gray paint and lace
And evergreens and food and medicine
And back of altar rails; erect to strike,
Without a hiss or even the scant alarm
Of the swift rattle of an honest snake. . . .
But is it true they ask the right to vote?
No, surely not the "right" for that they have.
But I am told, that if a woman love
So well that she would fight for those she loves,
Like Fair Clorinda for the holy grave—
The peerless woman-knight of Tasso's song,—
They do demand for her, in any line
Where unsexed valor would entitle her,
A place to stand or fall. Equality,
Before, behind, under, at, in the law;
God over all, and only Jesus Christ
Between His throne and all humanity
Down to the lowest level of the state,
Without a grade or disability
But disobedience and infancy;
I call that Christian, inasmuch as love,
Atoning or defensive, knows no race,
Nor sex, nor speech, nor bond, nor free.
And if the shoulders of a woman's Son
Bear up the Government, what fitter voice
Than hers to speak with power, in His name!
But is it true that they are partisan?
Yes. When the sneering robber of their homes
Stood out before his lesser fellow fiends
All helmeted and mailed and greaved and targed
With statutes made to fit his vital parts,
And hurled defiance at the sovereign will,
And cursed them by his gods, and men who held
That will, fled terrified, and stood aghast
And mute, till from the cowering multitude
A youth stood forth, and asked to meet the foe
(Curses and jeers in front, and from behind
Commingling jeers and prayers unnatural
Might well have made him nerveless for his task,
But he stood bravely); then, I understand,
These women tied their badge of ribbon white
Upon the breast of that devoted one,
Nor tried to pin it to the milky way
Of nebulous sympathy that lay behind.
I call that simply honest. Who would choose
A champion whom she knew was false to her?
Or imbecile, or sympathetic knave in full retreat,
Or doubtful giant, when a certain boy
Would wear her colors in bright victory
Or gallant death beneath the open sky?

Lake City, Minn.

A BRAND FROM THE FIRE.

BY MINDAH E. MERRIFIELD.

The light streamed through the dirty broken window; a faint light it was, only the fast fading rays of the pale March sun, as it sent a parting glance before going to rest. One could hardly imagine that the same sun which threw a ruby glow over the pictures and carpets, as it shone in the plate glass windows on the avenues, could give such a feeble light in the little attic room, on the fourth floor of a wretched tenement house. But the one window was very dirty, and the glass was a mass of cracks.

There was but one bright thing in the room, which was almost destitute of furniture, and that was the golden head of a child about seven years old. She sat on the floor, her small, bare feet curled under her for warmth, and her great gray eyes fixed on the slanting sunbeam, which was fast growing dim; her arms were clasped around her knees, and she was singing in a high, childish voice, these words of the ever beautiful hymn:

"All beauty bright and vernal,
When Jesus comes;
All glory, grand, eternal,
When Jesus comes."

The air was very nearly correct, and over and over the child sang the words; her little face wore a look of delight at her own music, and she still sang on as the light faded out of the sky, and twilight fell. A quick step on the rickety stairs brought her song suddenly to a close, the door was flung open and a girl entered—and such a girl! She could not have been much over twenty, but the expression of a sinful woman of forty was on her face; the roses on her cheeks had not been given by nature, neither had the sparkle to her eyes.

"Well, Nell, what's the row? You seem happy all by yourself."

"I don't know, Belle; I guess I would be if I didn't want to know so many things. What makes folks call you reckless, Belle? I want to know that most of all, first."

The girl laughed uneasily: "Because I ain't afeard of the devil himself, I s'pose. Now quit your questions, and we will have a bit to eat. I have got a candle, and we'll have it afore the old man gets in, if he comes. See, Nell, bread and meat, and some dear little cakes for you."

"Oh, Belle! where did you get so much?" The little face lighted up, and the child ran for their few dishes, that she spread on an old box which served for a table. The meal was soon over, and, blowing out their candle they sat in the dark, watching through the tiny window the efforts of the moon to make its way through the dark clouds.

The child crept up in the girl's arms, and laid her head on her shoulder. "Belle," she said at last, "when will Jesus come, and who is Jesus?"

The girl laughed scornfully: "You won't see Him very soon, I can tell you; He don't trouble Himself about this quarter."

"Well, who is He, anyway, Belle?" persisted the child. "It will be awful nice when He does come; I heard a lady sing about Him one day; she sang a lot, but this is all I remember," and the child's voice rang out clear and full in the old refrain. "Won't you tell me?" she said, after the song was ended, as the girl gave no sign of an answer.

"You mustn't ask so many questions, Nell," she said, speaking slowly and decidedly, "for I don't know about such things; but this much I do know, people go and sing, and talk about what He will do, and how good He was, and helps them to be, but they wouldn't walk on the same street with me, and you, they wouldn't think worth notice. Jesus is for rich folks, but not for poor ones."

The clock struck nine, and the girl rose and led the little one to her dark pallet of straw, covered with a miserable apology of a blanket, and, after fixing her as best she could, with a hasty good-night she was gone.

The head of this wretched household was a man known as "Old Martin." It had been so long since he had been called anything else, I doubt if he could have told whether his first or last name was Martin. His wife had died a little more than fifteen years before, leaving behind her a five-year-old child for whom it would have been far better could she have taken it with her; but fate forbade, and little Belle was left to fight her way up through poverty, crime, and vice of every kind. Nell had been taught to call Belle, sister, though why, no one knew; it could not have been because Belle cared; even a casual observer could see they were not alike.

Was it any wonder with her surroundings she was an outcast? Five years before, when Nell was a baby, a gentle, white-faced lady had talked to her and prayed for her, and Belle's heart had been touched, and she had tried earnestly to do right, but one place after another was refused her, or if she did obtain one, some one was sure to know her story, and directly the finger of scorn was pointed at her, and she was sent away in disgrace. The gentle, pale-faced lady had gone to her long home, and though Belle made an effort for the sake of this one friend, it seemed to be of no use to try any longer. Was it any wonder that she said, "Jesus was for rich folks?" So at last she had gone back to her old ways, and had grown more reckless than ever; the only thing on earth she cared for was little Nell. And Nell, poor little waif, in some of her wanderings had heard this hymn, which had given hope and comfort to older hearts than hers.

The morning light was streaming in at the little window when she awoke, but the place by her side was vacant; Belle had not come in, but this was not unusual, so Nell scrambled up, washed her face, and with her fingers put back her hair from her eyes, and her toilet was made. The remains of their supper furnished her with breakfast, and that finished, she slipped out into the street. The first person she met was a wretched looking child some three or four years older than herself, who exclaimed as she came in sight, "Now, Miss, what will you do? Where do you s'pose Belle is? The cops got her last night, and she'll get six months, so old Moll says, then where'll you go to?"

The child looked at her informer for a moment in wonder, and then with a cry fled down the street; up one, and down another, never stopping till she reached the court room, where they told her she would find Belle. There were a dozen or more to be sent down for one offense or another, but her quick eye singled out the tall form, and pushing her way through the crowd, she sprang into Belle's arms.

It was a scene for a painter, the dingy court room, the blue-coated officers, the crowd of idlers, and the bold-faced girl, who had preserved her air of bravado through it all, now holding in her arms the little child with its tangled hair and big, wild eyes. An officer attempted to take her away but the girl fought like a tiger cat; then a woman, who had been busy in another part of the room and had not noticed the scene, stepped up to her, and held out her arms.

It was before the day of police matrons, but the lady wore a little pin with the magic letters, W. C. T. U., on it, and in whatever state you found her, she was in some such place. Those familiar with W. C. T. U. workers would not have to guess long to find out who she was, as they gazed on the pure, pale face, so like a lily, and the most hardened criminal would soften before those calm, clear, blue eyes which were like bits of summer sky. She stretched out her arms and said simply, "Won't you trust her to me? you know you can't care for her just now." The girl gave her one steadfast look, but the blue eyes never faltered, nor did the smile fade from her lips; and then Belle put the child in the arms ready to receive her, without a word, but the great tears gathered and rolled over her cheeks, though she made no sound.

Nell cried bitterly for awhile after Belle was finally taken away, but when her protector placed her in a cab and sat down beside her, her mind flew back to the long unanswered question, and she looked wistfully up into the face beside her. "What is it, little one?" the lady said kindly. "Please, marm, can't you tell me when Jesus will come?" The lady looked puzzled as she said smiling, "I don't think I understand what you mean, dear."

"Why, you see, the song said everything would be good, and we should all be so glad when Jesus comes; so I wish He would hurry; but Belle says He don't come only to rich folks, for she tried Him; say, be you rich, lady, and do you know Jesus?"

"Yes, dear, I do know Him, and any one who does is rich; Belle was mistaken, for He does come to every one, rich and poor, who want Him." And then came the story of the cross, told in the matchless style of the woman who held the hand of the poor, little, forsaken child beside her on that long drive, for she took her to one of the kindergarten homes for such children, which was under white ribbon management.

Only a week after Belle had been sent to the reformatory, old Martin, while drunk, fell under the wheels of a huge wagon and was killed. It did not matter? No, perhaps not; but that poor, bloated, miserable body was the home of an immortal soul. But the saloon-keeper had a license, a high one, too, framed in gilt and hung on his wall for every one to see, and his remark on the soul which his rum had sent to perdition was, "It's a good thing he is out of the way."

In the meantime the angel of the court room had not forgotten Belle. "What do you want, and why do you care," the girl had demanded angrily when questioned.

"Because you are a woman and young, with your life before you, and because God gave his only Son to die for you." And before the tender appeal, from her who never failed to bring the erring to see their faults, the girl was melted to tears, and told the story of her young, sinful life. The firm, white hands never let go their clasp as the story proceeded, and the look of tender pity in the blue eyes would have melted older criminals than Belle. The story was ended, and though the girl was evidently softened, she made no promise; but the brave heart beside her, if she was disappointed, gave no sign as she rose to go, promising to come again.

Meanwhile, little Nell progressed rapidly at the kindergarten home. She had learned who Jesus was and all about Him, but the idea was firmly fixed in her mind that a real Jesus was to come, whom she could see, and feel, and who would save the world from sin and vice. With the same rapidity with which Nell advanced in her lessons, the dread footsteps of death also advanced; poor food, bad air and exposure had done their work. The child never complained, but the thin little form, the racking cough, and the red spots on the poor, white cheeks, told that consumption's seal was upon her; and when it was plainly evident that she would never see Belle if she served a six months' sentence, steps were taken to get her out. Yards and yards of red tape were cut, but the "court room angel" proved untiring in her efforts, and at last, two months before her time was ended Belle followed her new friend to the Home.

Little Nell kept her bed now all the time, and the big, gray eyes had a far-away look in them. They had asked her what she would like best of anything, and her answer had been, "Belle," as she turned away her head to hide the tears. The summer was beginning to wane, already the warm sunshine was ripening the sheaves in the wheat fields, and putting a dusky glow on the rich purple clusters of grapes, it did not seem as if only five months had passed since the pale March sunbeam had crept in at the dirty attic window the last night they had spent together.

When Belle arrived they took her to the door and left her, and she opened it very softly. The light came in at the open window, the little white draped bed, the stand filled with fruit and flowers, the golden-haired child, were all covered with its radiance; much of the hard look had faded from Belle's face, though the mouth still retained its proud, defiant curve, but at sight of the little, helpless child, all the love (which is in every woman's heart, even if the weeds do choke it out), sprang up as she threw herself on her knees by the tiny bed. For two weeks Belle never left her, and then one evening as the stars were silently lighting their tapers in the clear sky, the little face was turned toward her as she said, evidently with a great effort, "Belle, Jesus does come to poor folks; I want you to find Him; promise, Belle, don't forget." The girl by the bed could only bow her head, for the sobs prevented her utterance.

"Sing," Nell pleaded, as she fixed her great eyes on Mrs. Gray, the matron, and though her eyes were full of tears, she began the favorite song, "When Jesus comes." Nell lay very still after it was finished, and then she sprang from her pillow, as she said very clearly, "Jesus has come, He has comed for me Hisself; Oh, Belle, do find Him!" and then the little head fell back, and poor Nell's short life was over. Jesus had come, for who shall say that He did not come Himself to take this poor little waif who had known Him so short a time?

After Nell was laid away, Belle was employed in the Home, and it is needless to say she found Jesus, to whom her little child friend had clung so persistently. For three years she remained there, filling one position after another. The pure-faced, blue-eyed lady to whom Nell had given the name of "The angel of the court room," still kept her in view whenever she could. Belle could not be expected, with her restless nature, to live inside one house with its same routine of work, so when her friend came one day to see her, and she unfolded her plan to go out miles away from there where every one was watching for her to fall, and work for the uplifting of fallen women, she was not much surprised.

Miles and miles away from her native city Belle found her work. The hard, brazen look had vanished from her face, and the roses on her cheeks were such as nature leaves when she kisses her children. Among the lowest and most wretched she is found, and when in some very hardened case she tells the story of little Nell, and how reckless Belle found Jesus, the tears will always fall. But when she bends low to whisper, "I was reckless Belle, and God's grace can save you as it has me," her listener starts back and looks in utter wonder and amazement at the noble-looking woman, from whose earnest face the golden hair is rolled back like a halo.

Who can say how many redeemed souls will be counted as jewels in her crown? And are there not others such as Belle, who may be plucked as brands from the burning if our White Cross sisters but dare to reach forth the helping hand?

A CHIEF IN TENNESSEE.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

The action of Rev. D. C. Kelley, D.D., of Tennessee, in deliberately giving up a desirable church appointment which Bishop Keener, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, refused him except on condition that Dr. Kelley would decline to stand as candidate for Governor on the Prohibition ticket, was an act of heroism that ought not to be overlooked by temperance people. The nomination for Governor came to Dr. Kelley like the first arrow of a whole quiver full that are now piercing him. He is simply set forth as the target that attracts these hurtling missiles, and he knows it. He was peacefully pursuing his profession as a Methodist minister, of lovely character and marked eloquence, but he was devoted to the protection of the homes of Tennessee against their most ruthless enemy—the dram-shop. By the earnest request of a splendid prohibitory convention, numbering among its delegates some of the noblest men in that great state, among them Judge East, of Nashville, than whom the South has not a more gifted and influential layman, Dr. Kelley became a sacrifice on the altar of our sacred cause. He preached a sermon full of prophetic fire, dealing kindly but most plainly with the compromising spirit of the age, that would divorce Christianity and politics, burned his bridges behind him, and is now carrying the war into the enemy's country. A cultured friend in Massachusetts, surrounded by everything that wealth can give, and breathing a most conservative atmosphere, writes me as follows concerning Dr. Kelley:

"My Dear Friend:—I have just read a sermon by Rev. Dr. Kelley, the Prohibition candidate for Governor of Tennessee, and my soul is stirred with the desire to do something about it. So I relieve my mind by some suggestions to you, which have doubtless occurred to your mind already. This man seems to me inspired of God to see and proclaim truth so clearly and so strongly that it must overrule the desires of the dissenting, and convince and vitalize the weak and time-serving. What he says is uncompromising. His words ring out like battle-cries. They are full of spiritual life and power. A man like that, it seems to me, is sent of God to lead us out of the wilderness in which the liquor curse is holding this nation. What I feel and want to say is this: Now appears to be the time, the full time, for definite and successful action. We all know about the abomination of drink in all its departments. That lesson has been thoroughly learned. What we need now is a force strong enough to drive drink out. Why will not the Third Party take this man as its leader, drop all the names by which it has been called, and which have excited so much prejudice, adopt some new name, strong and true, so that such persons as are deeply convicted on this subject, but are still under the dominion of prejudice and not strong enough to see and follow the light, trusting to God for results, can be brought to follow the new thought that is stirring within them 'For God and Home and Native Land?' The fact that this man is practically compelled to leave his church seems significant just at this time. Dr. Kelley could go through the country conquering and to conquer, for men love such courage as his. Courage is not a theory with him. He has proved that it is a fact, and proved it by the sacrifice of what he held dearest. The composition of the Republican Party is such that all intelligent persons must perceive, no matter what its record in the past, that its attitude now is one that can never unite the whole country on any moral issue, while we all know that the Democratic party has always been corrupt; therefore the only hope of the country is in the foundation of a new party, the first care of which shall be for the protection of the home, and all that is sacred to humanity. Let this new party cease denunciation of the old; there is no further need of it. Everybody knows the position of the old parties in relation to the crowning and crying evil of our time. Let this new party take the positive side, full of hope and faith in the right, and, with such a leader, it can go onward to success. The man who has thus put aside his material interests and stays his soul on God, so that he is a channel for the divine power, is what we want. From the human outlook, there is no hope, but with God all things are possible; and in all crisis times what He seems to want most is good instruments, adequate conduits of His power. I cannot tell you how deeply I am impressed in reference to this man. I feel that God has chosen him. May the Divine Spirit help and guide us."

It is not because I think the plan herein outlined the best that could be made, nor because I expect it to find a response in influential quarters, but simply as a straw on the current of the time, that I throw out the thoughts of this clear-brained and earnest-hearted Prohibitionist. Millions are thinking thus, so far as a change in the name of our party is concerned, and an acting together of the forces of reform. Whatever may be believed of the outcome of our Brother Edward Evans' plan which he has so patiently formulated, we must all admit that he is on the right track. The only difference between him and our trusted leaders of the Prohibition Party is that they do not believe the time has come. For my part, I differ from them in this particular. It seem to me the hour is ripe, and that a grand national movement, which should coalesce the forces now acting against each other, although they have similar ends in view, and which should give us, as a name, the Reform Party, the Commonwealth Party, the Home Protection Party, the Union Party,—I do not care just what it is—would vastly augment the prospects of that new movement in politics to which we are devotedly committed. I ought, perhaps, to say, in this connection, that my allegiance to the Prohibition Party was never stronger than at this hour. I have joined no other movement, but pin my faith to the sleeve of such men as Samuel Dickie, John P. St. John, George W. Bain, John Lloyd Thomas, and their faithful coadjutors.

Evanston, Sept. 12, 1890.

THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U. TRAINING SCHOOL.

BY ALFRED A. WRIGHT.

On page 18 of that excellent "W. C. T. U. School of Methods Manual," by Mary Allen West, are these words: "Our highest ideal will be reached when we have a National W. C. T. U. Training School. . . . Here could be trained and from here sent out, conductors and teachers for the thousands of Schools of Methods our country needs, thoroughly furnished unto the good work which would thus be unified and systematized. Miss Willard recommended it in her last annual address, and our earnest prayer is that this ideal may soon be realized."

The remarkable success that has attended the evangelistic department course of study work has suggested to me an advance step of the W. C. T. U. toward the realization of this "highest ideal" here named by Miss West. Over three hundred members of the W. C. T. U. are successfully pursuing the four courses of study and reading open in the evangelistic department. The grand work wrought by most of these students has been to me an astonishment and an inspiration. With the organization of the class of 1894, at the close of the next National Convention, not less than three hundred and fifty women will be pursuing this work. Of this number about one hundred and twenty-five will be candidates for the certificate of competency as accredited evangelists of the National W. C. T. U.

What hinders the immediate application of the same plan and method of instruction to the other Departments of the W. C. T. U.? Let the National W. C. T. U. appoint as Correspondence Instructor in each of its Departments, a woman, the one of all others in the world competent to do the training work peculiar to and required in that department alone. Let the work of each Department be twofold:—

(1) Biblical. The present W. C. T. U. Course of English Bible Study will furnish an ample and a necessary basis for the superstructure of technical and departmental training.

(2) Departmental. Such a course of correspondence training to be here provided as will thoroughly qualify "Conductors and teachers for the thousands of Schools of Methods our country needs."

Let the Course of Study in the principal or in all the Departments be four years in length. Let there be twelve recitations per year, six in the Bible and six in Department Methodology, with a rigid examination in the presence of a trustworthy Examiner. The recitations in the Bible may be sent to me, the others to the instructor in departmental work. Let the tuition fee be not over ten dollars, and the cost of books not over five dollars per year.

Let graduates from any department receive the National certificate of competency as teacher in that department. Let graduates from three departments be entitled to a special commemoration certificate. Let graduates from all the departments be recognized as National W. C. T. U. Training School Graduates, and let special exercises be provided for their recognition at the session of the National convention next following the completion of their studies.

Upon request of the National W. C. T. U. I am ready to give my counsel and my aid, without charge, in perfecting the organization of the National W. C. T. U. Training School upon some such plan as is here very concisely outlined. Will any person elected delegate to the approaching National convention, or interested in the matters herein set forth, address a brief note to Mary Allen West, or to Miss Willard, or to me, being careful to indorse on the outside of the envelope the words, "Concerning the National Training School." Send suggestions, opinions and your very best thoughts.

Cambridge, Mass.

We commend this plan of Dean Wright to the careful attention of all W. C. T. U. workers, and emphasize his request for "suggestions, opinions and your very best thoughts." The problem to be solved is an important and intricate one, needing the concentration upon it of mature thought. M. A. W.

EQUALITY IN CREATION.

BY REV. J. H. BYERS.

I have read with much interest the able article of Miss Laura Clay, of Lexington, Ky., on "The Bible for Equal Rights," yet I think the Scriptures to which she refers admit of a more definite and satisfactory interpretation than appears from her exegesis.

In the first order of God's creation (the lower animals), they were all of a class, that is, their rights were equal—no difference how much they might differ in physical endowment. So of the second or higher order of God's creation—mankind.

In Gen. 1:26, the Triune God says: "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness," and then when defining "man's dominion" he is called "them." It is evident that "man," and "them," refer to Adam and Eve as the head of the human race. Then in verse 27, where the creation is referred to as complete, it is said that "man" was "created male and female." So it were both the man and the woman that God created in the same "image and likeness," and having the same "dominion" in all time to come. The same that is said of the one is said of the other. The moral "image and likeness" of Adam, and the moral "image and likeness" of Eve, were not only alike, but both like God. And the power of Eve to subdue the earth was the same as Adam's power, that is, Adam had no more, no less, of the "image and likeness" of God, wherein the power was vested, than Eve.

Therefore, there was not then, nor since, any moral superiority of either the man or the woman over the other. As God contemplated the "dominion of the earth" for His glory, and the good of mankind, He did not contemplate or include woman in this subjection by the man, but included her as an equal helpmeet to accomplish the subjection. So if arrogant Adam, or any of his sons, deprives Eve, or any of her daughters, from any God-given right, so far, they mar that "image and likeness" of God. And as the man and the woman were to "be fruitful and multiply," should the woman, as the opponents of equal rights contend, be inferior to the man, the unity of the human race would be destroyed. This would make Adam superior to his offspring, because they must of necessity partake of the lower order of their mother. Such reasoning shows us the glaring errors into which we fall, if we start out with the interpretation that God did not give to man and woman equal rights.

In Gen. 2:18, God says that "it is not good that man should be alone; I will make him a helpmeet for him." This passage is very significant. If it were "not good that man should be alone," it certainly would not be good for God to make him a "helpmeet" with inferior endowment. Since the "image and likeness" were identical, the "helpmeet" must be identical with the one helped. And besides this, "helpmeet" is a corruption of "helpmate," which means a compeer mated or matched to the other. A wife could not be a helpmate to a husband, if she were an inferior order of creation. And if she is not, then every participation of the husband belongs also to the wife, civil, political and religious. One way of promoting good and subduing evil is by casting a ballot with moral quality and quantity. In this, Eve is the complement of Adam. She has the same endowment, and the same interest at stake, and the same obligation to discharge.

God said, "let them have dominion over . . . the earth." In this each was, and is, an equal half of the whole. Deprive either of any part of their rights, or let either shirk duty, in so far will the work not be done. Since corruption, wickedness and sin are in the land, and man curtails woman's rights in helping him subdue them, he sins against God and woman. And if she fails to do her part, when left free, she sins, and is not the helpmeet God intended her to be.

Again, our argument for equal rights of woman with the man is strengthened from the fact that God made the woman out of the man. If she had been made out of the dust of the earth, as Adam was, there might be a question as to the quality of the dust. But to obviate this, and to unify the two, as one head of the race, God made the woman out of the man. So whatever the man was, the woman was also. Adam so understood it, for when God brought the woman (ducere uxorem, i. e., to marry) to him, Adam said, "She is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called wo-man," i. e., Isha, a she-man. Had the woman been made by the will and through the pain of the man, he might have claimed her dependence and obligation to him. But such is not the fact, nor was he consulted, for she was made while he was asleep; and when God awoke him, and he looked upon his helpmeet, he at once recognized in her his equal.

Again, it is no argument against the equal rights of woman with man, to say that Eve first sinned, and then caused Adam to sin. The record does not say she caused him to sin, for he sinned of his own accord. She did not force him or even request him to eat the fruit. Besides, had Satan attacked Adam instead of Eve, he would also have fallen; for since he did not refuse to eat the fruit from his wife's hands, he certainly could not have resisted Satan's assaults. In fact, Adam yielded much more readily than Eve, for she was the subject of the most cunning strategy and continued argument by Satan, while Adam was freed from all this, yet fell. Now let it be noted, that since they both sinned in the same way, and fell from the same high plane to the same depth, how could Adam claim any superiority over Eve after the fall? Nay, rather, there is more reason why Eve might have said to her husband, "It is true I fell, but it was not without a mighty struggle, while you were an easy prey to the tempter."

Again, the expression in Gen. 3:16, "thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee," is a part of the penalty of the woman's sin; but it only refers to her subjection to the man in her unequal burdens in the propagation of the human race. It in no way refers, as is often said, to an abridgment of her civil rights, or moral or civil subjection to her husband. The very connection of this statement with that of the pain of childbearing establishes my interpretation of the passage.

It follows, therefore, from these considerations that God made man and woman equal in creation, equal in dominion, equal in marriage, equal in the church and state, and intended her in every sense to be man's compeer. And any privilege conferred upon man and denied a woman, simply because she is a woman, is unjust, unwise and unscriptural, and demands immediate correction by civil enactment. To do otherwise is a relic of barbarism.

Emporia, Kansas.

World's W. C. T. U.

THE WORK IN INDIA.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—We have lately had two encouraging meetings of the union here, the first, an extra one, the second, the annual meeting. For some time we have felt discouraged in regard to our meetings, few attending them, and as we are obliged, by the great distances in the city, to have our monthly meeting in two different localities alternate months, many of the members in one place did not know who were the members in the second place of meeting. Desiring to have all become acquainted with one another, we decided to have a social meeting to which not only all the members, but a number of friends who have not joined us but are more or less in sympathy with the work, would be invited. The writer sent invitations for such a social gathering to be held at her house, and on the afternoon of February 17, at five o'clock, sixty-five English, Eurasian and native ladies met. After a social cup of tea an hour was spent pleasantly in giving a sketch of the rise of the Crusade movement as given in some of the December numbers of THE UNION SIGNAL, the outgrowth of this movement as it resulted in the formation of the W. C. T. U., and the present variety and modes of work as carried on by our society in England, America and Canada. To most of those present the history and growth of this movement was before unknown, and several said they had now a better knowledge of the aims and extent of the society's work than formerly.

In talking over plans for our annual meeting we decided to have it also in a private house and by invitation, hoping thus to secure a larger attendance than there had been the previous year. On the invitation of Mrs. Duffield, our president, between fifty and sixty ladies met at her house March 25th, and after tea and the opening exercises the following items of business were transacted: election of officers, president, Mrs. Duffield; vice-presidents, Mrs. Drake, Mrs. Dawson, Mrs. McConaughy; secretary, Mrs. Organe; treasurer, Mrs. Garden. The following committees were appointed; on education, Mrs. Duffield, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Phillips, and Mrs. Cochrane: on the communion wine question, Mrs. Organe, Miss Hughes, and Miss Barclay; on literature, Mrs. Drake, Miss Dawson and Mrs. McConaughy.

It was decided to try the experiment, for the present at least, of holding the meetings in private houses, and of lessening the number by having them quarterly instead of monthly, as we hope thus to have a larger attendance of members and friends of temperance work, most of whom have their hands already full to overflowing of mission work. The committees appointed will, however, carry on work in the intervals and report at each quarterly meeting. I notice in a recent letter of Miss Ackerman's written from Swatow, China, that she speaks of the unsuccessfulness of "getting a hearing among the women," and that "as the missionaries are already overworked, and cannot give attention to any extra branches, it was useless to hold a woman's meeting among them and impossible to reach the other women, so I could do nothing in the way of organization." We in Madras are equally busy, but as the work is begun we hope to be able to continue it.

In reference to the work of the committees appointed: Mrs. Duffield has had for a year or more an interesting class of children whom she is instructing in the physical effects of alcohol, and she wishes to have a normal class of young girls whom she would prepare so that they might teach Bands of Hope, or other children's societies, in various parts of the city. On the communion wine question the committee will try to find the best way of bringing this matter before the churches and pastors. The committee on literature desire to spread everywhere suitable leaflets on the temperance or total abstinence question. One object is to have permission to send such reading matter to jails, hospitals, railway stations, etc., and already we have permission to send to the penitentiary.

About a fortnight ago a gentleman in the city had a good opportunity of renting, in what seems a desirable part of the city, a room, at a reasonable rate, which he thinks will answer well for a Temperance Depot, and he is desirous that the different temperance societies would unite in sustaining this depot with suitable literature. The W. C. T. U. has for some time been desiring to do this work, but owing to lack of funds has not entered upon it. We would be glad, however, to assist in sustaining the Temperance Depot.

Dare I here put in a plea for our union? I know how busy and generous all the workers are at home, but their unions are strong and wealthy compared with ours. Could any of you help us by sending a donation of suitable reading matter, especially short, easily read, interesting leaflets? We have ordered what we can, but "costly our habit as our purse can buy" must be our motto, and what we desire to do will take far more than we can at present afford. We shall be most glad of help either from sister unions or individual friends; and if any such can help us will they kindly make it known at the office of THE UNION SIGNAL?

ISABELLA A. DRAKE.

Perambore, Madras, India, May, 1890.

Correspondence.

THE MINISTRY OF MUSIC.

SICK-BED, Sept. 8, 1890.

MY DEAR WHITE-RIBBON SISTERS:—I come to-day to echo "What One Music Box Did," and to tell you what else it did, so that you may know how far-reaching is the ministry upon which you have sent it. Isn't it always thus with our truly love gifts? "Behind the gift is the giver," and behind the giver the Great Source of all gifts and all love.

One day last week I was lying here busily engaged in a letter which was writing itself to a friend who is in deep sorrow, when my attention was attracted to a young girl coming up to the door. She was carrying a heavily-framed, cheap print, and was canvassing for it. I felt reluctant to be "called aside" just then to see her, but in an instant reflected that she must be very tired and must need the rest of a little "sit-down," so I told my nurse to invite her to come in. As she walked toward us she held up her poor picture, and said, in that shy, baffled manner one recognizes in a discouraged, worn-down person, "I would like to show you a pretty picture, and I'll sell it cheap; only four dollars." The poor child looked so discouraged, so weary, that my heart ached for her; and I urged her to be seated and rest a little. After calling for a glass of cool water for her I began to talk with her of her work; of her unfitness for such heavy work; of her failures, etc., etc., and then of how God loves us and walks beside us wherever we go, and I tried to soothe her with the blest thought of the thoroughness of God's Omniscience; that He would not be the God He is if there was anything that concerns our living that He does not see and know; that if He is Omniscient, Omnipotent, and Omnipresent, as His Word declares He is, then we can spell all of our disappointments with an H. (How often that word has served me in my trial hours!) As I talked, I could see that she was trying to "abide in the secret place of the Most High," and to nestle her defenceless head under the shadow of His wings. Just at this moment my nurse was passing through the room, and it came to me as an inspiration to have that blessed music box play for her.

I know each one of you who has part in it, would have thanked God could you have seen the soothing and the peace which came into that sad, weary young face as she listened to the dulcet strains of its beautiful selections. You would have been impressed as I was, with the ministry of music, and would have seen God's part in your gift of love to me.

Soon the sweet notes began working their own miracle, and this disheartened child of God took me into her inner self and poured out her soul's secret story; and as she talked, the music lent its undertone and sent its harmonious soothing all through her. When she arose to go she said, with her eyes overflowing with tender tears, "Oh, I thank you so much for this, I feel so rested; oh! I never had such a good time in my life." Her face uplifted, and her step lightened, she took up her load and went off with it as if she was carrying a light book. She will come again some day, she promised, and I will give her some music.

And now for another tone; and this time it is to ring out the glad notes of the "Wedding March" to a joyful household. On the evening of the 2d of this month, my sister's son brought home to us his welcome bride, and as their feet stepped over the threshold, Mendelssohn's Wedding March greeted them, and seemed never so beautifully played, full of unspoken words. I believe your gift will go on blessing and being blessed for many a weary heart and many a sweet solace.

I wish I was not afraid of wearying you because I would love so much to tell you of the experiences of this golden summer in my pilgrimage: of how God's hand has been leading me, and of the paths which He has chosen for me. "Green pastures," sure enough, this summer for He gave it to me to help to provide a "Rest Cottage"—nineteen miles out on the L. & N. R. R.—where tired working girls and women could go, for a small consideration, and stay a week. I think I named it for our National "Rest Cottage," and truly it has proved its name. It has a most wonderful and beautiful record, having re-created over fifty guests besides more than twice its number who have gone picnicing for a day's pleasure.

This is why I have been doing so little during July and August for the Flower Mission, and if you could know just how much of me it has taken you would be able to appreciate my state of exhausted vitality, and would not write any hard things against me for my seeming idleness or neglect in answering and writing letters. It would be very pleasant to tell you of our Jersey cow which we named "Little Comfort" and of our pretty dog "Queen Faith," and how the whole work has been a work of faith and has all been guided by His own sweet spirit.

I am going "under orders" again as soon as I give up the cottage on the 1st of October, and that good, careful doctor of mine will make me take the much-needed prescription of a ten days' retirement from all business and for absolute rest. "There remaineth a rest" seems to sound in my ears with a lingering sweetness now. There "this mortal shall put on immortality," and immortal bodies never tire.

"I've heard of a beautiful land
That's above the bright blue sky,
A wonderful place it must be
Where the people never die.

"Little children never are hungry,
And mothers never are sad;
There's nothing to make one sorry,
But plenty to make all glad.

"They say the light is brighter
Than any sunshine here;
There's always a sound of singing,
And nobody sheds a tear.

"And some of the neighbors tell me
They have a Home up there,
And the thought of it makes their burdens
Not half as hard to bear."

Let's have the annual ingathering of reports, and I hope each superintendent who sends her year's record of flower mission work will try to give also some telling incident in her part of the ministry of flowers. These I want for myself; I hope some day to find time and strength to compile for a book. Miss Gertrude Ferguson, 3208 Rudd Ave., Louisville, Ky., is the address to which you are to send your reports, and we will be so much gratified if our state superintendents will be sure to have them come as early as possible. In ties of sisterly friendship,

JENNIE CASSEDAY.

OKLAHOMA'S NEEDS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—To many readers Oklahoma Territory seems far away; indeed, beyond "beyondness," (we must coin a new word for a new territory) but to the geographical student, this spot of forty-one million acres is not the ultima thule, but according to the highest Indian authority, the old, old Garden of Eden; the Lord made the red man here, the earth having the requisite color and quality, and being abundant! Truly, this is a garden spot, and the climate all one could wish. However, we did not begin this statement of facts on the line of soil, climate, productiveness, or that this is the poor man's paradise; but to say something about the people inhabiting this favored domain. We say, then, that according to the best authority we have now in this territory two hundred thousand people; the question naturally arises, "Who are these 200,000, what is their present status, how can we approach them, and for their benefit?"

We presume that in the history of our country, no parallel exists to the mixed composition of population now in this territory. The Indians, using the name in its general sense, are in very different stages of "civilization," or barbarism. A very large per cent talk English fairly well, dress as white people do, imitate the whites. Yes, imitate the white brother to perfection in all his vices, and even excel him. We have a great variety of Indians. Educated? Yes, in a certain sense; Christians? Oh, yes; they are in a sense Christianized. How about their morals? Just as the white brother; in same proportion as they comprehend, and are brought under the influence of the Bible and its precepts, to that extent are their morals improved. Now these "wild children" of the "desert" are coming to this point in allotment in severalty, one hundred and sixty acres of land and money $400, $300 or $200 per capita! Well, that is good, make them responsible, self-supporting, destroy the tribal relation; all good; but! a very large but—they become voters.

The Indian vote, embracing all shades, types, nations, parts of nations as a whole, will far outnumber the purely white vote (all Indian tribes here call themselves nations). Please bear this in mind. Now the white population! Well, representatives are here from every nook and corner of the Republic, and a very large percentage of foreigners are mixed in. Here, then, is food for the thoughtful. How shall this mass of population be reached and molded for good, for religion, temperance, morality, good, reliable citizenship? Verily, we need to be "wise as serpents, harmless as doves." What rare, consummate tact is needed here; how the Christians here in Oklahoma Territory need the "whole armor of Christ." Less than that will mean failure! WILLIAM F. WOLFE.

Oklahoma City.

COLUMBIAN FAIR PORTRAIT OF MISS ANTHONY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The portrait bust in marble of Susan B. Anthony will be ready for the World's Fair. Mrs. Mary E. Holmes, treasurer of the fund, Galva, Henry county, Illinois, a leader in press and suffrage work, writes that "the money, most of it, comes in one dollar gifts, with lots of love." That is the very best way in which to have it come. Two or three rich women could very readily give the amount, but that is not what we desire. Will not business women, professional women, philanthropic women send their quarter of a dollar, their fifty cents or dollar to Mrs. Holmes, just to relieve their minds by a tangible expression of their appreciation relative to the heroic work done by that great, lonely woman, whose chivalric nature has carried her through fifty years of unremitting toil for women's cause? If there is no spark of enthusiasm for her and her work in our hearts, then we have not risen to the level that entitles us to have a hand in this imperishable monument, which will, as I believe, some day find its place under the proudest dome upon the continent, namely, the capitol at Washington. FRANCES E. WILLARD.

A WORD CONCERNING THE CONVENTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—It is certain that the seventeenth convention of the National W. C. T. U. (Atlanta, Ga., November 14 to 18), will have some notable features. One evening is to be given to the presidents of states and territories, that each one may tell, in a two minutes' speech, the outlook of her state. These, we hope, may be without manuscript; but let each president have her speech in writing to hand to the secretary. It is confidently expected that Wm. T. Stead and his wife will be with us. No man living could be more welcome to our platform. Perhaps no one has done in this age a single stroke of work that has counted so much for the home. Physical culture for women will be represented in the most attractive manner. All will remember the helpfulness of our regretted white-ribboner, Miss Julia Thomas, of New York City, last year. There will be a more varied representation than ever before of fraternal delegates. We hope that the Catholic Total Abstinence Society, Knights of Labor, Independent Order of Good Templars, National Temperance Association, Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the different denominations, Salvation Army, and other associations, religious and humanitarian, will be represented in Atlanta. We have urged our British sisters to send representatives in return for those so warmly welcomed by them from our own society, Mrs. Barnes and Miss Julia Ames, and we are confident that the Dominion W. C. T. U. will make its usual good showing. Will not the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the Methodist Church South, and other denominations there, appoint fraternal delegates?

NATIONAL OFFICERS.

OUR PRISON WORK.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Not long ago I received a letter from a young man written from one of our state prisons. He began by telling me of his mother, who died when he was a tiny boy, how she wound her loving arms around him and said, just as her lips grew white in death, "Willie, be a good boy." He wrote that at first he tried to obey his dying mother's request, for he loved her very tenderly, but as time went by, he wandered further and further from the path of duty. Temptations met him on every side. It seemed no one cared whether he did right or wrong, and as it was so easy to do wrong, and so hard to do right, he drifted downward, until the image of the pure young boy whom his mother left, was almost obscured by clouds of error. And after a few years of sin and sorrow, he found himself behind the iron bars of our state. Seemingly he was friendless, but although he knew it not, he was not alone, for "the Son of Man who came to seek and to save that which was lost," was with him, as indeed He had been during all these years, not to force him to accept redemption (God does not infringe on free agency) but to gently draw him, as far as possible, through every means within His reach, to Himself. It pleased our Heavenly Father to enable a member of the W. C. T. U., although an entire stranger, to aid him.

He did not write just how this was done. Perhaps it was through the literature sent each month, or perhaps it was through the instrumentality of a letter written to some unfortunate one within the same walls; anyway, the influence, in God's hands, whatever it was, caused him first to think of childhood's days and of his mother's dying words, and then a heaven-implanted desire, which had been struggling there all these years, arose in his heart, to turn from sin, to meet his mother in the land of rest.

We know our Father regards each honest effort to arise to a better life, for in the Bible we read, "Let the wicked forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord and He will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Truly the angels in heaven are interested in the religious progress of this young man. He writes he cannot be all he could wish at first, for prison life is full of sorrow and temptations, but he will, by God's help, do the best he can. After receiving several messages from him, it occurred to me there were others who would feel interested and perhaps be benefited by this little leaf from the history of one, who, although in the midst of almost overwhelming temptations, and the unpleasant environments of prison camp life, to-day finds his greatest glory in overcoming the many obstacles in his pathway, and "in rising, by God's help, every time he falls."

Truly, there is within each one of us a spark of divine light, which cries aloud for the removal of its encircling veils, that it may shine more brightly even "unto the perfect day." If there are any in your midst, discouraged by past failures and present surroundings, I would like to say to them, do not be cast down, "God is a present help in time of trouble." Realize the grandeur of your immortal souls, souls our Saviour gave His life to save, and press onward like our stranger friend to victory. "God is our strength, our light, our rest." A man or woman can not be helpless or alone with such a guide.

Respectfully, MRS. LIZZIE D. JOHNSON.

A TRAVELING MAN'S TESTIMONY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Please allow me space in your columns to rejoice with the people of Iowa and the Dakotas over the sudden exodus of the original package nuisance, fifteen thousand of which were opened in the state of Iowa during the past few months, but nine-tenths of them, I am pleased to say, have been closed quite recently.

It is proverbial that "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform," and I am sure the late Supreme Court decision, on the original package question, was no exception to that proverb, as that very decision, and the subsequent birth of the original package plague, have turned out to be the greatest lift that prohibition has received since it became a law. Of this fact I am happily convinced everywhere I go, by the clamor of all parties for prohibition, and the cry against the present condition of the liquor traffic. And, indeed, it is high time, not only for the people of these states, but the people of the entire nation, for that matter, to wake up to the fact that they are called upon to remove from the midst of their boys, the evil that robs man of his reason, darkens his understanding, drowns his memory, bewilders his imagination, and causes him to trample on all the laws of nature, as well as the precepts of God, and at the same time to forfeit even the hope of his own salvation.

Take any other sinner, though his sins may cover the whole category, he is still a rational, human being, and capable at least of asking God's clemency, as did the penitent thief on the cross. The Scriptures say, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." But it puts in the conditions upon which those sins were to be disposed of, viz.: Provided, they come with contrite hearts, etc. Now, if the salvation of a sinner's soul depends upon his complying with the conditions, namely, to come with a contrite heart, and ask for mercy, what show has the poor dying drunkard, who by reason of his deplorable condition is degraded to a state even below the beast? How is he to come with a contrite heart and ask for clemency? He whose already palsied tongue is incapable of uttering sentence or sound? These questions I shall not undertake to answer, but will submit them for reflection to the unfortunate victims of rum.

M. W. EGAN.

MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Letters are now coming in in reply to a question sent out from my department asking, "How does the W. C. T. U. look to an outsider?" The most startling information thus far received is to the effect that many of the persons addressed—all of them well-known people—reply, in effect, "I do not know enough in regard to the W. C. T. U. to answer your question intelligently." I submit that there is need of an Information Crusade, and that it may well be combined with the work to be done on Sept. 27.

ALICE M. GUERNSEY.

IN a pretty church on the island of Aneityum, in the New Hebrides, is a tablet erected by grateful natives to the memory of their missionary, Rev. John Geddie. On this tablet is written in their language the following:—

WHEN HE LANDED
IN 1848
THERE WERE NO CHRISTIANS HERE,
AND WHEN HE LEFT
IN 1872
THERE WERE NO HEATHEN.

JAMES CLEMENT AMBROSE has crossed the continent twice this summer, lecturing in Chautauqua Assemblies from California to Canada, and everywhere has been invited to return next season. Dean Wright says he was delighted with Mr. Ambrose's lectures on "The Sham Family" and "The Scholar in Politics." Dr. J. M. Dutton, president of the Hedding Chautauqua, N. H., declares that his lecture was a literary treat, a moral inspiration.

THE TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Those who cannot afford to give a large sum to the Temple, can at least send a two-cent stamp to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, for which a Temple bulletin, descriptive card and mite-box will be sent. Any white-ribboner, no matter how straitened her circumstances may be, can surely, with the help of her friends, drop a penny a day or its equivalent into the mite-box for a year. And all wide-awake boys and girls of the Loyal Temperance Legion, we are sure, can do the same.

Isaac Roberts, Conshohocken, Pa., writes, suggesting "That all local unions throughout the country solicit monthly contributions for the Temple, payable quarterly, from temperance men and women, say from twenty-five cents to $5 per month." We think our brother's suggestion a good one, and hope it will be adopted by the local unions.

***

The granite for the Temple is now being taken out of the Maine and New Hampshire Granite Co.'s quarries at North Conway, N. H. The great corner-stone, which is to be large enough to hold a box 5 ft. long, is now under the hand of the artisan, our architects, Burnham and Root, having sent on the design which is to be inscribed upon it. On one side is the inscription "1890"—"For God and Home and Native Land." On the reverse side is the monogram of the W. C. T. U., underneath this, "Organized 1874."

"Granite from many mountains,
Gave strength to the Temple's walls;
The heart of the oak grew stronger
As it answered the workmen's calls.

"Thus shall the story-teller,
In the years to come relate,
How the daughters of women builded—
For Heaven and Home and State."

***

The following unions and individuals have each sent $1 for Mother Thompson's Memorial: The Plymouth, Mass., W. C. T. U.; the Hanson, Neb., W. C. T. U.; the W. C. T. U. of Canton, Ill., and Mrs. R. A. Angelo, Aberdeen, Washington.

***

Faithful Jane Weeden, who never faints nor falters, but works untiringly without remuneration, and that voluntarily, sends $158, which she has gathered in the following places, from individuals and Baby Bands: Paxton, Ill., $22; Gibson, Ill., $26; Hoopeston, Ill., $20; Boswell, Ind., $3.50; Oxford, Ind., $4; Otterbein, Ind., $10; Marion, Ind., $21; Fremont, Ind., $20; Russiaville, Ind., $4; Greentown, Ind., $1.50; Lafayette, Ind., $23. Miss Weeden, in her letter, tells of many noble women who have driven her about in their carriages from house to house, and entertained her in their homes. May the Lord reward them for thus assisting our faithful Quaker sister, who, though plain in person and brusque of manner, has a royal heart. In her labor of love she never stops to think of self.

***

Willard Hall will, indeed, be a place of sweet and sacred memory, for it will contain the names of so many that have been dear to us, who have passed into the unseen. One of our devoted workers, Mrs. Francis M. Hancock, of Forest, Ill., superintendent of Temple work for her district, in the twilight shadows of July 16th, sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, after a life devoted to His cause. Mrs. Hancock did not forget the Temple, but left a bequest of $100 which has been forwarded to us by Mrs. S. A. Hoyt, who says of her friend: "I feel that you have received no offering for the Temple from a more loving, devoted heart than this." Mrs. M. M. Hall, Springfield, Mass., sends fifty cents, a pocket piece which her departed husband carried for many years, and which she considered too sacred to be used for any other purpose than the Temple. Mr. G. M. Brooks, Lexington, Ky., sends $3.65, the contents of his wife's mite-box. She was a devoted white-ribboner, but the loving hands that dropped the daily penny into the box, turned stiff and cold in death before she had the opportunity of sending in her gift. Her devoted husband writes that he will endeavor, by God's help, to sustain the work she had undertaken. Mrs. Kate Blanchard, Cotopaxi, Col., sends $1 in memory of a beloved and noble mother, Mrs. Mary Depp, who died at the age of 84. She was the mother of fourteen children. Mrs. Hamilton, Winona, Ill., sends $3 in memory of her husband, Wm. M. Hamilton, who was a devoted Prohibitionist. He died July, 1888. Away off in the mountain fastnesses of California (at Winchester) Mrs. Maud M. Monaghan writes, sending us $3 in memory of her beloved departed sister, husband and little daughter. Mrs. C. H. Waite, of Berlinville, Ohio, and Mrs. Rachel F. Reid, Pasadena, Cal., send $5 in memory of their beloved mother, Mrs. Rachel Harris, who died July 31, aged 90 years. She was a woman of saintly character, and a member of the Berlinville union ever since its organization. The King's Daughters, of Rondell, South Dakota, send $1 in memory of one of their members, Florence Chambers, who has entered within the gates to behold the King in his beauty. Mrs. Mary E. Bennett, Clay Center, Kan., sends $1 in memory of her daughter, Cora L. Bennett, who has exchanged the white ribbon for the white robes of immortality.

***

The personal gifts are so numerous we have only room to speak of a few. Mrs. E. A. Kennedy, Ionia, Mich., sends $50 on a pledge of $100; Mrs. Eliza J. Thompson, Evelyn, Mo., sends $10 on a pledge of $100; Mrs. Jennie Rollwage, Forest City, Ark., sends $50 on a pledge of $100; Mrs. A. W. Bradley, Duluth, Minn., sends $25.

***

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE TAY.

BY CLARA MARCELLE GREENE.

[This touching and beautiful poem is reprinted with the author's permission, in the hope that it may be largely used as a recitation by the Loyal Temperance Legions.—Ed.]

Stormy and strong is the tide of Tay,
Rushing with furious foot away,
Sweeping its craft to the tossing sea,
Under the smiling of fair Dundee.
No bonnier basin good Scotland hath
Than where with many a slope and strath
Her sunniest uplands rise away
To the Grampian Hills from the Firth of Tay.
No goodlier region hath Saxon seen
Than the verdurous ridges that roll between
Those northern defiles and the Lammermoor,
With arrogant headlands set stern ashore.
But if loch-fed river e'er carrieth
Seaward the secret of life and death,
There never more sorrowful tale can be,
Borne to the heart of the moaning sea,
From great St. Abb to the Girdle Ness
Than the turbulent tears of the Tay confess.
They murmur that once on an elder day,
Two children there wandered a weary way
Through the bustling highways of fair Dundee,
Waiting and watching so patiently
For the looked-for father, who, day's work done,
Would meet his bairns at the set of sun.
Two Saxon children with golden hair,
In blue-eyed wonderment wandered there;
A laddie, whose footsteps had only made
On life's rough journey a half decade,
A bloom-faced weanling, who, tenderer yet,
A year behind him her feet had set.
Thus Jamie and Jeanie, close hand in hand,
Wandering weary from street to strand,—
From strand to street, till the market-place
Brought them unto him, face to face.
Sprang they both to his open arms—
Shrank they backward with quick alarms.
On the breath of his kisses, the taint of sin,
Smote fear where joy in their hearts had been;
Two pairs of widening, wistful eyes
Sought his own in a grieved surprise,
"Oh, it's the drink he has had, I know!"
Jeanie to Jamie breathed soft and low,
Nestling close to his sturdy side;
Murmured he back in his boyish pride,
"I'll tak care o' ye, dinna ye fear,
Dinna ye fear, Jeanie, brother is here!"
Again with father-love warm confessed,
Pressed he them to his maudlin breast.
"Cheer up, my bairnies, coom, let us go
An' visit the grandam, a mile below."
Brightening with childhood's quick response,
Their fears broke over in smiles at once.
His tremulous hands upon either side,
Clasped in their confident palms they hide,
Conjuring gleefully, o'er and o'er,
Grannie's delight when they reached her door.
Oh, careless passers in fair Dundee,
Saw ye, wondering, that strange three?
Two little white souls, knowing no stain
Leading between them a branded Cain?
His staggering way to the frith he took,
The children changing a frightened look;
"Nay, this was never the way," they cried,
"Grandam lives down on the other side."
"Noo, never ye mind," said the drunken wretch,
"Na brats to their grannie's to-day I'll fetch!
'Tis a darker threshold we three mun cross!
Coom, Jamie, my man!" With a reeling toss
The shuddering child he seized and flung,
Wrenching the hands that imploringly clung—
Seized and flung like a bauble away
His beautiful boy to the tide of Tay.
"Noo, Jeanie, my baby!"—she wailed and shrank,
But fiercely he held her—and leaped—and sank.
Up to the surface in hero strife,
That brave boy battled for his young life.
Up and under—now far—now near,
Saved at last on a sunken pier.
Breathless and beaten, he turned his eyes
And saw through the darkling waters rise
The white, sweet face of the little Jean,
Whiter than Jamie had ever seen.
"Jeanie, catch hold of the pile," he cried,
"Cling to the piling." Oh! when replied
In the whole of the world, in whatever tongue,
Such words as over those waters rung!
"He—he winna let me, Jamie, dear!"
(Oh, pitying Christ! and wert Thou near?)
"He winna—he winna!" Thou God of woe!
Couldst Thou, unmoved, look down below?
From Jamie's young heart that sweet, white face
Nor time nor change can e'er efface,
When the foaming tide with its roar and thunder
Swept her head like a sunbeam under.
Down, down to her innocent death,
In the clutch of a thing with a noxious breath,
And a fiendish grip and a parent's name—
A thing of frenzy and sin and shame.
What wonder the current so madly sped,
Seaward to hasten such dolorous dead?
Oh, cries that harrow the Mercy Seat!
Oh, lips that benisons aye repeat!
Why were ye vain that remorseless day
When strayed those lambs to their doom away?
Alas, for the curtain that falls between
Souls and their destinies, all unseen!
When through your highways, oh, fair Dundee,
Angels twain walked viewlessly!

TO THE BOYS.

Sitting in the gallery, and looking down upon the heads of fourteen hundred prisoners, some of them in prison for many years, and others for life, sad thoughts crowded into my head, and when a choir of eight young men arose, all in the striped dress and with the close cut hair of prison regulations, and sang

"Nothing but leaves! The spirit grieves O'er years of wasted life," who could help the flow of tears for the worse than wasted lives of those bright-minded and educated young men?

There were those among the crowd of criminals who had held high places among men; there were judges, and mayors, and distinguished lawyers and financiers. There were eight hundred graduates of colleges or other educational institutions, men who ought to be serving their country, and doing good to their fellow men.

And they sat there, these men who had been trained as gentlemen, with the lowest and vilest criminals on either hand, all guarded by keepers, who stood with pistol and bludgeon ready in case of any disturbance or uprising. For it is only strong force that keeps down this constant tendency to mutiny. The chaplain told us that it was impossible to allow the prisoners to join in the singing, as they once did, for while their lips were moving, it had been ascertained that some of them were communicating with each other, and concerting plans to rise upon their keepers, and so make their escape. And when they left the chapel, they were all marched back to their dark little cells, where they spent their time in solitude till called to go out to dinner. Then in solemn file they walked with close lock-steps, each with his hand on the shoulder of the man before him.

There is no respect of persons here. This gentleman places his hand on the shoulder of the evil-faced burglar before him, while the black murderer behind presses his hands, once red with blood, upon his shoulders. And so he moves on and takes his soup and eats his black bread, in close contact with the man who in his former days he would not have employed as a servant.

What has brought these men here? Listen, boys. In most cases it is liquor. These men would tell you, as many have told the chaplain, "I did not know what I was doing when I killed that man!" "I have not the slightest recollection of burning that house, but I suppose I did so, because the testimony was so strong."

They were crazy men when they committed the crimes for which they are in prison. And what made them crazy? Liquor! And how did they get to be drunkards? By little and little. They never intended to be drunkards; they could take care of themselves; they never would go beyond the one glass. O how little did they know the power of evil habit! How little thought did they give to Satan, ever at our elbows, tempting, and tempting to sin

To show what a brave, manly man may do, may I tell you a little story of my own beloved father? Many, many years ago, before a temperance society was ever heard of, he lived in a village in New England. It was the custom then to keep all manner of liquors standing on the sideboard, and to ask every person who came in to take a drink. The minister came in between churches, and mixed his toddy and drank it; and the deacons strolled in, and took their brandy and water. And my father, a young boy then, noticed how many of these men, whom he was taught to revere as good and holy men, went down to drunkards' graves. One day he found that the sugar and brandy in the bottom of the glasses tasted very good to himself, and he got frightened; and he (a boy of fourteen years of age), without saying a word to any person on the subject, sat down and wrote out for himself a temperance pledge, to which he signed his name, and which he never broke, though he lived to be an old man. He occupied many places of trust in our own country and other countries, and was enabled to help very many young men who needed a helping hand, and one of the first lessons he gave to them was that of temperance. And how often I have heard him tell to young men and boys this story of his voluntary temperance pledge!

You boys have these pledges all ready for you. You are not obliged to come out and stand alone, and make your own temperance pledge, with the example of the world against you. Remember that if you trust to yourselves, and tempted by Satan or wicked companions venture even to take the first glass, you know not but you may end in prison or in a drunkard's grave. And the pledge alone is not enough. Pray, dear boys, "pray that ye enter not into temptation."—Evangelist.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 28, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Daniel 5; Isaiah 1-6.)

Sunday, 28; Daniel 5. Verse 3, Victory over a nation was regarded as a victory over its gods, and the drinking of wine from the vessels taken from the temple of God in Jerusalem was intended as an insult to His majesty. Drunkenness was associated with these insults to God, and the same is true to this day. Verse 6, "It is an appalling scene when a sinning mortal knows that the great God has come to meet him in the very midst of his sins." How dreadful will be the day of judgment to those who have lived to get gain and curse mankind by the soul and body-destroying liquor business!

Monday, 29; Isa. 1. Verse 1, Isaiah endeavored to make plain to Judah the connection between sin and suffering. When the church is not true to God, it may expect to be visited by His judgments.

Tuesday, 30; Isa. 2. Verse 2, The temple on Mount Moriah was a type of the gospel. Its beginning was at Jerusalem, and, like an object set on the highest hill, it is made conspicuous to the nations which shall become instructed in its true religion. Verse 4, What a blessed reign Christ's will be when all the nations truly become Christian! The instruments of destruction shall be put away, and He shall reign as the Prince of Peace.

Wednesday, 1; Isa. 3. Verse 8, When the Lord forsakes a nation and gives it over to the consequences of its own sins, the glory of its men and women departs, and business and all lines of improvement pass into a state of decline.

Thursday, 2; Isa. 4. Verse 1, The special desolation prophesied against Judah was accomplished in the war by Nebuchadnezzar, and afterwards by Titus. Verse 2, The prophet again refers to the glory of the church, o which he had spoken in the second chapter. Under the reign of Messiah, God's chosen ones shall all be cared for.

Friday, 3; Isa. 5. Verse 1, This chapter begins with a parable, and is followed by a commentary on it. The prevalent iniquities of the people are described, and the Lord's judgments against them are made known. Verse 4, God has done all that could be done for the salvation of sinners, consistently with justice and goodness. Verse 8, Woes are pronounced in this chapter against avarice, intemperance, the obstinate perseverance in sin, the confounding of distinctions of right and wrong, the wise in their own eyes, and corrupt and drunken judges.

Saturday, 4; Isa. 6. Verse 5, A deep impression of our own sinfulness, and of our need of Divine help, is necessary in order that we may become messengers of salvation to others. Verse 8, When one truly believes that God does pardon his sins, the effect upon him is a readiness to do God's will.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Trusts and Monopolies as Related to our Nation's Welfare. Isa. 58:10.)

1. The church member who is making money through the combinations of capital known as "trusts" or "monopolies," will search in vain to find in the Bible any sanction of his methods. Their aim is to strengthen the rich, and not to provide for the relief of the hungry and afflicted.

2. The motive for the existence of trusts and monopolies is to destroy competition in the industries and business of the country; and other motives for their existence are insignificant compared with this one. The result is injustice and injury to the small enterprises which are the life of the small towns and communities.

3. The methods of trusts and monopolies, if applied to our government, would turn it into a monarchy; and our republican liberty is not safe while the drift of the moneyed interests of the country is toward a money monarchy.

The Household.

THE TWO WORLDS.

The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er;
So calm are we when Passion is no more;
For then we see how vain it is to boast
Of fleeting things, so certain to be lost!

Clouds of affection, from our younger eyes
Conceal that emptiness which age descries;
The soul's dark cottage, battered and decayed,
Lets in new lights thro' chinks which Time has made.

Stronger by suffering, wiser we become
As we draw near to our Eternal Home;
Leaving the old, both worlds at once they view
Who stand upon the threshold of the new.

—Waller.

EVERY-DAY LIFE.

Bits of purple, bits of blue,
Bits of gold and of amber hue.
Bits of firelight and colorless dew,

Bits of light and bits of gray,
Bits of trouble along our way
Making earth sorrowful to-day;

Bits of care and bits of pain,
Bits of hope and faith again,
Bits of love till our day shall wane.

Just a mingling of gold and gray,
Of sadness and gladness in our to-day.
Making life glorious alway.

—M. A. W. C.

WORDS TO THE WISE—THE LION SHALL LIE DOWN WITH THE LAMB.

BY ABBY MORTON DIAZ.

Yes, strength and gentleness in unison. This is the true basis of discipline, in homes and elsewhere. But it is almost universally taken for granted that dealing with children demands the show of despotic authority, the dictatorial manner, the strong emphasis, the loud voice, even the angry tone. These are supposed to show strength. On the contrary they show weakness. They show ignorance and incapacity; show inability to apply the higher principle of love.

The time is coming when it will be perceived and believed, that love really is "the fulfilling of the law." This is preached, it is prayed, it is sung, it is poetized, it is prophesied, but it is not believed. Yet in spite of unbelief love will rule supreme. It will rule in social life, it will rule in political economy, it will rule in the school-room. What concerns us at this present writing is that it will rule in the home management of children. Does this imply a foolish indulgence? Not at all. Weakness on the part of the manager? By no means, for strength is essential as the background of love. But strength lies not in the show of authority, or in the harsh rebuke, or in the sharp criticism, or in anger; it is made up of intelligence and wisdom and dignity and love and firmness and patience and truth—all the sterling qualities, we may say, together with a general enlightenment. The aim of the manager should be to obtain an influence. Any dictator armed with authority may command an outward obedience. But this is small gain.

What we desire is a willing, cheerful obedience, the spirit of obedience, the real thing, an obedience of the heart. This cannot be forced. It will follow of itself closely upon respect and love, and these are secured only by the above-mentioned qualities innate in the managers. They, and indeed, all people, get exactly as much respect and love as their qualities will bring in the market, and no more. If, therefore, children are saucy, or disobedient, or perverse, or bad-tempered, or stubborn, the managers have only themselves to blame. They do not know how to draw forth the best of the child nature—like an ignorant gardener who brings us dwarfed plants and fruits as the best he can produce.

This lack of knowing how is what makes the care of children the irksome, unsatisfactory thing it so often becomes. For people really like to do the things they can do, and can do well. Mark how the skilled mathematician delights in solving his problems; how the poet is entranced by his theme; how the musician revels in his music. Note the enjoyment of the painter and sculptor in the expression of their ideals. The wit chuckles at his own apt rejoinder, and the story-teller finds happiness in creating men and women whom you shall number among your friends, or in rhyming them into a song which sings itself into your heart. On a lower plane we find the same thing. Plants, trees, flowers—each does what it knows how to do and does it readily, and seems to like it. We can almost feel with the apple tree its satisfaction in the full outblossoming which comes forth so easily!

Evidently, then, the irksomeness of rearing children, and the dissatisfaction of parents with their own success, together with the grounds of this dissatisfaction, as shown by the prevalence of objectionable traits in mature humanity, show that the work of training is being thoughtlessly undertaken, and is carried on without a knowing how. Children may be compared to musical instruments. Music can be drawn forth from these if the operator has given to his art time and attention sufficient for knowing how. Let us suppose a collection of musical instruments played upon by persons ignorant of the art. Imagine the jangle! But skilled performers could draw forth melodious sounds from each, and cause these to harmoniously combine. So with the human instruments known as a family of children. If played upon by one who knows how, each will yield its music, and the various notes will combine in harmony. But alas! Few understand the art. Few, indeed, recognize it as an art at all, still less as one which requires as much more preparation and study and devotion than any other, as it exceeds any other and all others in importance.

An Atlantic Monthly writer has given it as his opinion that "the training of their children is the last thing about which parents and communities will exert themselves to vigorous thought. . . . Substantially, we are training our children in the same old blundering way."

Belmont, Mass.

INVISIBLE WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

BY ANNIE B. E. JACKSON.

There is one officer voted for at our town meetings with whose work most of us are not familiar, though much that is important to us rests upon the faithful performance of his duties. He is the sealer of weights and measures, whose seal, as to the accuracy of the scales of our grocers and butchers and the measuring rods of our drygoods merchants, has to be given that no imperfect balance or rule be used.

Weighing goes on continually in the business world, and at a glance we recognize the importance of an accurate standard. In our everyday life, in our relations with men we, too, are constantly weighing and measuring those with whom we come in contact. In learning to judge of human nature we must measure and compare in order to make correct estimates; but are we always careful as we ought to be, to see that our scales are not tipped by prejudice? If "a false balance is an abomination unto the Lord," in dealing with commercial things, why is it not equally so in dealing with what stands above mere tangible possessions, the character?

How often is our own vanity or self-conceit thrown into the other side of the scale, making light that which would be firm and enduring with these false weights removed. The balances that give false weight in sugar cannot give full measure in flour; so if we permit these evil influences to come into ever so small a sphere in our lives it will, in time, pervade the whole of our being. The woman who has one standard which she uses for her equals, socially, and another for those upon whom she looks down, will inevitably find that the falsity in the one must affect the other likewise. Her own eye in this case becomes evil, and out of the darkness in which she stands, how can she see clearly what is registered?

If "the greatest study of mankind is man," how clear and keen our perceptions need to be! In this study all men take a part, many perhaps almost unconsciously, but even though unconscious, the work goes on—without recognized effort it may be, but by face, manner, conduct and word, an impression is made upon the scales we carry about unseen, and it becomes us to see that they are properly balanced.

It is so easy in our enthusiasm to take false estimates of those not altogether in sympathy with us, to undervalue the good because the goodness does not show itself in the way that seems especially desirable to us. Groceries and silks are not gauged by the same standards, tables of various weights and measures being given us; so while our estimate of a man's views may be made by standards that seem to us absolute the man himself needs a broader measure; his environment, his early associations, his preconceived ideas go so far toward shaping his views that these things must be considered in our valuation of him. Just here seems to lie the incalculable difference between Christ and those about Him, in His and their measure of men. Paul, with his open eye, his far-seeing wisdom, does not use words of denunciation toward those disciples so blinded by their early prejudices that they were unable to look upon the Gentile world and see in it the immeasurable capacity for spiritual power, which that apostle to the Gentiles discovered. Paul's fearlessness in the presence of the Jews is as nothing compared to his intellectual fearlessness before his fellow Christians, unable with him to throw off the yoke of Judaism and come out into the broader liberty into which they had been called.

What Paul revealed to the world has always seemed to me to belong to the things of which Christ said, "ye cannot bear them now," but "when the Spirit of truth is come he will guide you into all truth . . . and he will shew you things to come." God has since then given many revelations of His truth, and this nineteenth century is reaching out for much that former ages have been powerless to grasp. The full measure of woman's power has never been known, but in our belief that a broad future is opening before her, pregnant with good, in our conviction that the world of science and religion are joining hands as never was possible before in the study of the alcohol question, we need a wisdom that shall save us from false judgments of those who have not yet taken the position which we believe time will make inevitable for them, a wisdom clear and strong as that which requires in us constant allegiance to the light as we see it, with a corresponding fearlessness in its expression.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

CONSECRATED CHRISTIANS.

BY S. ROSALIE SILL.

During the past two years the professed followers of Christ in a certain vicinity have seemed to awaken to a realizing sense that they must have no other god beside the true and living God, and scores of them have thrown up the tobacco habit. At a religious meeting, the other evening, dozens of men testified to their leaving off the habit, as they felt while using it they could not be consistent Christians.

One white-haired father said: "For sixteen years I prayed every day, and I do not believe a single prayer went higher than my vest pocket. How could they when all the while I was self-condemned?

"Every time I went to pray my pipe was between me and my God, and conscience would whisper: 'What good does it do for you to pray? There is your pipe.'

"I was a Methodist class leader and a Sunday-school superintendent, and I was so much afraid some of the scholars, or church members would meet me on the streets smoking—and yet I thought I could not get home from church without smoking. So I would light my pipe, give a few whiffs, see some one coming, hurry my pipe into my pocket, and the first thing I knew I would be afire. My wife said she could never keep any pockets in my clothes.

"One particular Sunday—how well I remember it—I was desired to lead the evening meeting. I could not well refuse, and yet how unworthy I felt to do it. I went home, and going to the barn knelt down and said, 'Lord, I have come to settle this thing. I'll never use the pipe again if you will give me strength to conquer.'

"I arose, went into the house, broke my pipe in two, gave it to my wife, and told her I was never going to smoke again. 'Don't tell any one,' said she, 'maybe you cannot hold out.' But I told her the Lord was plenty strong enough to keep me. Bless His name! He has been."

The Bible says: "Be ye perfect, even as your Father in Heaven is perfect." If Christ was on earth as He once was, would you not be astonished to see Him smoke a cigar, or take a chew of tobacco? Make yourselves fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

UNDRAWN POULTRY.

BY EMMA P. EWING.

Nearly all the chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, etc., offered for sale in the markets of our cities are undressed or have their entrails left in; and a large proportion of all the fowls sold in city markets in warm or "soft" weather, are in a state of incipient putrefaction when they reach the hands of the cook. The gases evolved from the fermentation of partly digested food in their craws and intestines have impregnated the flesh and rendered it poisonous, so that no amount of soda water or other cleansing material can make it fit for food; and to say that people grow fond of and desire such unhealthy stuff, is simply avoiding the issue. It is a well-established physiological fact that "poison hunger," or the longing for poisons, when the appetite for them has been formed, is one of the most intense and insatiable passions that can take possession of human beings. And the appetite for "gamy" meat—as partly putrid meat is politely termed—which is as depraved an appetite as the appetite for tobacco or whisky, is doubtless almost as insatiable as the appetite for those poisons. Would not the eradication of the taste for "gamy" meats do much toward eradicating the taste for tobacco, whisky, and other poisons? And would not the passage and enforcement of laws permitting only drawn and untainted poultry to be on sale in cities be a move in the right direction?

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Let the weak say I am strong.—Joel 3: 10.
And be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work; for I am with you.—Haggai 2: 4.
How much ought to cease among us straightway; how much ought to begin straightway, while the hours yet are.—Carlyle.

WHAT THE WORLD'S FAIR MEANS TO THE W. C. T. U.

Now that the site of the Columbian Exposition is definitely settled, it is well to inquire what this world-gathering means to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. First, it means wondrous opportunities for good. This gathering of the nations at the very center of our work, should mean the preaching of the gospel of temperance to every creature. The Paris Exposition accomplished great things in this direction; but taking into consideration all the difficulties confronting the work there and all the advantages here, the good done in 1889 should be but a drop in the bucket to what is done in 1893. There the work was done at arm's length, with only a few heroic women to carry it on; here it will be in the very heart of things, with an unlimited force of workers at command. There, language and customs were foreign, the very idea of such a work by women, strange and unwelcome to the powers in authority; here the speech is our own mother tongue, and we have the environment of favoring public sentiment; those high in official position have proved themselves our chivalric friends, and women are members of the Commission, a thing never known in the history of Expositions outside of America. By the way, does it not seem appropriate that the W. C. T. U., the largest organization of women ever known, should have representation on the Commission?

That the Exposition is held in an English speaking country means much for our literature department in its outreachings after the vast multitudes that hear with their eyes. In such gatherings spoken words avail little; but the printed page, given with the kindly word and smile, holds an infinity of possibilities. The majority of the people surging through the Columbian Exposition will read English, as those at the Paris Exposition read French, and it is not too early now to begin arrangements to supply the millions of leaves which shall be for the healing, not the hurt of the nations. It is a work too vast for anything but combined, continued action. These myriad leaves must be freely given, and funds must be provided for their preparation.

There will be plenty of money to keep Satan's presses running; infidel and impure literature will flood the place; God's presses must be equally busy.

There must be a great increase in the resources of our foreign department, especially for the preparation of literature. "Parthians, Medes and Elamites, 'dwellers in Mesopotamia,' in Pontus and Asia" must hear, every man, in the tongue wherein he was born, the gospel of Christ and its power to save unto the uttermost, and to break every yoke, even the yoke of intemperance. Leaflets must be written in all languages by those who fully understand the peculiar workings of the various nation's minds, written by natives wherever this may be, and furnished in quantities, at the Exposition.

All this seed sowing demands money, and plenty of it. The field to be sown is world-wide, but so is the field to be reaped. Let those who love this cause, the world over, commence to "lay by them in store, according as God has prospered them" for this object, and let the officers of the World's W. C. T. U. devise some plan for the ingathering of tithes willingly offered to this cause.

The coming of the Exposition means determined, persistent attacks upon the Sabbath, and should mean as determined, persistent defense of it. The air is already thick with the hurtling arrows of its assailants, and they so darken the sky that even our own women see dimly. Only last week I attended a district convention where a strong resolution in favor of Sunday closing was adopted, but a dear woman exclaimed, almost with tears in her eyes, "I want you to tell me what is to become of the great army of workingmen who, if the Fair is not open Sunday, can never see it, for it is impossible for them to go any other day?" Dear heart, did you not see the big Labor-day procession a few weeks ago? Did not that convince you that laboring men can take a day off when they choose? American workingmen are not slaves, even if it is the fashion to affirm they are; if they are working for themselves they can surely take a day for the Exposition whenever they choose, that is, whenever they think the Fair will be worth more than the money they would make that day. Going on Sunday and going on any other day is simply a question whether they will take God's time or their own for their sight-seeing. Those employed by great corporations need have no fear that time will not be allowed them to go; no corporation can afford not to have its employés see this exhibition of the world's work in their own department. To every world's fair have been sent operatives from the great manufacturing establishments, even when this sending involved the expenditure of thousands of dollars, and this expenditure was a good investment. It is beyond credence that when the Exposition comes to their very doors, corporations will not allow their employés to attend. Arrangements will be made for such attendance as has been the case in all other expositions.

Keep it before the people that Sunday opening is not a boon to the working people, for it means unremittent toil for thousands of them—seven days' work for six days' pay.

Nor does the demand for it come from them in any great measure. It comes primarily from the liquor trade, whose organs lead off in the cry against "forcing the Puritan Sabbath upon Europeans," but whose impelling force is the knowledge that an open Sunday means more whisky and beer sold on that day than on either of the other six; it comes from newspapers with Sunday editions; from stockholders in railroads and street car companies, eager for dividends increased by Sunday travel, from all those who make a gain of the vices of the populace. Another fact to keep before the people is that of all the great American Expositions the only one which was open Sundays, that at New Orleans, was a conspicuous financial failure; if we remember rightly, the only financial failure on the list. Whatever may be the case in Paris or Vienna, it is not true that in America God's law must be trampled upon to make an Exposition pay.

The W. C. T. U., acting in conjunction with the Sabbath Observance Associations, has a great educational work to do along this line, and now is none too soon to begin. Educate by petitions, by mass-meetings, through the press; educate and agitate, till the Sunday closing victory is won. Then plan and work for the best possible utilization of the Sabbath time during the Exposition; it will be the opportunity of the century for preaching Christ to those who know Him not. So broadly should we plan and work that at the close of 1893 we can truthfully say, "Not one soul in the Columbian Exposition did not have salvation offered; no tried, tempted one need go away in chains to drink because a way out of temptation has not been shown him."

This Exposition means fearful need of increase in the work of the social purity department. In our sheltered homes it is hard for us to realize how fearful this need is. Said a leader in this work: "I never hear of any great gathering of men; never think of a general holiday, Fourth of July, New Years, even the sacred Christmas, without a shudder, for I know it means the ruin of some girl." At such times passion is given free rein, the house of her who "hath cast down many wounded" is thronged, and new victims must be prepared for the altar of lust. If the gatherings of a few thousands, for a few days in the various "Conclaves" in this city wrought such dire disaster in this direction as our city missionaries saw, what will be the result of the months of the Exposition and their hundreds of thousands of visitors? Not only this country but other lands will be scoured to secure the tribute of maidens for this modern Minotaur.

O my sisters! do you realize what this means? Intrigue, deception, diabolism will be brought into play to secure these victims: "Watch therefore and pray, that ye enter not into temptation," the temptation to sit at your ease, lifting no finger to help while our sisters are being drawn down to destruction. If ever there was a demand for the womanhood of a nation to arouse, it is now, in America. Let not one farmhouse or one hamlet in all these surrounding states be left unguarded by wise mother-love; let there be not one village, nor town, nor city ward, over which a division of our grand army of prevention does not keep watch. And let there not be one without its rescue station, its safe harbor to which sin-tossed souls may flee. The need of work in all these directions imposed by the approaching Fair is almost infinite; the demands made for wisdom, for grace, for strength, far transcend human ability to supply; but God is our refuge and strength; His wisdom is ours for the asking; He gives grace for grace and His strength is made perfect in our weakness. Even this horrible problem which so appalls us is not beyond His solving. But we must be co-workers with Him, waiting upon Him for wisdom, then using our consecrated common sense to its best advantage. The powers of hell are leagued against us, but heaven is for us. May such an arrest of thought concerning her own responsibility in this matter come to every woman in America that she shall feel compelled to come to the help of the Lord and of her weaker sisters. And may the baptism of Christ's own chivalry be upon the men of this nation, opening their eyes to see in every defenceless woman, a sister to be sacredly protected.

The Exposition should bring the accomplishment of many enterprises allied to the W. C. T. U. It should see the W. T. P. A. established in a home of its own, commodious enough to accommodate the greatly increased business the occasion brings, and surrounded by the homes of its employés. It should see the Temperance Hospital, no longer in a hired house, but in one built for, and therefore adapted to its needs, prepared to furnish the "emergency wards" which the great gathering will demand. The Temperance Temple should stand complete, with its Willard Hall from which daily ascends prayer and praise, and crowning its sun-kissed summit, the symbolic woman at prayer. All this and much more does the Columbian Exposition mean to the W. C. T. U.

THE HINDU BARBERS.

Flippant paragraphs have been flying through the press concerning the strike of the Bombay barbers. This is only another proof of the superficial knowledge shown by the daily press upon topics touching great moral issues. This strike of the barbers certainly does touch upon a great moral issue, for it has to do with that "open sore" of India to whose healing Pundita has dedicated her life—the atrocious treatment of widows.

Harriet Brittain, Pundita Ramabai, and Bishop Thoburn have told again and again and again the terrible story of this treatment which is such a torture to 2,000,000 of women in India that we do not wonder they gladly threw themselves upon the funeral pyre of their husbands to escape it, till the British Government abolished the suttee; but the story has not penetrated sufficiently deep into American society to reach the reporter's mind. To appreciate the chivalry and heroism of the action of Bombay's barbers—for chivalric and heroic it certainly is in no common degree—we must go back to the immemorial custom of child marriage in India. According to it, little children, mere babies, are married, often when so young that in later years they have no recollection of the fact. The bridegroom may be a child, also, but is quite as likely to be a mature, sometimes an old man. The little child-wife is returned to the house of her parents till such time as her husband claims her. Sometimes he dies before that time comes, the little widow never having, consciously, seen him.

But no matter how young and innocent she may be, nor how old and ugly, the same curse of widowhood rests upon her. Instead of the tender sympathy widowhood calls out here, there it is deemed accursed; the husband's death is due to the sins of the wife, and the greatest suffering of her whole future life cannot sufficiently atone for it. Henceforth all joy must be torn out of her life, and every indignity heaped upon her. Her ornaments are taken away, she must wear no beautiful clothes, must eat only one meal a day, and for one day each week must fast entirely, not even a drop of water must pass her lips, though they be parched with thirst or burning with fever; her own family dare show her no kindness, while her husband's family and all who meet her are at liberty—nay, even think it a commendable deed—to add to her humiliation and disgrace, for thus, they think, they add to the honor and blessedness of her dead husband. And this torture can end only with life, for second marriage is forbidden the widow; though the curse come upon her in babyhood she must bear it to the grave.

Now the especial symbol of her widowhood and degradation, that which proclaimed to all the curse resting upon her, is her shaven head; just as soon as her husband dies, the widow's head must be shaved and kept shaven till she dies. Of course this is a source of revenue to the barbers, for the high caste, wealthy Hindus are most scrupulous about observing the custom.

But, wonder of wonders, the first practical organized revolt from the terrorism of this ancient custom appears not among cultured philanthropists, not even among Christian missionaries, though they have labored to ameliorate the condition of the poor widows, but among the barbers.

The Guzerati barbers started the movement, five hundred of them uniting in refusing to shave the head of a widow and thus aid in perpetuating her disgrace. To many of them this meant the loss of an hundred fifty rupees a year, but all stand firm in their refusal, and masters of families in that city are obliged to send the widows of their households long distances to be shaved.

America has witnessed all sorts of strikes to gain some real or fancied good for the strikers, but so far as we know, it is left for these barbers of India to strike to gain, at the sacrifice of their own interests, an amelioration of the condition of a most despised class who can only repay them with the wealth of womanly gratitude. If this is not chivalric and heroic, we challenge the records of history to show anything that is. As The Woman's Cycle says: "Let the barbers form a union, from Cape Comorin to the Himalayas. A Sir Galahad with a shaving-brush is the chivalrous barber of Bombay," and let womanhood everywhere hold them in grateful remembrance.

SEPTEMBER 27.

[We stop the press to give this bugle call, just sounded by the National Secretary.]

The above named date is that set apart for the "Membership Crusade," and should be made just what the two words signify, a crusade for new members. It was in December, 1873, that the women went out in that most wonderful of crusades against the saloon; and something of that old spirit should actuate us upon the 27th. Why not make it a veritable crusade? Why not devote the whole day to it, beginning with a prayer-meeting at nine o'clock in the morning, and at ten starting out, two by two, or each as seems to her best; coming back to the starting point at the close of the day to report success, give names secured to the secretary and dues to the treasurer, and offer a prayer of thanksgiving?

Every meeting of the local union occurring between this date and that should be improved in arranging for the success of the day. Let the secretary send a postal to every member of the union, urging her attendance. Let the officers of the union look over the books and make a list of all who have not paid their dues; also of those who at some time in the past have been members, but for some reason, or no reason, have allowed themselves to drop out, or, worse yet, whom inefficient officers have allowed to drop out, and call upon them. Some may say, "We cannot attend the meetings of the union," and therefore will not give their names. No matter, we want the influence of every woman recorded on the side of temperance and the prohibition of the liquor traffic, and the only way to record interest and influence is to join a temperance organization.

I desire to add two more P's to the trio given last week, and these are Pay and Prayer. Do not forget to take the Pledge, a Pencil and a Pad, and then secure the Pay. Above all, do not forget that while you go with the first four in your hands, the last should be in your heart.

One state, North Dakota, will be in the midst of her annual convention, but if the officers will hold a service of prayer for those of the rank and file who are at home and taking part in the Crusade, and make it an "order of the day" for nine o'clock on the morning of that day, it will stimulate the work and the workers not only there but in other states. The holding of a convention on the same day as the Crusade might at first seem a hindrance to the work, but rightly used it may be a benefit. So other seeming obstacles may present themselves, but all these may be turned to good account by active brains and willing hearts. Then let us devote this one day in the year to this Crusade, and leave no stone unturned to make it the grand success it will surely be if we go forth in faith.

Yours, for our blessed cause,

CAROLINE B. BUELL.

Miss Willard, just starting for Nebraska, sends a note emphasizing the suggestions made by Mrs. Buell. She adds:

Take temperance literature with you, especially THE UNION SIGNAL and our leaflets. I wrote our dear Mrs. Judge Thompson of Hillsboro, Ohio, "the First Crusader," asking for a message for her younger daughters on this day, and she sent me the following. May it do you good "as it doth the upright in heart":

Be instant in season, out of season.—II Tim. 4: 2. Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.—Phil. 4: 5. And the God of peace be with you.—Phil. 4: 9.

E. J. THOMPSON.

Our Book Table.

Mrs. Isabella M. Alden (Pansy) has done more than almost any other author to bring the Bible into the every-day life and thought of the young. She has now crowned her work in this direction by THE PRINCE OF PEACE, OR, THE BEAUTIFUL LIFE OF JESUS. Nothing we have ever read seemed so fitted to make young people acquainted with our blessed Saviour as does this book. In it Jesus is not the far-above-us, far-away personage who lived nineteen hundred years ago, and is dead; He is the present friend of every boy and girl, and He knows just how they feel, because He was once a boy Himself. Here is one of her touches which "makes the whole world kin" to the carpenter's Son: "Can we help wishing that Mary had written a daily record of what her boy said and did, and that it had been put in the Bible? How we should love to read about His school-days, and His plays and all His brave, true, pleasant ways! What a wonderful story it would be! We shall have to imagine it. Can you think of Jesus as a cheerful, loving boy, always prompt to do as He was told, always ready to help any who needed help; never angry, never selfish, never what the boys call 'out of sorts'? Honestly, now, would you not give almost anything to know one such boy? . . . I sympathize with you in the longing to know more about the boyhood of Jesus. Often and often I wonder if it may be possible that He gathers about Him now, among the green fields of His Father's grounds, groups of eager boys who have been early called to that home, and tells them stories of His boy-life on earth." Thus she goes on through all the beautiful life, making it stand out vividly as though lived in our midst. The book is published by the John G. Huber Company, Philadelphia and St. Louis, and is a superb specimen of the book-maker's art. Its broad, clear pages of cream laid paper and perfect type are a delight to the eye even without the pictures which adorn it. These excel in number, variety and beauty any illustrations we have ever seen in a similar book. There are four colored lithographs and sixteen tinted photogravures, any one of which would have seemed a priceless treasure in my childhood, and over an hundred fine wood engravings, many of which are full paged reproductions of the famous designs of Alexander Bida.

One of the most thoughtful, valuable books that has come to our table is Judge Altgeld's LIVE QUESTIONS including OUR PENAL MACHINERY AND ITS VICTIMS, published by Donohue & Henneberry, Chicago. Some of the questions discussed are, Compulsory Arbitration of Strikes; the Administration of Justice in Chicago; the Australian Ballot; Divorce; Moral Training; The Slave-Girls of Chicago; Anonymous Journalism; The Eight Hour Movement; and the Abolition of Constables. As the author says in his preface, these are not only questions of the day—pressing for solution—but many of them vitally affect the welfare and happiness of mankind, and can only be intelligently settled by a thorough investigation and wide discussion.

The official position of Judge Altgeld, taken in connection with the admirable way in which he discharges its duties, his wide experience, and his thoroughly candid method of dealing with these problems, give weight to his words such as those of few other men would possess. In his treatment of "Our Penal Machinery and its Victims" he brings out some significant facts. In Chicago last year there were 32,800 arrests made by the police, 10,743 of those arrested were discharged by the police magistrates, to say nothing of those bound over to the grand jury and then discharged. That is to say, one-third of all the persons arrested were wrongfully arrested; they were not even offenders, but they received precisely the same treatment as hardened criminals. They were arrested, some of them were clubbed, some handcuffed, marched through the streets in charge of officers, to the police station, where the name and complete description of each was recorded, there to remain against them. Those who were not bailed out were shoved into cells and forced to spend the night, and sometimes a week, with hardened criminals before they were discharged. Could Satanic ingenuity invent a better school for training in vice? Yet all this is justice meted out by the courts of a Christian country. Such an exhibit makes one feel like migrating to Dahomaney.

Most of the persons thus arrested are boys and women; the instances of injustice which Judge Altgeld gives, and which are duplicated many fold by the records of the Woman's Alliance, are too horrible for belief, yet such things are going on continually in most large cities. The remedies suggested are: Abolishing the fee system so that petty officials shall have no temptation to make arrests for the sake of the money there is in it, and permitting imprisonment before conviction only when it can be shown that the offender is a dangerous person, or the crime charged against him is a heinous one. The Judge shows from the official figures that this course would greatly reduce the large number of arrests; for example, 7,566 were committed to the Chicago House of Correction in one year, only 190 were charged with any crime, and of those 113 were charged with petty theft. Under his plan only the 190, indeed, not all of them, would ever have spent a night in the police station, or in jail. But few women would be imprisoned, and as the Judge says: "The present diabolical practice of annually arresting thousands of friendless and helpless creatures for trivial offenses—in many cases for no offense at all—and locking them up like so many cattle in cells, and then fining them and sending them to the bridewell, would cease." The book is strong meat; not very pleasant reading, many of its pages are for those who prefer their ease to knowing their danger, but exactly the kind of reading needed in these days.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS MIDWAY, by Margaret Sidney, D. Lothrop Company. We do not need to recommend this book, for everything Margaret Sidney writes recommends itself. Besides, everybody fell in love with "FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS" and here they are half grown up, the identical, lovable people, even though transported from the "little brown house" to the elegant home of Grandpa King. Dear little Phronsie is just as sweet as ever, and does not seem much older, though of course she is, for the other children have "half grown up," why should not she? She is decidedly the center of this book, all the rest of the children, grandpa, and even her mother, obediently revolving around her. Mrs. Chatterton tries to be the villain of this play, nearly killing Phronsie in the attempt; before the book closes she gives up the role, evidently realizing the incongruity of having a villain in any of Mrs. Lathrop's books, and winds up with making Phronsie her heir. Polly has developed just as she ought to with the start she had, and the boys, severally and collectively, turn out just as they ought to with such mothers. The only fault to be found with the book is that it is a little too good; one acquainted with average boys can hardly believe it possible to put three households of them into one, without just a little bit of friction. Then, Grandpa King is "just too good for anything," in spite of his hot temper. But if such people do not live in the world they ought to.

The Watch-Tower.

Miss Casseday sends this little bit of brightness to the Watch-tower:

"A little bit of patience oft makes the sunshine come,
And a little bit of love makes a very happy home;
A little bit of hope makes a rainy day look gay,
A little bit of charity makes glad a weary way."

***

The commission for the statue of the late Sunset Cox has been awarded to Miss Louise Lawson, of New York. She is now at work upon a large fountain for the city of Albany.

***

In Germany women are employed in large numbers in post telegraph and telephone offices; they are now to be put into uniform consisting of a blue dress with orange collar and facings and bright buttons.

***

The Woman's Penny Paper, London, offered as a prize to the two most popular teachers in England, a free trip of three weeks on the Continent. Names were sent in from all over the country, and the votes resulted in favor of Miss Alice Lush and Miss Julia Westcott. Neither had been outside of England, and enjoyed their outing intensely, going together in August, and returning greatly refreshed in time for the September opening of school.

***

Mrs. Warner Snoad, who is a favorite contributor to THE UNION SIGNAL, suggests to the women of England, a union for the improvement of their condition. The first practical step she proposes is that women of all sorts and conditions shall combine actively to prevent the return to Parliament of men who oppose woman suffrage, by supporting only those candidates who will stand by us.

***

A professor in Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., writes that when the carpenter work was started in the school last year, six girls of the Normal graduating class asked for instruction and were assigned to benches, the same as the boys. Their elementary joiner work was quite creditable; they measured as closely, and sawed and planed with as much deftness as their brothers. At the end of the year they did almost the entire work of constructing a neat glass case to hold the work of the sewing department, in which they also had a hand.

***

Mrs. Mary A. Hitchcock, president of Nebraska, has received a touching contribution to the amendment fund. A school teacher in a neighboring state, being intensely interested in the success of the campaign, but having no money to contribute, sends a beautiful gold watch and chain, with the message, "Go, little watch, and do some good." That it may accomplish its mission it is proposed to sell it in shares, each share accompanied by a vote as to whose the watch shall be. This is no raffling scheme, for there is no element of chance in it. Let all who wish in this way to contribute to the fund, send one dollar to Mrs. Hitchcock, 57 Burr Block, Lincoln, Nebraska, accompanied with the name of your choice for the possession of the watch.

***

Miss Frances E. Townsley is an ordained preacher in the Baptist Church of Nebraska, has been in the pulpit constantly now for sixteen years, and has worked in fifteen states. Colonel Fuller, one of the leading laymen of the Baptist Church in Vermont, says of Miss Townsley: "I first introduced her to our churches, and assisted in her support, hence feel a sort of responsibility concerning her work. She is a born leader, and not easily disconcerted. On one occasion when holding a series of meetings of remarkable power in Claremont, N. H., as she closed the sermon, and was about to extend an invitation to inquirers, a man arose and repeated a text which he supposed to be her's of that evening, denouncing in the most brutal manner any one who dared to add to or take from the Scriptures. The audience filling the large church, and extending to the street, was greatly excited at this occurrence. What would this young woman do? What would she say? Without the movement of a muscle, as calm as the moon on a mild night, and in a clear and ringing voice she repeated her text, just as it was in the Bible, closed the book, descended to the altar railing, and invited penitents forward; not a word of complaint, of notice of what had occurred escaping her lips, or being manifest in her manner. A ripple of relief ran through the audience. The man had mistaken the text. The victory was won. The woman's splendid self-control cast out all fear, and the meeting went on as usual. For some years she was a public school teacher. She once took the contract for a given sum, of grading the schools of a New England town, supplying the necessary teachers and acting as principal of the high school. She performed this difficult task to general satisfaction, and with credit to herself, showing remarkable skill in money matters as well as in giving instruction." ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

THE PARTED WAYS.

In every young life there comes a time when it must choose between the right way and the wrong, between self-conquest and self-surrender. The path has been more or less shielded, until now; the youth has been led onward, hedged in by family habits, neighborhood environments, the school and the church. Within these limitations the character has expanded as best it might. It may be dwarfed, cramped, stunted, or enriched and unfolded; still its inherent characteristics cannot be wholly pruned or cultivated away. Under all conditions the native bent remains.

One day, however, the son or the daughter leaves home or assumes within it that independent position which marks the end of pupilage. The natural powers blossom and send out twigs this way and that. Then and then only, may be known what are the quality of its life forces and the energy which pushes them into activity.

In how many cases are friends and neighbors bitterly disappointed in the career of the young man and woman of exceptionally fine powers, and what is generally known as good culture! They fritter away life, scarcely knowing its real meaning. He drags away the years in a petty clerkship, or speculates and gets a living in all sorts of shady ways. She dawdles about at home in a nerveless, self-indulgent manner, until marriage gives to the world one more slatternly, unaspiring, weak wife and mother. Yet both started in their careers under the best auspices.

What is the secret of these failures?

Simply because, in both cases, parents failed to measure their responsibilities. They had no real estimate of life. Consequently their children are reared in those habits which enervate everything which gives strength, energy and self-mastery; noble possibilities are nipped in the bud. That life-blood which should flow through the veins with vigor and power, dwindles into a puny, driveling stream. If they become fathers and mothers, it is to a weak, truckling offspring.

The trouble is that parental love is unguided by wisdom. No other affection in man's bosom is so strong as that for his offspring; yet, strange to say, he takes into account more the pleasure of the child than his good. Forgetting the wondrous and awful dower of immortality, he ardently desires that sons and daughters may have a "good time" now. Never mind what is best for the adult, let "my son" and "my daughter" have their fill of to-day's evanescent pleasures. "The future will take care of itself. I want them to have a better time than I had at their age. I had to work, to obey, when I was young. I had to rise betimes and attend to certain duties; my children shall take their ease. Time enough for duties when they are grown."

And so the pendulum swings to the other extreme from that of Puritanical repression. Indulgence is the only watch-word, pleasure the only aim.

All this would cease to be passing strange were it confined to atheists or even agnostics. Were there no future life one might be pardoned in trying to make the most of this, though it is unreasonable to suppose that "the most" consists in even a high order of animal indulgence. Were this earth all we can know of the conditions of existence, let us at least know the best and the highest, and these are coincident with self-restraint. The clearest brain, the soundest body, are necessary for the purest enjoyment.

But let us reverently give thanks for the same!—the glory of life eternal, forever and ever unfolding in love, wisdom and worship, is within our reach. Shall we not start our children in such a manner that they will be fitted to enter on that pathway? And is that a path of mere self-indulgence?

That is, rather, a pathway of cruelty under the semblance of ease. No life of asceticism is here inculcated, no self-denial merely for its own sake. But in a large, noble, aspiring way, let us teach the little ones whom God has lent us, that life involves wondrous and beautiful possibilities. Let us show them that to attain the highest and best within our power it is first necessary to have self-control, self-discipline, self-reverence. That generous self-forgetfulness which merges the individual and local in the general and universal can be instilled in the home-circle as it can be nowhere else. And in so doing is the best and only safeguard against temptations, including that which leads to intemperance.

THERE are lost pieces of silver—aye, and of gold—which have long ago been missing from the Father's treasury, and are trampled under foot of man and beast alike—lives crowded so full of cruelty and penury and vice that, though they are God's children, they themselves do not even dream it. But if you can find them in the mire, if you will wash them with your tears and burnish them back to brightness and beauty by your patient and loving touch, you will find on them the image of Him who made them, and the superscription of His immortal children. Light the candle of your love, then, and sweep diligently till you find them.—Bishop Potter.

News from the Field.

WORLD'S W. C. T. U.

MRS. BATEHAM IN HONOLULU.

One of the pleasant experiences of our recent sojourn of several months in California was meeting the dear friend of my girlhood, Mrs. J. C. Bateham. It was in the little old Spanish town of San Miguel in Southern California, at the house of our Honolulu friend, Mrs. Mary E. Nott, the beloved and efficient president of the W. C. T. U. there. My husband and I decided at once that Mrs. Bateham was the very person we needed here to present the blessings and claims of the Christian Sabbath to this community.

It must be said that this little Hawaiian Kingdom is just now passing through a time of moral darkness and danger such as has not been felt for many years. Political power has fallen to a sad extent into the hands of the worst men of the nation; our rights are assailed, our best laws are in danger of being repealed, and bad ones substituted; and this nation, which has long stood before the world as the signal illustration of a heathen people redeemed from its baseness by the gospel of Christ, is threatened with an almost total apostacy. It will not come to that, but the efforts of these leaders are all in that direction. Our good Sabbath laws are especially in danger, and a strong attempt is being made by our legislature, which is now in session, to introduce the California Sabbath, which, as every one knows, is almost no Sabbath at all. Some of the members were elected on that very issue.

In view of these facts, and with the prospect of the partial rest of several weeks, which she very much needed, Mrs. Bateham was easily persuaded to come down with us on the steamer of June 20, and work in her department as the opportunity should open, on behalf of the W. C. T. U. We reached here Friday, June 27, and she entered immediately upon her work by addressing the Sabbath-school the next Sunday morning, and occupying the pulpit of the Central Union Church in the evening, speaking upon "Sabbath Observance" to a large and interested audience. A special meeting of the W. C. T. U. was called for the next day, when it was resolved to petition for Mrs. Bateham a hearing before the legislature upon this question. The request elicited quite a lively discussion in that august body, but was denied. A courteous answer was sent us, however, saying that while Mrs. Bateham could not be heard in the House, the members would be glad to hear her at any other place we might designate. So we invited them to listen to her address in the Y. M. C. A. Hall the following Saturday evening, and some of them were present. Mrs. Bateham spent five weeks here, one of which was occupied in visiting the volcano. During that time she gave nine public addresses, two of which were to large evening audiences in the foreign church, and two in the native Kawaiahao Church, one of these being upon temperance, both interpreted by the pastor, Rev. H. H. Parker. At several of these she had a question-box, which produced special interest. Questions of all kinds from all classes of people were read and commented upon with unfailing appropriateness and without a moment's hesitation. Mrs. Bateham has made a thorough study of the Sabbath question in all its bearings, and presents her arguments in a quiet but forcible manner, which cannot fail to bring conviction to her hearers.

Of the results of her efforts in our little community it is too early to speak, and how much good has been done can never be known. But to some of us the Blessed Day has an added sacredness, and we have received new inspiration to work in its behalf. Mrs. Bateham left us August 1, having made many personal friends who have only praise to speak of her and her work, and who will follow her with good wishes and prayers.

MARY S. WHITNEY.

MONTANA.

W. C. T. U. STATE CONVENTION.

Our seventh annual convention, but first as a state, met in the M. E. Church at Livingston, Aug. 26 to 28. The church was tastefully decorated with potted plants, some of quite rare kinds. These were arranged on the pulpit, and on small tables at a little distance on either side. Above each table of plants was a beautiful banner, and higher still, above the pulpit and its load of beauty, was the picture of our beloved world's president, Miss Willard. Over it was hung, so as to fall gracefully on either side, the beautiful native vine of Montana, the clematis. We numbered twenty-one voters; nearly every union in the state was represented, some having two or three representatives, including delegates, and one state officer. Mrs. Laura E. Howey, who has served the state convention, in the highest office it can give, for seven years, presided. The morning and afternoon sessions of Tuesday were devoted to business, all committees being appointed, and the first meeting of the executive being held; the reading of some reports, and election of several superintendents of departments.

The evening session was presided over by the president of Livingston union, Mrs. LeBarre. The meeting opened with a song of welcome by a choir of young girls. The cordial address of welcome was read by Mrs. Taft, wife of the pastor of the M. E. Church and was happily responded to by Miss Darrow, of Butte, state treasurer. The annual address to the convention was delivered by Mrs. Howey. It was full of cheer, of counsel, of earnest thought and deep feeling. Some of the points of work touched and indorsed by her were the Temperance hospital, juvenile work in Sunday-school and other places, scientific temperance instruction in public schools, enforcement of the law prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors, unfermented wine for sacramental use, Demorest contests, equal franchise, and the dissemination of literature bearing on the several lines of work. At the close of the meeting an invitation from the Good Templars was tendered the ladies of the convention to attend their annual picnic in Yellowstone Canyon on Friday the 29th. On Wednesday reports were read from several unions, and from superintendents of Sabbath observance and juvenile work. Mrs. Parnall, of Stevensville union, urged upon the sisters the great importance of juvenile work. The invitation from the Yellowstone Park Lodge was considered, and a number of ladies signified their willingness to accept, also the little girls, Misses Dot LeBarre and Bertha Taft. A request was read from Mr. Finn, photographer, that the convention sit for a photograph on Thursday morning at 8:45. This was discussed, and the convention finally consented, as a matter of history, this being our first convention since Montana became a state. In the afternoon Mr. Fields, nominee of the labor party of Montana for Congress, was introduced and made a short address. He stated that every society of workingmen took "sobriety" for its motto, and no saloon man was admitted into their order. The question-box was opened, and, as is usually the case, some interesting discussions were held.

The executive committee met at the close of the afternoon session. In the evening an anthem was sung by the choir, a paper was read on the work of the W. C. T. U. as a National body, by Mrs. Tipton, of White Sulphur Springs, a fine bass solo was sung by Mr. Ayr, and the annual report on jail and prison work was read by Mrs. Rich, of Bozeman, superintendent of that department. The meeting closed with another selection by the choir, and benediction by Rev. Mr. Taft, Mrs. Howey presided. Thursday Mrs. Rich read a letter from Deer Lodge relating to her line of work. She urged upon local unions the desirability of having a superintendent of this department, one consecrated to the work. The report of the executive committee was received and nominees elected. Reports of the auditing and finance committees were read and accepted. It was moved and carried that a synopsis of the annual address be printed in the minutes. The convention proceeded to the election of officers. The president, who has served so faithfully for seven years, declined reëlection on account of her many local duties. Mrs. Cummins, of Helena, was elected to that office; Mrs. Alma Kirkpatrick, of Dillon, was reëlected secretary; Mrs. Wallace, of Billings, treasurer; moved and carried that the president be empowered to appoint the corresponding secretary, and that such appointment be confirmed by the executive committee.

In the afternoon the committee on resolutions reported, and report was received with one amendment. All unfinished business was handed over to the new executive committee. Invitations for the next place of meeting were tendered from Butte, Billings, Deer Lodge, Stevensville, White Sulphur Springs, Niles City, and the Frances E. Willard union of Helena. Third ballot decided in favor of Deer Lodge; moved and carried that the time of the next meeting be the third Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in September, 1891. At the close of the afternoon session, carriages were sent to the church by Mr. Kirby and Rev. Mr. Fowler to take the ladies to drive in the canyon. Mr. Joy, attorney at law, had furnished the same means of pleasure to a number on a previous afternoon.

Thursday evening a Demorest gold medal contest was held. Judges were chosen from places not represented by any contestant. The medal was awarded to Miss Bickel, of Helena. Contestants were Misses Kate Le Barre, of Livingston, Edith Bickel, Carrie Laney and Anna Reifenrath, of Helena, and Masters Nathan Strasberger and Wilber Hall, of Bozeman. A recitation was also given by Miss Van Tassel, of Bozeman. Delightful music was rendered by young girls of Livingston, under superintendence of Mrs. Hunter. The house was crowded, and all seemed delighted with the entertainment. Too much cannot be said of the thoughtfulness of the Livingston people in caring for us. Carriages met us at the depot, and hearts and homes opened to receive us. For better acquaintance with each other, changes were made in some cases, and the result was additional pleasure. The thoughtfulness was also shown by the appointment of pages, and a large table for secretaries' use.

Next day, after the close of the convention, easy carriages were provided and we were conveyed to Yellowstone Canyon, for the picnic. The scenery around Livingston is beautiful, but that in the canyon is grand. What a delightful day it was to all! Amusements for those who desired them; rest and quiet for others. The lunch was all that could be wished, cold meat, pickles, rolls, jellies, pies, cakes, and various fruits. Short addresses were given by Mrs. Howey, Mr. Fields, Mr. Livingstone and Capt. Thomas. Late in the day fishing in the Yellowstone river was rewarded by the capture of a goodly number of mountain trout, most of which were carried home by the delegates. Friends accompanied us to the depot to say farewell, and we returned to our homes feeling that it had been good to be there.

The following are some of the resolutions adopted by the convention:

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt thanks to our beloved president for the years of untiring effort and unselfish devotion given to the interests of the W. C. T. U. in Montana. We recognize her large heart, her clear intellect and firm hand in the growth and development of the work in our state.

Resolved, That we urge our local unions to greater effort in organizing Loyal Temperance Legions and Bands of Hope, believing that from these shall come, in the future, men and women well instructed both in moral and scientific temperance principles.

Resolved, That each union make strenuous efforts to have the saloons in their community closed on Sunday, and enforce the law protecting minors.

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the position taken by the National W. C. T. U. in the following resolutions adopted at New York in 1888, viz: That we reaffirm our allegiance to that party which makes its dominant issue the suppression of the liquor traffic, declares its belief in Almighty God as the source of all power in government, defends the sanctity of the Christian Sabbath, recognizes equal suffrage and equal wages for women; demands the abolition of polygamy, and uniform laws governing marriage and divorce, and aims to remove sectional differences, promote National unity, and insure the best welfare of our land.

Resolved, That we earnestly commend the faithful labors in foreign countries of our world's missionaries, and that we continue to remember them, and all our National organizers, in our prayers, bidding them God-speed in their work.

Resolved, That we heartily approve the Temperance Temple movement, and will gladly assist in every way our limited means will allow.

M. M. R.
Sec. pro tem.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

TEMPERANCE BREEZES FROM THE PACIFIC.

A good, stiff temperance breeze blows steadily here, even in the summer months. It is not so cooling, perhaps, as our summer sea breeze, but it has invigorating qualities and will be, in time, destructive of that moral pestilence that is such a blight to our otherwise fair state.

Our kind of folks has captured the Fourth of July for temperance at Long Beach. Each succeeding year is better and more uplifting than the last; this year Colonel Copeland gave a magnificent address on the morning of the Fourth at the tabernacle, while in the evening throngs of people crowded there, many of them to hear for the first time the great Kentucky temperance orator, Colonel Bain. The following Sunday and Monday evenings he spoke to crowded houses in Los Angeles under the auspices of our organization; the latter evening two or three hundred people went away unable to secure seats. Mrs. Osborne, of Boston, who was on this coast under the Chautauqua management, came up from the Beach, and added the charm of her magnificent gift of song. I never saw an audience so en rapport with speaker and singer as that great audience of twelve hundred people were that night.

On the sixth and seventh of August, the W. C. T. U. held its usual two days' convocation at Long Beach. The deft and tasteful fingers of a committee of ladies from the union there converted the platform into a "thing of beauty," with bouquets, floral drapings and designs, the national colors and suitable mottoes. Looking down from the wall, amid the festooning of flags, was dear Miss Willard's face in a frame. There is a legend of a Madonna's picture hanging on the wall of an old Italian cathedral, which looks down from its canvas upon the faces upturned to it in admiration and curiosity, with a real glance of recognition. It almost seemed as if the face of our "best beloved" looked down from the red, white and blue drapery, with a sign of approval at the good work going on.

The subjects presented and discussed were prison work, juvenile instruction, heredity, social purity, young woman's work, woman suffrage, intemperance and labor, narcotics, and the needs of the Temperance Temple. The papers were exceptionally good, and the discussions, winged with the fervor of conviction, were participated in by both the white-ribboners and their faithful big brothers. A spicy part of the program on the first day was the question-box. It was conducted by Dr. Rachel Reid, of Pasadena, who, after giving her own terse answers to the questions, allowed the audience to open fire upon them, which caused some rapid and skillful skirmishing. The Rev. Chas. Winbigler, of the Baptist Church at Riverside, was the lecturer the first evening. He is a preacher of convictions, and not one whit afraid to express them in words that have no uncertain sound. With forcible thought and impassioned language, he drove the responsibility of the dreadful rum-curse home to its rightful source.

On the second evening, Colonel Bain spoke for the fifth time at Long Beach, and his great popularity was shown by the immense audience that gathered to hear him. He gave as the subject of his address, "Hash." The significant meaning of the term could be appreciated when one saw the way in which he gathered together the objections to prohibition and chopped them into mince meat. The music on both evenings was exceptionally excellent and appropriate. A duet entitled "Temperance Bells" was sung by two little folks, Master Guernsey Brown and Miss Winona Henry. They were vociferously encored for the delightful way in which they rendered it, and sang "Pretty Temperance Maid."

A very heated discussion took place the afternoon of the last day, springing from the fact that many of the ladies during their summer camping at the Beach had patronized a certain bakery, not knowing that the proprietor of it kept the saloon that had been forced upon Long Beach. In order "to boom the town," the liquor men and their allies in "ways that were dark" set aside, at the spring election, the guarantee of the title deed that liquor selling should be forever excluded from every lot, although that clause had induced hundreds of people to buy lots in Long Beach for summer homes. The discussion ended in a protest to the members of the council of Long Beach "against the saloon as being against the best interests of all the people, especially against the happiness of the women and children, whom it is the dignity and the duty of every man and the mark of a true gentleman, to defend against the saloon, as against all other ills." The protest was presented at the evening meeting just before the lecture, and on motion was unanimously passed by that vast audience with a rising vote.

The question of Sunday closing of saloons in Los Angeles has been under consideration for some months. Dr. Crafts was here for nearly a month to inaugurate the campaign, and the warm weather has not abated one whit the warmth with which it is being pushed. A petition, with the signatures of nearly seven thousand citizens, has been presented to the city council to pass an ordinance forbidding saloons to keep open or sell any liquor on Sunday. The saloon men sent in a counter petition of nearly five thousand names. The council decided to submit the question to a vote of the people, at a special election to be called for that purpose, but in stepped the mayor of the city and vetoed the call as illegal, but the council has ignored the veto and will proceed with the matter as if he had not spoken. The Christian people are thoroughly organized and are determined to push the matter to a successful issue. Both the Protestant and Catholic churches have joined hands on this measure and there will be a great deal of agitation from the pulpit until the campaign is ended.

The liquor men of this state are determined to catch the incoming legislature, and are threatening to withdraw their combined votes from that party which refuses to pledge itself to favor a uniform low license law for the entire state of California. Through their official organ, they have demanded of both political parties "the consideration to which they are justly entitled as the largest taxpayers of the commonwealth." If such a law is passed in the interests of this wicked trade, it will make it impossible for local communities, as now, to enforce local prohibition.

On August 28th and 29th, Ventura county W. C. T. U. held its semi-annual convention at Saticoy. This county has only five unions, and yet the county is well organized and has an efficient corps of officers and other workers. I was charmed with the women, the papers, the discussions, the whole esprit de corps of the convention. The president, Mrs. Alma K. Huffman, presided with the same ease and quiet dignity with which she would receive her friends in her own home; there was no superabundance of red tape management, and yet everything moved along without friction or delay, and each member spoke her mind as promptly and freely as if she had been trained to "speak in meeting" from her youth up. Much time was given to the presentation of department work, but very little to the customary routine of reporting.

The white ribbon worn with a bit of orange knotted in with it showed that good suffrage work had been done in the county, for almost every woman wore the two colors.

MARY E. GARBUTT,
Special Correspondent.

WISCONSIN.

REPORT OF WORK FOR LUMBERMEN.

The season of 1890 closes with the best record of Christian work yet done by our Woman's Christian Temperance Union in our Wisconsin lumber camps. Where, last year, our treasury had one hundred and sixty-five dollars, this year we raised three hundred and forty-two dollars; and reached some five thousand men with our literature work, where last year we could get access to but three thousand. Many lumber dealers have sent us letters of approbation with their check to confirm our work, and several foremen of lumber camps have written letters of their appreciation of the work done by our unions in sending good papers to the men.

Our missionary, Rev. S. E. Very, has faithfully represented us, and held services in over sixty camps—many of them twenty-five miles away from the nearest station. Two railroads, the Sioux and the Wisconsin Central, sent us, through their passenger agents, half-fare tickets for our missionary—for which we wish particularly to thank them—thus enabling him to reach more camps than it were otherwise possible to do, and to preach to some three thousand men. Several other camp services were held under local pastors; and Rev. J. M. Robinson visited many camps for us, holding services in January.

People who are familiar with camp life know the utter dearth of good reading matter incident to a lumber camp, and the welcome always given to a roll of good papers. This fact suggested to our Wisconsin workers a plan whereby they could systematize their work and do much good. Early in November over one hundred unions and seven Y's wrote to the secretary and received the post-office address of some one or two of the camps each, taking such as their especial care all winter, and sending every week as good a roll of fresh literature as they could cull from their respective churches and the community. The missionary has felt encouraged and helped by this work, as these rolls of literature have paved the way for his better reception and more assured welcome. Since the only camp missionaries in Wisconsin are sent out by our W. C. T. U. and the Y. M. C. A., our literature has proved an equal aid to their missionaries, they tell us, as well as to our own.

Honorable mention might be made of a long list of unions that have been most faithful in this line of work; but a few brief reports may give us a hint of all the rest. Mrs. Westly so aroused Rock county as to report Evansville, at one time, prepaying $1.50 for express, and Milton, Lima, Johnston and Clinton were not behind. Baraboo supplied five camps, and sent six pictures of "The Mill or Still;" Stoughton, Rock Elm, Lake Geneva, Madison, Dartford, and the Y's of both Oshkosh and Madison attended most faithfully to their charge. Mazomanie, Dartford, River Falls, Durand and Lake Mills, sent regularly, as well as many others; while Racine union, with its good record furnishes us with a bright idea that we all might imitate. They purchased a rubber stamp, with "compliments" of their union upon it, with which to stamp all papers sent out, proving that they have enlisted for the "whole war," and not merely for one winter. Many unions received letters from the foreman of the camp they were thus favoring, and cheerful words of appreciation and thankfulness proved that some of this good seed was bearing fruit. How could it help it, freighted as it was by the spirit of consecration and earnest prayer! The foreman of the Racine camp wrote to Mrs. Leet: "You are doing lots of good; we thank you for all the fresh papers you have sent us. Some of the unions sent out old papers, and we do not enjoy such. I am a temperance man and will distribute all you send gladly." One camp had no sooner got into winter quarters than a message came to me to be sure and send their names to two unions. Many copies of Der Deutsch Amerikaner were taken and mailed directly to some camp. A large donation of Bibles was given us by the American Bible Society, and distributed by our missionary personally among the men. He also distributed a large donation of foreign tracts and religious magazines, sent us by Mr. Geo. Reisman, Secretary of the German Prohibition League, of Madison; besides carrying a choice package selected for us by Mrs. Buell, our National corresponding secretary. Mr. Very reports the kindest of treatment in the camps where he held services, the most attentive audiences, and uniformly an urgent request to come again.

The camp missionary's life is full of hardships and privations, long cold walks, and often only the bare floor for a bed. Discouragements are not wanting to test the faith of these brave Christian men—their record we will leave to the "Recording Angel," where your self-denial and consecration also belong. Yes, we have thought what it means to our state, with its growing need of Christian principle in its national life, to send every year this vast army of 70,000 woodsmen into its Northern forests, for the six long, dreary months of our Northern winter, away from not only all the restraints of civilized life, but away from the holier restraints of home and loved ones.

The bracing air of the winter climate of Northern Wisconsin, the woodsman's hard work and plain fare, all act as so many tonics toward a perfect physical being—think what it is for man to grow thus only in his animal nature, and you will not wonder over any tide of evil that too often overshadows camp life, and leaves two-thirds of the winter's earnings in the till of the saloon-keeper.

Are we aiming too high, and attempting too much? Let us recall the grand work of the Christian commission during our late war, and that story of a miracle, the result of the work of a single little mission ship among the "North Sea Trawlers;" a story that reads more like a fairy tale than aught else, and that ought to fire with zeal and thanksgiving the heart of every Christian worker in England and America. That one little ship in the past five years has changed whole floating villages of fishermen from lives of most awful debauchery, brutality and crime, into Christian men and women with all the sanctifying barriers such gospel influences ever exert in any community.

This winter's work proves our work, our zeal, our mission. God grant it may be the earnest of better things, and a more firmly established mission that will suffer from no lack of service while the necessity exists! Let us then thank God and take courage, and do all we can, remembering ours is the present opportunity and we shall pass this way but once.

MRS. MARY C. UPHAM,
National Supt. Lumbermen's Work.

KANSAS.

FIRST DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. of the first Congressional district convened at Hiawatha, the home of the president, Sept. 3 and 4, which proved to be an interesting and successful session despite the fact that the morning dawned inauspiciously as the smoke from the ruins of an entire block of business houses hung in somber clouds over that beautiful city.

The convention was called to order at 2 p. m., in the United Presbyterian Church, which was most tastefully decorated with mottoes and beautiful blooming plants. As your reporter reached the city on a late train the first part of the program must needs be omitted from this report. The presence of Mrs. Dora Evans, of Clay Center, the state organizer, was an inspiration. Her drill in parliamentary rules and usages was of practical benefit, and she proved an efficient help all through the convention.

The evening devotional exercises were led by Miss Minnie Branigan, one of Sabetha's best loved Christian workers. The addresses of welcome were hearty and loyal, the responses reciprocative, all interspersed with beautiful solos, to the delight of all.

Miss Ruth Diergan, of Atchison, presented the claims of women to enfranchisement in an able and elegant manner. Mrs. Chase then gave the annual address and summary of her work which was listened to with intense interest. From the magnitude of this report, and the overworked look of our dear president, it would seem she has done "whatsoever her hands have found to do," and has done it well.

The next morning was occupied largely by the appointments of superintendents to the departments in the plan of work adopted by the state convention. Reports of superintendents were read, after which Miss Branigan read a very spiritual production, "Power of Prayer in Temperance Work," which was fully appreciated by every one. A most happy symphony was effected when all joined in singing "Sweet Hour of Prayer" after the reading. Election of officers soon followed, which resulted in a unanimous vote for the reëlection of the present officers, namely: Mrs. Julia A. Chase, president, Hiawatha; Mrs. Mary L. Scull, secretary, Hiawatha; Mrs. M. B. White, treasurer, Sabetha.

The plan of work adopted embodied the departments named in the state convention with a clause that makes it incumbent upon every white-ribboner in the first district to support the state organ, Our Messenger.

Mrs. Evans presided over the question-drawer with promptness and eloquence. Arrangements were made by which all the newspapers in the district that can be reached, are to be enlisted into the cause by publishing a report of the meeting. The rapid wheels of time brought the hour for adjournment, and parting words were said with the sincere declaration that it had been a season of refreshment, and the kind hospitality extended to the visiting delegates by the people of Hiawatha was both enjoyed and appreciated.

MRS. SADIE B. SHERMAN,
Supt. of Literature.

NEW YORK.

WORK AT SILVER LAKE.

The growth of this Assembly has been phenomenal. Its location, management, improvements, freedom allowed each speaker to declare the whole truth, and Sabbath closing, are among the elements of its great success.

During this season of 1890, the School of Methods conducted by the W. C. T. U. of the Assembly has proved a great attraction. A short walk took us to the breezy heights apart, where, in the hall of philosophy, commanding a view of field, wood and lake, we discussed the best methods of working in different departments. Women who have matured wisdom in state work, and some of our western New York workers, instructed us. Mrs. H. A. Perrigo showed us how to "Save the Children To-day." Mrs. C. J. A. Jump inspired the Y's to action and endurance. Mrs. M. J. Weaver melted our hearts into obedience and faith for "evangelistic work." Miss J. E. Dailey taught us the duties of the "Scribes," and Miss M. M. Perkins, "how to carry the bag" and give due account. Mrs. L. P. Davies, president of our association, told us our legal rights and duties in enforcing scientific instruction law. Mrs. A. E. Rice showed us how to "rock the cradle" more intelligently if we would "swing the world" truer to God's will. Mrs. L. F. Adams proved the need of every local to be "correct action," for "parliamentary usage is but the etiquette of public assemblies, without knowledge of which any member is placed at greatest disadvantage." Mrs. L. K. Morse made us feel that papers or "books written to our need" are as "essential to the success of each department of work as the stove and dishpan to housekeeping." Mrs. H. R. Williamson talked with the women upon methods of broadening our knowledge of heredity Every woman considered her work the foundation work. Dr. Holmes says: "There are people who think everything may be done, if the doer, be he educator or physician, be only called in season. No doubt, but in season would often be a hundred or two years before the child is born; people never send so early as that." Let us by knowledge of and obedience to laws of heredity insure the good of our descendants.

Mrs. Louise S. Rounds, of Chicago, president of Illinois W. C. T. U., was owned of God in her lecture on social purity on our White-ribbon Day; inspiring the thousands who listened to braver, purer action. The time has come when the ignorance or guilt which feels or assumes a hesitancy in accepting God's most sacred truths as holy and wholesome, is given its actual value, and the enlightened and obedient are sweeping on to grandest achievement, and yet in remote corners, the shame which is evidence of sin, abounds among the pseudo modest.

Those in charge were in every way courteous, giving us a place upon the program, advertising our school of methods, making us a generous appropriation for the expenses of another year, and crowning their hospitality by the gift of a beautiful lot for headquarters, which we hope to occupy in 1891. We invite all white-ribboners to our work; we invite every county to send a delegate to our association who may represent her county in the executive committee. MRS. H. R. WILLIAMSON.

ILLINOIS.

WORK IN THE SEVENTH DISTRICT.

The Whiteside county W. C. T. U. convened in Erie, August 13 and 14. In every way the convention was a success, sixteen unions reported, through thirty-one delegates, two hundred and eighty members. The county is in flourishing condition. Mrs. M. C. Talbott, on account of new home duties, retires from office, and Mrs. A. E. Abbey succeeds her as county president. Good resolutions were adopted; among them one declaring loyalty to the state and National unions, and favoring woman's franchise. No backward steps were taken.

The eighth annual gospel temperance meeting of the seventh district was opened by the district president, August 16, and continued through the day following, Mrs. Eugenia St. John and Mary T. Cowan were the speakers. "Social Purity," "Young Woman's Work," and the "Queen Esthers of To-day," were ably discussed. A large concourse of people listened attentively.

The unions of Bureau county received fresh courage and inspiration from a convention which the Dover W. C. T. U. entertained August 19th and 20th. Mrs. Grace Burgess presided. Reports were favorable. Seven new unions have been added to the county during the past year. A pleasant, harmonious feeling prevailed. Like those of the Whiteside county W. C. T. U. the resolutions declared loyalty to the state and National unions, and favored woman's franchise. A Demorest medal contest closed the convention. Jennie Snider received the prize.

This season, the W. C. T. U. will have booths on every fair ground within the seventh district.

A new union was organized by the district president Aug. 15 in Nachusa. Miss Anna Emmert is its president. A gold medal contest took place Aug. 29 in Princeton.

The seventh district convention will be held Sept. 23d and 24th, in Orion, Henry county. Mrs. Rounds will be present. GRACE S. BURGESS, Dist. Pres.

PENNSYLVANIA.

TIOGA COUNTY CONVENTION.

The seventh annual meeting of the Tioga county W. C. T. U. was held at Blossburg, Aug. 27 and 28. Heaven's benediction seemed to have fallen upon the earth in the sunshine of a perfect day, and visitors and delegates were welcomed in the glad smile of nature as well as with the welcoming words and smiles of the Blossburg white-ribboners. The Wellsboro ladies were upon the scene first among the visitors; next, the train running south brought in its quota of women, young and older, and little children with whom also it was a gala day, and were met at the station by a deputation of Y girls, who conducted them to the Baptist church, an elegant and commodious edifice lately completed. On the noon train, running south, other delegates and visitors arrived and immediately a meeting of the executive committee was called, in the session room, by Mrs. B. N. McCoy, vice-president, Mrs. Watrous, our county president, being absent, much to our regret. All felt that this conference was fraught with importance, as the interests of our union in the naming of county officers to fill vacancies was to be considered, and when we knelt to implore God's blessing on our deliberations every heart was earnest in supplication for divine guidance. Upon entering the audience room a beautiful sight greeted us. A blue satin banner, bearing upon its folds our national flower, with the motto, "For God, and Home and Native Land," was draped against the wall, while farther back in the alcove was displayed a beautiful new banner of the Loyal Temperance Legion. Flowers were tastefully disposed about the pulpit and orchestra, trailing over the speakers' stand, lifting their beautiful, bright faces above every table and desk, and even crowding up the steps.

At 1:30 p. m. the first public session was called, with Mrs. B. N. McCoy in the chair, supported by Mrs. M. L. Bacon, an enthusiastic and loyal white-ribboner from Wellsboro. The Y choir filled the orchestra with their presence, and at a glance from the president their glad, sweet voices filled the room with beautiful strains of music. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. McCoy and led by Rev. B. J. Tracey, of the M. E. Church. A Bible reading followed upon the subject, "Brotherly Love," with the initial text, "Let brotherly love continue." After this came reports of departments, all encouraging and inspiring. We had hoped to have with us Mrs. M. J. Weaver, of Batavia, evangelist and first vice-president of New York state W. C. T. U., for the evening session, but illness prevented her coming, and a program was improvised from the material at hand, which was pronounced by all to be most excellent. After the opening exercises of the evening, Mrs. I. M. Horton gracefully welcomed all to the hospitalities of Blossburg, and was responded to by Mrs. F. W. Clark, of Mansfield, in a few well-chosen remarks. Some fine recitations were given by the Loyal Temperance Legion, vocal and violin solos, short addresses and select readings, interspersed by appropriate music rendered by the Y choir, to which the well-selected and well-trained choir of the Baptist Church lent their aid.

Thursday morning reports of departments were continued, together with reports of local work of special interest. The afternoon session was taken up with reports of committees, the story of W. C. T. U. prison work in Findlay, Ohio, by Mrs. Hirsch, of that place, formerly a member of the Blossburg union, and other matters of interest, after which the convention proceeded to the election of officers for the coming year. Mrs. M. L. Bacon was chosen president; Mrs. F. W. Clark, vice-president at large, and Mrs. B. N. McCoy, first vice-president, with an able corps of assistants.

A feeling of harmony pervaded the meeting throughout all its sessions, and every heart seemed imbued with devotion to God and consecration to His work. The hospitality of the Blossburg ladies relaxed none of its warmth and generosity until the "parting guests" were well on their homeward way, carrying with them feelings of love for their kind entertainers and hearts filled with zeal to "do and dare" with our grand sisterhood of women against our terrible foe. Among the resolutions adopted was one indorsing the action and the officers of our state and National W. C. T. U., and one pledging ourselves to keep unsullied the original purity of our organization and its original purposes untrammeled.

PRESS SUPT.

INDIANA.

JOTTINGS.

September 1st our faithful state recording secretary, Alice Vining Mendenhall, was married to Dr. C. G. Hastings of Richmond. The best wishes of the Hoosier white-ribboners are theirs.

Miss Lola Moss of Centre Point "Y" has received a lucrative position in the Indian school at Sacaton, Arizona. She left Indiana on the 20th of August for her work. A brave girl, who will faithfully perform every duty, even that of converting into Y's young women the Indian girls under her charge.

Mrs. Belle Cronkhite, secretary of the Warren county union, so seriously ill for the past few weeks, is now past danger, reports her physician.

New prohibition papers are springing up all over Indiana. The Prohibocrat of Greensburg and the Enterprise of Richmond are among the latest.

A Daily Organizer is to be one of the features of the coming state convention. Miss Hay, our business manager, has all arrangements made, and the board of managers are heartily agreed.

The Organizer board held one of their most satisfactory meetings on the 3d instant, and find themselves in a fair way to enlarge and increase the business of this woman's enterprise. The annual meeting of stockholders will be held Oct. 11th, the second day of the state convention at Terre Haute.

The Warren county Prohibitionists will issue an open letter to the voters of Warren county semi-monthly during the months of September and October.

At the medal contest at Vincennes, Mary Bayless, of Richmond, won the medal. At Ekin, Myrtle Haas was the victor. Small gold contests were held at Russiaville, August 27th, Eagletown, 29th, Goodland and Jamestown the 29th. A grand gold contest was held during the state fair, and at Jasper in Dubois county, Sept. 16. A diamond medal contest certain for the state convention.

Indiana will make Sept. 18th, membership crusade day. May our numbers be largely increased!

Mrs. Mary H. Hunt spoke before the Teachers' Institute of Howard county September 4, and gladdened state headquarters by a visit on Friday, the 5th.

At Point Isabel, one day last week, the drugstore and fixtures were damaged to the extent of $150 by Mrs. Sizlove, to whose husband the proprietor, Emory Shields, had been selling whisky. Mr. Sizlove, while under the influence of whisky, fell from the roof of a tile mill, sustaining serious injuries. The wife's demand for damages were ridiculed, and the poor, outraged woman took matters into her own hands and dealt out summary justice upon the governmental agent, the druggist. Where is the latent manhood of this nation?

Immense audiences greet Mrs. Gougar at every point, where she cries aloud and spares not. Her latest addresses were delivered at Vincennes and Octogon, during the latter part of August.

Captain Ritter is speaking every day in his own county, Marion, whose vote will be largely increased this year.

We expect our state convention to be one of the largest and best ever held in the state. A brief visit to headquarters enabled us to get a glimpse of plans, etc. The pen of Miss Reed, our corresponding secretary, was continually flying, as were those of Mrs. Wooden, office clerk, and Miss Palmer, state organizer, who was at the office helping to round up at the year's close. Miss Hay, state treasurer, full of figures and brief sentences, and everybody with cheerful countenances, indicated a good closing up for the year to one well acquainted with the atmosphere of headquarters. SADIE B. WHISTLER.

MISSOURI.

NOTICE.

We confidently expect to make September 27 a "red-letter day" for the W. C. T. U. in our state. We advise each union to map out the work of visiting, so that every house in the town or neighborhood shall be visited.

Start out for the all-day canvass sunny and hopeful, armed with pencil and enrolling tablet. Be ready to answer questions intelligently. Have little leaflets with you on work of the W. C. T. U. Secure subscribers for THE UNION SIGNAL and our state paper, The Crusader.

Every W. C. T. U. woman can surely secure one new member for her own union, and one new subscriber for one of the papers. This little effort will double our membership, and our readers of the best papers. Is it not worth the effort? Arrange to have a children's meeting on Sunday afternoon, the 28th. Let grown-up folks and children participate. Take up a collection for your union.

Prepare for Crusade day the 27th, and children's day the 28th. Intend to have a glorious time, and you'll have it! The results will pay for all trouble.

Do your part, and God will not fail in His part. "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass."

Let there be no failure.

CLARA C. HOFFMAN, Pres.,
ELLEN D. MORRIS, Cor. Sec.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of the twentieth district, Illinois, will be held in Cairo, opening the evening of September 30, closing the evening of October 2. The Y's will fill the program the first evening. They hope to have a Demorest gold medal contest, also other exercises of interest. Mrs. R. A. Emmons, of Chicago, will lecture the two following evenings, and assist in convention work during the two intervening days.

Official Communications.

PARLIAMENTARY USAGE.

Will every state, district and county superintendent report immediately all work accomplished in this department? Also, every local union, else the report will not be full, as some unions never report to their working officers in time. All Schools of Methods, all conventions, and all local work should be reported at once. Do not send to Portland, but to Manistique, Schoolcraft county, Mich. Lecture engagements will hold me to the Upper Peninsula the entire month. Interest was never so general, and never so good work done as during the year just closing. Let us now report, and not when too late feel aggrieved because "we" were not mentioned. The "previous question" is now "moved."

A. S. BENJAMIN, Supt. Parl. Usage.

WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU.

MRS. R. A. EMMONS, SEC.

All engagements made by this Bureau are conditional upon the ability of the lecturer to fill them. In case of detention by sickness, accident, or any legitimate and unavoidable cause, another date will be given as soon as possible.

LECTURERS.

Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge.	Mrs. M. L. Wells.
Mrs. Mary T. Lathrap.	Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.
Mrs. Marion B. Baxter.	Miss I. C. DeVelling.
Miss Henrietta G. Moore.	Mrs. Caroline M. Woodward.
Rev. Eugenia F. St. John.	Mrs. Mary E. Haggart.
Mrs. Helen L. Bullock.	Rev. W. H. Boole, D.D.
Mr. A. G. Wolfenberger.	Ex-Gov. John P. St. John.
Prof. A. B. Huckins.	Rev. C. H. St. John.
Mrs. S. M. Perkins.	Miss E. Fannie Griffin.
Mrs. R. J. Trego.	Mother Stewart.
D. H. Burwell.	Dr. Kate C. Bushnell.
Mrs. Amy Kellogg Morse.	Walter Thomas Mills.

MRS. MARY T. LATHRAP

will speak for the West Side W. C. T. U., Chicago, Ill., September 30, en route for Nebraska, where she is engaged until November 4.

MRS. MARIAN B. BAXTER speaks at De Kalb, Ill., September 25; Sycamore, 26; Rochester, Minn., 28; Eau Claire, Wis., 30; then in Wisconsin most of October.

MISS HENRIETTA G. MOORE

will be in McKean county, Pa., September 14 to 21, then to the Forest county convention for the 24th. She is at liberty to spend the first twenty days of October in Pennsylvania; those desiring her services should apply early, that a consecutive route may be made.

REV. EUGENIA F. ST. JOHN

goes to Nebraska September 14 for six weeks.

MRS. S. M. PERKINS

will be available for Illinois from September 25 to October 20.

MAJOR AND MRS. E. T. SCOTT, MRS. C. M. WOODWARD will also be in Nebraska until close of amendment campaign, November 4, after which they will be available for other states.

REV. W. H. BOOLE, D. D.

speaks at Corning, N. Y., September 21, 22 and 23.

MISS E. FANNIE GRIFFIN

will be available for Illinois after National Convention.

For dates and terms of all the above apply to the
WOMAN'S LECTURE BUREAU,
161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Mrs. Fanny Leiter, Ohio's efficient superintendent of scientific temperance instruction, is to attend the Illinois state convention and probably that of Indiana, and present her favorite topic. She will take a few engagements in Illinois in connection with the convention appointment. Unions desiring her services during October should address Mrs. Emmons at National Headquarters immediately. There is no better speaker and worker in her department than Mrs. Leiter, and she advances the department wherever she goes.

Security.

It is a great thing to have a bank account, to check out when you like. If you keep adding to it to balance the drain, all right; if not you can see what will happen. It is precisely the same with your physical vigor. Suppose you have overdrawn, what then? "Collapse," you will say—not necessarily so. Observe.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"When I am worn out with work I use an inhalation of your Compound Oxygen Treatment, and find renewed strength and elasticity of spirits at once. ELLA R. TENNENT, Ed. "Tennent's Home Magazine," Marietta, Ga., Mar. 25, '87. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"When suffering from throat trouble a few years ago, I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment with good and lasting results." M. L. MORROW, Chester, Pa., Feb. 13, 1889. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment, and feel justified from benefits received to recommend it highly. I would especially recommend it to those suffering from debility, lung and throat trouble." REV. JOHN B. GREGORY, Pastor M. E. Church, Birmingham, Alabama, March 6, 1889.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment for an abscess of the lungs—it made me entirely well again." J. R. PENICK, Pembroke, Ky., June 25, 1889. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has done much for me. My lungs are sound now." Mrs. ELLA HARRINGTON, Nevada, Mo., July 23, 1889.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"From actual experience I can say that I regard your Compound Oxygen Treatment as a most marvelous remedy for the lungs and throat." MRS. H. M. JACONWAY, McComb City, Miss., or Dardanelle, Ark.

If you have found any encouragement in the above instances, send for our book. In it you will find page after page full of testimonials and assurance. We send it free of CHARGE. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Publisher's Dep't.

1st. As an old subscriber you can, during September only, send in your own name at half price (75 cents), providing you send in one or more new names at that rate at the same time.

2d. Money must come with the subscriptions.

3d. Coupons will be issued. That is, you can send the money for any number of new names at seventy-five cents and have coupons issued good till Jan. 1st, 1891. The names should be taken at one dollar after October 1st.

4th No money on this offer received if envelope bears stamp of October.

5th. No commissions can be allowed.

6th. If you or your new subscriber want one of the lovely Prang aquarelle tint pictures of Miss Frances E. Willard, add thirty cents to your remittance for each picture wanted. After October 1st this rate will not be allowed.

7th. Subscribers who are in arrears for a year or more cannot renew at the seventy-five cent rate.

Take Membership Day, Saturday, Sept. 27,

An object lesson that will never be forgotten. See Publisher's Notes, page 15. The above offer will be one way to do it. Send for the free book and sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL.

FAIR

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers. Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies	$ .20
100 "	1.70
1,000 "	14.00

All prepaid, Address W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

60 Cents Value for 25 Cents!

For the purpose of introducing some publications that are valuable and timely, we make the following offer for a short time, namely, to send for 25 cents post-paid,

	Regular Price
1 package of the new Willard cards, 12 designs, new mottoes, including the new poem by Miss Willard, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons must go."	$ .25
1 copy Miss Gordon's new song book, Marching Songs, No. 2. Bright as a daisy..	.10
1 copy Handy Manual, with a compendium of W. C. T. U. information as invaluable as the many tables, facts, etc. of this book of over 400 pages	.25
	.60

When you remember you can get all three at the price of the cards alone, you will not hesitate very long about getting a postal note. We will have a flood of orders for the "special 25 cent offer" (call it that when you write).

✠ ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

New White Cross Pin.

We have been asked a great many times to provide a pin for those who take the White Cross obligations. We have made a great many experiments in the line of supplying the need, but have not been satisfied with any of the results until now. Here is a pin which is a little beauty, modest, plain, effective and very economical. We show it in the exact size. It is made of celluloid and shines out in a way that will attract more attention than if it were made of gold. Prices: Each, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.

TERMS FOR 1890—THE UNION SIGNAL.

To Old Subscribers.

Single copy	$1.50
In clubs of 5 to 9 each	1.25
In clubs of 10 and over each	1.00
To ministers and reading rooms	1.00

To New Subscribers.

Only $1.00, whether in clubs or singly.

Clubs can be made up of both old and new names, but the full number of names required must be sent.

Trial Subscribers (Five Weeks) 10 Cts.

Other Papers Issued by the W. T. P. A.

The Young Crusader (juvenile temperance) semi-monthly edition. Single copy 50 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 40 cents; in package of 25 or over, to one address, one issue or assorted, 1c per copy

Monthly (Sunday School edition) single copy 15 cents; five to twenty-five copies, in package, each 1 cent; twenty-five copies or over, in package, at the rate of $1.00 per 100 copies, per issue.

The Oak and Ivy Leaf (monthly) organ of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union; single copy, 25 cents; in clubs of 10 or over, 20 cents.

"Missionary-ing?"

Dost remember the plan? Thus: Eight good books, extra good books, all readable, all thought inspiring; are worth $2.05 in money—a lot more in education. We send the whole lot, viz:

Frances Raymond's Investment	$ .50
Boys and Other Boys	.25
Girls of To-day	.25
Bob Gripp's Trophy	.50
Van and Vet	.10
Prove It	.10
Helping	.10
Unanswered Prayer	.25

for only $1.50 if—if—it is agreed that you will keep them moving among your friends and acquaintances. Seest? Now it means you can be preaching eight, good sermons on temperance, love, faith and purity without ever a bit of a congregation in front of you. Yea! Canst invest $1.50 in any way that will make a better impress or do more good? Nay! Have you been saying to yourself when urged to do something definitely good, "But what can I do?" Here is the answer. Try it; it's home missionary work. Over a hundred and fifty responded to the other notice of this import. Look, now! It counts up!

150x8=1.200x8=9,600!

9,600 what? Books or people? Well, you settle that. It is a straight case of the value of multiplied effort. So?

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

"The best is aye the cheapest."

Avoid imitations of, and substitutes for SAPOLIO. It is a solid cake of scouring soap. Try it in your next house-cleaning.

COPYRIGHT

REAL ECONOMY.

It is worse than nonsense to buy a cheap article with which to damage more valuable property. Scouring soap is at best only a trifling expense, but with a poor and cheap article it is likely to do considerable damage to fine marble or other property.

IT WILL COST YOU NOTHING TO LOOK!

WHEN YOU SEE THIS ADVERTISEMENT Write to us at once for our new 1890 CATALOGUE. Just Published. The Handsomest Catalogue of Musical Instruments in the World. Specially designed for CORNISH & CO. by a renowned artist. A CHARMING SOUVENIR. Illustrated in fancy colors by a new process.

The Manufacturers of the world-famed CORNISH ORGANS and PIANOS have determined to introduce their matchless instruments in every part of the civilized world where not already sold, and with that end in view, beg leave to submit the following offer—which is the most liberal ever made—for the consideration of the American Public, who always appreciate a genuine bargain and a good thing whenever they see it.

A WONDERFUL OFFER!

We offer you this first-class, brand new, High Grade, Newly Designed $75.00 PARLOR ORGAN (altered for Church or Chapel use when desired), the very latest in style and containing our Newly Invented and Patented Stop Action for the astonishingly low price of $35

Style No. 16, SWEET HOME ORGAN, (exactly same as this cut, taken from a photograph), Solid Black Walnut Case, 5 Octaves, 8 Effective Solo Stops, 8 Sets Orchestral Toned Reeds, Double Octave Couplers, New Tone Swell, Grand Organ Swell, all known modern improvements, making a Complete Parlor Organ, specially warranted for 10 yrs.

ORGANS UPON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN

TO SUIT ALL PURCHASERS. When not convenient to pay all cash we are willing to sell on easy monthly installments. An experience in Organ building of a "Quarter of a Century," coupled with ample capital, enables us to make better terms than any other house in America. There are many tempting offers made that are never carried out by irresponsible advertisers, but this old Established and Reliable CORNISH ORGAN AND PIANO COMPANY carry out their contracts to the letter. We refer to the First National Bank in our city, where we deposit thousands of dollars every day (except Sundays), to any of the Mercantile Agencies, and what is better, to the thousands of happy purchasers all over the world who are using our Organs and Pianos to their complete satisfaction.

WE WANT EVERY READER OF THIS PAPER TO WRITE TO-DAY

for our 1890 20 pp. handsome Lithograph Catalogues, containing much valued information for intending purchasers. Write whether you want to buy just now or not. We Can Save You Money. WRITE TO-DAY! Don't ever think of buying elsewhere until you get our Catalogue. This ad. will not appear again. Show it to your neighbor or cut it out. Mention Paper.

ADDRESS TO-DAY

CORNISH & CO. Old Established and Reliable WASHINGTON, NEW JERSEY.

NO MONEY Required Until After FULL EXAMINATION.

14K GOLD AND SOLID GERMAN SILVER.

Guaranteed Watch $3.75

The cases are made of a plate of fine 14k gold over the finest quality of German silver, making a case composed of nothing but fine gold covering finest quality of German silver. With German silver on the inside and 14k gold on the outside, we warrant the cases to be equal in appearance to a $50 solid 14k gold watch. They are open face, smooth bazine, finished to a dazzling brightness, dust and damp proof and warranted to wear a life time. Different from the cheap brass watches offered, the case contains nothing but gold and the finest quality of German silver, and in fact it is in every way, except intrinsic value, equal to a $50 solid gold watch. The movement is a fine 3-4 plate style, finely jeweled, polished pinion, oil tempered main spring which does not break, and all the latest improvements. A guarantee is sent with each watch that it will keep accurate time for 2 years ordinary use. OUR 90 DAY OFFER. That all may have this beautiful watch in their own hands and fully examine and see for themselves the value and running qualities of same, we will send it C. O. D. to your express office, with the privilege to examine it. All we ask is any business man in your city as reference that you are ordering the watch in good faith, and if found satisfactory you can pay the express agent $3 75 or when full amount is sent with order we give a fine gold plated chain and charm free. If not satisfactory you can refuse same and you are nothing out but your time in going to the express office. Knowing the fine qualities of this watch we make the above offer, as any one wanting a good time piece will accept same at once on examination. Order at once as our price will be advanced. Address WILLIAMS & CO., 125 S. Halstead St., Chicago, Illinois.

SENSIBLE WOMEN all want FERRIS' GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS.

THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.

Best for Health, Economy and Beauty.

BUTTONS at front instead of CLASPS. RING BUCKLE at hip for Hose supporters. Tape-fastened Buttons—won't pull off. Cord-Edge Button Holes—wont wear out. FIT ALL AGES—Infants to Adults. Sold by Leading RETAILERS everywhere. Send for Circular, FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers, 341 BROADWAY, New York.

MARSHALL FIELD & CO., CHICAGO, WHOLESALE WESTERN AGENTS.

PLAYS Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers, for School, Club & Parlor. Best out. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS: Samples free. 100,000 circulation. The Witness, Frankfort, Ky.

GOOD HEALTH BY THE "New Method."

Chronic Diseases Cured at Home

"The New Method in Chronic Diseases," by W. E. Forest, B. S., M. D., Fellow N. Y. Academy of Medicine, N. Y. County Medical Society, &c., &c. Book of 132 pages showing how much can be done without drugs in the cure of all chronic diseases. Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Constipation, Emaciation, Blood and Nerve Diseases, and Diseases of Women, etc. Far more comprehensive than the Hall Method. Price $2. Send for pamphlet.

HEALTH SUPPLIES CO., 710 Broadway, N. Y.

FOR THE Union's Devotional Life

see that it is supplied monthly with HANNAH WHITALL SMITH'S BIBLE READING LEAFLETS.

They are evangelical, full of a breezy, cheery religiousness, wonderfully simple and pointed. Twelve copies to one address, one year $1.00.

Address. Woman's Temp. Pub. Ass'n 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

L. T. L'S, ATTENTION!

We are now, for a short time only—till Oct. 1st—receiving new names to The Union Signal for half price—75 cents—per year. We also will have ready in December a beautiful picture of Miss Willard—a life size water color tint portrait of Prang's best work. You want one of these pictures for your place of meeting, it will be a source of pleasure and constant inspiration to you. We know you can easily obtain one, and if you will get us ten new subscribers to THE UNION SIGNAL at 75 cents each we will send the framed picture to you as soon as it is ready. We wrote to Mrs. Rice about this and asked her permission to present the matter to the Loyal Temperance Legions of the country and here is what she says in reply:

DEAR MR. HALL: This last plan seems to me, from my standpoint of the children's interests, the best of all. I am very desirous that Miss Willard shall be a reality to all our boys and girls, and I am enthusiastically in favor of having each L. T. L. company immediately set about securing her picture, in accordance with your offer. Her face looking down upon them at their meetings may be made a constant object lesson to impress upon these young hearts the blessedness of right living for themselves and of service for others. I trust you will give the children the opportunity to secure the picture either framed or unframed, according to the amount of work done.

Sincerely, HELEN G. RICE.

Will you bring this matter to the attention of your officers at once? There is no time to lose—the offer will not be held open a day longer than the time named. How can you get the picture unframed? By sending the name of one new subscriber and 30 cts. extra—$1.05 in all. The other offer is the best, however, as we shall have orders for thousands of the framed pictures and shall send out handsome and artistic frames with special W. C. T. U. designs thereon. We will send a book worth having to any member of an L. T. L. who will get from his or her officers a letter saying that they have been persuaded by —— (naming you) to try for the picture and that the Loyal Temperance Legion of —— will go at once to work to win the lovely prize.

Hurry, Hurry, the Time is so Short!

P. S.—If you want to, your Legion can send before Oct. 1st., $7.50 and have till Jan. 1st to get the names, which can be taken at 75 cts. or $1.00 (the rate after Oct. 1st), as you please. If taken at $1.00 your Legion would clear $2.50 and get picture besides! Think of that!

Bargain Prices.

Books, etc., soiled by having been sent to convention, or having some slight damage in binding.

	Regular Price.	Bargain Price
Ye Hatchet Partie,	$ .15	$ .07
Helping,	.10	.05
Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	.75	.35
" " " paper,	.40	.15
Romance Nineteenth Century	1.00	.35
Duties of Women,	.25	.15
Free Rum on the Congo,	.25	.10
Boys and Other Boys, paper,	.25	.12
Girls of To-Day,	.25	.12
Y Song Books,	.25	.20
Glorious Cause,	.30	.20
Birthday Books, plain,	1.00	.50
Birthday Books, gilt edge,	1.25	.60

Please name first and second choice, as we have only a few of some of the items. Secure your bargains promptly. They will not last long.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

For scalds use Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

300 Dollars
—IN—PREMIUMS

will be offered to Purchasers through H. C. F. KOCH & CO'S Illustrated
FASHION CATALOGUE.
A Guide of how to buy
DRY GOODS FROM NEW YORK

and have them delivered free of charge—when the order amounts to a specified sum—at prices guaranteed lower than from any other house in the U. S.

Published September 10, '90, and mailed free upon application; listing and illustrating, with over 2,000 lithographs and wood-cuts, everything needed for Ladies', Gents' and Children's wear and adornment; Housekeeping Goods, etc.

H. C. F. Koch & Co. IMPORTERS AND RETAILERS
6th Ave. and 20th St., New York.
In writing please mention this paper.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Best & Goes Farthest."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [63

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Caster, or Webster's Dictionary. 3½ lbs. Fine Tea by Mail on receipt of $2.
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P.O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

MOTHERS' PORTFOLIO. Instruction and amusement in kindergarten lessons, stories, games, etc. Best helps for parents. Grand Book for agents. Circulars free. Prepaid, $2.25. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

NOTICE.

The Records of Marion County, Oregon, show the platting of many thousand acres of land in small tracts of from 5 to 10 acres.

Capital City Fruit Farm of 640 acres, Sunnyside number 1,320 acres; Sunnyside number 2,140 acres; Sunnyside number 3,500 acres, and a number of others have been placed on the records by The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Oregon.

This Company is also doing business in Portland and Albany, and has for sale numerous other small tracts. The great advantage of this plan is that it brings together in one community the class of people who are all engaged in the same business, viz., fruit growing, consequently there springs up large Drying and Canning establishments similar to those in the city of Salem, which makes a profitable market for the fruit raised.

Consult your interests by buying of The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Portland or Albany, Oregon.

Agencies at which the Equipoise Waist may be found at Retail.

The Agents named in the following list are supposed to carry a stock of the different styles and sizes, and purchasers who patronize them will be as well served as if they ordered direct from the factory. Should they not have what you want insist upon their sending for it.

Massachusetts.

Boston	C. F. Hovey & Co.
"	R. H. Stearns & Co.
"	Jordan, Marsh & Co.
"	John G. Ford.
"	Isaac D. Allen & Co.
"	Houghton & Dutton.
"	W. P. Bigelow & Co.
Brockton	Edgar & Reynolds.
Fall River	R. A. McWhirr & Co.
Fitchburg	Nichols & Frost.
Gloucester	Fred Allen.
Haverhill	C. N. Rhodes.
Holyoke	Ferguson & Logan.
Lawrence	Dora F. Hall.
Lynn	Mrs. M. C. Gould.
Lowell	Mrs. N. L. Wheeler.
Monson	Miss Belle Niles.
New Bedford	Geo. W. Chace.
" "	Mrs. C. T. Johnson.
Newburyport	Mrs. S. E. Todd.
Northampton	A. McCallum & Co.
Salem	Mrs. L. T. Robinson.
Springfield	Smith & Murray.
South Gardner	Mrs. L. J. Merritt.
Westboro	Denham Bros.
Worcester	L. L. Pierce.

Michigan.

Battle Creek	B. Salisbury & Co.
Detroit	Newcomb, Endicott & Co.
Jackson	W. M. Bennett & Son.

New Hampshire.

Concord	J. Hazleton & Son.
Dover	A. E. Parker.
Franklin Falls	F. H. Gerry.
Manchester	F. W. Fitts.
Nashua	H. Cusson & Co.

Ohio.

Akron	John Wolf.
Cleveland	W. H. Quimby.
Columbus	Dunn, Taft & Co.
Salem	Chas. C. Snyder.
Sandusky	Kugel Bros.
Youngstown	G. M. McElvey & Co.

Iowa.

Cedar Rapids	W. K. Taylor.
Council Bluffs	E. J. Davis.
Davenport	August Steffen.
Des Moines	Younker Bros.
Sioux City	Frank A. Moore.

New York.

Binghampton	Sisson Bros. & Weldon.
Brooklyn	Liebman Bros. & Owings.
"	Mrs. L. Higham, 456 Fulton St.
"	Frederick Loeser & Co.
"	Wechsler & Abraham.
Buffalo	J. N. Adam & Co.
Elmira	E. D. Drew.
Hudson	E. F. Parmlee.
Lockport	Simon Bier & Son.
N. Y. City	E. J. Denning & Co., 784 Broadway.
"	B. Altman & Co., 301 Sixth Ave.
"	Lord & Taylor, 901 Broadway.
"	S. W. Richards, 66 W. 23d St.
"	Miss H. Freud, 72 W. 23d St.
"	W. I. Allen, 2 B, W. 14th St.
"	Jenness Miller Pub. Co., 363 Fifth Ave.
"	E. J. Bedell, 12 W. 14th St.
Rochester	D. A. Wightman.
Syracuse	Mrs. L. Lacy.
Troy	W. H. Frear.
Utica	J. H. Cutter.

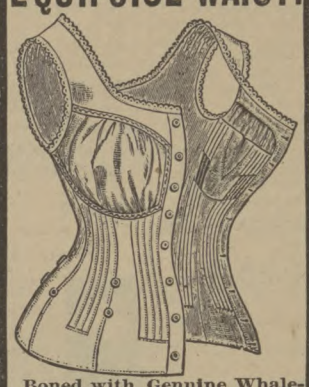
Connecticut.

Ansonia	W. H. Plumb.
Bridgeport	D. M. Read & Co.
Hartford	Geo. O. Sawyer.
"	Brown, Thomson & Co.
Meriden	Ives, Upham & Rand.
Middletown	J. H. Bunce.
New Britain	D. Miller & Co.
New Haven	Howe & Stetson.
New London	S. A. Goldsmith.
Norwalk	J. L. Ambler & Sons.
Norwich	F. E. Dowe.
Stamford	C. O. Miller.
"	J. H. Short.
Waterbury	E. T. Turner & Co.
Willimantic	H. E. Battey.
Winsted	Wm. Frank.

Maine.

Augusta	C. A. Libby.
Bangor	H. W. Durgin.
Biddeford	J. R. Libby.
Lewiston	Mrs. J. T. Lemont.
Portland	Owen Moore & Co.
Skowhegan	T. B. & J. A. Colby.

EQUIPOISE WAIST.



Boned with Genuine Whalebone. For Ladies, Misses and Children. A Corset, a Waist and a Corset Cover Combined. The Best Corset Substitute in the world. High Neck and Low Neck; Long Waist and Medium Waist; with Bones and without Bones; White, Tan and Black.
Prices 60c, 75c, $1.75, $2.00, $2.25, $2.50 and $3.00.
Bones removable without ripping.
Illustrated Catalogue mailed free to any address by the manufacturers.
GEO. FROST & CO.,
31 Bedford St. - - Boston, Mass.

Illinois.

Bloomington	Cole Bros.
Cairo	C. R. Stuart.
Chicago	Marshall Field & Co.
"	Mrs. S. W. Pike, 75 Madison St.
"	National Dress Improvem't. Ass'n, 157 Wabash Ave.
Decatur	Linn & Scruggs.
Jacksonville	Phelps & Osborne.
Peoria	Clarke & Co.
Quincy	Pollock & Murphy.
Rockford	D. J. Stewart.
Springfield	R. F. Herndon & Co.

Pennsylvania.

Allegheny	Boggs & Buhl.
Allentown	H. W. Hunsicker.
Altoona	Wm. F. Gable & Co.
Beaver Falls	John Paff.
Braddock	J. H. McCune.
Bradford	Mrs. R. T. Hotchkiss.
Butler	L. Stein & Son.
Connellsville	E. Dunn.
Corry	R. F. Livermore.
Erie	I. A. Forman.
Franklin	J. T. Campbell.
Greenville	N. E. Tillotson.
Harrisburg	H. Cohen.
Johnstown	Mrs. Jas. Quinn.
Lock Haven	G. B. Perkins.
McKeesport	Knox C. Hill.
Meadville	G. D. Trawin.
Parkesburg	Caroline E. Smith, M.D.
Philadelphia	Mrs. A. A. Smith, 1029 Walnut St.
Pittsburg	Jos. Horne & Co.
Scranton	C. F. Walter & Co
Sharon	Test & Co.
Titusville	Mrs. H. Newson.
Warren	J. F. Kertcher & Co.
Washington	Wm. Smith & Son.
Wilkes Barre	Jonas Long.

Missouri.

Kansas City	G. Y. Smith & Co.
"	Mrs. J. D. Newby, 1103 Main St.
Sedalia	Hye & Guenther.
Springfield	Chas. H. Heer, D. G. Co.
St. Joseph	Townsend, Wyatt & Young.
St. Louis	Wm. Barr, D. G. Co.

Kansas.

Atchison	Donald Bros.
Emporia	Strauss & Schlesinger.
Leavenworth	Bruns Bros.
Topeka	Stevenson & Peckham.
Wichita	Chapman & Walker.

Miscellaneous.

Atlanta, Ga.	Mrs. H. A. McLellan, 10 W. Ellis St.
Baltimore, Md.	E. Pohl & Co.
Black River Falls, Wis.	Jones Lumber & Mercantile Co.
Burlington, Vt.	Lyman & Allen.
Chattanooga, Tenn.	D. B. Loveman & Co.
Colorado Springs, Col.	Mrs. A. B. Belding.
Denver, Col.	Mrs. W. Lazell, 607 16th St.
Eau Claire, Wis.	Theo. Hoffman.
Helena, Mont.	F. H. Fowles.
Indianapolis, Ind.	L. S. Ayres & Co.
Jackson, Miss.	Lusk, Buckley & Boyd.
Lincoln, Neb.	Ashby & Millspaugh.
Los Angeles, Cal.	B. F. Coulter.
Louisville, Ky.	John C. Lewis.
Madison, Wis.	S. I. Ogilvie.
Memphis, Tenn.	Bella Levy.
Milwaukee, Wis.	T. A. Chapman & Co.
Minneapolis, Minn.	Minneapolis Dry Goods Co.
Mont Clair, N. J.	Mrs. A. Maynard.
Montpelier, Vt.	L. P. Gleason & Co.
Nashville, Tenn.	L. Rosenheim, Bro. & Co.
Newark, N. J.	Heath & Drake.
Oakland, Cal.	Mrs. M. H. Ober & Co.
Omaha, Neb.	S. P. Morse & Co.
Pasadena, Cal.	Mrs. A. K. Knox.
Passaic, N. J.	Wm. Abbott.
Pawtucket, R. I.	David Harley & Co.
Portland, Oregon	P. E. Brigham.
Providence, R. I.	B. H. Gladding & Co.
Rutland, Vt.	C. E. Ross.
San Francisco, Cal.	Mrs. M. H. Ober. 332 Sutter St.
St. Johnsbury, Vt.	Mrs. W. J. Sanborn.
St. Paul, Minn.	Field, Mahler & Co.
Washington, D. C.	Annie K. Humphrey, 10th St.
Wheeling, W. Va.	G. M. Snook & Co.
Woonsocket, R. I.	Vaslett & McCarthy.
Yankton, S. D.	Martha Cox.

If your city or town is not represented in the above list get your dealer to send for a waist for you, which can be returned if not satisfactory.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago,

AGENTS Wanted. Liberal Salary Paid. At home or to travel. Team furnished free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

SILK-SONGS SATIN & PLUSH pieces for Crazy Patch large, beautiful pkg. 10c. Pkg. BEST EMBROIDERY SILK, all colors, 10c. 100 Best SONGS words & music complete 10c. Any three articles 25c including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, $1. Adr. THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F," CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS. Give better satisfaction than any other. Are the best substitute for corsets.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. B. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO, BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it.
Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

JAPANESE BRIC-A-BRAC
Shipped to Church Fairs on Consignment; get our circulars.
THE FORMOSA,
86 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE LIFE ASS'N of AMERICA

is the youngest, the largest and most successful total abstinence co-operative insurance Association in the world.

It furnishes insurance which is both safer and cheaper than is furnished by any Co-operative Association without the Total Abstinence requirement,

We pay all valid claims in full. Are you a total abstainer? Then join us and help us to demonstrate to the world the value of total abstinence in prolonging life, and get your insurance where the cost will not be increased by paying whisky losses.

Write for circulars to
A. BONNELL, Sec'y,
Royal Insurance Bld'g, Chicago, Ill.
Liberal terms to Agents.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.
published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.
EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore
Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. It sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61st thousand. ☞ 75,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

Publisher's Notes.

1+1=2

Saturday, Sept. 27th, is the Crusade Day for Memberships.

All the locals of the nation are to meet in the morning for prayer, then district and canvass the town and report results at night. Go out two by two as in those sacred days of 1874. Secure your memberships

And get subscribers for The Union Signal.

"In the name of our God we will set up our banners."

Frances E. Willard.

Loyal Legioners!

Y. W. C. T. U.ers!

White Ribboners!

Hear! Hear! Hear!

Practically this is the last issue of THE UNION SIGNAL for announcement purposes before Sept. 27th. Membership Crusade Day is Sept. 27th, Saturday.

Miss Willard says "one plus one equals two," but if you say "one plus nothing equals one," you will have held back just that much of a kindly effort to help the wrongs of the world get righted. What do we want? We want you to take time enough to think over the names of your friends, decide which ones you will see, have ready sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL and also a fund of information about the W. C. T. U., and you will be ready to win to membership and UNION SIGNAL subscriptionship three-fourths of those you see. But we have found from writing a good many people lately, that they know almost nothing of the W. C. T. U., and the little they do know is perverted truth, obtained from political journals who never open their mouths about the W. C. T. U. without putting their foot of untruth in it! What you want is something compact, decisive and with just enough statistics so that you will be fully posted. We have a 25-cent book, called "The Handy Manual," over 450 pages, full of carefully prepared valuable tables, statistics and information of all kinds, but principally valuable at this juncture, because of its 16-page preface, giving just the kind of an outline you need for the canvass. It tells all about the W. C. T. U. and was written by Miss Willard. The time is so short that we have decided to

Send This Book Free of Cost to any one who will write in and say they will faithfully try for new subscribers and new members on Crusade Day. How can we afford to do this? We could not with an ordinary list of subscribers, but when a white-ribboner says, "I will do my best," we are sure of results. Send, then, for the book. Send at once. Ask for "The Handy Manual." One ounce of push from you this month will be worth more than a pound at any other time. Show the world that the miserable lies of the political press are flimsy bubbles. Rally around the banner that is set up for God, home and your country. Be alert. Be alive. Don't grudge giving a day to prayer and earnest effort for purity and the home. Be sure you are ready, then go ahead. Have sample copies of THE UNION SIGNAL ready for your hands, and the data from "The Handy Manual" in your head, and you can astonish the people with the earnest zeal that lives in the hearts of the women of the W. C. T. U. And—oh—

How Short the Time Is!

Let your answer be made at once, at once!

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

MR. J. LANE, General Manager G. S. & F. R. R., Says: "I was entirely relieved from Headache in fifteen minutes after using Bradycrotine."

MR. JAS. E. CLARK, Wilson, N. C., says: "Headache has lost its sting since my knowledge of Bradycrotine."

Beecham's Pills cure Bilious and Nervous Ills.

Van Houten's Cocoa, pure, soluble, economical.

THE KINDERGARTEN. A monthly for home and school. Science lessons, stories, games, occupations. $1.50 a year. 3 months 30 cts. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of imitations Notice autograph of
STEWART HARTSHORN
on label and get the genuine Hartshorn.

"The greatest labor saver of the age. Practical and Simple; every lady must have it."—Bazar.

100 PERFECT EYELET END Button Holes
in ONE HOUR on any material!
With the
EYELET BUTTON-HOLE ATTACHMENT.

Sent on Receipt of Price $6.00

Is easily operated on any sewing machine. Does strong, handsome and stylish work. Send for circular. In ordering, name your machine. If your sewing machine Agent does not keep it, address
EYELET BUTTON-HOLE ATTACHMENT CO.,
Lincoln Bldg., 1 Union Square, N. Y.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

THE PERFECTION Flour Bin and Sieve. No home is complete without it. Dispense with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops, sieves, etc. No scattering of flour; no apron or rolling up of sleeves needed. A few turns of the handle and you have enough sifted for a baking. It pleases everybody. No housekeeper will be without it after once using. Where we have no representative we will send the bin on receipt of price. To hold 100 lbs. $3.25; 50 lbs. $2.50; 25 lbs. $2.25. No goods sent C.O.D. Agents wanted. Sherman, Langenberg & Co., 491 & 493 Carroll Ave. Chicago.

ASK your dealer for Water Pails, Dairy Pails, Wash Basins, Cuspidors, Slop Jars, Table Mats, Slop Jar Mats, Etc. made from FLAX FIBER. Practically indestructible. Manufact'd by the STANDARD FIBER-WARE CO. Nothing will please you like this Plain and Decorated Ware. In use everywhere. None genuine without "STANDARD" Trade Mark on bottom. If your dealer does not keep it, send his address and we will mail you picture cards.

FREE

A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

Improve your home with our ATTRACTIVE WALL PAPER
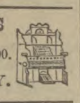
Remarkably low prices. Enormous assortment of styles. Honorable treatment. We can refer to hundreds of well-pleased customers in every section of the U S. Our prices range from excellent Lustre papers at 6c. a roll to elegant Iridescent Embossed Golds at 35c. For 8c. postage will send to any address, samples with borders to match. A. L. DIAMENT & CO., 1226 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BARLOW'S INDIGO BLUE.
Its merits as a Wash Blue have been fully tested and indorsed by thousands of housekeepers. Your Grocer ought to have it on sale. Ask for it.
D. S. WILTBERGER, Prop.
233 North Second St., Philadelphia, Pa.

SALESMEN WANTED at once. A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale & retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For terms ad. Centennial M'f'g Co., Chicago.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May. Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS ORGANS
$150 to $1500. $35.00 to $500.
Marchal & Smith Piano Co.,
235 East 21st St., N. Y.



CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO.,
Washington, N. J

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.
Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars.
Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

---

400 RECITATIONS and Readings, Bound in Handsome Lithograph Cover, mailed to any address for 30 cents. Stamps taken. Address J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,
181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper

DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

IN THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS.

No Malaria, no Mosquitoes, no Saloons. Best climate in the United States for all-the-year-round residence.

SPLENDID PROGRESS.

Started late in 1889 with no population or improvements, the development already made is surprising. Five factories are building, and several companies organized to build others. No booms, but steady, substantial progress. A knitting factory company is organized, the stock to be all owned, and entire business managed by women. It will pay large profits. Those who want homes in a "clean city," where the rumshop, brothel and gambling den are perpetually excluded, should buy soon, as prices are rapidly advancing.

PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

Stock in the Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Company will pay large profits. There are also good opportunities to make paying investments in several manufacturing enterprises. For full information address

The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS $35. ORGANS
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
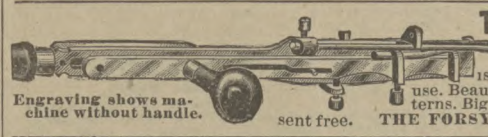
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.



Engraving shows machine without handle.

The Forsyth Combination Rug & Embroidery Machine is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalog and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn-st., Chicago.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover B'ossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents make $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med Co., 243 State st Chicago

---

Dr. R. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St. Chicago, Ill.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

---

MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME, NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure.
Read article in UNION SIGNAL June 5, page 13.
The GLOBE MEDICINE Co., Box 711, Cincinnati, O.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. CATARRH.
REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O.

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex. Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

FOR A 2c. STAMP
WE WILL SEND FREE TO ANY ADDRESS, A A TRIAL BOX OF . .
No Pain! No Poison!
A-CORN SALVE
REMOVES THE TOE-CORN EVERY TIME.
GIANT CHEMICAL CO., PHILA., PA.

RUPTURE
Positively cured in 60 days by Dr. Horne's Electro-Magnetic Belt Truss, combined. Guaranteed the only one in the world generating acontinuous Electric & Magnetic current. Scientific, Powerful, Durable, Comfortable and Effective. Avoid frauds. Over 9,000 cured. Send stamp for pamphlet.
ALSO ELECTRIC BELTS FOR DISEASES.
DR. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

(TRADE MARK.)
THE DR. OWEN Electric Belt AND APPLIANCES
Cures acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. It is a stimulant and tonic, and while curing one disease does not produce another. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian. THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO., 191 & 193 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted ba 75c; plain, 3... BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapo..., Minn. Agents wanted.

WANTED QUICK! FEW LADIES Will pay $5 to $10 per day to competent ones. Send Stamp for particulars. Indispensable Mfg. Co., 1712 Oregon-av., St. Louis, Mo.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.
Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.

The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin. For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W. H. McDoel, Traffic Manager, or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent, 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B. F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St. Richmond, Va.

MY WIFE SAYS SHE CANNOT SEE HOW YOU DO IT FOR THE MONEY. $12 Buys a $65.00 Improved Oxford Singer Sewing Machine; a perfect working, reliable, finely finished Sewing Machine, adapted for light or heavy work, with all latest improvements and complete set of attachments. A written guarantee for 5 years with each machine. Buy direct from manufacturers and save Dealers and Agents profits. Catalogue free.
OXFORD MANUFACTURING CO., Chicago, Ill.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express

A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at
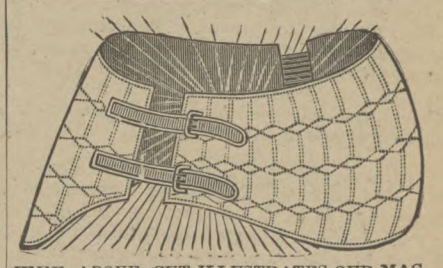
WHOLESALE.



THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

25c

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions of "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Signal Notes.

Dr. Butcher, a South Pierre, Dakota, druggist, convicted of liquor selling, was sentenced to sixty days in jail and a fine of $2,000.

The West side Chicago W. C. T. U. is placing a drinking fountain "for man and beast" on West Madison street, between Oakley and Leavitt. Much interest has been aroused by this union, in churches and among the public generally, in the matter of supplying drinking water as a temperance measure. It is hoped that this fountain will be only the first of many opened by the W. C. T. unions of the city.

With the view of checking the habit of smoking among the members of the Salvation Army, Gen. Booth has issued an order to the effect that no smoker can become, or remain a sergeant, bandsman, sergeant-major, secretary or treasurer, or indeed hold any office in a corps. "Smoking," contends the General, "is injurious to health, uncleanly, a waste of money, a disagreeable infliction upon others, and an unnatural habit of self-indulgence for which there is no justification."

Rollo Kirk Bryan recently closed his summer series of assembly engagements at Mont Eagle, Tenn., on temperance day at the beautiful Southern Chautauqua. Prof. Tate was present, and gave a [illegible] for national legal pro- [illegible] The Southern people [illegible] ception of our master[illegible] hibition. He says: "[illegible] are very cordial in their re[illegible] political faith."

The trustees of Dickinson College have through the munificence of a number of Philadelphians, established the "chair of the English Bible," and elected Prof. A. W. Rogers, of Philadelphia, to fill it. It is to be hoped that such a chair may soon be established in every institution of learning in the country.

In 1495 it was enacted in England: "Forasmuch as the Kynge's grace most entierly desyreth among al erthly thynges the prosperitye and restfulnesse of this his land and his subjects of the same to live quietly and suerly to the pleasure of God and according to His lawes. Yt be lawful to any of the justices of the peace within theyre authority to reject and put away comon ale sellyng in townes, and places where they shall thynk convenient, and to take surety of the kepers of ale houses, of theyre good behaving by the discrecion of the sayd justices, and in the same to be advised and agreed at any time of theyre sessions."

The Central and seventh ward unions of Elmira, N. Y., send the warmest commendations of the work of D. H. Burwell in that city. About sixty members were added to the W. C. T. U., and scores of young men and others who were older signed the total abstinence pledge.

On September 29, 1892, the order of Sons of Temperance will be fifty years old. In connection with the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus an effort will be made to increase the membership of the Eastern New York division to 20,000. If this is accomplished, the order will number on this continent over one hundred thousand.

All remember the Dockers' strike, London, and how the strikers so conducted themselves as to win respect and sympathy from all. An item in the British Woman's Temperance Journal gives the explanation. It says that the Dockers' Union has a flourishing temperance society, and that in many branch unions every man is a total abstainer. Out of one hundred and seventy branch secretaries, one hundred and thirty are pledged abstainers. The money saved from drink by these dockers has gone to make their own homes better instead of going to the publicans. At least a score of cases are given of unskilled dockers who this summer sent their wives and children for a week's outing by the sea, who while they drank, scarcely provided bread for their families.

Several branches of the "Girls' Helpful Society" were formed about a year ago in the neighborhood of Atherton, Tyldesley, Bolton and Leigh, Scotland, through the instrumentality of the branches of the British Women's Temperance Union in that section. Lessons in sick-nursing, cooking and dress-making were given during the winter season. The girls are given a picnic in the summer and social evenings in the winter. The Atherton branch numbers over one hundred and sixty members, and the weekly meetings are much enjoyed by the girls. The first hour of the evening is devoted to sewing and conversation, and then for the space of a half-hour innocent games are indulged in and thoroughly enjoyed.

EDUCATIONAL.

Education in American Homes.

The famous Chautauqua Reading Circle now beginning its fourteenth year has become a power in the land. Thousands of busy people are reading in home, shop and railway car. This winter English History, Language and Literature will receive special attention. The readings are by leading authors of the day. A woman writes: "I wish I had more time for study. I am a busy mother; our family numbers eight, and we have no servants. Still, where there's a will there is a way, and I often take my seat with knitting in hand and my daughter reads aloud." Address John H. Vincent, Drawer [illegible] Buffalo, N. Y., for full details.

Mrs. Ursula D Herrick 2419 19th st

MICHIGAN [illegible]ALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich. Opens Sept. 11, '90. [illegible], Preparatory and advanced courses of study. Fine advantages in Music and Art. Steam Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalogue No. E. ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

TODD SEMINARY FOR BOYS AND YOUTH 42d year commences Sept. 17, 1890. Boys from eight to eighteen years preferred—prepared for college or business. A delightful home—manners, morals and health carefully guarded. Address Rev. R. K. TODD, A. M., Prin., Woodstock, Ill.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON. A School of the highest grade on the West bank of the Hudson, 25 miles from New York. Preparatory Work for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 teachers. Full Courses of study. Steam heat, pleasant home, and absolute health. An endowment takes ladies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. Send for Catalogue. W. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION. The Chicago Polytechnic Institute is modeled after the London Polytechnic and People's [illegible] It affords instruction in all practical [illegible] including trades of all kinds, slöjd (free) [illegible] millinery and dressmaking. Being [illegible] charges are merely nominal. For [illegible] and cooking, [illegible] ne, address SECRETARY philanthropic, its [illegible] t. and Fifth Ave. free illustrated catalogue. LEGG, S. E. cor. Madison [illegible]

MONTICELL[illegible]O. New Buildings, New Furniture, New Pianos, New Equipments, Beautiful Situation. Opens Sept. 26. Full and Superior Faculty. Departments for English, Latin, Greek, German, French, Science, Music, Art, etc. Send for information to MISS H. N. HASKELL, Principal. GODFREY, ILL.

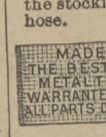
The St. Louis Hygienic College OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS. Will begin its Fourth annual course of instruction Wednesday, October 1, 1890. This is the only hygienic college in the United States; it is legally chartered and officered, and has a full graded course of three years. Men and women are admitted. Address for announcement, S. W. DODDS, M.D., 2826 Washington Ave., St. Louis Mo.

GRANULA The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

LADIES! Use only Brown's French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

Warren Hose Supporter OVER TEN MILLION PAIRS SOLD.

THE WARREN FASTENER has a ROUNDED RIB around the part which holds the stocking, and WILL NOT TEAR the finest hose.



WARREN HOSE SUPPORTERS ARE FOR SALE EVERYWHERE. Ask for them at the stores and BE SURE YOU GET THE WARREN, which may be identified by the FASTENER which has a ROUNDED RIB on the holding edges, and is stamped with the word WARREN. DO NOT BE DECEIVED by Fasteners which appear to have rounded holding edges, as the process by which they are made leaves almost a knife edge on the inner or holding surface, and they will cut the stocking.

The Warren is made in a great variety of styles for Ladies, Misses and Children, in SILK and COTTON WEBS.

Illustrated Catalogue of HOSE SUPPORTERS and CORSET SUBSTITUTES mailed free to any address by the manufacturers,

GEO. FROST & CO., 31 Bedford St., Boston, Mass.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY, BEECHAM'S PILLS For Bilious and Nervous Disorders. "Worth a Guinea a Box" but sold for 25 Cents, BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cancer PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF Cancer & Tumors Without the Knife. Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

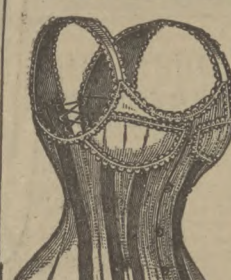
RISING SUN STOVE POLISH FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH, SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS. UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.

Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth Minn.

CHICAGO SHOPPING FREE. Send for circular. Mrs. Shergold, 3524 Lake Ave., Chicago. Ill.

GOOD HEALTH.



Lady Agents wanted for The THOMAS GOOD HEALTH CORSET WAIST. Thousands in use. Corded, Boned, Buttoned or clasped at front; will fit old ladies, young women and growing girls. Every lady wishing a beautiful figure and also comfort will buy The Thomas Good Health Corset Waist. HUNDREDS sent by mail to women unable to obtain them of our Agents. All mail orders promptly filled. THE THOMAS CORSET Parlors, 465 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS MEN OR WOMEN To sell Teas, Spices, etc., to families in towns and cities. NO CAPITAL REQUIRED. Also Salesmen to Wholesale Grocers to Farmers, Hotels, etc. No License to Pay. Good pay. Steady work. Janes Bros. & Co. Wholesale Grocers, 263 & 265 Wabash Av. Chicago.

"DELSARTE" Corset Waists and Brace are the best selling good made. Sold by Agents only. Exclusive territory Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York.

WANTED ACTIVE PARTY-SALARY $100—to represent ASSOCIATION to supply, at co-operative prices, general merchandise and articles for home and family use, in each small city, town and place. Paid up Certificates $100.000 CASH. 80.000 members. CREDIT WELL RATED. References Exchanged. Empire Co-operative Association (P. O. Box 1610) N. Y.

Bickford Family Knitter Knits everything required by the household, of any quality, texture and weight desired. A. M. LAWSON, 783 Broadway, New York.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES MAKE MONEY. $5 to $10 a day made by selling our INDISPENSABLE. Every lady should have one. Send three 2c stamps for conditions. INDISPENSABLE MFG CO., 1712 Oregon Avenue, Saint Louis, Mo.

$1.99 buys a $12.00 genuine Silverene STEM WIND Watch. Shipped C.O.D. and examination allowed before paying for same. Address The Nat'l Mfg. & Importing Co., 191 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES' BICYCLES All makes, new or 2d hand at lowest prices; easy payments, no extra charge. Cata. Free. Rouse, Hazard & Co., 77 G St. Peoria, Ill.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

"UNRIVALLED" "WORLD RENOWNED" IMPERIAL GRANUM

SAFE, NOURISHING, DELICIOUS, PURE FOOD THE GREAT AMERICAN DIETETIC PREPARATION FOR NURSING MOTHERS, INFANTS AND CHILDREN FOR INVALIDS CONVALESCENTS AND THE AGED. THOUSANDS OF UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIALS AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING SALES, PROVE A MERITED SUCCESS. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS. SHIPPING DEPOT, JOHN CARLE & SONS, NEW YORK.

LADY AGENTS Wanted for the VAN ORDEN CORSETS. Every lady wishing good health and a beautiful figure buys them. Quick sales. Good pay. Send for terms and circular. VAN ORDEN CORSET CO., 22 Clinton Place, N.Y.

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

INVIGORATING LAVENDER SALTS. (REGISTERED)

Our readers who are in the habit of purchasing that delicious perfume, Crab-Apple Blossoms, of the Crown Perfumery Co., should also procure a bottle of their celebrated Invigorating Lavender Salts. No more rapid or pleasant cure for a headache is possible. While leaving the bottle open for a few minutes, permits a most agreeable odor to escape, which purifies and refreshes the air most perceptibly. Le Folle.—Paris.

THE CROWN PERFUMERY CO., 177 New Bond St., London. Sold Everywhere.

AMERICAN Desk and Seating Co., Manufacturers. Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture. Send for Catalogues. 270-272 Wabash Ave., Chicago

TAKE AN AGENCY for the Best Utensil in the universe. DAGGETT'S SELF-BASTING ROASTING PAN Needed in every family. SAVES 20 Per Cent. in Roasting, and Bakes the Best French [illegible] the world. Address for terms W. A. DAGGETT & CO., Vineland, N. J. or Western Office, 114 E. Indiana St., Chicago.

THE NEW PENSION LAW grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent. Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH duplicating apparatus. Send postal card to A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, for descriptive circulars and samples of work.

WASHINGTON Write for information. New State and Town Jay Anderson Box 362, Seattle, Wash LILLIWAUP

This Boy is Blowing

Double bubbles, one inside of another, with that wonderful new toy, the "WIZARD BUBBLE BLOWER," Pat. June 10th, 1890. Boys or girls, men or women, can with the WIZARD, make an outside bubble larger than their heads, and another bubble inside of that which will float and be all colors of the rainbow; both bubbles will float in the air, producing effects unique, beautiful and grand; also produces twin bubbles, balloon bubbles, bubble chains a yard in length, and many other new forms. Orange Judd, the veteran editor says; "This new WIZARD BUBBLE BLOWER, excels in interest anything else I have ever found; it is a source of endless pleasure." Hundreds of other well known men say equally pleasant things about it. The Chicago Tribune says; "The WIZARD is a toy which delights youth and old age, and sets scientists thinking." Although only on the market a few weeks it is selling by the ten thousands. Furnishes a delightful new evening entertainment, and delightful amusement for Kindergartens or children in the home. One dozen, $2.75, for bubble parties. Don't use a nasty clay pipe any more. Bright boys and girls wanted for agents. Price 25 cents. If you don't find it at your store, send price to us and you will receive it with full instructions post paid. WILBUR PUB. CO., 226 & 228 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

We refer by permission to Geo. C. Hall, Publisher of this paper.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 39.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, September 25, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: Our Sisters at the Antipodes—From Nebraska—Last Call for Membership Crusade Day 8
SKETCH: Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew 9
WATCH-TOWER: 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, Sympathy, by Warner Snoad—Ernestine and Her Wayfarers, by Emily A. Kellogg—Bishop Thoburn, by Frances E. Willard 2, 3
CORRESPONDENCE: The Hour and its Needs—The World's Petition—Temperance at County Fairs—A Veteran Member—A Cheering Outlook—Information for Delegates and Visitors to the Annual Convention—A New Society—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
OUR BOOK TABLE: 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, A Secret—Our Suffrage Meeting—Our Daily Bread—Lend A Hand 6
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning October 5, 1890 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, Questionings—My Outing—Air, Pure or Putrid, Which? 7
QUEEN'S GARDENS: Brush—Vespers at Chautauqua 10
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Rhode Island, Maryland, New York, Nebraska, Indiana, Illinois, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Maine—Announcements 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Our Bill for a Commission on the Social Vice—Receipts for Temperance Temple 2
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT: 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES: 16

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

Boston celebrated her 260th anniversary September 17.

The Anti-Lottery Bill passed the Senate without a word of debate.

Jeremiah Rankin Johnston, D.D., editor of the United Presbyterian, is dead.

Prof. W. R. Harper has been elected president of the new Chicago University.

Dueling in the German universities has been abolished by order of the Emperor.

President Harrison signed the anti-lottery bill Friday; also the river and harbor bill.

Mr. Rockafellow has given an additional million dollars to the Chicago University.

The Organizer is to have a daily edition during the Indiana W. C. T. U. convention.

Emperor William, of Germany, and Emperor Francis Joseph had a meeting at Bohnstock last week.

Miss Jane Graydon, of Indianapolis, is the newly-elected Professor of Greek in Hastings College.

"China's sorrow," the Yellow River, has again flooded the province of Chihli, leaving 4,000,000 homeless.

The Mississippi Constitutional Convention has adopted manhood suffrage with an educational qualification.

Canon Henry P. Liddon, commonly considered by the Established Church the foremost preacher in England, is dead.

Threshing is now in progress in South Dakota, and shows the yield of wheat better than expected, averaging about fifteen bushels to the acre.

Reports from Ireland show the failure of the potato crop worse than at first reported; a recurrence of the famine of forty years ago seems imminent.

Emperor Francis Joseph has bestowed on Chancellor von Caprivi the Grand Cross of St. Stephan, the highest Austrian decoration, except the Golden Fleece.

The monument over the grave of John B. Finch, at Rose Hill, near Chicago, erected by the Good Templars of the world, was unveiled at Rose Hill, Wednesday.

The Christian Herald, New York, has rented the Academy of Music for a series of Sunday evening services during the remainder of the year, Dr. Talmage to be the preacher.

Bradstreet's summary shows a constrained condition of the money market, which the relief afforded by the Federal treasury's prepayment of interest has only alleviated, not removed.

A massive bronze statue of Horace Greeley, by J. Q. A. Ward, was unveiled by Miss Gabriel Greeley; it stands under the arch of the Tribune building. Chauncey Depew delivered the address.

Mrs. Mary R. Morgan, nominated by Nebraska Prohibitionists as state superintendent of schools, is president of the Nebraska Woman's Relief Corps of the G. A. R., and will receive many soldier votes.

The New York clearing house received from the subtreasury, Friday, $11,500,000, balance of the regular daily accounts. This money going into general circulation will help to relieve the monetary stringency.

Col. George R. Davis is unanimously elected Director General of the Columbian Exposition. President Palmer in introducing the new Director General to the commission added, "and may God help us to hold up his hands."

Although Representative Kennedy's speech against Senator Quay was much toned down when printed in the Congressional Record, the House Judiciary Committee has ordered it omitted from the permanent copy of the Record.

Miss Willard is having rousing meetings all along the line in Nebraska. Never was the work pushed with more vigor, and prospects of success brighten every hour. Demorest medal contests are playing an important part in the campaign.

THE Prince of Wales has been solicited to allow the opening of a saloon on his estate at Sandringham, and has again refused the request. He is not a teetotaler, but he is a Prohibitionist to the extent that no drink shop is allowed at Sandringham.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, is to have a unique exposition in its great Corn Palace Fair, which is attracting attention all over the country. An excursion train from Boston leaves October 1, spends the Sabbath in Chicago, and reaches Sioux City, October 7. On returning those of the excursionists who choose can take in the meeting of the American Board at Minneapolis. In connection with the Fair there is to be a grand temperance rally at which leading temperance speakers from different parts of the country have been invited to speak. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey, whose singing so touches every heart, are to sing, and well posted persons from all over the state will tell how prohibition prohibits in Iowa.

THE old Bay State wheels into line with the grandest Prohibition convention on its record. Its platform comes out squarely against license, all sorts of "regulating statutes" and the "lobby"; in favor of civil service reform, equal suffrage, arbitration, non-sectarian schools and farmers' rights. Dr. John Blackmer was nominated for Governor, with a full ticket of state officers. Henry H. Faxon offered $500 as a campaign fund to be expended solely in towns where the Republicans nominate candidates for the legislature who are not in hearty sympathy with prohibition The offer was accepted with enthusiasm, and through the stirring appeal of Brother Hector a campaign fund of over $4,500 was raised.

SEVERAL officials are received too late for insertion in their department, so we epitomize them here. Miss Jennie Smith desires all superintendents of railroad work to send her reports of work accomplished, also interesting items or incidents connected therewith at once, to Mountain Lake Park, Maryland. Mrs. F. E. W. Harper, whose letter will appear in full next week, desires that all reports of work among colored people be sent to her immediately, at 1006 Bainbridge street, Philadelphia. It is safe to say in general, that all National superintendents now wish all reports of work done in their departments, sent them by state superintendents, that their reports to the National may be as complete as possible.

THE Interstate Temperance Union, representing five states, which met at Lincoln, Nebraska, brought out the heaviest kind of guns, whose execution was felt for prohibition throughout the state. Chief Justice Horton, of Kansas; Attorney-General Goodwin, of North Dakota; ex-Governor Larrabee, of Iowa; Chaplain McCabe, of New York; Attorney-General Bradford, of Kansas, and Chancellor Creighton, of Nebraska, were the principal speakers. Great street meetings were held in different parts of the city Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and Governor Larrabee and Attorney-General Bradford spoke for the amendment at the state fair ground. The Personal Rights League had headquarters there, and distributed quantities of literature, but had not the courage to pit one of their speakers against those giants.

THE meeting of Columbian Exposition Commissioners which convened in this city, Sept. 9, has been a successful and harmonious one. Its session opened Tuesday morning with prayer, and its deliberations have been carried on in a dignified spirit throughout. The executive committee of twenty-six members was promptly appointed by President Palmer, and his choice is considered a very wise one; half the number are Democrats and half Republicans. The status of the lady managers was settled after some discussion; the board consists of two ladies from each state and territory, to be nominated by the state commissioners, one lady nominated by each of the commissioners at large, and nine ladies residing in Chicago. They shall be officers of the Commission, and perform such duties in connection with the woman's department as the executive committee shall prescribe. They receive six dollars for every day absent from home engaged in work of the Commission, and actual expenses of transportation.

EVIDENTLY there is not much discount on the W. C. T. U. out on the prairies of Nebraska. When the official board of the Methodist Church at Norfolk, Nebraska, heard that Miss Willard was coming there "as the guest of the W. C. T. U., of which society she is the National President," they sent her the following resolution, prefaced by "whereases" highly complimentary to "the most eminent woman in Methodism":

"Resolved, That we voice the sentiment of the entire church body in extending to Miss Willard a most cordial welcome to our city, and that we extend to her the freedom of all Methodist homes, and the full and free use of our church to occupy at her pleasure any part thereof during her visit among us."

The North Nebraska Conference in session at Wayne telegraphed Miss Willard to come and address them.

SAN JOAQUIN County California Prohibition Committee has a poet for chairman, A. J. Waterhouse; that he is also blessed with a level head is shown by his letterheads, which bear these sentiments:

Every new thought, every step forward that has ever blessed the world, has been thought wrong at first by a "vast majority." That proves nothing except that a vast majority is often wrong.

History demonstrates clearly that every movement of great magnitude, whether religious or political, creates its own instrument of successful operation.

No party will ever do right if you give it your vote when it does wrong; so the only way to do is to stand for the right simply because it is right, even if you stand alone.

A vote is an official record of a man's opinion on a public question. No voter ever throws his vote away. He has simply had the government record his convictions.

A WONDERFUL temperance demonstration took place recently at Eastnor Castle, the home of Lady Henry Somerset, president of the British W. T. A. It was projected and carried out by the Good Templars of the West Midland counties: Lady Henry Somerset, several months ago, kindly consented to the use of her beautiful grounds for the purpose; no one at that time imagined the demonstration would assume the proportions it did; yet the thousands were welcomed as gracefully and heartily as the expected hundreds would have been. Rev. A. Johnson and Mr. J. Poole presided at the meetings, while noted men and women occupied the platform and participated in the exercises. Many strong and eloquent speeches were made; none were more eloquent nor produced a stronger impression than that of the noble hostess. "I know no greater pleasure," she said, "than that the beauties of the home God has given me shall be shared to-day by such a goodly company. I am still more glad to welcome you in the name of our grand cause, and to feel that this is a day when we clasp each other by the hand and bid each other take courage in this great battle against evil—a day when men's and women's hearts will be strengthened by the sense of union which such gatherings bring us. As I look out on this vast assembly, I feel that hope beats high in our hearts; this gathering speaks of better things that are yet to come to this England of ours; it tells that the tide has set in which shall, before long, carry before it with irresistible force the great barriers which have so long blocked the way of temperance reform." She then passed on to the political situation in England as affecting temperance, handling it in a statesmanlike way, and closed with a glorious summons to take up this work of reform in the name and spirit of the Master. "We would gladly respond, though it be to bear something of the great suffering of humanity with which our Master was weighed down in Gethsemane's moonlit garden; our privilege it is to tread in His footsteps, who for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame. Sacrifice is the great law of love."

Contributed.

SYMPATHY.

BY WARNER SNOAD.

Nothing! some raindrops pattering fall—
(Praise God for the shower that comes at length).
Nothing! the cup of an acorn small—
(In an acorn's heart lies an oak's full strength).
Nothing! a plank thrown across a stream—
(The stream rushed out to the wild, black sea).
Nothing! a Château d' Espagne, a dream—
(Ladder to Heaven where angels be).

Nothing! a letter! a look! a word!
(See, through the clouds peeps the longed-for sun).
Nothing! a whisper but faintly heard—
(Hope ends the tale by Despair begun).
Nothing! the blessing that all can give,
Yet naught in the world 'neath God's broad blue sky
Can help us to suffer—to dare—to live—
Like the subtle magic of Sympathy.

London, Eng.

ERNESTINE AND HER WAYFARERS.

BY EMILY A. KELLOGG.

"A poor wayfaring man of grief
Hath often crossed me on my way,
Who sued so humbly for relief
That I could never answer nay.
I had not power to ask his name,
Whither he went or whence he came,
Yet there was something in his eye
That won my love, I knew not why.
* * * * * *
"Of Me thou hast not been ashamed.
These deeds shall thy memorial be;
Fear not, thou didst them unto Me."

"Now, Ernestine, sing some of your own delightful songs. This is our last evening together, and I must not keep you singing my old-fashioned hymns."

"No, grandmother, because it is our last night let us keep to the sweet, old-fashioned hymns that we can sing together. Is it not strange that I never knew 'A Poor Wayfaring Man of Grief,' before I came to you?"

"Not so very strange, dear. Your parents both loved it, but your father, you know, is no singer, and your mother went to sing on high before your young voice was trained to song. It is a family hymn, and is yours by right of heritage."

"Yes, I am sure it is. It has entered into my very heart. Grandmother, do you not think that my father's life sings it forth, even though his lips are not tuned to melody?"

"You have sounded the keynote of your father's life. He sees in every weary one the image of the 'Man of Sorrows,' and that plea is all-sufficient to insure his tender helpfulness."

"May it hereafter be the keynote of my life!"

The close of the next day saw Ernestine far on her way home. A young woman of rare common sense, she made of traveling as easy and comfortable a matter as possible. Upon this night she rolled along in the luxurious Pullman, in tranquil happiness, the reflection of that last twilight hour with grandmother. It strengthened and lulled her to sleep.

She slept late in the morning, and her first waking moments were greeted by the wailing of infants. She lay still, vaguely wondering where the babies could be. She was sure that she saw none the night before. She had as quick an eye for a baby as an artist has for a sunset. None passed her unnoted. She judged that her little neighbors were both ailing and neglected! How strange that there seemed to be no comforting and soothing response to their cries. She was soon up and dressed. Passing down the aisle, she located the cries behind the curtain of section six. Mingled with the wailing of the children were the groans of a woman in distress.

"Porter," she asked, "who is in section six?"

"A sick woman and two children."

"How sick is she?"

"She seems to be pretty awful sick, miss."

"Who is taking care of her?"

"Nobody."

"Nobody! How is that? Isn't it your place to do that?"

"Oh, lady! you ought to see them, yourself; you'd see that we can't do nary thing for them."

"Well, let me see them."

"Oh, no! lady, I didn't mean that. You'd better not, lady."

"Well, I mean it. Come."

She resolutely led the way and he attended her. He parted the curtains and Ernestine was appalled by the repulsive exhibit of poverty and distress which greeted her. Her eyes had never beheld such a scene, her nostrils had never been so stifled with noisome odors. Upon the berth a woman in unwomanly rags and unwomanly dirt tossed in a fever. She seemed almost unconscious of the cries of the two wretched children, and paid little attention to them as they crawled over her.

"What can be done?" exclaimed Ernestine.

"You see, miss," said the porter, "that we can't do nothing. It's just as I told you."

"Indeed!" she cried. "I see nothing of the kind. Where there is such misery as this, something can always be done. Please bring me at once a towel and some water."

"What you goin' to do, lady?"

"I will at least bathe the face and hands of this poor sufferer."

"Oh, lady, don't! You'll catch the fever, and you'll git yo' pretty dress all spoilt."

"I'll run that risk. Bring me two towels and I'll make an apron of one. Make haste."

The porter scurried off and this young woman dropped the curtain and hastened to take from her hand-bag a wash-cloth and pins. Holding her breath as she leaned over the sick woman, she bathed face, neck and hands by a few deft, rapid movements. She then touched them lightly with fragrant and cooling bay rum. Her patient closed her wild eyes with a sigh of relief.

"Now for the babies," she said, "poor little wretches! Porter, have you plenty of towels and pillow-cases?"

"Yes, miss."

"Bring me a half-dozen each, some soap and a large pail of water. Let it be very warm, almost hot."

The once unwilling porter, now her most devoted lackey, hurried away for supplies, and Ernestine hastened to her own seat for a respite. As she leaned forward with her face at the window, breathing in the sweet air and sunshine, her happy twilight hour with grandmother came very close to her, and, with a heart-throb she said, "These are my wayfarers." Softly, under her breath, she hummed,

"I ran and raised the sufferer up,
Thrice from my hand he drained the cup,
Dipped and returned it running o'er;
I drank and never thirsted more."

Upon her return she found the sick mother sleeping, but tossing heavily, and drawing the sharp, quick breath of fever. She took the six-months-old baby in her dainty arms and carried it to the bath. The pitiful tears streamed from her eyes as she relieved the tortured child, and placed her in the warm bath. This evidently unfamiliar luxury was accepted with the utmost delight. The little one crowed and laughed in glee, splashing the water about with both hands. To this defrauded little one was restored what is every baby's rightful heritage, a lovable and kissable cleanliness. She fretted and fumed not a little at being taken out of the bath, but Ernestine only laughed and patted her into quiet, wrapping her in the big towel and giving her warm milk to sip. A decidedly unique toilet was then constructed from pillow-cases.

Absorbed though she had been, our young woman had become conscious of the sensation which she was causing. In the first heat of her indignant astonishment at finding the real condition of affairs, she had supposed that every one in the car would feel as she did, and that there must be some good, motherly soul on board, who would at least aid her by counsel and sympathy. A glance had shown her that there were only two other ladies on the car, neither of whom had come near her, and when she passed down the car, they glanced curiously at her, and then quickly and studiously looked out of the window. The porter in one of his hasty interviews had confided to Ernestine that each had a pet "pug" in the express car, for which she considered him responsible, and that they worried him,unceasingly, about them.

"They are powerfully be-twiddled about them two pups, miss. I wish to goodness they'd left 'em to home. Some women loves pups and some women loves babies, and I say give me the women what loves babies, every time."

But if Ernestine's fellow women were indifferent, her fellowmen were far from being so. They evidently sided with the porter, and the "woman what loved babies" was the object of undivided interest. The porter brought her various messages and offers of assistance. So when Miss Baby was fully robed and Ernestine was ready to bathe the two-year-old, she turned to the gentlemen for aid in the care of No. 1, for to ask a favor of "the women what loved pups" was too repugnant to her feelings. She would give her masculine sympathizers an opportunity to show their devotion to the cause.

With the clean and shining infant on her arm she passed down the aisle, saying, "Which of you gentlemen will hold this baby while I bathe the other one?"

The ardent sympathizers suddenly shrank back in dismay and laughingly hid behind their newspapers. Giving a scrutinizing look around, she marched up to a benevolent looking man and said, "Here, you look fatherly and kind, you may have her," and depositing the child in his reluctant arms, turned her back upon the crowd of sympathizers and betook herself to her second task.

"Well," ejaculated the "kind and fatherly" bachelor, "if I had been told that any woman living could wheedle me into playing baby-nurse, I should have been willing to bet my last dollar that it could not be done. '

"And the worst of it is that there was no wheedling about it. That girl is a born general, if she does wear silk petticoats. She has outgeneraled you, and by direct attack. Who is she, I wonder?"

"I'm sure I don't know, but I mean to find out," said a third. "I think I might be willing to train under her banner."

"Not I," said the baby-tender, "if babies are the regulation impedimenta in her army."

Meanwhile "the general" was again at work, and with No. 2. By dint of plenty of soap and water and much soaking and scrubbing she brought to the surface a considerable amount of human skin. The warm and gentle rubbing proved so soothing to the tired child that Ernestine had to hasten the toilet. The sturdy boy drowsily objected to being "sacked" and the style of his sister's pillow-case toilet was somewhat varied to permit greater freedom of limb. His head soon drooped and sank into

"That gracious hollow, which God made
In every human shoulder,
Wherein He meant some tired head should rest."

Ernestine laid him on the seat and sought the gentleman who held Miss Baby.

"Now I will relieve you of the care of the child," she said, "and thank you, too, for your kindness."

"You're welcome to what little help I've rendered," responded he. "I'm sure the youngster will welcome a change of nurse; but let me carry it for you," and he marched down the aisle in Ernestine's wake.

"The little general in silk petticoats takes the field every time," chuckled his next neighbor, upon his return. "You couldn't march better if you had been in training for years."

"Even raw recruits respond to the leadership of a gallant chief," was the spirited reply of the victim.

The "gallant chief" just at that moment was feeling as if all her valor had fled. She was aching in every muscle with the unusual strain. Her sympathies had been most powerfully moved and her delicacy of sense severely tried. She could not have believed beforehand that she could undertake such a task, or that she could go through it so bravely. It simply had been impossible to do otherwise, living as she was upon that spiritual upland to which her precious twilight hour had lifted her. She leaned wearily back upon her pillow, and with the tiny one upon her shoulder, sang softly,

"Who sued so humbly for relief
That I could never answer nay."

"Thou poor little wayfarer," she sighed, "thou didst well to make thy plea in the name of Him who said, 'Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me! ' Closing her eyes, she, too, fell into a doze.

"Hush, look," said the man who had so unmercifully joked his fellow-passenger, "did you ever see a prettier sight?"

"It is 'The Sleeping Madonna,' " said the one among them who was an artist. "I must secure that" He drew out tablet and pencil and while he sketched, the men gazed with tender thoughts which made them, for the time at least, more pure and manly.

But Ernestine soon roused, and laid the baby down. Two hours of quiet sleep refreshed the occupants of the pillow-cases. In the mean time the "general in silk petticoats" having removed her insignia of toil, summoned a council of war to determine her next movement. She learned from the conductor that the unfortunates had been put on the car at some way station, no one knew just where or by whom, and the woman had been too sick to tell her tale of wretchedness, or to give any account of herself. She had in her hand, when they found her, a railroad ticket and sleeping-car ticket through to the end of the line. The fatherly baby-tender and several other of the gentlemen joined the council and discussed the probabilities ahead. The matter resolved itself into sending the party to a hospital upon reaching the city.

They were now nearing the city, and the usual gathering together and bustle absorbed all. The "women what loved pups" besieged the good-natured porter, ordering him to be ready to bring their pets to them at once.

"After humans comes pups, lady," he responded. "When we've got these sick folks in a kerridge I'll see to your dorgs. They'll keep." The ladies fumed and fretted, but to no avail. Ernestine looked up from collecting her belongings to find the gentlemen who had joined themselves to her council of war, waiting to bid her good-bye.

"We want to ask the privilege of bidding you good-bye in friendly fashion," said one. "We regret that our ways must diverge, and would thank you in the name of humanity for all you have done to-day."

Ernestine frankly gave them her hand in parting, thanking them for their sympathy and support. She gladly availed herself of their offer of service and placed the wayfarers in their charge, that the hospital application might be carried through to a successful issue.

When seated in her own carriage she was startled by the sudden re-appearance of the "fatherly" man.

"I want to give you a personal word of thanks," said he, "for the invaluable service you have rendered me to-day. You have reconstructed my ideal of womanhood, on the self-same lines where my blessed mother builded in my boyhood days. You have forced me to do some pretty serious thinking, and I thank you for it."

The happy tears sprang to Ernestine's eyes as she warmly grasped his outstretched hand, and said, "And what of your ideal of Christianity, my friend? For my service, to-day, has all been done 'in His name.'"

"I see," was the response, "that I have yet to do some more serious thinking. Good-bye."

Chicago.

BISHOP THOBURN.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

"James, Bishop of India," is the title he would have were he a Roman Catholic, but a Catholic he is in the very largest sense of that great word. The whole world is his parish, and to act in the name and inspiration of Jesus Christ, is his religion. He is now about fifty years of age, right in his prime, has a somewhat slight but well-knit figure; a grave, benign, and intellectual face. He speaks in the most off-hand conversational manner without a scratch of manuscript; his brain is like a brimming cup. Seldom does one hear a more vital, thought-provoking sermon, and he is even better in a popular address. His most peculiar trait is that he talks straight to the level of everyday life—duty and opportunity. I never met a person more in touch with the world's work and workers. It was my good fortune to hear him a few Sundays ago in Evanston, where he spoke at our W. C. T. U. gospel meeting in Union Hall.

In introducing him I said: "The Baptist Church counts Judson as its most illustrious missionary name; the Presbyterians have their Coans and Jessups; the Congregationalists their Gulicks, but the brightest name in the missionary annals of the Methodist church is Thoburn. Brother and sister, they will stand there, side by side, generations after we are all gone from this world, those two earnest hearts that went out thirty years ago from Ohio to India as pioneers."

In coming forward, Bishop Thoburn in his witty way remarked that I was right in naming him as from Ohio, for he was reared in the Buckeye state, "but in reality," said he, "I am an Irishman, born of Scotch parents; though indeed and in truth I am a heathen man but not a publican, and my real country is that great empire at the antipodes, where I have joyfully invested all my active life."

Let me now try to sketch from memory some things he told us in the sermon and address to which I have referred. He talked about everyday Christianity; what a practical thing it is, and yet how theoretical we have been inclined to make it. He said (I quote only from impression): "I lately stood beside the electric dynamo of a steamer on Long Island Sound. 'Take that hammer,' said the engineer. I went back a few steps and held out the hammer toward that tremendous shaft. The attraction was so great that it drew me forward toward the center with all its mighty power. 'Take that key,' said the engineer, 'and put it on the end of the hammer.' I did so, and the key was firmly held. 'Now, move away from the dynamo,' he said; I did so and the key fell from the hammer, having in itself no magnetic attractiveness whatever. It had only borrowed from the dynamo a little portion of its mysterious force, and so when the hammer and the key were both beyond the circle of the central power they were only pieces of iron. So it is with the Christian; he must keep near that divine dynamo, Christ, so that by His heavenly power he can lead other men to a Christian life. We bewail the fact that our children go out into the world, delight themselves with dancing, cards, the theater, and wine, but this only proves that there was not the strong, centrifugal force in their homes; not enough drawing power in our lives who gave them being, and who brought them up, to overcome the drawing power of the great world, and so gravitation has set the wrong way. There is no trouble about the dynamo;—if we will keep near enough it will so permeate us with its magnetic qualities, that we cannot help drawing others to ourselves and thence to Christ. A young minister said to me, 'If I keep right on as I am now, attracting, I shall within five years gain the best church in the conference.' 'And what of that?' I asked. 'Why, is it not a laudable ambition?' he replied; 'does not God help those who help themselves?' 'No,' I answered, 'let me give you a far better motive and the true working hypothesis of a life. God helps those who help other people;—all other success is temporary and false, but a success founded on the sincere desire to help other people is as solid as granite. Nobody can upset it; nobody can steal it away, and it will be worth as much in other worlds as it is in yours.' The great question is, after all, a simple one: 'Who has seen Christ in you to-day?' You can apply it all the way along, from the greatest dignitary whom you meet, to the girl in the kitchen, and if he only had brains enough to know, the dog on your doorstep.

"'Blessed is he that considereth the poor.' A deaconess in England told me what this passage meant to her, and the exegesis of what she gave was worth a trip to London to hear. She said that it is so much easier to give to the poor than to 'consider' them. To do the latter we must get down by the side of them; we must go into their houses; we must rejoice in their joy, and sorrow in their grief. They have problems that would tax a philosopher to solve, and they bring only a moderate amount of brain power to the solution. They need the forces of the best intellect, as well as the best heart to help them out of their distresses. We have not yet made ourselves part and parcel of the great humanity that beats its life along the stony streets. We have talked at rather than to them. We have sent rather than gone to their abodes. Sometimes we serve them best by taking from, rather than adding to their means of life. The prophet of God permitted the widow to give him all that she had left, and she was more blest in giving than if he had provided for her a sumptuous meal. What is needed is that we make common cause with those that we help.

"Now about the missionary work; it is a very practical thing. It begins in the circle of one's own heart; radiates out into the society around us, the commonwealth in which we live, the nation that we love, and is only limited by the great round belt of the whole earth itself. There is no distant and no near in these days. When I went to India it took one hundred and twenty-seven days, but now I can go from New York to Calcutta in twenty-seven. Christian civilization and Christian progress have, by their inventions, blotted out the one hundred extra days. My parish includes over three hundred million men, women and children. These hands have baptized within the last year, persons representing eight nationalities, and stretching over an area so great that it is as if I should say I had, in that space of time, baptized converts in Spain, France, Italy, Austria, Holland, Germany, Scandinavia and Russia. The world will be converted out of doors and not inside the churches. One hundred millions of persons will sleep out of doors to-night unless they lie down in the shade of some hospitable tree. The glad tidings were first declared under the open sky, and we shall never get ahead of the Great Teacher's method. In the larger part of the world the climate lends itself to this proceeding. The outdoor gospel is bound to win.

"The other day as we passed along on the cars I saw a village of about fifteen hundred inhabitants, with three church spires pointing toward heaven. I had reason to believe that not more than five hundred people would attend those churches next Sunday, and I said to myself, if the young men and women will go with me to India I will give them their choice of fifteen hundred villages, in which no soul has yet heard the name of Christ, as their parish, and in five years I will promise them, judging from the past, five thousand converts for each village. It was not so at first, but there is a geometric rate of increase in our results. The Oriental people, once suspicious of us, are now our friends. In any issue between us and the government they take our side; but I am not here to complain of the British government; it has been most friendly and helpful to us missionaries, and loyal as I am to our blessed stars and stripes, it is my opinion we have much to learn of the English concerning the best methods of government. Their civil service is so well conducted that such a thing as malfeasance in office is almost unknown. The judges are above reproach, and the good common sense of that great British nation is administering affairs in India to the unspeakable advantage of the population. It is only on such questions as the legalization of the liquor traffic, and the social purity movement, that we are at odds. In these particulars there is a decided growth of Christian sentiment, and we are full of hope for future improvement along these lines. When the Salvation Army came to India it was a novelty. The police officers in my own city of Calcutta arrested its young lady captain, and put her in jail. This stirred our spirits, for if a reputable young woman could not speak on the streets, it would not be long before we missionaries would not be allowed to conduct our services. So we started our petitions against this action of the police, and among the first ones visited was the chief Church of England clergyman in Calcutta. He said, 'I do not know about this street preaching; would never dream of joining in it myself, but upon my word if anybody said I shouldn't, I think I would go out on the next corner, so here is my name to your petition; the right of free speech is sacred, whether out of doors or in.'

"We held a great meeting in which, among dignified Oriental leaders, present in large numbers, Keshub Chundersen was chief. There was no end to the amount of eloquence and zeal; so much so that we ministers had very little to say and the government gave up its opposition altogether. Whenever we circulate a temperance petition, it is signed with practical unanimity by the temperance population. The temperance movement is so great that its tidal waves beat on all shores. When the crusade started in this country in 1874 it started in Calcutta, and two good women from Ohio were its leaders. We men were afraid to have our wives go out into the worst streets of the city, but this was what they determined to do, since a thousand English sailors are there and are a prey to the men and women whose support depends upon them, but these ladies were treated with the utmost respect, and did a great work among these generous hearted, friendless men. Ten years later, at Benares, I was recognized by a railroad official who was one of the rescued at that time, and who told me with tender gratitude that it was a turning point in his life when the crusade women spoke to him of Christ's gospel. We need to guard against the use of opium as well as against the use of alcoholics. Our great curse in India is opium, and you will have it so here if you do not watch that point. In my opinion there will be a general spread of the opium habit in this country in proportion as the alcoholic habit declines, unless you temperance women educate public opinion along both lines simultaneously.

"Women are becoming a great power in missions, as well as in temperance work. More than one hundred women are in the field in Calcutta and its suburbs alone; they outnumber the men. They go forth two by two in their quiet, level-headed ministrations, and it is my belief that before many years they will outnumber men all through our foreign missions.

"A few years ago two good and capable women came from Australia; they said they were going to found a mission. 'Why, what man will be at the head of it?' was our natural question. Odd enough sounded their reply, 'We will take the leadership ourselves.' There were some misgivings, as this was a movement wholly unlooked for, but these women conducted their mission so wisely that they gained universal respect, and in a few years went back to Australia to bring out a company of women helpers, all of whom have gone forward in the most satisfactory manner with their work. There is great apathy on the part of good people concerning the reforms to which ardent hearts are so devoted, but we must work on all the same. Above everything else we must be patient. There are great numbers of people who, by the law of their minds, must hold to that which is ancient, just because it is ancient. There are in India good men, kind men, who absolutely believe it to be a disadvantage that the British government has abolished the suttee,—i. e., the custom by which the widow was bound to be burned on the funeral pyre of her husband. To us this seems inconceivable, but those men never have known anything else for generations, and when one considers the wretched existence that a child widow drags out in India, he is better prepared to estimate the possible advantage of the quick transit to some other, perchance, better world. More and more as the years go on women will devote themselves to these child widows. It is believed in India that these unfortunates are responsible for the fact that their boy husbands, whom, perhaps, they never saw, met with an early death. This monstrous belief has been entertained so long that it has become second nature with the Hindoos. Multitudes of earnest young men and women will gladly come from English-speaking countries to help free these pitiful little slaves, and they cannot put in their lives where they are needed more; they cannot follow Christ more closely or more truly. I believe that within a hundred years paganism is to fall, and that Christian womanhood will be a mighty power in bringing about this heavenly consummation."

I feel the utter inadequacy of this attempt to recoin a few thoughts from the teeming brain of Bishop Thoburn. He is a figure unique and great in missionary annals; a wise and fearless Radical, in spite of so many years spent in the fog of the most oppressive conservatism; a devout believer in the affirmative side of the woman question, among a people that debases womanhood below the brute; a brother-man, of strong and hearty sympathy, in spite of official dignity and pride; the common people hear him gladly,—he is the greatest street preacher in Christendom, and leads the movement for woman's complete ecclesiastical emancipation. Heaven bless the Bishop! Long may he work, and win, and walk the path of life to make it glorious!

Rest Cottage.

Correspondence.

THE HOUR AND ITS NEEDS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—What are we as an organization and as individuals most in need of at the present time, to the end that we may be fully equipped for the conflict before us, and that our beloved union may be increased in numbers, in power, and in efficiency for the Master's work to which we are called?

First, in common with all other societies which are seeking to do His will and to hasten the coming of His kingdom in the hearts of all mankind, we need a deeper, more utter consecration of ourselves, our all, to His work and will, a giving up of self and selfish interests to the great work before us. We need the burning conviction wrought into every fibre of our being that this is really and truly work for God and Home, just as much as anything that can be done.

It is not a "side issue." It is not a comparatively unimportant matter which can be postponed indefinitely. W. C. T. U. work should not be put off until the last day, at the eleventh hour and then be met with "too tired to do it." "I forgot" is never an acceptable excuse from a white-ribboner.

We need earnestness of purpose; a steadfast determination that no matter what the obstacles in our way, with God's help, we will conquer or die, will conquer though we die.

We need a holy enthusiasm, an intense love for the principles that we have espoused; a deep-grounded conviction that we are surely right, and therefore must succeed. I am stirred to the very depths when I hear one say, with a woe-begone and limp expression, "I don't know that we'll ever succeed; there is so much opposition, we can't expect to do much." Why, of course we'll succeed. We're bound to win. Opposition is good discipline for us. "The blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church," and those engaged in this cause must expect social and political martyrdom. Can we expect to win in such a contest, yet rest on "flowery beds of ease?" Nay, nay; of those who espouse this cause some will wade through "bloody seas" ere the end comes, as some have already done. Was there ever a great reform that did not go through persecution to success?

"Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer though they die,
They see the triumph from afar,
By faith they bring it nigh."

Faith and works must go together—faith without works will never overthrow the rum power, trample out vice, and take the world for Christ.

We need to have a pride in organization, a jealous love for the standard—that feeling which impels a body of soldiers to die to the last man rather than desert their colors. The little knot of white ribbon should be as dear to our hearts as the cross of the Legion of Honor to the heroes of France, as the Grand Army badge to the remnant of our Republic's defenders; and, like that, it should be displayed upon every occasion.

We need to be fitted with grace, furnished with all the fruits of the Spirit, and girded with strength from on high, to prepare us for the bitter conflict that is before us—for such it is, and even more bitter will it become before the end is reached. We wage our warfare "against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places;" therefore, we need the "whole armor," that we may stand fast and firm, and be not overcome by our powerful adversaries. One of our greatest needs is careful, painstaking attention to details; a realizing sense that to sustain any organization, certain business forms, and, sometimes, tiresome details, must be attended to promptly and properly. These are eminently necessary, and cannot be put off if we wish success in "the King's business" that "requireth haste." If we take care of little details the great matters will adjust themselves. Frequent mass-meetings here and there, although all right and needful, will not do our work. Local unions must follow the meetings with careful, systematic work, to gather up, crystallize, and use to the best advantage, the sentiment created, to unite the scattered influences into a powerful whole, which, through organization, can make itself felt.

We should never miss an opportunity to invite others to join our ranks; should always have the pledge card and white ribbon at hand, and secure members whenever and wherever possible, being "instant in season and out of season," zealous, earnest, enthusiastic, persistent, determined to succeed, come what will.

We need to study carefully, thoughtfully and prayerfully our marching orders, as laid down in the Word of Life; there we shall find counsel to aid us in every difficulty, and statements so clear as to dispel every doubt, and nowhere within its pages shall we find that we may compromise with evil for a price.

We need to study carefully our own literature that we may become thoroughly acquainted with the origin, object and methods of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and with the different phases of the temperance and prohibition questions. Study to be "approved workmen," and ready to give at any time an "answer for the hope that is within us" of our ultimate success. One thing, the earnest perusal of our official organ, THE UNION SIGNAL, is especially necessary to the education and inspiration of every white-ribboner. I cannot understand how any W. C. T. U. woman can hope to be successful, and not read that paper. It is like unto a local president expecting to succeed, to inspire and lead her union to noble achievements, while she absents herself from executive meetings and neglects committee work. Show me a woman, earnest, consecrated, enthusiastic, well posted concerning our different departments, and well up in all the phases of our work, one who knows what is going on in our ranks, as well as in our enemy's camps, one who is always hopeful and full of resources, inspired and inspiring—utterly unstampedeable—show me such a one, and we'll show you one who reads THE UNION SIGNAL, and makes strong intellectual growth thereby, and invariably the woman who is hopeless, apathetic, and listless in the work, is the one who "can't afford" to take THE UNION SIGNAL, or perhaps, taking it, "can't get time to read it."

Sisters, we have a "high calling" in this work. Let us "lay aside every weight" of needless labor and unnecessary toil, together with the sin of gossip and idle conversation which profiteth nothing, and give the time thus saved to the perusal of our Bible, our UNION SIGNAL, and such works as will best fit and prepare us for the race before us. If we must economize let us not commence by cutting off the supply of brain food found in our literature. Let us, rather, do without some article of personal or household adornment, but fail not to adorn our minds with the wisdom found in our own best paper, which grows better and better from week to week.

Let every officer, every superintendent, strive to become a specialist in her own department; and let every member study, work and pray as if success depended upon her individual efforts. Above all things, "be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of the great multitude arrayed against you; for the battle is not yours, but God's," and while we toil on in faith and hope, let us remember that

"Though Right seems ever on the scaffold
Wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future,
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadows,
Keeping watch above His own."

MARGARET B. PLATT.

Washington, D. C

THE WORLD'S PETITION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—To Miss Alice Briggs, Miss Willard's office secretary, whose hand touches with Christian magic so many lines of our work, has been assigned the proper arrangement of petitions for presentation to the rulers of the Nations. While mailing her a package of these to-day, I could but notice how few were the signatures attached, though the gathering of several weeks; yet a wail of sorrow because of the liquor traffic is heard the wide world over.

Prostrate before God women are crying, "My husband, my son—O God, Thou knowest. I cannot speak it—have mercy for thine own Son's sake!" What are the wives and mothers doing? Is theirs the prayer of faith? and are works (for their own, and for others) united therewith? "Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." Works are the spontaneous offerings of love, often even to sacrifice, and "Though we may have all faith so that we could remove mountains, and have not love, we are nothing." If love abounded; if sacrifice were joyous; and these were linked with faith, would we not reach to the uttermost parts of the earth for the overthrow of the home curse which presses so heavily?

Our own country is but a small portion of the domain where the sale of intoxicants and narcotics is legalized; our people but a small part of those for whom Christ died, but may not our appreciation of this sacrifice for our own salvation, and our gratitude therefor, be measured by our effort for the extension of His kingdom?

The World's petition is co-extensive with the liquor traffic and epitomizes the desire of every true Christian for its prohibition, yet some unions, both local and state, have taken no part in the work, though they have been repeatedly addressed.

Last week, leaders in mission work, fired with love to God and a dying people, assembled at Indianapolis to consider the evangelization of the world in a single generation. Our round-the-world missionaries emphasize the oft-told story that alcoholics and narcotics are almost insurmountable obstacles to the progress of the gospel in heathen lands. What complement then, what supplement to the hoped for evangelization, might the World's petition prove, if diligently circulated and conscientiously signed by every Christian woman of the Nation.

"Awake, awake, Deborah," lest the curse of Meroz be repeated "because we come not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty." The rather let us labor until we may sing, "Praise ye the Lord, for the avenging of Israel, when the people offered themselves willingly." "So let all Thine enemies perish, O Lord; but let them that love Him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might."

Petitions with all needed instruction can be had by application to the American secretary of the World's W. C. T. U., MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE.

Ravenna, Ohio.

TEMPERANCE AT COUNTY FAIRS.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—As we can all read every day in the papers, and as I have it with very special suggestiveness instanced here around me, in a settlement of inveterate Irish Democrats, the farmers are waking up and breaking loose and taking in new light. Now, therefore, is the time to ply them with our true light on the drink and the traffic. Nowabouts, at the fairs, expositions, and palaces, the greater portion of them can be reached by lip and leaflet, by tongue and tract. Into every house should go a whole "corpus doctrinæ," a comprehensive, tidy and taking presentation of the case for total abstinence and prohibition. If funds will allow of only part of the case, I would recommend, as the most "fillin' at the price," TIMELY TALK, 16. But a much more thorough prescription is this: Take of the National Temperance Society's Tracts, numbers 265, 264 and 83, "Timely Talks," numbers 19, 18, 16, 4 and 17; and of the "Prohibition Bombs" now called "Reason." these: "Prohibition the Remedy for Hard Times," Colonel Bain; "Latest Evolutions of the Temperance Reform," Miss Willard; "Has High License Failed?" E. I. Wheeler. Two numbers of the "Reason" series are specially suited for Catholics, one, Bishop Ireland's great Chicago lecture, docked of its high license tail, and the other, brainy Bishop Spalding's article on Prohibition. There ought to be, but is not yet, that I know of, a special tract exposing the venality and rascality of the press at the bid of the traffic's boodle.

Would it not be a beautiful and beneficent scheme, at the county and state fairs, when curiosity is pretty well sated by having "seen about all there is," to spring on the crowd a particularly well-prepared Demorest medal contest? Of course the young elocutors should be the most attractive and capable to be found,—and who can measure the results of this condition if it is properly seen to,—and the selections should be plain, strong, eye-opening information, and appeals to sense, humanity and conscience. Dr. Johnson on "Prohibition in Politics," Miss Willard on "The Latest Evolutions," Mrs. Lathrap on "The Liquor Traffic in Politics," or Dr. Talmage on "High License," could be delivered by four of the contestants, speaking in due succession; Colonel Bain on "The Remedy for Hard Times," or W. C. Conant on "The Dramshop," by three others, and very good as an eighth recitation would be any one of these independent pieces: "Dat Bier ish not Gut," "The Sparrow Must Go," Gough on "Moral Suasion," Colonel Cheeves on "A Third Party," or J. C. Ambrose's "Deacon's Sunday-School Sermon." At the close of the contest, leaflets giving the addresses just delivered would be very eagerly accepted, and even bought at one cent each, and so the good influence might be spread indefinitely.

The easiest and surest means to gather the crowd, and very helpful to keep it, would be singing. That, by this time, anyhow, almost nobody needs to be told. But even yet quite many need to be told this: the crowd we have to gather and enlighten and convert, are still practically total strangers to our notions and aims, and repertories of hymns and songs. Therefore we need to mitigate as far as we can the too utter novelty of what we wish to do with them, going from the known to the unknown. A much larger portion of the people will hear us gladly if we sing, for a start at least, to airs they know, "The Sweet By and By," "Auld Lang Syne," "Yankee Doodle," "Kate Kearney," and so on. That word so awful with the æsthetes, "vulgar," designated at the beginning what is of the "common people"; small loss it is if æsthetes grin, so we save the people! There is the seed of a thousand conversions in one number of the "Friendly Talks" issued by Mrs. Grubb, of Lawrence, Kansas, at $1.25 per thousand. MARTIN MAHONY.

Marysbury, Minn.

A VETERAN MEMBER.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Connecticut, always a little proud, is holding her head up a trifle higher than usual just now, as she claims the honor of possessing the oldest member of the W. C. T. U. in the country.

A few days since I went to organize a union in New Preston, Litchfield county, that county which is celebrated for having the steepest hills, the most beautiful lakes, the best air in the state, and for giving to the world that trio of B's—Bellamy, Beecher, Bushnell, and a Harriet Beecher Stowe.

While there I called upon an old lady, a relation of one branch of our family. She seemed interested in my work, and I inquired if she would like to join the W. C. T. U. "Why, yes," she replied, "what do I have to do?" I explained. Whereupon she rose, went to the room adjoining and brought her membership fee, and I had the pleasure of tying on the white ribbon. Her name is Mrs. Betsey Averill, New Preston, Conn. Her post-office address, Washington Depot. She is only 103 years, 4 months old, is remarkably bright and active, insists upon making her bed, caring for her room and clothes; eats anything, reads with glasses, keeps up in the news of the day; and more wonderful still, she had, the day before I called, ridden down one of the steepest hills of that hilly region, more than a mile, to the church of which she is a member, to partake of the communion. She said she frequently did that. She is really more active than her son seventy-one years old. She presented me with her photograph taken when an hundred years old. Four generations reside under the same roof. Can any state match this?

MRS. S. B. FORBES.

Hartford, Conn.

A CHEERING OUTLOOK.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—When, after a long absence, we return to the scene of former labors, we are apt to notice great changes; but it is not always one's privilege to see such desirable evolution as has greeted me in returning for the first time in eight years to my home in Iowa. We expect in eight years that boys will become men, that girls will ripen into womanhood. We expect to find a new house here and there, and to miss the face of some loved one. These changes are according to the course of nature; but to find the hills leveled, and their sites covered with streets paved, lined with handsome residences; to find cable and electric cars where one left country roads; to find water-works with abundant supply of clear, pure water, instead of cisterns and windmills; to see the plain wooden churches supplanted by handsome stone ones; to find grand opera house, immense business blocks, fine hotels lining the streets; to find one's old friends grown wealthy without losing any of their warmth of heart,—these are out of the ordinary. More still to pass down through the then principal business streets, and where in the olden time scores of low saloons and gambling hells were situated a few rods apart, to look in vain for a single saloon; to see no sign of liquor or miserable gang of loafers around the doors of a groggery,—all this is blessed. Perhaps prohibition does not altogether prevent. I am told there are "holes in the wall" here, but there is a vast change for the better over eight years ago.

Perhaps prohibition does ruin trade and cause grass to grow in the streets, but certainly the object lesson of the phenomenal prosperity before me to-day bears no evidence of such dire effect. One lot that could easily have been bought eight years ago for $1.500, sold a short time ago for $50.000; another has sold for three successive years for $5,000 advance each sale. Men who could not have commanded $200 for any kind of enterprise eight years ago, are to-day living in palatial residences, driving a span, and counting their money in hundreds of thousands.

Many who were strongly opposed to prohibition, and voted against it, are its warm advocates to-day.

I would not be understood to say that prohibition is the cause of all this prosperity, but that it has not prevented it. One section of the city formerly devoted to houses of prostitution is to-day clear and clean. These curses, together with their twin evil, the saloon, and also the gambling dens, have been removed across the river into Covington, Neb. No wonder Nebraska is roused to the need of driving these accumulated evils from her borders. God grant her success in her present struggle.

SUSAN S. FESSENDEN.

Sioux City, Ia.

INFORMATION FOR DELEGATES AND VISITORS TO THE ANNUAL CONVENTION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—From the "Call" made in THE UNION SIGNAL of a late date, I find that I am expected to give all necessary information concerning the entertainment of delegates and the price of board at hotels and boarding-houses. I do earnestly hope that I shall be able satisfactorily to execute the commission given me, and if I do not succeed, be sure my errors will emanate from the head, not the heart. I do want the convention of 1890 to excel in interest and far-reaching results any that has ever preceded it.

To further this desirable end, I would suggest that all delegates should send their names and addresses to me as soon as possible, and, if any expect to stop with friends and relatives they will state that fact also, that the work of assignment may be commenced. As regards the boarding-houses and hotels, I desire to state that the three first mentioned are nearest to Trinity Church, where the convention will hold its sessions.

LIST OF BOARDING-HOUSES AND HOTELS.

The Grant House, Mrs. Archer, proprietress, Whitehall street, charges $1.25 for three meals and lodging per day.

Brunswick House, Miss Latimer, proprietress, Whitehall street, charges $1 per day for three meals, or 75 cents for two meals.

Mrs. Barker, 426 Whitehall street, charges $1 per day for three meals and lodging.

Mrs. A. L. Winter, 33 North Forsyth street, charges $7 (seven) per week; less time, $1.25 per day.

Talmadge House, Mrs. Talmadge, proprietress, Walton street, charges $1 to $1.50 per day for three meals and lodging.

Markham House, charges $2 per day, and the Kimball, which is under the same management, charges $2 and $2 per day.

These are only a few of the many places of public entertainment; I give those nearest the church and the street-car lines, and I hope no one will stay away, because they fear they cannot be entertained. Atlanta will give all a warm southern welcome to our sunny Southland, if, by that time "the melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year." We desire by any and all honorable means, to make the National Convention, which is to be held in the Gate City of Georgia, a complete success, and we earnestly pray, each day, that it may be the grandest reunion of North and South, East and West that has ever been witnessed in these United States. I shall most cheerfully respond to any and all questions that may be asked on the above subjects.

MRS. M. L. MCLENDON,
Chairman of Com. on Entertainment.
117 Washington St., Atlanta, Ga.

A NEW SOCIETY.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Wimodaughsis is the name of a society recently incorporated at Washington, D. C., the object of which is to secure National Headquarters for Women. It aims to erect a building at the capital, containing a library, reading room, parlors, gymnasium, art gallery, committee and assembly rooms, etc., which shall be worthy of the women of the Nation. To secure funds stock is issued, the shares being five dollars each. The project has the support of many members of the W. C. T. U., Miss Willard, Mrs. S. D. La Fetra and others having identified themselves with it. Temporary rooms will be taken for the winter, but their exact location has not yet been decided upon.

Rev. Anna H. Shaw, of Illinois, is president, and Miss Mary Desha, of Kentucky, is secretary. Miss Desha being from the South, many Southern women have been interested through her efforts, and the women of the North and West will have to look to their laurels or the South will take them as being most responsive to this enterprise. Wimodaughsis has members from every section working harmoniously together, and is in this respect thoroughly national.

Subscriptions for stock are invited from all; also contributions to defray incidental expenses which must be met but which the directors are unwilling to pay for from the capital stock. Remittances can be sent to Emma M. Gillett, treasurer, 802 F St., N. W. Washington, D. C.

Our Book Table.

The KINDERGARTEN commences its third year with the September number, celebrating its birthday by doubling its size and introducing new departments, notably those of the Primary Sunday-school and Our Nursery. Among the contributors this month are Baroness von Marenholtz-Bulow, Edward G. Howe, W. N. Harlman, Helen E. Starrett, Lucy Wheelock and many others. Emily A. Kellogg, who has been one of its editors from the first, severs her editorial connection with it, but still contributes to the KINDERGARTEN. Maria G. Nutting, a missionary of Marden, Turkey, expresses the feeling of many mothers and teachers when she writes to the editor: "I do not know why I am writing you, unless it is because I keep feeling grateful every time my little magazine comes, * * * and I have been increasingly glad, for it is so solid full of good, helpful things, ideas and suggestions." Alice B. Stockham Publishing Co., Chicago. $1.50 per year.

CHRISTIAN LIVING. By Rev. F. B. Meyer. Published by Fleming H. Revell, New York and Chicago. Price 50 cents.

This beautiful little book is a real, practical help in Christian living, showing how to bring Christ into our every-day life. It leads us beyond the imitation of Christ, to the appropriation of Him as our wisdom, our righteousness, our sanctification and redemption. It shows how it is a higher blessedness to be able to say, "I am His," than to say "He is mine;" that the indwelling presence of Christ comes through fellowship with His sufferings, obedience to His will, confession of Him as our Saviour, and dwelling in love. It brings out the unrecognized duty of loving people whom we cannot like, neglecting which we miss much of Divine education. The work of the will in Christian living is strongly brought out; the conditions and the certainty of God's guidance; the work of the Holy Spirit in us and in the world, and how we can be strong in the Lord and for His service. As the author says: "There is no need for us to live in a cold and Arctic zone, if only we fulfill the conditions here set down. We may not always be equally buoyant, or equally exuberant, or equally responsive, but we shall never lose the bright, glad consciousness that we are loved by the Love that spared not the only-begotten Son."

LITTLE MISS BOSTON, a Christmas story, by Mrs. Harriet A. Cheever, comes to our table from the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society, Boston and New York. This is a capital story of child life under difficulties. Little Tid, its heroine, when too little to remember her own mamma, finds herself the drudge of two viragoes, Marm Hitchins and Mrs. Lunt, slave to the caprices of their two big babies. But she is far too enterprising to remain in such conditions, and when but a "little mite," five or six years old, we imagine, set up house-keeping all alone by herself in a church which she found conveniently open, when fleeing from the undeserved wrath of Marm Hitchins, took unto herself a name, Bessie Boston, "'cause everybody ought to have two names," and had many delightful adventures. She is a genuine child, though a precocious one, endowed with an uncommon amount of practical sense, and her story is told in a most winning way. We heartily commend the book to wise parents who are beginning in season to collect Christmas presents. $1.25.

PATRIOTISM. By Rev. H. W. Bolton, D. D. Published by the Patriotic Publishing Company, 108 Washington street. Chicago. $1.50.

We welcome every effort to inculcate a love of country, and that is the design of this volume. Its author is one of Chicago's best known pastors, noted for his power to kindle enthusiasm in a good cause, and to vividly set forth the great truths he loves. In this book are collected several of his most popular addresses on patriotic occasions, at the Centennial, on various Decoration Days, and in memory of many of the Nation's heroes. Besides these are admirable chapters on live themes of the day, Danger Signals, America for Americans, Education, Our Heritage of Noble Names, and many others. His pen pictures of some of the men whom the world honors are wonderfully graphic. There is Samuel Adams: "He wore no badge of honor, no insignia of rank, held no high office, nor did he seek the applause of men. He is the theme of no special epic, he towers not in sculptured bronze. And yet, Samuel Adams was so tall he could be seen across the Atlantic, and so mighty that Britain's haughty king trembled whenever he chose to speak. He was the greatest of the world's agitators. . . . He was the man of the town meeting, that Puritan ante-type and prophecy of the republic soon to be. How he wielded those gatherings! Had he been a barrister in Choate's and Webster's day, their triumphs would have been few and lonesome. He was a good man. Morally, he was a tower of strength. The radiancy of his righteousness illuminated the most distant colonies. He would rather die than be enslaved, or see his country enslaved. How he dared the red-coats to do their worst. But they would no more have touched him than Israel would have touched the ark, after Uzzah's tragic fate. . . . He was the father of the Revolution. He focused the discontent of the colonists, and drew the fire of George III. He was the greatest of pre-revolutionary heroes."

All who wish to be informed concerning the present status of the American Board should read Cyrus Hamlin's article in OUR DAY for September. This veteran missionary sweeps away the cobwebs so diligently spun by the new theology, and shows how, if it should gain ascendency in the Board, missionary work would soon come to an end. Joseph Cook's review of the Pan-American Congress is masterly; he calls for an International Congress during the Columbian Exposition, to supplement and carry on the work mapped out by the Pan-Americans. His "asides" concerning the location of the Columbian Exposition are funny reading at this late day. The editorial notes on the Brussels Conference on the slave trade and the rum traffic are valuable, and we hope all of our readers will read and ponder them. Miss Willard gives the latest report from Pundita Ramabai's school in Bombay, and Professor Stuckenberg contributes a timely article on "Religious Movements in Italy." OUR DAY Publishing Company, 28 Beacon Street, Boston. $2.50 per annum.

Dr. Charles M. Andrews, of Bryn Mawr College, will publish in the October number of the "Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science," an interesting article on the "Beginnings of the Connecticut Towns." The constitution of 1639 has a wider than local interest, since it was the first written constitution, the prototype of republican government on this continent. It is a question of no small importance, therefore, whether the constitution was founded by the towns as such, or by the people. This is the question discussed by Dr. Andrews. A painstaking study of the facts leads him to the conclusion, in opposition to the late Alexander Johnston and many others, that Connecticut drafted its organic law on the theory "that the sovereignty of a state is in the people of that state."

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS.

MATILDA B. CARSE.

All white-ribboners, Prohibition brothers, and the boys and girls of the Temperance Legion, in fact, all who desire to help build our beautiful Temple, should send at once a two cent stamp to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, and secure a Temple bulletin, descriptive card and mite-box. They will then know how to go to work to help the building fund of the Temple.

* * *

Mother Thompson's memorial fund goes steadily on. Mrs. Philita Pierson, Lakeman, Mo., aged eighty years, mother of our eminent white-ribboner, Dr. Bessie V. Cushman, sends a gift of $5 for the Temple, $1 of which is to go to the Thompson memorial. Mrs. L. Aten, Wellsville, Ohio, and Mrs. J. M. Graham, Winnipeg, Man., each send $1 to the fund. The W. C. T. U. of Oskaloosa, Iowa, and that of Waldoboro, Me., each send $1 for the memorial.

* * *

The Loyal Temperance Legions are at work nobly for the Temple. The Dallas, Tex., Loyal Temperance Legion sends by its superintendent, Mary D. Hetherington, $16.50, and pledges $100 to the fund. The Streator, Ill., Loyal Temperance Legion sends $6 for autographs. A large number of other Loyal Temperance Legion have sent in small sums of money. We are sorry that we have not room in this column to mention them by names. Their names with amounts will be found in our treasurer's—Miss Pugh's, report.

* * *

It is exceedingly gratifying to find how much interest there is among persons outside the white ribbon ranks, in regard to the building of the Temple. Miss Thalheimer, Cincinnati, O., sends a check for $20 for the building fund, from the Wellesley College Christian Association. Lida A. Lightcap sends $5. She writes: "It is money earned by my Sunday-school class of ten boys. They want placed in the corner-stone of the Temple the following: 'Class 15, Presbyterian Sunday School, Morrisonville, Ill.'" One dollar comes from the colored Sunday-school of Waverly, N. Y. Mrs. J. W. Knapp, president of the union at Waverly, incloses the money, and says: "You have no idea of the time and sacrifice to these poor people this little gift represents." Mrs. M. A. Dorsey, of Dallas, Texas, sends for a number of mite-boxes for distribution among her own and Mrs. Orr's Sunday-school class.

* * *

Mrs. Mary C. Johnston, Warsaw, N. Y., sends $32.50 for the union. Mrs. Johnston is superintendent of Temple work and is evidently the right woman in the right place. She is hard at work to raise their pledge of $100. She sends in a Baby Band of 150 names, and writes: 'I assure you I look forward with much pleasure to seeing the Temple, in whose interest I have walked so many miles."

* * *

Maude Bowman, of Brookfield, Mo., a little girl fourteen years old, sends a full Baby Band of 105 names, accompanied by a check for $10.50. She writes she is much interested in the Temple. Surely the dear child has shown her interest by this work of love. Mrs. L. L. Hubbard, Lake City, Minn., sends $31.50 for the union, of this amount $10 is for a full Baby Band, and $8.50, for the autographs of the Loyal Temperance Legion, which numbers eighty-five. Mrs. Shiner, of N. Dakota, sends $4.30 for a Baby Band of forty-three names, gathered by Mrs. S. C. White. Before the feet that had gone about such loving service for the Master had finished their task, she was called to tread the golden streets. Mrs. N. D. Nelson, Maysville, N. Dakota, is another noble worker; she has raised a full Baby Band numbering one hundred and five. Grandma Stoner sends sixteen more names for her Baby Band.

* * *

In sending a little gift of $4 on her birthday to the Temple fund, Mrs. H. L. Reed, of Burbank, Ohio, writes: "I am delighted that our magnificent Temple is no fancy thought, but has become a beautiful reality, for as the months go by the white-ribbon army becomes more and more interested." This is, indeed, true. The gifts are coming in with such rapidity, we can only mention a few of them in the small space allotted us. Mrs. Hammond, of Wayne, Ill., called on our treasurer a few days ago and handed her $100 for the Temple. George Woodford, the eloquent defender of temperance, has been in the city for a few days, and also handed our treasurer his check for $100. Mrs. Lars Norem, Rushford, Minn., sends a check for $100, in memory of her beloved husband, who died in Europe six years ago, and also in memory of her dear and only son, aged twenty-seven, who died only three weeks ago. Mrs. Emeline Smith, West Haven, Conn., sends a check for $100. Mrs. A. V. Woodman, La Porte, Ind., sends $22; she says it is a gift from interested persons in La Porte. A generous-hearted white-ribboner in Ohio, who does not desire her name to appear, sends a check for $25, which completes her gift of $100. She writes: "I am so thankful and rejoiced to know that work is being prosecuted on the beautiful Temple. I fully believe that it will bless all nations of the earth; its influence will be unlimited for good."

* * *

All money orders and checks for the Temple should be made out in the name of Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle Street, Chicago, National treasurer, and treasurer of the Temple fund. All information in regard to the Temperance Temple should be addressed to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, Pres. Woman's Temperance Building Association.

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

Our Children.

A SECRET.

BY LIZZIE M. HADLEY.

"I'll tell you something," says little Belle,
"If you're certain, sure, you'll never tell.

"Well, then," whispers the little maid,
"My papa, a great, big man, 's afraid."

"Oh, isn't that funny enough?" laughed Sue,
"Your papa's afraid, and mine is, too.

"Not of bears or tigers or bumble-bees;
It's something a thousand times worse than these.

"It's a terrible thing, that goes up and down
Through every city, village and town.

"And my papa says he almost knows
That things will be ruined wherever it goes.

"Yes, isn't it dreadful?" says Belle, with a sigh.
"It will swear and, papa says, steal and lie.

"I s'pect it has horns and cloven feet;
And, Sue! what do you s'pose it will eat?"

Then closer together drew each little maid,
Looking about as if half afraid

They might see this thing with cloven feet,
And find it liked little girls to eat.

And then they fancied they heard it roar,
As it gobbled them up and cried for more.

"Oh, its name," cries Belle, "is so dreadful, too;
Does your papa call it 'Republican,' Sue?"

Sue shakes her head. "Oh, it can't be that,
For my papa calls it a 'Democrat.'"

—Boston Journal.

OUR SUFFRAGE MEETING.

BY MRS. L. J. HORNER.

Mamma was sitting in grandpa's big arm chair, the one with the flat arms that uncle gave him Christmas. She had just finished reading an article on suffrage in THE UNION SIGNAL. Sixteen-year-old Frank was reading a poultry paper; he is greatly interested in poultry nowadays, and we sometimes call him cranky Franky, just to tease him, you know; May was reading "Arabian Nights," Lizzie was sewing, and Flo was cutting out paper dolls. The dining-room door opened and closed with a bang, and here came Alta and Hope in great glee, for "Hope is going to stay all night, mamma!" said Alta, and "Aunt Lucy, won't you tell us a story?" said Hope, and they climbed in mamma's lap, and from there sat down on the arms of the chair, and helped mamma rock slowly back and forth.

"What kind of a story?" said mamma, musingly, while the soft cheeks were pressed against her face.

"Oh! once upon a time—" said Alta.

"When you was a little girl like me an' Alta," said Hope.

"Well, once upon a time, when I was a little girl, like mean Alta—" began mamma.

"Now, Aunt Lucy, I meant Alta and me."

"Well, once upon a time, when I was mean like you and Alta—"

"Now, mamma, don't tease; tell us a nice little story," coaxed Alta.

"Well, when I was a little girl like sister Flo, there were five little girls in our family, and Uncle Moses had three boys, and I used to hear remarks like these: 'Poor John! whatever will he do with five girls?' 'What a pity! five girls, not a boy among them,' and I began to wonder what could be the matter with girls. Uncle Moses used to joke grandpa, and say, 'Three boys are equal to five girls any day,' and I would think, 'Yes, more than equal them in noise and mischief.' I worried awhile over the matter, and finally resolved to ask mamma. 'Mamma,' said I, 'why am I not as good as a boy?' 'Good as a boy?' said mamma. 'Why you are as good as any boy alive, and a great deal better than most boys I know. Why! I couldn't get along at all, if you were not so good to rock baby and run errands.' Of course I felt real good to hear that, but still I would wonder why anybody should think it a matter of regret, to have such dear little girls as my sisters were.

"Well, one day cousin Charlie and I had a violent word battle. It began over the possession of a nut cracker, and wound up this way: 'Well, I'm just as good as you, if I am a girl.' Charlie gave the parting shot as he jumped over the fence, 'Ho, ho, Miss Smarty, you can't never vote.' 'Can't vote,' thought I, 'what is it to vote? Why can't I vote? Maybe this is the key-note to the girl question,' and straightway I resolved that I just would vote if I ever got the chance."

Mamma paused a moment. Alta and Hope jumped down and began playing with the paper dolls.

"Well," said Flo, "I think girls ought to vote as well as boys."

"Yes," said May, "Aunt Sarah says she has to pay twice as much for taxes as Uncle Moses, and never a vote."

"'Women must get eddicated up to it,' as the colored whitewasher told Mrs. Gougar," laughed Lizzie.

"Well, I'll tell you what I think," said Frank, rising and tossing his paper into the paper holder; "the women have the right of suffrage granted them in Wyoming now, and vote on the school question in a great many places, and they ought to have a voice in all the laws that govern this nation. Why, taxation without representation was what brought about the Revolutionary war. You see, men won't stand such imposition, and if I was a woman I just wouldn't stand it, either," and he brought his fist down on the table with such vehemence that Alta and Hope jumped up astonished. Mamma clapped her hands softly in approbation of her youthful champion. Lizzie, May, Flo, Alta and Hope joined in, and the meeting closed with loud applause.

Monon, Ind.

OUR DAILY BREAD.

A little girl knelt down to pray
One morn. The mother said,
"My love, why do we ever say,
Give us our daily bread?
Why not ask for a week or more?"
The baby bent her head
In thoughtful mood toward the floor,
"We want it fresh," she said.

LEND A HAND.

You all know that under this motto, young men and maidens, boys and girls are marshaled into companies to do all the good they can, in every way they can, to everybody they can. I think our little people will be interested in hearing of some of their ways of working. In Kingston, Massachusetts, a Lend-a-Hand Club was started by five boys and five girls, who had grown almost too big for the Loyal Legion. The first work they did was to collect their Youth's Companions (you can do the same with your Young Crusaders) a dozen or more together and bind them between covers made from old pasteboard boxes. These were sent to the county schoolhouses where the children bring their dinner, and are glad of fresh reading for noon-time.

By May, last year, they were strong enough to hold a little festival as their first attempt toward starting a free library. Little tables were placed in the middle of the hall, at which the girls, in muslin caps and aprons, served sandwiches, coffee, ice-cream and cake. Other girls presided over a fancy table covered with dainty articles made by members of the club and their friends. Five boys of the club who had formed an amateur orchestra furnished music that was highly appreciated, and the other boys took tickets, served the ice-cream, and even washed and wiped the dishes as the girls brought them out.

This first attempt cleared seventy dollars, greatly to the delight of every member of the club. It was decided to put the money at interest until autumn, when they could earn some more money to put with it.

In November they held a fair lasting two evenings. They had all sorts of nice things there, including an apron table, contributed by the Y's, and a mound of hay in which the children were allowed to burrow for five cent treasures, also a little cook-book prepared especially for this fair, the recipes being vouched for by the club's mammas. In all, this fair netted them an hundred and twenty dollars. Then the teacher of the primary school came to their aid with a pretty little operetta, in which she had drilled the children, and this cleared forty dollars more. I do hope she did not have the little tots drilling and singing in the evening when they ought to have been in bed.

Count up and see how many dollars this club now had. It was enough to buy an hundred and fifty books; it kept the boys and girls busy for several meetings covering and numbering them. As soon as this was done the little library was well patronized, having almost as many readers as books. The club has grown to include forty boys and girls, and every one is learning to lend a hand to help others.

In May of this year the club gave a pink tea, entertaining their friends in the evening with two bright little plays. This cleared seventy dollars more for the library, which has grown now to contain three hundred and forty books, several having been given by interested friends.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING OCTOBER 5. 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 20; Isaiah 7–12.)

Sunday, 5; Luke 20. Verse 15, God had always been gracious in His dealings with Israel, and in return the history of the nation showed a dark record of unfaithfulness and ingratitude. How fearful is the climax of sin; the crime they proposed was the most hideous. Verse 16, A few years after this parable was spoken, the armies of the Romans came with an awful destruction to this guilty nation. Verse 18, Those who fight against God, fight to their own destruction.

Monday, 6; Isa. 7. Verse 4, The duty of God's servants in times of trial is not to be fearful and faint-hearted, but to be "quiet" and bravely face every difficulty and meet every duty. Verse 12, If men are sincere and will do what God commands, He will strengthen their faith and courage; but Ahaz was not sincere. Many profess a reverence for God, and then go on in the neglect of God's will.

Tuesday, 7; Isa. 8. Verse 7, Assyria, like an overflowing river, after it had flooded Syria and Israel with its victorious armies, proceeded onward into Judah. When God's people cease to trust Him, and lean on the world for help, their carnal policy brings its own punishment. Verse 12, The Lord our God is the object of our fear, and if we truly fear Him we need fear nothing else.

Wednesday, 8; Isa. 9. Verse 2, From the darkness that overshadowed Israel in the time of the prophet, it was a great relief to turn to the more hopeful thoughts of the future, which gathered about the coming of the divine successor to David. Verse 6, The titles by which our Lord is called, show the divinity of His nature and the glory of His kingdom. Verse 7, God will accomplish all that He has planned, and the time will come when Christ's government shall be universal.

Thursday, 9; Isa. 10. Verse 3, It is a serious question for all wrong-doers to consider, "What will ye do in the day of visitation?" Men may evade this question now, but God will not be mocked, and the day will come when it can no longer be evaded. Gal. 6:7, verse 12. Like Assyria, sinners ascribe their successes to their own skill, and have no thought of obligation or gratitude to God. At last they shall be left to themselves, and they will see the worthlessness of that in which they have trusted.

Friday, 10; Isa. 11. Verse 1, Our Lord, who was born in circumstances the most lowly, is entitled to the highest place of dominion on earth. Verse 6, The happy change in the world, if all were truly Christians, is indicated by the figure of wild and domestic animals dwelling and feeding together. Verse 9, In that blessed day of gospel triumph, the oppressed of the earth shall rejoice, and righteousness and truth shall prevail.

Saturday, 11; Isa. 12. Verse 1, Those who know God as their friend and Saviour, echo from the heart this song of thanksgiving. Verse 3, The experience of Pentecost will be repeated, and the outpouring of the Holy Spirit will be like overflowing fountains of waters, which continue forever with blessing to the world. Do we seek His comforting presence day by day?

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(Individual Responsibility and Accountability. Rom. 14:12.)

1. The text makes our relation to God an individual matter, and shows that each one of us is put into this world to do a service of his own, and finally must give an account for himself. Not the church or the nation will appear before the judgment seat of Christ, but you will.

2. So much is done by "organization" in our time, that there is danger of losing sight of our individual responsibility and accountability as it is presented in the Bible. In all manner of work, God never loses sight of the individual. Every one must do service over against his own house. Neh. 3:28. "To every man his work." Mark 13:34.

3. The conviction of our personal responsibility and accountability drives away from us the fear of man, makes us feel that no good work can go forward as it should unless we do our part, and it makes us careful to use all the talents we have. Matt. 25:15, 21.

I do not ask Thee, Lord, to be explaining
The many mysteries of my life to me;
I only ask Thee, Lord, for grace sustaining
To bear the burden which seems fit to Thee.

I am content to trust Thy loving leading;
It were not trust, if I could trace the way.
No good thing shall this life of mine be needing;
Thou wilt provide the manna day by day.

—Rev. R. M. Offord.

The Household.

QUESTIONINGS.

BY ANNA C. READ.

[In memory of a dear one, passed on before, these lines are tenderly dedicated to hearts that are bereaved.]

We do not call thee dead, but "entered into life;"
Gone from our home, 'tis true—past all earth's storms and strife;
No voyager at sea, distressed and tempest-tossed,
But "safe in port" art thou—the billows safely crossed.
Dear one, we call thee ours, ours as of yore, the same,
Though in the mansion blest, wearing the loved "new name."
Who showed thee where to place thy feet, upon the river's brink?
Who held thy hand, assuringly, and said—"Fear not, nor shrink"?
Who led the way to pearly gates, and through the streets of gold?
Who welcomed thee to joys supreme, thy Savior to behold?
Of all the dear ones gone before, amid the happy band,
Who first did greet thee, timid one, in that fair, heavenly land?
Is Paradise so far away that never a vision blest
Can come to us, who linger here, till we enter into rest?
And is earth so far from the city bright—from the glorious home above,
That thou canst follow us, day by day, with a tender look of love?
Our tearful eyes would lift the veil—peer through the mists and see;
Our longing hearts would follow thee, and solve the mystery.
Our ears would catch the heavenly strains that fall from harps of gold:
Would listen to the glad "new song," so long ago foretold.
We wonder oft if spirits bright look down on our pathway here;
They surely love us none the less because in the heavenly sphere.
Oh, tell us, is the bliss of heaven so filled with rapture sweet,
That never a sob from earth-land disturbs the joy complete?
It cannot be that change of place has changed the dear, old love,
So we know that thou wilt watch for us, in the happy home above,
And Heaven grows near, as we journey on to the loved ones bright and fair;
Heart-aches will be gone when we join the glad throng, and know what it is "to be there."

Bloomington, Ill.

MY OUTING.

BY "ALICE."

Robert and I have been married eleven years, and in all that time have never taken a vacation together away from home. For the first years of our married life, Robert was closely confined to the store, and my time was occupied in keeping our home tidy, and caring for little Robert and Nellie; so a flying visit to my people, who lived in an adjoining town, was all we indulged in by way of pleasure trips. Then Robert bought our home. Of course we were saving every cent we could, until that was our very own. Then he went into business for himself, and this meant hard work and close planning for both of us.

Robert is strong and seems to feel refreshed each night, and ready every morning for the day's duties, but I seemed to grow weak and tired in body, nervous and irritable in spirit. I awoke some mornings feeling that life was so wearisome, and it would be a relief if I were downright ill, that I might lie in bed and rest. I did not often complain before Robert, but struggled on, taking pride in doing all my own work, even to the large washings.

I did not realize what I was doing, or know what my poor nerves needed. Finally, last summer when the hot weather came on, and baby Freddie was teething, and so cross, I became so irritable with lack of sleep and the round of must-be-dones, through the long days, that I was fast growing to be a chronic faultfinder. I resolved over and over again to be more cheerful, prayed earnestly for grace and strength to enable me to be again a pleasant, active, home-mother. My prayers were answered in a way I had not expected.

One sultry morning we received a letter from Robert's sister, an elderly maiden lady whom I had never seen, announcing a long visit from her. I am ashamed to say that I sat right down and cried, so inhospitable did I feel. "It was just too provoking," I said to myself. "Just when I have so much to do and so little strength to work with, that I shall have a fussy old maid here to wait on, and be criticised by her, for as she is in quite comfortable circumstances herself, she will not be likely to understand my little household economies, and will think them stinginess." Robert once told me that his sister Jane was a perfect housekeeper and cook, and I think perhaps a little current of jealousy ran through my foolish thoughts.

With sinking heart I made ready for our expected guest; when she arrived I was very agreeably disappointed in her appearance. Instead of a prim, self-sufficient old maid, too neat to be comfortable, as I imagined her to be, she was comely, rosy-cheeked, cheery and jolly; Robert said a "red-headed ray of sunshine." She won my love straightway by her hearty good-nature and affectionate ways. I soon found that she did not expect to be waited upon, but rather to assist me. Still my nerves were so shattered that I was in a miserable state of mind nearly all the time.

One day I was tired with doing a large ironing, and Nellie, poor child, was trying to help mamma, when she fell, and let fall a handsome tureen, one of my highly-prized set of China—my wedding present. I sat down in the kitchen and had one of those oft-recurring crying spells; to my great mortification, sister Jane found me there, and between laughter and tears, as I realized how ludicrous it must seem to her, I confessed that I was crying over a broken dish.

She looked very grave as she said, "My poor sister, something of infinite more value than your nice dish is breaking, and it must not be. Something must be done to lift the strain or you will have reason to be sorry all your life." "What do you mean?" I cried out, alarmed at her words.

"I mean that your health is being ruined by this never-ending round of your work, and you must stop right away and take a long rest."

"Oh, no," I made haste to answer, "that is impossible; I know I do not feel very well, but when it grows cooler weather I shall feel better. I cannot afford to go, besides I would feel ashamed to go away to rest, and leave Robert at home toiling away so hard for his family."

"You might rather be pitying Robert left a widower, with three little children dependent upon him. I'm going to have a talk with him this very day, and you may prepare for a pleasure trip next week."

It all turned out as she planned. Robert insisted upon my taking baby to the country, and Jane insisted upon keeping house in my absence. "You'll see how nicely I shall keep everything, what a quantity of fruit I shall have canned before you come home; and the children will be happy and hearty, for I mean to take them on little jaunts to the beach or country every week while you are gone and Robert shall go out with us, too, sometimes, so you need not fear we are not enjoying ourselves." With such cheerful, loving farewells I started on my trip.

What a blessed change, indeed! Instead of the dusty, noisy city, to breathe the pure, bracing air, and see the green meadows stretching away to the bright, sparkling river on one side, and on the other to see the mountains in the distance, their peaks reflecting the rays of the setting sun, or clothed in wreaths of ever-changing mist in the morning. I was never tired of gazing upon this beautiful landscape. And the home was so different from the farm-houses which I had seen; this was truly a home.

Body and soul grew strong those blissful days. When I wanted to be alone entirely, I went to a piece of woodland—"Nature's unimproved," our host called it, which he was inspired to leave untouched by the ruthless ax. A little stream trickled down the slope, gently murmuring as it went. It was happiness to me to sit on a mossy bank and look up through the great branches of mighty trees to the blue sky overhead. I seemed to come nearer to Nature and Nature's God than I had done for years.

At the end of the month I returned home, well and happy, while little Freddie was rosy and plump as a dumpling.

I found the family well and delighted to have mamma home again. The children could hardly wait till we had eaten supper to take me to the "farm," as they called it, an adjoining lot Robert had long coveted, which his sister had bought for him, "to keep his wife's Jersey in," Jane said. Yes, there stood the meek little cow which that good sister had sent for in my absence. Nor were the children forgotten, as Nellie gleefully proved by showing a dozen chickens Aunt Jane had "imported" with the cow from her own farm for them.

How we all enjoy our little "farm" this year. Robert finds it a pleasant pastime working in the garden a few minutes each day, the children vie with each other in caring for their little vegetable and flower beds, and even baby Freddie has a corner of white sand in which he digs to his heart's content. I know that I enjoy our gifts perhaps more than the rest do, for my housework is lightened so much by the appetizing additions to our table-fare, the breakfast is quickly prepared by having our fresh eggs, plenty of oatmeal and rich cream, fresh fruits or vegetables. Other meals also are made less elaborate than I used to think necessary; the children's health is improved by the simple diet, my work is lessened and I have time to practice my long neglected music, to play with the children, and chat with my husband when he comes home. I wish from the bottom of my heart that every such foolish, overburdened mother as I was, had such a good sister Jane to lead her into the better way of living, and teach her the duty of rest.

Saginaw, Mich.

AIR, PURE OR PUTRID, WHICH?

BY ANNA M. SKEER.

Oxygen and nitrogen or carbonic acid gas, catarrh, alcohol, nicotine and sulphur, which? Except in such cities as Pittsburg and Chicago, and in the crowded tenements of the poorest people, we take our choice of the air we breathe, or are compelled to take the choice or the ignorance of other people.

Because air is a colorless, odorless thing, it seems to some minds not to have any use, or not to exist. As long as it does not show enough enmity to rise up and knock a man down, as it does sometimes in mines and wells and sewers, it is left undisturbed until it becomes putrid. When Nature does take up the office of avenger, and sweeps it from hill to valley, and through every unguarded door and crevice, it is regarded as a deadly enemy, and is schemed against with a resistance worthy of a besieged fort.

A popular notion prevails that warm air is good air, even if it has been heated over several times, and that it is a matter of economy to save all the air that has ever had any heat applied to it. It seems a pity to cool off the bed clothes in the morning, and chill the room, so the covers are carefully replaced while they are warm and tainted with the exhalations of the night.

Carbonic acid gas is well known by chemists to be a deadly poison. It exists free in pure air in the proportion of one part to twenty-five hundred, but is the chief element in all air that has been breathed once by any pair of lungs, whether of beast or human being. In its unmixed state it extinguishes fire and life. In its mixed state, as found in unventilated rooms and churches, it clogs the lungs and poisons the blood. The lights are in full blaze, the furnace in full blast, the organ in full breeze (organs are not subjects for poison), the preacher in full zeal; but the people! What is the matter with the dear people? They keep examining the stained glass memorial windows as though they were looking for something not inscribed there, though each one says, "To the glory of God," etc. Then they yawn, or fidget or sleep, and the preacher gets the headache. There may be nothing wrong but bad air, which saves a dollar's worth of coal and costs a priceless amount of health and spirituality, not to say bad temper and loss of average attendance.

In the homes parents wonder why the children are restless all night, and pale and fretful all the time. Very often the secret is that they breathe rum and tobacco in their father's breath, and the accumulated carbonic acid gas, from all sources, for many days.

Whether or not the science of ventilation is one of the lost arts we do not know, but are sure it is well worthy the study of our rising architects, how to keep the air of buildings pure without incurring the danger that exists in drafts. It is well worth the attention of our political economists to consume the smoke and refuse of our houses and manufactories, in order that the atmosphere may not be black and rank with poisonous elements. In the meantime there is wanted information and agitation, common sense and courage. Many people do not know that consumption and general enervation are often due to bad air, and that fevers are due to decaying matter in cellars and ash piles, or that three-fourths of the work of the teacher and preacher are lost because hearers cannot concentrate attention. The subject of ventilation, like all the rest of the health questions, and other reforms, needs constant stirring up; here a little, and there a little. Almost every sexton needs to be lectured or replaced, and public service halted till windows are opened. The common sense wanted is not to kill people with drafts, and not to suppose we are going to be killed every time we see a window open. The imagination and habit play a large part here. It takes courage to let sunlight in on carpets, and breezes in on lace curtains, and to say, "Please don't smoke my rooms and my carriage full of nicotine."

All our work of keeping people from killing themselves and us is an ungrateful service, but is greatly needed. If our work brings success as well as reproach, we can afford to take for our encouragement, the assurance lately expressed in new shape by a writer, that those who are cannonaded now will be canonized by and by.

East Mauch Chunk, Pa.

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES, ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill.
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, inclosing a two-cent stamp.

Give her of the fruit of her hands and let her own works praise her in the gates.—Prov. 31:31.
So He bringeth them into their desired haven.—Ps. 107:30.

OUR SISTERS AT THE ANTIPODES.

The report of the first annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of South Australia, held at Adelaide, is just received, and makes us feel of a truth that all the world are kin. This report has been long delayed by the sickness of the secretary, but it comes to us, fresh as if the convention had been held yesterday, and inspiring as sea breezes. Here is its introduction:

"The Adelaide union, organized in April, 1886, by Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, first W. C. T. U. world missionary from America, had been slowly but surely taking root in South Australian soil, until our second world missionary, Miss Jessie A. Ackerman, set foot upon our territory in June, 1889. Under her genial nourishing influence the little plant at once began to put forth branches so rapidly that when two months later we assembled on August 13, for our first convention, we numbered no less than 23 local unions, with a membership of 1,112, being an increase of 1,047. Besides the delegates, a large number of visitors came and went during the day in spite of the pouring rain, and the whole proceedings were most enthusiastic. The day was full of blessing, which was acknowledged as a direct answer to prayer. On the day of Miss Ackerman's arrival in Adelaide her mission was inaugurated by a prayer-meeting of remarkable spiritual power. On August 10, the Saturday prior to the convention, we again met for prayer, and our risen Lord drew near, as to the two disciples on their way to Emmaus, causing our hearts also to 'burn within us.' And as He revealed Himself to those sad and weary-hearted men, so, though ascended and glorified, He gave to us a vision of His face." Then follows stirring addresses of welcome and responses, all illustrating the solidarity of our work, by bringing in the thought of what women are doing among us, at their antipodes. The greetings from other lands emphasized this thought, as when Elizabeth Brentnall, writing in the name of the Queensland W. C. T. U. said:

"We join hands with you in this great work, and earnestly desire to emulate the zeal of our sisters of the grand National union of America. We are only another division of the same army. Our aims are one. Let us gird on our armor, stand true to our colors, and go forth 'as an army with banners,' for the battle is the Lord's.

"Let the unexampled successes of our American sisters inspire us to 'do and dare' in His name; and, Oh! join us in a confederation of prayer that the women of this fair Island Continent may be led to give themselves in personal service to this important work. We must look forward to a grand National Australian Union in the near future, and work faithfully on our own lines, so that with our sisters of all climes we may fall into line and form a solid phalanx against our universal foe!"

Reports show good work done, especially along the lines of social purity, peace and arbitration, evangelistic, juvenile, Y, and Sunday-school work, unfermented wine, work for prisoners, policemen, cabmen and sailors. We were particularly gratified by the prominence given THE UNION SIGNAL, a very efficient superintendent, Miss Julia Grafe, of Gladstone, being appointed for this department, and a resolution unanimously adopted urging hearty support for THE UNION SIGNAL and Alliance News, our "official organs." It also devotes a page to an extract from Miss Willard's annual address, showing that this paper "is the chief visible cord binding us together throughout the wide domain of the World's Union from Tasmania to Christiana, this whispering gallery keyed to finest uses, with its cosmopolitan circulation and Golden Rule purposes."

Striking and beautiful testimony was borne to the efficiency of the work done by our Round-the-world Missionaries. Mr. H. Wood Green testified that he had traveled through some of the districts visited by Miss Ackerman, and could bear testimony to the great value of her work. Mrs. A. R. Nicholls said that Miss Ackerman had done more than they had dreamed of. They had hoped to keep her one month only, and to their joy she had stayed two, and while China and India were holding out their hands to welcome her, she had undertaken long journeys throughout the length and breadth of the land. She had given herself no time for rest or recreation; her motto had been "This one thing I do." She had devoted herself wholly to the work for which she had come, and a glorious success had been the result. The praise they gave to God. In His name Miss Ackerman had come, in His name she had labored, in His name she was going on her way to other nations. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered her by the convention.

Among the resolutions adopted were the following:

Resolved, That each union hold frequent gospel meetings, a part of whose exercises shall always be conducted by women.

Resolved, That we vigorously discountenance the use of tobacco in public places, and urge our right to pure air and exemption from all the filth which accompanies the habit of smoking.

Resolved, That we express our entire disapproval of the exhibit of liquors at our shows, and their connection with any other organization to which the public are expected to contribute.

Res lved, That as franchise is the symbol of freedom, and half the members of our nation are deprived of that right, we petition our Legislature to enfranchise the women of South Australia.

FROM NEBRASKA.

A gentleman called on us the other day, and introduced himself by saying, "I am from Nebraska, and called to tell you not to be discouraged about us there; we have great hopes of carrying the amendment." You may be sure the bearer of such a message was warmly welcomed and questioned regarding the foundations of his hopes. They are certainly strong; among them we note these points. Friends of the amendment are working more efficiently and hopefully with every passing week, while the forces of the enemy seem disorganized. The liquor men may be, and probably are, carrying on a still hunt, and it may prove more dangerous than their open war, but so far as appears on the surface, they are not accomplishing as much as they were earlier in the campaign.

The attitude of the press is a favorable factor; while in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, scarcely any papers stood for the amendment, in Nebraska the majority of newspapers favor it. This is accounted for by the fact that there is no overshadowing city press to be bought up by the liquor power and overawe the country papers, or encourage them to sell out to the enemy. Of course the Omaha Bee has done its worst, but somehow it has overdone the matter and largely lost its prestige. It is literally true that "The Omaha Bee has lost its sting,

And don't know where to find it.
It buzzes around with an angry sound,
But nobody now will mind it."

The expose of The Voice did very much to prevent the selling of newspaper influence to the liquor dealers. The Roggen-Rum-and-Rosewater ring came to grief in its attempts to "organize" bankers and other business men in favor of the saloon; it only suggested a way of working to the Prohibitionists who found no difficulty to "go it one better" along the same line, securing two business men opposed to the saloon to every one the ring marshaled in favor of it.

"Kansas has done us an immense amount of good," said our informant, "in furnishing solid facts and figures, showing that prohibition does prohibit. These facts coming from official sources have had immense influence in rebutting the assertions of the enemy."

Hon. S. B. Bradford, for two terms Attorney General of Kansas, has done yeoman service in Nebraska in nailing liquor lies. He met in debate Rosewater and Webster at the Corn Palace, and demolished their pettifogging in fine style. He demonstrated from official figures that Kansas had outstripped every state west of the Mississippi river during the past ten years. He left no vestige of the false charges trumped up and circulated by the Rosewater-Roggen-Rum combination. He showed that the liquor traffic is not only a cancer eating out the very heart of business, but that it breeds a horde of outlaws, assassins and criminals. He turned the points of his adversaries on them and carried the people with him in his masterly plea for the home.

How do you account for the failure of the Republican platform to take any stand for the amendment? We felt sure, from our knowledge of the good stuff many Nebraska Republicans are made of, that they would do so. The reply was that while it is undoubtedly true that many of the rank and file are in favor of the amendment, the leaders, who had the framing of the platform, were deterred by Iowa politicians from taking any stand for it. Great pressure was brought to bear on Nebraska Republicans by their brethren in Iowa who charge all Republican losses in that state to prohibition, and implore Nebraska not to jeopardize the success of the party by making temperance a party issue. On the other hand, the platform makers dared not take any stand against prohibition for fear of alienating the great body of temperance men within their ranks. This seems a reasonable explanation of the action which so puzzled us; but how are we to account for the failure of the People's party along the same line? That can hardly be laid at the door of Iowa Republicans.

How do your churches and ministers stand? was our next question, and his answer showed that in general the churches stand for the amendment. "The Methodist church," he said, "stands solid and is doing grand work; the same is true in great measure of the Congregationalist, Baptist, indeed all the churches; here and there are marked exceptions, as in the case of Dr. Duryea, the Dr. Crosby of Omaha," but in general, our informant thinks the church can be counted in favor of the amendment. Certainly this ought to be so, and if it is, success is assured, for church members hold the balance of power in Nebraska. If every church member votes for and works for the amendment, it will carry; if it is lost it will be lost through their apathy or opposition, and they must meet the result before the bar of God in that great day when, confronted by the souls that went down to destruction through the saloons their votes opened, all masks will be torn off and all party ties so strong here as to hold men from doing what they know is their duty, will be burnt up in the white heat of God's indignation. If ever Christians had a call to stand fast and solid for their principles, those of Nebraska have such a call to-day.

LAST CALL FOR MEMBERSHIP CRUSADE DAY.

We seldom use editorial space to speak of matters of business, but feel constrained now to urge our readers to carefully consider the propositions made by Mr. Hall on pages 13, 14 and 15 of last issue. We greatly desire to have "Membership Crusade Day" a great success, in conjunction with a canvass for subscriptions to THE UNION SIGNAL. We hope to add many names to our list, on Sept. 27. The new members who subscribe to the paper will surely become intelligent and active workers. One plus one equals two; ten thousand plus ten thousand equals twenty thousand. The conditions for a successful canvass are all given—principally in that, during this month only, both new and old subscribers can have the paper sent them a year for half price, namely, seventy-five cents. There is a condition to this statement, however. In order that any present subscriber can avail herself of this exceedingly low rate it will be necessary for her to send at least one new name with her own. For full particulars see the publisher's notes. No one ever saw one man, unaided, pull up a great anchor from the ocean's bed, but when a company of strong, determined ones march around their small circle with a "Ya, heave ho," the anchor must come! Please make your own application.

RUKHMABHAI, the Hindu lady who so bravely defied law, insult, persecution, for what is every woman's birthright, the disposal of her own person, when claimed by the man to whom she had been betrothed in infancy, in speaking to an English audience concerning child-marriage in India, said that it is not a Hindu institution, but one forced on them by the Mahomedan conquest of India; Mahomedans being in the habit of carrying away Hindu girls before marriage, the Hindus took to marrying them in infancy, for self-protection. After vividly picturing the troubles of the child-wife, she made a pathetic appeal to English womanhood to rise in a body and demand redress for the wrongs of ages done their Indian sisters. In conclusion she said: "To me it is an agony to hear a woman attack Christ's name, or try to weaken the grandeur of the Christian faith. If it were injured, woman would be the first to suffer. All she has and enjoys is to be ascribed to God, to the advent of Christ, and the presence of Christianity. Let them count no sacrifice too great to pass it on, whether it be self-consecration or gift of means. Only Christianity can solve the problem."

MRS. GOUGAR writes that she is authorized by Prohibition Headquarters of Nebraska to correct the statement that Daisy Stoddard, of the diamond medal contest, has contributed $2,000 to the amendment fund. She has given but $25. A remarkable instance of three-black-crowism.

ELIZABETH WHEELER ANDREW.

For seven years our sanctum has known the benediction of her sweet and gracious presence. Now, in response to what she feels sure is the call of God, she leaves us with only the briefest warning, and in her place is only loving recollection.

Mrs. Andrew is of English and Scotch-Irish parentage; her father was a Methodist minister of great strength of character, rare social powers and natural eloquence; her mother, who has just passed through the gates into the city, was a woman beautiful in appearance and character, unselfish and consecrated. Elizabeth was born in Richmond, Ind., where the Friends largely predominate, and educated at Thorntown, near a large Friends' settlement; the influence of these quiet, orderly, conscientious people, who believe so deeply in the moving and guidance of the Holy Spirit, has been very marked in her life.

Her father died when she was only fourteen, and as the eldest of six children, she helped her mother bring up the other five, which perhaps accounts for the sweet motherliness of her ways.

Thorntown Academy, where she was educated, was a "feeder" to what is now De Pauw University, which was not then open to girls, to her intense grief. Among her teachers were Chancellor Sims, now of the Syracuse University, Dr. John Clark Ridpath and Henry G. Jackson. Her school days, however, were a small part of her education, for she was ever a student, not only of books, but of everything relating to humanity.

With her husband, Rev. Edwin A. Andrew, she experienced the vicissitudes of a Methodist itinerant's life for more than ten years, and thus learned to sympathize fully with those who toil amid obscure and difficult surroundings to keep "true to the dreams of their youth," and to make the world better. As a minister's wife she was the recipient of hundreds of sacred confidences from women of all ages and conditions and became, more and more, as the years rolled on, a lover of women and devoted to their interests.

The years from 1875 to 1877 were spent at Evanston, and were full of hard work and of inspiration. Here lasting friendships were formed; here she attended lectures which fed her intellectual hunger; all this, while she cared for husband and little boy, doing her own housework while delving into study. In 1881 came the joint call to husband and wife to Willamette University, Salem, Oregon, he as Professor of Latin, she as Dean of the Woman's College and Professor of Literature and History. A busy year was spent in this work, and she was unanimously reëlected. But her husband's failing health caused their resignation and return East, and May 1, 1883, by request of Mrs. Mary B. Willard, then editor of this journal, Mrs. Andrew was elected its first associate editor. When she first entered this office Mr. Andrew was an invalid; gradually he grew weaker, till he needed all the time and care of his devoted wife. We may not speak of those months of watching by his bedside, when with him she went

"close down
To the river-side
And stood in the heavy shadows,
By the black, wild tide.
But when the feet of the Lord
Were come to the waters dim,
They rose to stand, on either hand,
And left a path for Him.
So they two passed over swiftly
Toward the Goal,
But the wistful, longing gaze
Of the passing soul
Grew only more rapt and joyful
As he clasped the Master's hand;
I think, or ever he was aware
They were come to the Holy Land."

With the chrism of that great sorrow still shining on her brow she returned to her place on the paper, better fitted for service, doubtless, because of the ways in which she had been led. Her departments were those of News from the Field, which brought her into close connection with the great rank and file, Signal Notes, News in a Nutshell, and Our Children, whose well-beloved "Captain Deborah" she was till the establishment of The Young Crusader absorbed the department, "Around the Camp-Fire." Each of these pages showed the touch of her sympathetic heart and her clear brain.

As the business of the W. T. P. A. grew, and its publications increased, the work of examining offered manuscript and editing its various publications which had fallen to my lot, became too great to be done in connection with my other duties, and in 1885 the office of editor of publications was created, and Mrs. Andrew elected to fill it. This took her off the paper, but not out from our office, where she occupied her old seat, so that none of the closely-knit cords binding us together were broken. Her work in this wider field was most admirably done, giving play as it did to her fine literary taste and her scholarly training. She laid deep and broad the foundation of this department, and with such rare skill and judgment that not one manuscript published under her supervision was ever felt to be a failure.

A slight, dainty woman, whose slender shoulders bore many and heavy burdens, she yet ever had

"A heart at leisure from itself
To soothe and sympathize,"

and this made her comforter-in-general to all around. Did sorrow come to any of our force, hers were the first tears to mingle with ours; did doubts or temptations assail, her quick eye was the first to discern the hidden conflict; did any go astray, she seemed ever to be given just the right word to say that should convince of sin and lead to repentance.

And so the busy years passed on, each one intertwining Mrs. Andrew more closely with our work and with our lives. But others appreciated her worth and many were the calls to take her from us. Two years ago there came one which, added to the conviction that a change of climate was imperatively necessary for her health, proved irresistible. Mrs. Somers, a long-time friend, principal of Mount Vernon Seminary, Washington, D. C., made Mrs. Andrew a very flattering offer to become her assistant. Her work there was to be primarily that for which she is so eminently fitted, spiritual "mothering;" after that a few hours daily of teaching in just the branches she delighted in. How well she performed her work there is forcibly set forth in the remark of one of the pupils to a young girl in the first homesick weeks of her stay at the school: "Whenever you feel so bad you can't stand it and must tell somebody all about it, just go to Mrs. Andrew and she will comfort you."

Part of her duty there was the Sabbath evening service with the girls; there was no formal "preachment," but most delightfully informal conferences on the ways in which souls grow. With Bible in hand this "little mother" sat among her girls, some clustering on the floor at her feet, some leaning over her chair, all eager, intent on the words which fell from her lips. "When He cometh to make up His jewels" we are sure that He will find among these young hearts diamonds for the crown of rejoicing He is preparing for Mrs. Andrew.

But the hoped for benefit to health did not follow the change, the malaria of Washington proving more trying than the cold winds of Lake Michigan, and Mrs. Andrew felt that she must resign the work of the school. As soon as this was known at Headquarters, the directors of the W. T. P. A. gladly invited her to return to her old place on the paper. I had asked leave of absence for a year, and our search for some one to be associated with Miss Ames during my absence had proved unavailing. With the hope before me of having her back I postponed my vacation six months, and she was to return to us July 1, 1889. Before this date arrived she received and accepted the invitation of relatives to accompany them to Europe. After a tour of nearly four months there, realizing the dreams of a lifetime, she returned to her place on THE UNION SIGNAL, September, 1889.

Just before leaving England she met Mr. William T. Stead, whom God used in a remarkable talk, under the shadow of Westminster Abbey, to open a door of deliverance to a soul that had always thirsted after the things of the Spirit, and was at this time possessed of an unutterable hunger after righteousness. She says: "A great light began to dawn. I saw what God could do in a soul all given up to Him. On shipboard in reading the 'Life of Mrs. Josephine Butler,' written by Mr. Stead during his unjust imprisonment, the Holy Spirit searched my heart with wondrous power; partition walls of prejudice and timidity were broken down, and I was filled with an overwhelming love for humanity. In the light of Mrs. Butler's self-sacrificing toil and Christ-like devotion to the suffering, sinful, degraded ones of earth, I was searched as with a lighted candle. So the work has gone on with an ever-deepening sense of the reality of spiritual things and a growing apprehension of the needs of the world, and of my part in giving help, until in the month of May there came the distinct call of the spirit of truth to my heart calling me forth to break the Bread of Life to the hungry and perishing. No other call could have taken me from this desk from which extend lines of communication with nearly all lands, and from these sacred companionships with the W. C. T. U. comrades with whom I have shared the toils, the obloquy and the honor of a seven years' march and campaign against a common foe."

How can cold type tell of these wonderful, spiritual experiences? It is impossible to bring the deep things of God hidden in human souls to the surface and pinion them on a piece of paper. It is enough to know she heard God's call, "Daughter, come." Like the disciples of old she left all and followed Him. The work in which she took such delight and in which she was proving such a blessing, was laid down, most flattering offers of other positions, where to human sight she might do great service for the Master, were refused without a moment's hesitation; when I urged that such openings for service might be God's call, she answered, "But He said, 'Daughter, come,' not stay," and there was nothing more to be said.

And so she went; while you are reading these lines she is on the ocean, going to work under Methodist and Wesleyan auspices, among the poor of London; leaving all the dear delights of her Evanston life, the close clinging ties that bound her to our hearts, and to the great, wide circle of the W. C. T. U., giving up a good salary, and like the saints of old, depending directly upon her Heavenly Father for sustenance. Can any doubt the reality of God's call to her, or say that the day of heroism is past?

Mrs. Andrew has promised to act as our London correspondent, so our readers will still keep in communication with her. Pleasant as this is, we feel it is not needed to keep her in your memory, for she holds a place in all hearts from which distance nor time will dislodge her.

As we go to press comes the announcement, which will appear officially next week, that Mrs. Andrew has been appointed evangelist of the World's W. C. T. U.

The Watch-Tower.

Thus it is all over the earth,
That which we call the fairest,
And prize for its surpassing worth
Is always rarest.

—J. G. Holland.

***

That American women are appreciated abroad is again demonstrated by the appointment of Miss Frances A. Caldwell, of Hartford, Conn., as superintendent of colleges in New Granada. She has taught for many years in Connecticut, is a thorough English and Latin scholar, and speaks both French and Spanish like a native. Her future home is Bogota.

***

At a London Flower Show, two prizes each were awarded for any poor widows with children who were bravely earning their living, without parish relief, and for "young daughters of poor widowers who have striven successfully to keep their fathers' houses clean and comfortable." These prizes are appropriately offered at a flower show, for where grows there any flower sweeter or more beautiful than brave mother-love and daughterly devotion?

***

A lady from New York in sending a remittance for the Temple to Miss Pugh, writes: "It (the Temple) is one of the grandest, as well as one of the most stupendous undertakings of any age, and all the working of one woman's brain. And still this woman doesn't know enough to vote, because, as Senator Ingalls puts it, 'She can't fight.' Aren't we fighting every day? Those of us who are single are fighting for the boys and girls of careless, ignorant, and indifferent parents. But it is a glorious warfare we are waging for 'God and Home and Native Land.'"

***

Rev. C. C. Harrah, so well known as the author of "Christ the Emancipator of Woman," and by his Bible notes in this and other papers, did a beautiful thing which he was too modest to have known. He went to Peoria to take charge of a mission in the hope of having it develop into a self-supporting church. This hope has been fully realized, and Plymouth Church, Peoria, will ever stand a memorial to his faithfulness and untiring energy. Now that it is strong enough to stand alone, he returns to his boyhood's home, in fulfillment of long cherished plans, and takes charge of the Congregational Church at Newton, Ia. It now transpires that every cent of his salary while in Peoria was devoted to Christian work, he and his family living on the proceeds of a farm he owns in Iowa.

***

The Mississippi White Ribbon, under the efficient management of Mrs. Kells, has reached its third birthday, and celebrates it by a double number containing charming reports of the Asheville and Mont Eagle assemblies. These reports show that the Southland is wide awake, and warn the North to look out for its laurels. An incident reported from Mont Eagle demonstrates the fact that W. C. T. U. women are coming up to possess the summer assemblies. At a conference concerning Christian work a count was called of the different orders represented. The King's Daughters stood up first—a goodly rank; then Woman's Christian Association representatives in about equal numbers; but when the W. C. T. U. was called, more than half the company came promptly to their feet, and stood regarding each other with mutual and glad surprise. These woods are full of them, it seems. The White Ribbon removes to Jackson the middle of this month.

ON DUTY.

Queen's Gardens.

BRUSH.

I have learned a beautiful lesson,
  Taught by the sweet peas standing there,
Those little clouds of sunset glory
  Caught out of time in morning air.
You see their fragrant blossoms nodding,
  Purple, crimson, and pale rose blush,
On slender stems too slight to bear them
  Without the helping, hidden brush.

To its brown arms, so strong and trusty,
  The little tendrils cleave and cling.
The vine, upheld, in dust was lying,
  A fallen, bruised, and flowerless thing.
And yet the brush itself was barren,
  Unquickened at the summer's kiss,
It bore no scent or sign of blossom,
  But now it blooms again like this.

I think it must forget the sadness
  Of its own broken life, and glow
With love for all the warmth and sunshine
  That makes the sweet-peas bud and blow.
It may seem but a dreamy failure,
  Deadened and storm-tossed, dulled with strife,
But it has helped to bear the blossoms
  That crown another, fairer life.

—Bessie Chandler, in Harper's Bazar.

VESPERS AT CHAUTAUQUA.

Surely Chautauqua is a good place in which to grow queens. Nothing connected with it contributes more to queenly and kingly growth than its vesper service. Nothing in all Chautauqua so impressed me as this gathering in the "Hall in the Grove" on a Sabbath evening. Helen P. Strong, in her exquisite brochure, CHAUTAUQUA IMPRESSIONS, thus beautifully writes of the Vesper Service:

What is the charm that makes its influence measureless? Is it the stillness of the hour?

"Day is dying in the west
Heaven is touching Earth with rest."

This is the opening hymn, and the touch of Heaven seems to be upon the assembly, to the very outermost rim of worshipers, standing unwearied outside the crowded Hall of Philosophy beneath the trees, flecked by changing lights and shadows; and there is a tenderness, a closeness of sympathy (born of that common sense of need which puts human nature at its humblest and its best) in the swelling notes,

"Lord of life, beneath the dome
Of the Universe, Thy home,
Gather us who seek Thy face
To the fold of Thy embrace,
For Thou art nigh."

Then like the sound of many waters is the voice of the multitude, as leader and people climb together the beautiful rounds of that ladder of aspiration and adoration, the prayer of Thomas á Kempis, while they read responsively:

Above all things, and in all things, O my soul, thou shalt rest in the Lord alway, for He Himself is the everlasting rest of the saints.

Grant us, O God, to rest in Thee above all creatures,
Above all health and beauty,
Above all glory and honor,
Above all power and dignity,
Above all knowledge and subtility,
Above all riches and art,
Above all joy and gladness,
Above all fame and praise,
Above all sweetness and comfort,
Above all hope and promise,
Above all desert and desire,

Above all gifts and benefits that Thou canst give and impart to us:

Finally, above all angels and archangels, and above all the heavenly host,

Above all things visible and invisible,

And above all that Thou art, O our God,

Because Thou, O Lord, our God, art supremely good above all;

Thou alone art most high,
Thou alone most powerful,
Thou alone most full and sufficient,
Thou alone most sweet and most full of consolation,
Thou alone art most lovely and loving,
Thou alone most noble and glorious above all things,

In whom all good things together most perfectly are, and ever have been, and shall be.

Then the Gloria, after which words of encouragement, of promise, of prayer, read responsively, are interspersed with another of Miss Lathbury's tender hymns, and the night song, with its uplifting sentiment:

"All the earth is wrapped in shadow,
  Steep and rugged climbs our way;
Dare we hope to look enraptured
  From the mountain top some day?
O press onward still! forever
  Turns the Earth to meet the light,
Cometh swift and sure the morning
  When our feet shall tread the light."

And then—the animating spirit of the whole—the helpful, earnest, tender words of the Chancellor, who knows, as few men know, how to improve without dispelling the influence of such an hour; how to be in full sympathy with the sentiment of the place without a touch of sentimentality; how to be practical without being commonplace. "Temptation is opportunity." How the phrase glows with meaning under his graphic description—nay, under his very impersonation—of the soul struggling with evil, and either sinking to a lower plane of living, as a consequence of defeat, or rising to a higher, with victory.

Keble's familiar hymn, "Sun of my soul," follows the closing prayer, and at last, after the benediction, the desire of all is fitly expressed in the one stanza of Woodstock, which closes this impressive service:

"Thus, when life's toilsome day is o'er,
  May its departing ray
Be calm as this impressive hour,
  And lead to endless day."

News from the Field.

RHODE ISLAND.

June, July and August! How fast the months go by, bringing with them so many opportunities of service, leaving behind them their record of good or ill. The summer season is one of rest, but our faithful ones have shown that with them,

"Rest is not quitting this busy career," but that "change is rest."

The regular routine of winter gave place to a varied program suited to the time. Open air meetings have been many. In fact, June was the busiest month for our speakers of any in the year. There seemed to be a general arousing among our local unions, and the interest continued so that our state officers responded to several calls during the time of their short and well-earned vacations. And these calls were not confined to the state. June saw our president, Mrs. Burlingame, as delegate at the National Temperance Congress. In July she went to give an address at the Free Baptist encampment at Ocean Park, Me., and in August, she, with fifty other white-ribboners of Rhode Island, accepted the invitation so kindly extended by the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. to unite with them and the Connecticut sisters in a School of Methods at Cottage City. The inspiration of those meetings for prayer and praise, for instruction and awakening, together with the physical inspiration of salt breezes and ocean dips, will carry new strength and earnestness to many corners of our little state.

Another call to one of our earnest workers was extended to Mrs. E. J. Smith, superintendent of juvenile work, by the Rhode Island Sunday-school Union to represent the Methodists of this state at the National Sunday-school Association held at Pittsburgh, Pa.

But there are places unfanned by refreshing breezes and unhallowed by prayer. Here, too, the work has been carried on. In one of the crowded sections of Providence, in the midst of a community of Portuguese, a mission was formed last April, the outgrowth of out-of-door meetings, which have been held three years during the spring, summer and fall months. It is under the charge of Mrs. I. C. Manchester, superintendent of work among foreigners, assisted by her husband and a member of the Providence union. They began the meetings in a back room, up a long and narrow flight of stairs. After holding services for several Sabbaths, they were convinced that the quarters were altogether too small, and began to seek for more commodious ones. An old room that had been used for a rum shop was found and put in comfortable repairs. A gentleman gave some chairs and settees; lithographic pictures illustrating the Sunday-school lessons were put on the walls, and it looked quite like a little chapel. They have an organ and sometimes a cornet to lead the singing in which they take a great interest, and join in the songs as soon as they learn them. All repeat the Lord's prayer and the twenty-third Psalm. They have learned these by repeating them after Mrs. Manchester, line by line or word by word.

The Portuguese are generally Catholics, but take great interest in the story of salvation that is told to them, and many have profited by it. The room is now getting too small. There have been over a hundred present at one time, and many have experienced a desire to become Christians and have given good testimonies. They are very confidential and seem willing to tell their prevailing sins. That their good resolutions are genuine is shown by improved habits of cleanliness and the abandonment, by some, of evil practices, such as smoking, drinking and other vices, while one who employs many of them upon the wharves, says that as day laborers, they do better work. They have formed a little society, paying in fifty cents a week for future needs. If any one of this number is sick, he draws four dollars a week. Previous to this their money was squandered in different ways.

Out-of-door meetings are also held near by at the same hours. Some weeks as many as five meetings have been held with good results. Saturday afternoons are now devoted to the children.

Another mission on the same street deserves mention here, for, though not under our auspices, it is gospel temperance work, and ladies from the Providence union take charge of one of its meetings each week. Mr. Bassett, who has accomplished so much good in Newport, felt called of God to begin a similar work in Providence. He knows whereof he speaks when he depicts the woes of a drunkard's life and also when he tells the grandly simple gospel story, and his earnest pleading to turn from evil to Him who loves them and gave Himself for them, has found a glad response in many hearts. Over four hundred have asked for prayer, and many have been led to join different churches, according to their preferences. Flower mission day saw several of our unions wending their ways to the nearest almshouse, carrying with them flowers and fruits and simple gifts with kindly greetings and earnest words.

Two county conventions were called in just the places where one would like to spend a pleasant summer's day. Providence county met among the green fields and flowery meadows of Cumberland, in the pleasant church at Arnold's Mills. Fourteen unions were represented by delegates, and eight by letter. Among the reports it was noted that Ashton has formed a Loyal Temperance Legion of seventy-five members, and that one member of the Slatersville union has organized thirty boys in a White Cross Society. The second convention was held in Bristol, a delightful summer resort. Both were helpful and pleasant.

One of the bright days looked forward to each summer, is that on which the state union makes its annual excursion to some place of interest. This year Newport was chosen, and over two hundred and fifty white-ribboners and their friends embarked on the Day Star on a cloudless morning in June. A pleasant sail to Newport by way of Bristol, a drive to "see the sights," then a longer sail around Beaver Tail, and home, with a delicious clam chowder and other refreshments on "ship board," is an outline of the day that utterly fails to give an idea of the good time enjoyed. So many "school-marms" and children wanted to go and couldn't, it is thought that another year the committee will have pity upon them and wait until the schools close, for it is a day that should not be missed.

Providence and Westerly unions made moonlight excursions, which not only gave them pleasant trips, but added a goodly sum to their treasuries. Some smaller unions have had picnics, which tend to bring in and interest those who have not yet donned the white ribbon.

Rest Cottage, at Buttonwoods, where the Y's of Providence entertain at low rates girls who could not otherwise afford an outing by the salt sea wave, has been full all summer. On July 29 a fête was held, which netted them $268, a substantial help towards carrying on the work.

Green camp-meeting, the only one within our borders, held its session the first week in September, giving one whole day to temperance. Our W. C. T. U. was ably represented by our corresponding secretary, Miss E. P. Nichols. And now we are looking forward to our annual convention, which meets this year at Central Falls, and opens its session October 14. That it may be a success depends, with God's blessing, upon each one of us. May no one come empty-handed.

"Not unto all the tuneful lips are given,
  The ready tongue, the words so strong and sweet;
Yet all may turn with humble, willing feet,
And bear to darkened souls the light from heaven."

If each is bearing her light, and keeping it trimmed and burning, we shall surely have a grand spiritual illumination.

MIRIAM EARLE.

MARYLAND.

Between the Interstate Conference, at Mountain Lake Park, and the Prohibition Camp, at Glyndon, Maryland was kept wide awake on temperance matters during the sultry summer days. Reports from Mountain Lake evidenced the increasing attractions of this always bright, breezy and attractive conference, and with Mrs. Buell and Miss Pugh to lead, and such names as Gov. St. John, Mrs. Eugenia St. John, Mrs. Helen Gougar, Prof. B. P. Reynolds, Walter Thomas Mills and Miss Lydia Newcomb on the program, success was inevitable. The Chautauqua Assembly that followed was of the finest character.

Glyndon records the most successful meetings yet held, and prophesies greater achievements for the future. Mrs. Gougar, Gov. St. John and Walter Thomas Mills were on the program here also, while Rev. W. H. Boole, of New York, Rev. Anna Shaw, Miss Runals, of New York, Rollo Kirk Bryan, and the Silver Lake and Walter Harman Quartettes were among the additional attractions. The children's meetings, conducted by Miss Laura Beatty, one of the most successful teachers and kindergartners of Baltimore, were admirable in every respect.

The annual convention of the Prohibition Party was held towards the close of the camp. Four candidates for Congress were nominated, two from Baltimore, one each from Cecil and Kent counties. The Baltimore Sun said of this meeting: "Never was a Maryland Prohibition convention held under more favorable auspices, or in a pleasanter spot, and never was one more harmonious in its work." The delegates, one hundred and eighty-five in number, represented Baltimore City, and sixteen of the counties. They were received by Governor St. John and Mr. William Daniel.

A new plank offered at this meeting, namely: "That no citizen should be deprived of the right of suffrage on account of sex," aroused more interest and enthusiasm than was thought to exist in the state, outside of the W. C. T. U., on the subject of woman's ballot. Governor St. John had suggested, at the close of a most forcible speech on the tariff, that the ballot be placed in the hand of woman, as one of the remedies for some of the evils of the day. This was received with such hearty favor that the Governor supplemented his suggestion with several remarks on the subject, each of which met with warm applause. Mr. Wm. M. Daniel then offered the above resolution, which brought an immediate cheer. There were some on the other side, of course, and objections were made on the ground that "the Prohibition Party is not to be run on sentiment and Sunday-school ideas, that woman suffrage is largely a matter of sentiment, and is impracticable, and so on," the threadbare arguments, in fact, that the old political parties bring against the Prohibition Party itself. Ardent defenders of the resolution were numerous, and particularly noticeable among them was the Rev. E. . Eldridge, a young Methodist minister of Baltimore. The sentiment of the meeting being so clearly in the affirmative, the discussion was wisely brought to a speedy close, and terminated in an almost unanimous vote for the resolution. A Baltimore daily reported only one "no." The press reports of these meetings, given by the Baltimore dailies, were unusually full and interesting—a valuable straw.

Arrangements for the annual meeting of the State W. C. T. U., to be held in Immanuel Baptist Tabernacle, Baltimore, Oct. 16th and 17th, are actively progressing. Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, of Massachusetts, will be one of the chief attractions of the meeting. The union has been fortunate in securing Mrs. Livermore's attendance, not only at this meeting, but also at a conference of representatives of various charities and organizations of Baltimore conducted by women, to be held in Baltimore directly previous to the state convention. Mrs. J. T. Ellis, corresponding secretary of New Jersey W. C. T. U., who is becoming known in Maryland as an able and effective speaker and worker, has also been secured for the state convention.

County and local annuals give promise of unusual interest. Kent county convention held August 28th at Fairlee, a small village in Kent, brought out an afternoon audience of about two hundred, and a Demorest gold medal contest in the evening, an audience of between six and seven hundred. Kent county union, it had been stated, was "almost dead." Fortunate for the county people that day, that the union was not fully alive, as standing room only was the announcement long before the time for opening the meeting.

Kent, be it remembered, gave a large majority for local option in a recent contest between local option and license, and a meeting apparently more in sympathy with prohibition sentiment could scarcely be held. The medal contest was the eleventh held by this moribund union!

Willard union, Baltimore, one of the numerous city locals, reports a union for men and a young people's union as auxiliaries, efficient work through its evangelistic superintendent, and five wall-pockets, in various places, kept filled constantly.

The passing on of one of the most gifted and earnest workers in the state union has been noted in your columns. The following resolutions adopted at the Interstate Conference express the opinions of those who knew her well:

Whereas, In the providence of God there has been removed from our midst one of our most beloved and faithful workers, therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, the first secretary of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Maryland, and the Southern correspondent of the National W. C. T. U. organ, we have sustained an incalculable loss. With a highly poetic nature, she dedicated her pen to the cause she held most dear. While bowing in submission to our Heavenly Father's will, we will not forget to thank Him for the influence of her beautiful life.

M. A. L., Cor. Sec.

NEW YORK.

WAYNE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Wayne county convention met at Rose Valley, and truly we thought the place rightly named, when we saw the profuse decorations in the church; many exclaimed, "Where did they get so many and such handsome flowers?" A fine program was presented, in which each of the twenty-one unions in the county took part. Our president, Miss Elthia Clark, was reëlected; Mrs. Severill, of Newark, was elected first vice-president, and Mrs. M. Post, of East Palmyra, treasurer. Mrs. Davies, of Lima, was with us during the convention, and spoke in the evening to a crowded house, many being unable to get in. Strong resolutions of loyalty were unanimously indorsed. A pleasant feature was the presentation of Miss Willard's "Glimpses of Fifty Years" (presentation volume), to Miss Downing, of Macedon Centre, for her excellent report of National Convention at Chicago. The most impressive part was the marching in of the bands of Juvenile Templars from Rose and North Rose; as we listened to their singing and speaking, we felt that the army to help carry prohibition was before us.

Dinner and tea were served at the church. At night we were hospitably entertained at the homes. In the morning a great deal of business and fine essays formed part of the program. Several invitations were given for our next meeting, the one from Newark being accepted.

A. K. I.

SCHENECTADY COUNTY CONVENTION.

This opened Thursday morning, Sept. 4th, with Mrs. Martha Clowe, president, in the chair. Address of welcome by Miss Nettie Cessford, response by Mrs. E. J. Robinson. Devotional services preceded each of the three sessions. Abundance of dinner and supper was served from the neatly set tables spread beneath the grand old trees in front of the venerable church.

The county has as yet but four unions, having been organized within a year. There are four Loyal Legions doing noble work, all bent on this one object, the erection of a temperance hotel for the accommodation of farmers, their families and their teams in the city of Schenectady.

Two executive committee meetings were held during the day. Nine lines of work in their various departments were reported, and three more taken up.

The evening meeting was a grand success as to music and addresses. At the close of the usual vote of thanks for entertainment, church choir, speakers, etc., the Rev. J. B. Crawford, pastor of the church, secured a unanimous vote of thanks to the delegates for coming to the people of Duanesburgh, partaking of their hospitality and diffusing their geniality, temperance principles, etc., etc. A new departure, entirely.

All officers were reëlected excepting the recording secretary. In the evening we listened to excellent addresses by Revs. Henning and Flower, and remarks by Mrs. J. Veeder, county superintendent of narcotics, and Rev. Crawford. Next session is to be held at Schenectady, March, 1891.

LIBBIE CLOWE, Secretary.

ULSTER COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held at New Paltz, August 20 and 21, Mrs. E. A. Burgess, county president, presiding with her usual grace and dignity. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Abram Deyo, president of the New Paltz union, and the response by Mrs. Mackey, of Ellenville.

Mrs. J. K. Barney, National superintendent of prison and jail work, was with us and proved an inspiration to the convention. After the devotional meeting of the afternoon and reports from superintendents, she addressed a children's meeting; her address proved very instructive to the grown people as well as to the little ones, who, in return for their enjoyable talk, entertained us with some very sweet temperance songs and recitations. Mrs. Barney addressed a very large house in the evening, taking as a subject, "Fact and Fancy." The audience was intensely interested in her accounts of the many sad cases of sin and misery (nearly all the results of strong drink), that she daily meets with in her work. At the annual election our president was reëlected unanimously, and led back to the chair amid great applause.

The reports show advancement in the work. Several clergymen were present and manifested interest and coöperation with us.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and banners. The hospitality of the New Paltz people was abundantly shown. We all took home new inspiration for future and better work.

COR. SEC.

ST. LAWRENCE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The St. Lawrence county convention of the W. C. T. U. held its annual session at Gouverneur, in the Baptist Church, June 5 and 6.

The convention was called to order Thursday afternoon by the president, and the business before it was well dispatched. A parliamentary drill was given by Mrs. C. P. Gaines, of Canton.

Reports of local unions were encouraging. All seemed hopeful. The young people are becoming much interested, nearly all have held parlor or mothers' meetings, and there has been an increase of membership. The old officers were reëlected for the ensuing year; Mrs. C. W. Leete, Potsdam, president; Mrs. H. S. Randall, Gouverneur, vice-president; Mrs. C. P. Gaines, Canton, secretary; Mrs. C. E. Bascom, Potsdam, treasurer.

A welcome was extended by Rev. Mr. Marsh, pastor of the Baptist Church, and fittingly responded to in behalf of the convention by our president. Twelve departments are taken up, and some are doing most excellent work.

A resolution was passed extending thanks to Sheriff Backus, of the jail, and superintendent Fields, of the county house, for their hearty coöperation with the ladies in their work among the inmates of these institutions. Services are held regularly Sabbath afternoons in both these institutions, with a very encouraging interest among the inmates. At the close of the afternoon session a telegram of greeting from the Jefferson county union, then in session at Watertown, was read. A responding telegram was forthwith returned.

The evening was occupied by the usual public meeting, which was well attended.

We are not able to give a report of the closing session held Friday forenoon, which is said to have been very interesting.

Convention adjourned subject to call of president.

SUPT. PRESS WORK.

NEBRASKA.

A WIDE AWAKE CONVENTION.

The annual convention of district number four, of Nebraska, was held in the beautiful Temperance Temple at Fremont, August 27–29, under the direct supervision of Mrs. C. H. Walker, district president. The first afternoon was occupied with an interesting Bible reading on "Consecration," conducted by Rev. Frances Townsley. In the evening, after the welcome, by Mrs. G. A. Blue, response, by Miss Mary Watson, a beautiful solo, by Miss Eva Denny, and a finely rendered recitation by Mrs. Srack, came the president's address, which was full of good things. Thursday morning, after devotional exercises, by Rev. Townsley, reports of officers were given, interesting papers were read by Mrs. H. E. Allen and Mrs. J. T. Smith. Then came reports of superintendents, followed by a fine paper by Mrs. Lucia McCullough, which brought the morning session to noontide hour of prayer. The afternoon session included papers by Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. Russel Briggs and Miss Eleanor Agnew. Each of these papers contained suggestions of interest pertaining to our work. The remainder of the afternoon was given Rev. Townsley, to show "How not to Conduct a Devotional Meeting," which was listened to with marked interest. Thursday evening was devoted to a grand gold medal contest in which all the contestants did admirably, but little Miss Lura Bressler carried off the beautiful medal. The recitations were interspersed with fine music by the choir and a recitation by Miss Nellie McPherson, which captured the large audience.

Among the occupants of the platform was our pleasant-faced, much loved state president, Mrs. M. A. Hitchcock. Friday morning the devotional exercises were again led by Rev. Townsley. The different committees reported. The election of officers with Mrs. Hitchcock in the chair resulted as follows: Mrs. C. H. Walker unanimously re-elected president; Mrs. Russel Briggs, corresponding secretary; Miss Fanny Osborn, recording secretary; Miss Ella Watson, treasurer; Miss Minnie Manners, vice-president. Mrs. C. H. Walker was elected delegate to National Convention. The hours of the afternoon were filled with papers by Mrs. H. S. Doan. Mrs. L. M. Guttery, Mrs. S. Dudley, and Miss Clara Weaver, each full of thoughtful, earnest words for all who desire the victory for righteousness at our coming election. A question-box conducted by Mrs. Hitchcock called out much animated discussion. Friday evening Mrs. Clara Hoffman delivered an excellent address to a large, appreciative audience.

Thus closed one of the best conventions ever held in this district. Much credit is due the ladies of the Fremont union for the cordial reception and hospitality extended to delegates and visitors. They served delicious noon lunches in the Temperance Temple, Thursday and Friday, of which visitors as well as delegates were invited to partake.

MRS. N. E. CARLISLE.

INDIANA.

DEMOREST CONTESTS AT COUNTY FAIRS.

Cora Caster, superintendent of fair work for Park county, Indiana, has very successfully introduced Demorest medal contests into county fairs. At Brighton, her first experience, she went to the Fair Board, asking that time be given for the contest on the fair program and the contestants admitted free. This was granted, and the class of young ladies and gentlemen appeared upon the platform. It was feared that such young speakers could not hold the crowd, but this proved to be an unfounded fear. A vast crowd pressed around the platform and stood quiet and attentive till the close, while such strong meat as, "What should the Christian voters do with the Saloon?" "Alcoholic Slavery," and "Prohibition the hope of our Country," was given them. That it was enjoyed the quiet, as perfect at the outskirts of the crowd as right in front of the stand, testified; the most radical party men in the audience were heard to say: "That is the best thing here." "Come again next year."

At the Rockville fair a class of boys, from ten to twelve years of age, representing five neighborhoods, contested on Thursday afternoon, drawing a large audience; Friday afternoon came a class of little girls; the audience was even greater and the interest deepened with each speaker. Men who would not listen to a prohibition speaker, stood for hours and let those children pour hot shot into them, not even flinching; indeed, some of the most radical of them said it was the grandest thing they ever listened to. "A little child shall lead them."

ILLINOIS.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY CONVENTION.

The third annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Cumberland county, convened at the Presbyterian Church in Greenup, August 19, 20. Our worthy county president, Mrs. Musselman, had spared no effort to make it a success, and we do not hesitate to pronounce it the best convention ever held in our county; many have been aroused to the necessity of work who heretofore have seemed indifferent to its interests.

In the forenoon of the first day, after organization, the appointment of committees, reports of township presidents, etc., a very interesting address was given by Rev. J. Scott Davis, of the Presbyterian Church, on "The Object and Benefit of Conventions." He, together with his excellent wife, are heartily in the work of the W. C. T. U., and throughout the convention rendered valuable assistance. Rev. Mr. Dillon, of the Universalist Church, who is, also, ever ready to lend a helping hand, spoke on "The Needs of the Hour," which was followed by a discussion of the subject participated in by many present.

In the afternoon our district president, Mrs. Sheplor, was with us, and addressed the convention on the subject, "How to Overcome Discouragements." A paper answering objections to the W. C. T. U. work was read, after which the convention engaged in a spirited discussion of the subject, "How the Saloons Pay the Taxes."

In the evening an address of welcome was given by Mrs. Sandafer, of Greenup, and response by Mrs. M. A. Dryden, of Woods' Chapel union. We were favored at this session by the presence of our state worker, Mrs. Ada H. Kepley, of Effingham, who gave us a highly interesting and instructive lecture which was listened to by a full house with marked interest.

At the Wednesday morning session a very interesting paper was given by Mrs. Sandafer stating "how little things help on the work." An able discussion of the topic following, participated in by our district president and others, bringing out many helpful suggestions.

An excellent paper was read by Mrs. Dryden, entitled, "Let Your Women Keep Silence in the Churches." The election of officers resulted in the unanimous reëlection of Mrs. Musselman as president; Miss Emma Button, of Toledo, secretary; Mrs. Sandafer, of Greenup, treasurer.

The interest of the afternoon meeting was greatly enhanced by an able address from Mrs. J. S. Davis, on "Mothers' Meetings." This was followed by a spirited discussion of "The Relation of Temperance to the Sunday-school," led by Mrs. Carrie Fancher, of Greenup, and F. M. Swingle, of Neoga. Mrs. Jennine of Greenup, read a very interesting and encouraging paper on the subject, "Whither Do We Tend?" after which Mrs. Davis conducted a children's meeting. A series of practical and helpful resolutions were adopted.

In the evening Professor Cooley, of Westfield, addressed the convention, stating the grand work the W. C. T. U. women had accomplished and for which they were still striving, and urging that the credit and assistance due from men for their untiring labor in their behalf be not withheld.

A recitation entitled, "Poorhouse Nan," was rendered by Mrs. Hattie Boots with marked effect. Excellent ones were also given by Miss McCartney, of Toledo, Lulu Musselman, of Greenup, and Little Birdie Crane who recited very prettily "The Meanest Man in Town."

A paper presenting the "Aims of the W. C. T. U.," was given by Mrs. Dryden. Altogether we feel that the work in our county has been greatly benefited by the convention just closed, and look hopefully forward to future results.

EMMA BUTTON, Sec.

SALINE COUNTY CONVENTION.

This was held in the M. E. Church at Harrisburg, Aug. 28, 1890. The convention was called to order by county president. After devotional exercises and organization, reports of unions and superintendents were in order, which showed good work done. One new union has been organized. Some went into a state of lethargy during the Presidential campaign and have not been resuscitated.

Notwithstanding, our W. C. T. U. has great cause for encouragement. We had some very interesting talks and discussions on the different phases of our work. The most of our officers were reëlected. We have taken up eight lines of work.

Two of our resolutions read thus:

Resolved, That we rejoice in the early fruition of our hopes in the erection of the Temperance Temple, and we pledge our co-operation in gifts, prayers and efforts.

Resolved, That we reaffirm with emphasis our loyalty to the principles and policy of our state and National W. C. T. U., and its present officers.

Our district president was with us all the time, giving us words of encouragement. Addresses from two ministers in the evening. After singing, "God be with you till we meet again," we departed to our homes, feeling He will be with us if we follow where He leads.

H. A. Banks, Co, Pres.
Jane Gillett, Rec. Sec. pro tem.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The state convention of the W. C. T. U. of North Carolina, held July 17, 18 and 19, was decidedly the most successful ever held in this state. There were forty-eight delegates present, more than ever assembled before; many of the heads of departments were there and presented reports full of interest. Miss Willard and Miss Gordon were present, and of course added much both to the pleasure and profit of the occasion. The unions extend from our sea-coast to the mountains, and the reports show that many new unions have been formed since the meeting last year. An organizer, Mrs. Sue V. Tomlinson, has been actively engaged in this work, and was appointed for further service in the same direction. Mary C. Woody was unanimously reëlected as president. Mrs. C. C. Gerrell, the efficient treasurer, resigned, a step made necessary by ill health. Mrs. Weatherly was elected in her place. The convention decided to press the work of scientific temperance instruction by again petitioning the legislature to make temperance instruction in public schools compulsory; also to press the necessity of industrial and reform schools in this state.

The report of juvenile work showed that this important branch is receiving attention. Bands of Mercy have been formed and the superintendent strongly urged that many more be formed.

The Y. W. C. T. U. has grown in numbers and power during the past year. Miss Acton, the superintendent, is endearing herself to the young women of the state, and great things are expected in the near future.

While all these circumstances united to make a strong and interesting convention, much was due to the place of meeting. Concord is a prohibition town. The leading business men of the place are strong temperance men, and many of them third party men. Although it is the seat of the largest cotton factory in the south, there is not a saloon in the place, and industry and order reign supreme. Twelve hundred hands are employed who have comfortable, cleanly homes, a beautiful church with their own pastor (Methodist), a good school, but no strong drink. Captain Odell, the president, and his son, Mr. William Odell, secretary and treasurer, are as stanch friends of the W. C. T. U. as are to be found in any quarter, and so are the generality of the Concord men, ministers and laymen. They attended the convention almost en masse, and never have the women known such support from the public as was there received. Woman's work was as fully indorsed and truly recognized as was possible. Both of the Methodist churches opened wide their doors, and the hour for service on Sabbath morning in each was filled by a woman. Of the kindly service of the ministers in and about Concord too much can not be said. At every point they upheld the work, and encouraged the workers.

The union in North Carolina is, without one dissenting voice, perfectly loyal to the National W. C. T. U.

Reporter.

PENNSYLVANIA.

BEAVER COUNTY CONVENTION.

This county has just held its annual convention. We have a paying membership of five hundred, and about twenty-five of the departments represented, all doing more or less work. A few of the departments have done great good in the past year, as foreign, Sabbath observance, social purity, prison and railroad. Miss Jennie Smith, who was with us, told us our superintendent of railroad work had accomplished more than any other in our state. Miss Smith gave us four lectures, a talk at each session, and held a number of private consecration meetings. Her visit to our valley was a blessing to all. In the past year we have had three of our National workers, Miss Willard, Mrs. Barnes and Miss Jennie Smith; our county has, from each of these grand women, received new courage, earnestness and a more abiding trust in our Heavenly Father.

Sue G. Blythe.

MAINE.

This has been by far the best year the Maine W. C. T. U. has ever known. Thirty-seven new unions have been organized. This means more than the same number would in any other state, for it is "old soil" with many old temperance societies and many who depend upon the prohibitory law to do all the work.

One of the last organized and most promising unions is at Lebanon, where is the summer home of Mrs. Thorp, president of Cambridge (Mass.) W. C. T. U., well known to white-ribboners by her interest in improving Miss Willard's "den." Mrs. Bardwell, president of Cambridgeport union, helped to work up the meeting at Lebanon, as did also Mrs. Shapleigh. Mrs. Thorp presided and spoke like one inspired, moving the hearts of her hearers in a marvelous way. Her daughter, Mrs. Ole Bull, and Miss Olea Bull, were a great attraction and a great help. The charming way in which Miss Olea led the young people of the place to be as they were, an important factor in the meeting, will be a blessing always in the community.

I spoke the best that I could, and one ought to have done their best with such surroundings, and a large union was organized at the close of the meeting.

The next morning, as I came to the railroad station behind the beautiful Norwegian horses, which are, as they well may be, a joy to their owners, although the woods where the dreadful murder was committed, recently, was plainly in view, we did not speak of that, but rather of those things which make for peace and righteousness and purity as wrought out, in and through the W. C. T. U. I wish all white-ribboners would be like minded and interested as are our Cambridge and Cambridgeport friends, and let no opportunity pass to extend the blessed work.

L. M. N. S.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Mrs. W. L. Wells, National organizer, is in Virginia from Sept. 16 until after the state convention at Norfolk, October 21 to 24.

The eighth annual convention of the twentieth district W. C. T. U. will be held in the Ideal League Hall, Cairo, Ill., Sept. 30, Oct. 1 and 2, 1890. The Y's will have charge the first evening. One feature of the evening will be a gold medal contest.

Reduced rates will be given.

Mrs. Rose Spilman, Sec.

The fourth annual convention of the twelfth district (Michigan) W. C. T. U. will be held in St. Ignace, October 8, 9 and 10. Mrs. A. S. Benjamin, president of the fifth district, will give an address the evening of the 9th. A Demorest medal contest will be given the last evening. Every union is entitled to three delegates. A large attendance is hoped for both delegates and visitors.

Mrs. R. A. Campbell, Pres.,
Mrs. A. M. Tuten, Cor. Sec.

The Illinois W. C. T. U. convention will be held in the Court Street M. E. Church of Rockford, October 7-10. The state executive will hold an all-day session October 7; a prayer meeting will also be held that day, under the direction of Mrs. F. C. Hathaway, superintendent of evangelistic work. The Y's will also have a conference the afternoon of the same day. The regular sessions of the convention will commence Wednesday morning the 8th. Miss Frances E. Willard will address the convention Thursday evening; Mrs. L. S. Rounds on Wednesday evening; Miss Ida Clothier at the Y evening of Tuesday. Delegates please send names for entertainment to Mrs. S. B. Wilkins, Rockford, before October 1.

Helen L. Hood, Sec.

The seventeenth annual convention of the New Hampshire W. C. T. U. will be held in the Methodist Church, St. John street, Dover, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 30, October 1 and 2, 1890, commencing in the afternoon of September 30. It is earnestly desired that every local union in the state shall be represented at this convention. Each auxiliary union is entitled to one or more delegates, according to membership, who are requested to wear the white-ribbon badge. Gentlemen and friends are cordially invited to attend all the sessions. Entertainment will be provided for the state officers, superintendents and delegates, if they will send their addresses as soon as possible to Mrs. Wm. A. Morrill, Dover, N. H. Visitors can obtain board at reasonable rates. Reduced fare will be secured from principal points on the different railroads, from September 29 to October 4.

Mrs. N. H. Knox, Pres.,
Miss C. R. Wendell, Cor. Sec.

Official Communications.

OUR BILL FOR A COMMISSION ON THE SOCIAL VICE.

Thousands of petitions containing many signatures, or representing many persons, asking for the passage of our bill entitled "A bill providing for a commission on the subject of the social vice," ought to be ready for presenting on convening of Congress in December.

This, then, is asked: That the local Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of the United States circulate petitions, using the subjoined forms, during October and November, and send them on the first Monday of December to Mrs. Ada M. Bittenbender, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Bittenbender will have them properly indorsed and then handed to the Senators or members of the House of Representatives of the respective states from which the petitions come.

Please circulate two petitions—one for the Senate, the other for the House of Representatives. One will not do for both bodies, as petitions are permanently retained when presented in either body. Do not copy names. It is against the rules of Congress to receive memorials or petitions containing copied names. Secure the adoption of the resolution embraced in the "form of representative petitions" by every society for promotion of social purity, every temperance society, every association, or convention, of clergymen, teachers, physicians, labor organizations, Sabbath-schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, the Y. M. C. A., W. C. A., Grand Army Posts, etc., which shall meet in your respective localities during October and November. Be sure to fill all blank places in the forms.

(Form of Popular Petitions.)

PETITION FOR A COMMISSION ON THE SUBJECT OF THE SOCIAL VICE.

(Circulated by the W. C. T. U. of————.)

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

We, the undersigned, citizens of————, county of————, State (or Territory) of————, respectfully petition for the passage of the bill providing for the appointment of a commission, composed of both men and women, "to investigate the social vice in all its phases, its relations to labor and wages, to marriage and divorce, its effects on individuals, unborn children, and the general welfare of the people, and its economic, criminal, physical, and moral aspects in connection with pauperism, crime, the public health, and morals; and also to inquire into the practical results of legislation and the various methods relied upon for the repression of the evil in the several States and Territories of the United States and in the district of Columbia."

(Form of Representative Petitions.)

PETITION FOR A COMMISSION ON THE SUBJECT OF THE SOCIAL VICE.

(Circulated by the W. C. T. U. of————.)

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The.....in.....assembled, held in....., on the.....day of.....1890, numbering (or representing).....members, adopted the following resolution and directed the presiding officer and secretary to sign and transmit it to Congress, viz.:

Resolved, That we respectfully petition Congress to pass the bill providing for the appointment of a commission, etc. (Copy "form of popular petition" from here on, and have the resolution signed by the presiding officer and secretary.)

The above suggestions carried out, we may reasonably expect either this or the next Congress to respond favorably to the petitions.

Ada M. Bittenbender,
Legal Adviser of Dept. for Promotion of Social Purity. Washington, D. C.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Arkansas—Forrest City: Mrs. Jennie E. Rollwage, $50; Morrelton: W. C. T. U. and Loyal Temperance Legion, $3.90.

California—Santa Barbara: W. C. T. U., $50; Mrs. Josiah Bates, $5; Berkeley: W. C. T. U., $11.75; Sacramento: W. C. T. U., $100; Cucumongo: Mrs. Henderson, 25 cts.; Linden: W. C. T. U., $7.35; Arcata: Mrs. E. H. Lord, $4.98; Winchester: M. M. Monahan, $3.

Colorado—Silverton: Mrs. Emma Brown, $3.65; Denver: W. C. T. U., $5.50; Cotopaxi: Mrs. Kate Blanchard, $2.

Connecticut—New Haven: W. C. T. U., No. 1, Loyal Temperance Legion and Baby Band, $18.40.

Dakota, North—Durbin: Willard W. C. T. U., $4.52; Casselton: Baby Band, $4.30; Mayville: Baby Band, $10.50.

Dakota, South—Rondell: King's Daughters, $1; Salem: W. C. T. U. Cherub and Baby Band, $4.25; Yankton: Veterans and W. C. T. U., $18.50.

Flor da—DeLand: W. C. T. U., $1.

Georgia—Toccoa: Mrs. C. T. Blackmer, $2.35.

Illinois—Terre Haute: W. C. T. U., $3.50; Paxton: Mrs. A. L. Ferris, $1; Chicago: Central W. C. T. U., $1; Mrs. Helen Starrett, $1; Edith Whitney, $3.65; Alice G. Root, $3.65; in memoriam, Roy Crane, $1; Mrs. O. N. Carter, $4.75; Wicker Park: Per Mrs. Sullivan, $14.75; Nunda and Crystal Lake W. C. T. U. $25; Evanston: Miss Willard, Madam Willard and Miss Gordon, $1 each; Dwight: Y. W. C. T. U., $10; Morrisonville: Sunday-school class No. 15, Presbyterian Church, $5; Wayne: Mrs. Hammond, $100; Adaline: W. C. T. U., $5; El Paso: W. C. T. U., $1; El Dorado: W. C. T. U., $2.25; Baby Band, $2.70; Mrs. H. A. Banks, 50 cts.; Bristol: W. C. T. U., $3.50; Lincoln: W. C. T. U., $15; Marengo: W. C. T. U., $30.36; Grand Crossing: W. C. T. U., $20; Cedarville: Henry Richart, $1; Canton: W. C. T. U., $1; Jacksonville: Per N. M. Buckthorpe, $40; Streator: Loyal Temperance Legion, $6; Wyanet: Mrs. S. F. Crossette, $3.65; Greenfield; Y. W. C. T. U., $1; Steward: W. C. T. U., $4.35; Mrs. W. H. Tibbles, $5; Forest: Mrs. F. M. Hancock (bequest), $100; W. C. T. U., $3.40; Elgin: W. C. T. U., $23.50; Wenona: Mrs. Wm. Hamilton, in memoriam, $3; W. C. T. U., $5.25; Camp Point: Mrs. E. C. Cyrus, $3.65; Waverly: W. C. T. U., $5; Galesburg: W. C. T. U., $1; Grant Park: W. C. T. U., $1; Abingdon: W. C. T. U., $10; Jerseyville: Loyal Temperance Legion, $2.10; Chenoa: Y. W. C. T. U., $12.50; Decatur: W. C. T. U., $35; Charleston: W. C. T. U., $7.55; Dalton City; W. C. T. U., $3.95; Hamburg: Baby Band, $2; Girard: W. C. T. U., $5; Dundee: W. C. T. U., $12.01; Monticello: W. C. T. U., $3.85; Augusta: W. C. T. U., $10; Pittsfield: W. C. T. U., $7.54; Batavia: Loyal Temperance Legion, $1; Bloomington: Baby Band, 20 cts.; Prof. Sue Fry, $1; Freeport: W. C. T. U., $2.43; Pawnee: Loyal Temperance Legion, $1; Brighton: Mrs. M. Brown, $10; Olney: Mrs. M. A. Gladish, $1; Aledo: W. C. T. U., $3.50; Chicago: Scandinavian W. C. T. U. and Loyal Temperance Legion, $10; Paxton: Robert Hall, Mrs. Amy Hall, M. L. Hall, E. W. Hall, Mrs. A. S. Vincent, Mrs. S. M. Bondurant, Mrs. Jas. Hock, Mrs. S. Dunlap, Mrs. A. H. Babcock, Mrs. M. A. Rice, Mrs. E. N. Stevens, $1 each; R. Blackstock, $5; others, $4.60; Baby Band, $1.40; Gibson: Jas. Nagle, Mrs. A. B. Siverling, Mrs. J. M. Bailey, Wm. Powell, Mrs. Addie Moore, Mrs. J. H. White, Mrs. M. L. Smith, Mrs. M. Oliver, Miss Leora Emmons, O. H. Damon, Mrs. E. Bromley, $1 each; M. A. Damon, S. J. Le Fevre, H. C. McClure's bank, $2 each; Wilson's bank $3; others $4; Hoopeston: O. P. Maury and brother, M. Rusk, Mrs. A. D. Owen, Mrs. R. M. Knox, Mrs. L. R. Dyer, Hattie DeVault, Mrs. A. M. Nesbitt, $1 each; others, $9; Hamilton bank, Mrs. S. Sibbitt & Son, $2 each.

Indiana—Boswell: Freeman & Bradley Bank, $2; Mrs. H. Potter, $1; Mrs. Sigler, 50 cents; Oxford: J. H. Bell, J. H. Andersen, Mrs. J. J. Ripple, Mrs. J. N. Bradley, $1 each; Otterbein: Mr. and Mrs. H. Moore, $2; Frankfort: D. F. Allen, Mrs. N. B. Frazer, $1 each; others, $8; Russiaville: R. W. Miles, $1; Baby Band, $1.20; others, $1.80; Greentown: Dr. Gideon Scott. $1; Mrs. Scott. 50 cents; Lafayette: Mrs. Timberlake, Mrs. L. E. Kiefer, Mrs. F. E. Pierce, Mrs. Anna Bone, Mrs. Oscar Craig, Mrs. R. L. Slinesprong, Mrs. W. R. Moffatt. Mrs. M. R. Goldizen, Mrs. J. M. Mapes, Mrs. E. B. Ritchey, Mrs. J. C. Bradenbaugh, Mrs. C. G. Storrs, Mrs. G. W. Rank, $1 each, Mrs. Eliza Waters, $5; Baby Band, $2; others, $3.

(To be Continued.)

Choose the Best.

"Freely and unhesitatingly, then, select what is best, and cling resolutely to it, for what is best is most profitable." This is good advice for those who are seeking some efficient remedy for bodily ills. We think we can prove to you that the best remedy is the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN.

Below we give you some of the evidence. But we have more of it, hundreds of testimonials, which we shall gladly furnish.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN —"My wife thinks that your Compound Oxygen Treatment saved her life." REV. H. W. JONES, Monroe City, Mo., Oct. 21, 1889.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I cannot express the benefit I have received from your Compound Oxygen Treatment in one of the most severe cases of chronic bronchitis." P. J. MCGOWAN, Penn Yan, Yates Co., N. Y., May 13, 1889.

Send for the 200 page book. It is free to you and filled with testimonials from men and women who have been cured by the Compound Oxygen Treatment. All you have to do is to address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Harvest Excursions—Pennsylvania Lines.

Half rates, Chicago to the South; tickets on sale Oct. 14th. Call at City Ticket Office, 65 Clark St.

MR. BEN. C. SMITH, Chairman Board of Trade, Macon, Ga., says: "I have used Bradycrotine personally, and with members of my family; in every case it gave almost instant relief from Headache."

MR. A. B. LAFORME, Boston, Mass., says: "My wife would not be without Bradycrotine for any money consideration."

Beecham's Pills cure Sick Headache.

Van Houten's Cocoa, largest sale in the world.

Publisher's Dep't.

The Convention Daily.

We have not made the usual announcements regarding the Convention Daily because of the difficulty experienced in getting the proper facilities away from our own plant to print so large a paper in so short a time. We have decided, however, on the following plan: A daily will be issued at Atlanta (five issues) subscription, fifteen cents, or five cents per copy. It will be entirely a written-up report and not, as heretofore, a stenographic one. The place, the people, the convention, church, the programs, personnel of the speakers, etc., etc., will make up the paper. There will be no premium, and we will not attempt to mail each day's paper by itself, but all mail orders will be sent after the convention has closed, and as soon as possible after the fifth session is over. In addition to this paper we will print an exact stenographic report of all the proceedings within a week or ten days after the close of the convention (providing we get 1,000 orders for the same) at 25 cents each. We prefer that orders be sent for the stenographic report rather than for the dailies, but if any wish to order both you can remit 40 cents, and if the 1,000 orders are not reached for the stenographic report we will return the 25 cents. After four years' hilly experience in running a daily at the conventions we have evolved the above plan as being the most satisfactory to all concerned. This announcement is to appear in each issue of THE UNION SIGNAL until November 6. We recapitulate the offers to make them as plain as possible.

The Convention Daily.

Five issues to be mailed in one package on November 18 or 19, $ .15.

The Stenographic Report to be issued, if 1,000 copies are ordered, as soon as possible after the convention, $ .25.

No premiums or commissions can be allowed at these prices, except that in clubs of five or more the cost of sending the money can be deducted. The regular convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL will be dated November 27.

October Offers.

We want 5,000 new subscribers during October, and if you want what we offer as returns for your work they will come, and that without any particular "fuss or feathers." How would you like to have Henry Drummond's wonderfully popular books, "The Greatest Thing in the World" and "The Greatest Need of the World"? Send one new name with $1 and you can have either one of the two that you name. Lovely books both in binding and contents. Deep thoughts dressed in simplicity's garb.

—Or—

Miss Willard's picture, which will be ready in November. Why not get a new subscriber, add 25 cents ($1.25 in all), and get this beautiful aquarelle-tint life-size picture of your leader?

—Or—

If you send five new names, with $5, you can have the new and enlarged edition of Senator Blair's great book, "The Temperance Movement." Concerning it Miss Willard says:

"If I were president of a local union I would see that this book was read chapter by chapter at the monthly meetings. Our women, by this time, should be well furnished for the fray. They need to have the arguments at their tongue's end. Especially is this true of National Prohibition, which now looms above the horizon, the coming tornado in politics. On this theme Senator Blair is the expert among our sixty millions of people. To it he has devoted fifteen years of thought and honest hard work. Let us know what there is to be said on this question. Let us copy out paragraphs from this book of admirable temper for the local press in our own towns and villages. Let us make efforts for National Prohibition."

Why couldn't yours be one of a thousand unions to follow out Miss Willard's suggestion? By sending five new names you get the book and the education it will bring, free. Will you read this and forget it, or try to remember and then forget, or give a noble-hearted push in the matter?

Something New, Instructive and Interesting for the Long Evenings!

As the days grow shorter, and all classes are looking forward to the long evenings, why should not those who have the good of young people at heart provide for them means of recreation which will furnish instruction and tend to their benefit as well as mere amusement? When tired of the more violent exercises, wearied with solid reading, and even the lighter grades of study, the temptation comes to indulge in amusements which not only do no good, but which too often have a positive immoral tendency. At such a time, if their older friends could bring forth an exercise combining amusement and instruction, like the EXERCISE OF THE BOOK OF BOOKS they could be prevailed upon to spend the hour in a way the results of which only eternity can tell, for "It will inspire study into the Book, as persons enjoy the EXERCISE." Older people, too, enter heartily into the exercise.

Rev. Ira M. Price, Ph. D., Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Literature, in the Chicago Baptist Union Theological Seminary: "I am greatly pleased with the Exercise. It is a simple, an easy and an admirable method of learning some of the most common external facts about the Bible."

Mrs. Goodwin, wife of Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., Pastor of the First Cong'l Ch., Chicago: "Our children find it very interesting and entertaining."

The Editor of the "National Presbyterian": "It affords entertainment and at the same time instruction in regard to the Book that it is of great importance to the young to secure."

What better gift, then, can you make to a young friend? Price, 50 cents post-paid.

We give the game as a premium for one subscription with $1.50.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS: Samples free 100,000 circulation. The Witness, Frankfort, Ky.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO BUY
anything in Chicago, secure the services of
THE ECONOMY CLUB,
at 171 La Salle St., who can buy for you at
WHOLESALE.

The Vestibuled Pullman Car Line.

The Monon Route is the finest equipped line on the continent and affords choice of four daily trains from Chicago to the South via Indianapolis and Cincinnati, or Louisville and Burgin For full information call on any ticket agent of the Monon Route or address W. H. McDoel, Traffic Manager, or James Barker, Gen'l Pass. Agent, 185 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

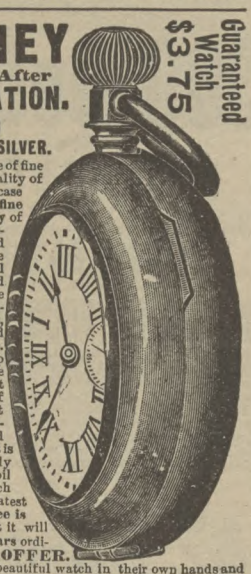
Clean as a whistle

—everything that is cleaned with Pearline. It takes away all that you want taken, and leaves fresh and pure all that you want left. It cleans house with half the work; it does your washing while you wait. Pearline is a harmless powder. It is hard to waste it, easy to use it, but difficult to do without it.

Beware of imitations. 209 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

NO MONEY
Required Until After
FULL EXAMINATION.
14K GOLD
AND SOLID GERMAN SILVER.

Guaranteed Watch $3.75



The cases are made of a plate of fine 14k gold over the finest quality of German silver, making a case composed of nothing but fine gold covering finest quality of German silver. With German silver on the inside and 14k gold on the outside, we warrant the cases to be equal in appearance to a $50 solid 14k gold watch. They are open face, smooth bazine, finished to a dazzling brightness, dust and damp proof and warranted to wear a life time. Different from the cheap brass watches offered, the case contains nothing but gold and the finest quality of German silver, and in fact it is in every way, except intrinsic value, equal to a $50 solid gold watch. The movement is a fine 3-4 plate style, finely jeweled, polished pinion, oil tempered main spring which does not break, and all the latest improvements. A guarantee is sent with each watch that it will keep accurate time for 2 years ordinary use. OUR 90 DAY OFFER. That all may have this beautiful watch in their own hands and fully examine and see for themselves the value and running qualities of same, we will send it C. O. D. to your express office, with the privilege to examine it. All we ask is any business man in your city as reference that you are ordering the watch in good faith, and if found satisfactory you can pay the express agent $3 75 or when full amount is sent with order we give a fine gold plated chain and charm free. If not satisfactory you can refuse same and you are nothing out but your time in going to the express office. Knowing the fine qualities of this watch we make the above offer, as any one wanting a good time piece will accept same at once on examination. Order at once as our price will be advanced. Address WILLIAMS & CO., 125 S. Halsted St., Chicago, Illinois.

SEE ADVERTISEMENT OF
STANDARD FIBER-WARE
IN NEXT WEEK'S "UNION SIGNAL."

THE PERFECTION FLOUR BIN and SIEVE.
The housekeeper's best friend. Agents wanted.
SHERMAN, TANGENBERG & CO.,
491-493 Carroll Ave., Cor. Union Park Place. Chicago.

PATENT BOOK FREE. N. W. FITZGERALD, Washington, D.C.

PENSIONS New law. All entitled. Blanks free. No fee unless successful.
N. W. FITZGERALD, Washington, D. C.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

WASHINGTON Write for information. New State and Town Jay Anderson Box 362, Seattle, Wash LILLIWAUP

THE NEW PENSION LAW
grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent.
Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

TOKOLOGY, a complete Ladies' Guide in health and disease. Lizzie N. Armstrong writes: "If I knew I was to be the mother of innumerable children it would have no terrors for me, so great is my confidence in the science of TOKOLOGY. I have a strong, healthy baby boy, who has never been sick a minute." Bought from agents or direct of us. $2.75. Sample pages free. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

$1.99 buys a $12.00 genuine Silverene STEM WIND Watch. Shipped C.O.D. and examination allowed before paying for same. Address The Nat'l Mfg. & Importing Co., 191 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Sioux City Corn Palace.

Sept. 25 to Oct. 11, 1890.

What is a Corn Palace?

The Sioux City Corn Palace—and there never was a corn palace outside of Sioux City—is a palace covered and embellished, as with tapestry, outside and inside, with products of the field, corn predominating, ingeniously and fancifully arranged. In building the palace a large structure is first erected of lumber, of a shape that will carry and show to advantage the multiform decorations with which it is to be adorned. It is in form lofty, with broken lines, pinnacles, buttresses, bridges, gables, ornamental windows, etc.

Over every inch of this wooden surface are laid corn, and kindred plants, in architectural harmony, in a multiplicity of designs. The corn is employed in the stalk, the ear, the kernel, and even the husk has its decorative uses. All the grains and grasses of the field lend themselves to the beautifying of the palace. The walls are covered on the outside with ears of corn, cut lengthwise or crosswise, and nailed on in geometrical figures or other designs. The various colors of the cereal permit of a wide range of shading and coloring, while its artistic possibilities, developed from year to year in building the palace, admit of the production of effects that are as startling as pleasurable.

High over the entrance of the palace of 1889 was King Corn's crown as the nucleus of a sunburst, while below was the national flag in graceful folds—all wrought in vari-colored corn as true and as beautiful as if painted by an artist-brush. The roof is overlaid with corn-leaves. Pinnacles and columns are capped with the sorghum plant, or with grains and grasses. The iridescent walls, seen from a near distance, seem to be a rich mosaic of polished woods, while with the "Banners, yellow, glorious, golden,"

that

"From its roof-tree float and flow,"

the palace enraptures the beholder as one who looks upon a cloud-painted mansion that may dissolve before his eyes.

The interior work is finer and more elaborate. Here the kernel of the corn is largely employed, producing amazing and lovely effects. On the walls are wrought pictures, illustrating farm scenes, legendary and nursery tales, etc., with a fidelity that is calculated to raise a doubt that the material employed is the homely utilitarian growth of Western farms. Frescoes and flowers, figures of persons and animals, draperies, and thousands of surprising and beautiful things are made of field plants, for the delight of the visitors to the palace, whose astonishment is succeeded by admiration of the genius that conceived and developed so much of art and beauty from such homely fabrics as are employed.

For full particulars of lowest excursion rates and most scenic route, call on or write to

W. A. Thrall,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent.
S. B. Jones,
City Passenger Agent, 206-208 Clark St., Chicago.

CHRISTIAN LIFE SONGS

For Sunday Schools, etc., by S. W. STRAUB, Author of "Beautiful Songs," "Living Fountain," "Morning Light," and 20 other popular books.

Just published! Unlike any other! Much higher grade of music and words! Great variety. Best works of English, German and American composers and writers. Price 35c. Only 20c for one sample copy. Send for it.

S. W. STRAUB & CO., Pubs., 243 State St., Chicago.
WARD & DRUMMOND, New York.

The WOMEN'S PENNY PAPER.

published in England takes a wide review of Women's work in every land.

EVERY SATURDAY.
EDITOR H. B. TEMPLE,
86 Strand, London, England.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR
MY STORY OF THE WAR
By Mary A. Livermore

Her own Narrative of "FOUR YEARS PERSONAL EXPERIENCE AS NURSE" in Hospitals, Camps, and on the Battle-field. No other book has drawn so many tears. Bright, Pure, and Good, of matchless interest and profound pathos. It sells at sight to all. The "booming" book to make money on now and for the holidays. ☞ No competition. 700 pages, splendid Steel Plates, and old Battle-Flags in twenty colors. 61*st thousand.* ☞ 5,000 more Agents Wanted—Men and Women. Distance no hindrance, for we Pay Freights and give Extra Terms. Write for circulars to
A. D. WORTHINGTON & CO., Hartford, Conn.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May. Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marshal & Smith Piano Co.,
235 East 21st St., N. Y.

CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer. Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO.
Washington, N. J.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City. 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home. Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths.
Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Notes.

Is Temperance Work Missionary Work?

We give here a few extracts from a little pamphlet recently published by us. It is entitled "The Liquor Traffic in Western Africa," and is written by Mary Clement Leavitt. After you have read these extracts you will want to read it all. When you are sending for your copy send for nine more, then you will have ten copies, and if you don't know nine people who ought to know the depths of misery the liquor traffic is placing the country that should be protected by our own, it will be an oddity. Start out with the ministers, deacons, elders, and church committee men. Show the book to the ladies who are deeply interested in foreign missions, but not a bit interested in temperance (there is a lot of them!) and bring the matter up in missionary prayer meeting:

A slight idea of the amount of drink sent to Africa may be gathered from the following facts:

At Madeira, where many, but by no means all, of the ships going to Africa touch, the following amounts were declared in one week: 960,000 cases of gin, 24,000 butts of rum, 30,000 cases of brandy, 28,000 cases of Irish whisky, 800,000 demijohns of rum, 36,000 barrels of rum, 30,000 cases of "Old Tom," 15,000 cases of absinthe, 40,000 cases of vermouth, all costing $5,230,000.

It has been the custom at some of the mission stations on the Lower Congo to send preachers out, generally some of the educated colored helpers from Jamaica, or the United States, to preach to the natives in the employ of the traders. Three or four years ago congregations of fifty to one hundred and fifty could be gathered where now it is impossible to hold service, as every man, woman and child is drunk. At Banana, I was ill at the hotel over two Sundays. The afternoon and evening of both these days was a howling pandemonium from drink. At Tunkerly, South Africa, there is an average of one native found dead every morning from excessive drinking.

European traders force drink upon natives and native traders, contrary to their will. One European trader said to another in my hearing, "Down my way the 'niggers' are getting so impudent they don't want to take what you offer them in trade, they want to choose." Said another trader, "What do they want?" "Oh, cloth, salt and money. Think of that! They want money and they don't want rum!"

"That will never do," said number two; "there is nothing we can make so much on as rum." "They get these notions from the ——— missionaries," said number one.

"Yes," said number two, "the missionaries spoil the country for trade." All this, being interpreted, meant that the missionaries are imparting instruction, are elevating the natives, and fitting them to look after their true interests, and unfitting them to be the unthinking, unresisting prey of the traders.

We have space for the above extracts only. What to do about it all is the summary and you ought to read it. You are your brother's keeper.

Willard Souvenir Cards.

September 28 has been set apart as Harvest Home Day in honor of its being the birthday of Miss Willard. Last year we prepared a set of twelve cards with illuminated texts on one side, and witty, wise, or winning quotations of Miss Willard's on the other side. This year we have another set ready with new words of wisdom and helpfulness. The cards are put up in packages of twelve. We offer them at a low rate in packages only, viz.:

1 package,	$ .25
8 assorted p'kgs (96 cards)	1.60

We had orders for great numbers of these pretty cards last year. Send for what you will need soon. One of the sets will have Miss Willard's new poem, "Saloons, Saloons, Saloons Must Go!" printed thereon, and this will be especially useful in Nebraska. It is urged that September 28 be made a Nebraska day. See The Young Crusader for particulars.

What Can I do for Temperance?

Secure a local agency for "Glimpses of Fifty Years," or for "The Conflict Between Man and Alcohol," and place a few copies in your town. Write us for terms.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Bathe sore eyes
with Pond's Extract.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

300 Dollars
—IN—
PREMIUMS
will be offered to Purchasers through H. C. F. KOCH & CO'S Illustrated
FASHION CATALOGUE.
A Guide of how to buy
DRY GOODS FROM NEW YORK
and have them delivered free of charge—when the order amounts to a specified sum—at prices guaranteed lower than from any other house in the U. S.
Published September 10, '90, and mailed free upon application; listing and illustrating, with over 2,000 lithographs and wood-cuts, everything needed for Ladies', Gents' and Children's wear and adornment; Housekeeping Goods, etc.

H. C. F. Koch & Co. IMPORTERS AND RETAILERS
6th Ave. and 20th St., New York.
In writing please mention this paper.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
"Once Tried, Always Used."
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [64

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY
GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.
Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Caster, or Webster's Dictionary. 3½ lbs. Fine Tea by Mail on receipt of $2.
THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P.O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

THE TOTAL ABSTINENCE
LIFE ASS'N OF AMERICA
furnishes the best and cheapest insurance for total abstainers from alcoholic liquors as a beverage.
Women insured on same terms as men. Agents wanted. Address W. F. Singleton, Pres., Royal Insurance Bldg., CHICAGO, Ill.

NOTICE.
The Records of Marion County, Oregon, show the platting of many thousand acres of land in small tracts of from 5 to 10 acres.
Capital City Fruit Farm of 640 acres, Sunnyside number 1,320 acres; Sunnyside number 2,140 acres; Sunnyside number 3,500 acres, and a number of others have been placed on the records by The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Oregon.
This Company is also doing business in Portland and Albany, and has for sale numerous other small tracts. The great advantage of this plan is that it brings together in one community the class of people who are all engaged in the same business, viz., fruit growing, consequently there springs up large Drying and Canning establishments similar to those in the city of Salem, which makes a profitable market for the fruit raised.
Consult your interests by buying of The Oregon Land Company of Salem, Portland or Albany, Oregon.

"He had small skill o' horse flesh who bought a goose to ride on." Don't take ordinary soaps for house-cleaning.
THE PROPER THING is SAPOLIO
=Try a cake of it, and be convinced.=
Common Soap fails to accomplish satisfactory results in scouring and cleaning, and necessitates a great outlay of time and labor, which more than balances any saving in cost. Practical people will find SAPOLIO the best and cheapest soap for house-cleaning and scouring.

Prohibition a Business Success.
DEMOREST
THE PROHIBITION CITY
OF THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS OF NORTH-EAST GEORGIA.
The grandest business openings. Manufacturing establishments already in operation. Others going in rapidly. Room for many more. Cheap cotton, cheap wool, cheap lumber, cheap raw material, free water power, low cost of living, free factory sites, small operating expenses render Demorest a manufacturing paradise. Low cost of building material enables every man to build and own a home.
Finest climate in the United States. Summer more pleasant than in the North. Winter mild and short. Spring and autumn long and delightful. Yellow Fever impossible; Malaria Unknown; Asthma Always cured; Bronchial and other Chronic troubles always relieved; no Hay Fever. The bracing air and remarkably pure spring water restore health and render life enjoyable.
GRAND AUCTION SALE OF LOTS
OCT. 16, 17, 18.
Buy Tickets via Queen and Crescent Route, or Louisville and Nashville, from all North-Western Points to Atlanta, Ga., at One Fare for Round Trip.
ATLANTA TO DEMOREST $3.50 FOR ROUND TRIP.
For Particulars, Address,
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.
FRANK J. SIBLEY, Secretary.
DEMOREST, GEORGIA.

HAIR ON THE FACE, NECK, ARMS OR ANY PART OF THE PERSON
QUICKLY DISSOLVED AND REMOVED WITH THE NEW SOLUTION
MODENE
AND THE GROWTH FOREVER DESTROYED WITHOUT THE SLIGHTEST INJURY OR DISCOLORATION OF THE MOST DELICATE SKIN.

Discovered by Accident.—IN COMPOUNDING, an incomplete mixture was accidentally spilled on the back of the hand, and on washing afterward it was discovered that the hair was completely removed. We purchased the new discovery and named it MODENE. It is perfectly pure, free from all injurious substances, and so simple any one can use it. It acts mildly but surely, and you will be surprised and delighted with the results. Apply for a few minutes and the hair disappears as if by magic. It has no resemblance whatever to any other preparation ever used for a like purpose, and no scientific discovery ever attained such wonderful results. IT CAN NOT FAIL. If the growth be light, one application will remove it permanently; the heavy growth such as the beard or hair on moles may require two or more applications before all the roots are destroyed, although all hair will be removed at each application, and without slightest injury or unpleasant feeling when applied or ever afterward. MODENE SUPERCEDES ELECTROLYSIS.
Recommended by all who have tested its merits—Used by people of refinement.
Gentlemen who do not appreciate nature's gift of a beard, will find a priceless boon in Modene, which does away with shaving. It dissolves and destroys the life principle of the hair, thereby rendering its future growth an utter impossibility, and is guaranteed to be as harmless as water to the skin. Young persons who find an embarrassing growth of hair coming, should use Modene to destroy its growth. Modene sent by mail, in safety mailing cases, postage paid, (securely sealed from observation) on receipt of price, $1.00 per bottle. Send money by letter, with your full address written plainly. ☞Correspondence sacredly private. Postage stamps received the same as cash. (ALWAYS MENTION YOUR COUNTY AND THIS PAPER.) Cut this advertisement out.
LOCAL AND GENERAL AGENTS WANTED.
MODENE MANUFACTURING CO., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A.
Manufacturers of the Highest Grade Hair Preparations.
You can register your letter at any Post-office to insure its safe delivery.
We Offer $1,000 FOR FAILURE OR THE SLIGHTEST INJURY. ☞EVERY BOTTLE GUARANTEED.

AGENTS Wanted. Liberal Salary Paid. At home or to travel. Team furnished free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston.

SAVE MONEY. Our 486-page Catalogue gives Wholesale Prices on all kinds of Merchandise in any quanity. Anti-trust and Co-operative. Write for particulars. Cash Buyers' Mer. Union, Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU ARE MARRIED, or contemplate taking this important step, we can send you information which you ought to know, and worth $100. Valuable 16-page circular mailed free, by J. S. OGILVIE, 57 Rose Street, New York.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

FREE A valuable pamphlet on Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Nervous Prostration sent free to any address. Gluten Entire Wheat Flour Co., 135 Lake St., Chicago, Ill.

SILK-SONGS SATIN & PLUSH pieces for Crazy Patch large, beautiful pkg. 10c. Pkg. BEST EMBROIDERY SILK, all colors, 10c. 100 Best SONGS words & music complete 10c. Any three articles 25c including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, $1. Adr. THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F," CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

$50 OUTFIT ON 30 DAYS' TIME TO AGENTS Guarantee $150 profits in four weeks or no pay, to travel or work at home. No competition. C. JARVIS & CO., Racine, Wis.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable. Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO., ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Publisher's Dep't.

LIBRARY SERIES.

No. 1. Helping. Ada M. Melville.

No. 2. Van and Vet. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.

No. 3. Prove It. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.

No. 4. Stories of Friends.

These books form a part of the Required Readings for the Loyal Temperance Legion seals. They are bright temperance stories, of the kind that boys and girls like to read. They will tell their own moral, and it will be of a kind worth telling. Subscription price to the Library Series, one year (four issues), 40 cents, single books, 10 cents.

All the prices here given include postage.

NATIONAL LEAFLETS.

No. 41. Busy Women and the W. C. T. U. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.

No. 42. Twelve Reasons why Women Want to Vote. Alice Stone Blackwell.

No. 43. Why One Woman Wants to Vote. Ella G. Ives.

No. 44. "The Letter Killeth, the Spirit Maketh Free." Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, Nat'l Supt. Dept. of Franchise. A presentation of the Bible status of woman; clear, logical, strong.

No. 45. Little Things in Child-Life. Mrs. S. M. I. Henry.

A reprint of one of the best chapters in that model book, "Unanswered Prayer." A leaflet to slip into the hands of mothers who fail to note how the "little foxes" are spoiling their vines.

Price per package 10, $ .10. Per 100, $ .90.

Oh, busy women! Why not take time enough to see what these new leaflets can teach you? Wisely use the expedients of others, that is what they are written for.

GOSPEL PURITY SERIES.

No. 4. A Letter to American Women. William T. Stead.

No. 5. A White Life for Two. Frances E. Willard.

Price, each, $ .05, 10 or more copies, each, $ .03. Per 100, $2.50.

WHITE CROSS SERIES.

No. 11. Personal Purity. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.

No. 12. Real Chivalry. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.

These leaflets are reprints from "Boys and Other Boys," designed to meet the imperative call from teachers and friends for something to put into the hands of the "middle-aged boys." They deal with vital topics delicately yet plainly.

SOCIAL PURITY SERIES.

No. 10. Her Talisman.

A story that is just the thing to slip into the hand of the thoughtless girl who yet is taking terrible risks in her thoughtlessness. It will attract, as a story, and convey its lesson the more surely because it does not "preach."

No. 11. The Child in the Midst.

A leaflet for primary teachers and mothers.

Price, each, $ .03. Per 100, $2.00.

These four last named leaflets are particularly adapted for teachers in the public schools, also for Sunday-school teachers.

FAIR NUMBER.

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.

Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00
All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

WELL! WELL! WELL! Which means, is it possible that you have never tried to get 10c. for 5 weeks, or 25c. for 3 months' trial of THE UNION SIGNAL?

Well, well, well! That is the way to get indifferents interested.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Bright Girls —AND— Active Women

CAN MAKE MONEY

In Securing Subscriptions for

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

WE want a wide-awake Agent, either man or woman, to represent us in every city, town and village, and we offer unusual inducements to the best class of canvassing Agents.

The Ladies' Home Journal

will be advertised, the coming autumn and winter, on a larger scale than ever before, and thousands of families will be ready to subscribe through the First Energetic Agent in the Field.

The demand will be very large. Will you be ready to supply it? Book Agents can solicit in connection with their regular business. A woman can easily earn her own pin-money, and be independent.

☞We offer a splendid money-making position to such Agents as succeed after a trial; and furnish such instructions as to make it an easy occupation, free from the disagreeable elements of canvassing. We help Agents in creating a demand by advertising liberally, and supplying handsome illustrated prospectuses for advance distribution. For special inducements, see private terms.

For 10 cents we will mail Sample Copies of different dates, Terms to Agents, large Illustrated Catalogue and Premium-List, etc.

Enlarged to 32 pages, in dainty-colored cover, and handsomely illustrated. The most beautiful magazine ever published for ladies and the family.

CURTIS PUBLISHING COMPANY, Philadelphia, Pa.

BABY CARRIAGES ARE DELIVERED FREE to any place in the United States. Also Baby JUMPERS, BICYCLES, SAFETIES and GIRLS' TRICYCLES. One or more at wholesale price sent C. O. D. direct from L. G. SPENCER'S Factory, 221 W. Madison Street CHICAGO. $3 to $10 saved. Send 2c. stamp for new catalogue. The largest factory in the world. Latest Styles.

HEMORRHOIDS CURED AT HOME. NEW Treatment. Never Fails to Cure. Full instructions for self-treatment go with every order. Nothing like it in the world for Piles. Large package, $2, enough to cure any case. Trial size $1. cientific treatise on Piles sent free. GLOBE MEDICINE CO., Box 714, CINCINNATI, O. Read Big ad. UNION SIGNAL, Aug. 14, Page 15.

(Mention this paper.)

Best Truss Ever Used. Improved Elastic Truss. Worn night and day. Positively cures rupture. Sent by mail everywhere. Write for full descriptive circulars. DR. HOUSE, N. Y., ELASTIC TRUSS CO., 744 Broadway, N. Y.

FOR A 2c. STAMP WE WILL SEND FREE TO ANY ADDRESS, A TRIAL BOX OF . . No Pain! No Poison! A-CORN SALVE REMOVES THE TOE-CORN EVERY TIME. GIANT CHEMICAL CO., PHILA., PA.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

FACTS FOR THE SICK. Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars. Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. B. A. Camfield, Consulting and Operating Surgeon, for all diseases and deformities of the Eye and Ear. The largest stock of artificial eyes in the West. Office 163 State St. Chicago, Ill

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY, 181 Monroe St., CHICAGO, Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT HALF PRICE, $5 AND UP.

POSITIVELY CURES RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, LIVER, KIDNEY and exhausting nervous DISEASES of both sexes. 100 degrees of Electricity. Guaranteed latest improved, most powerful MEDICAL ELECTRIC BELT in the WORLD. Pamphlet free. DR. W. J. HORNE, 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

STOUT PEOPLE! WEIGHT REDUCED WITHOUT STARVATION OR DIET. Treatise & instruction for 6 stamps. E. LYNTON, 19 Park Place, New York

Dr. Owen's Electric Belt. FOR MAN AND WOMAN

The only practicable electric belt made. Cures Rheumatism, Brights' Disease, Sciatica, Paralysis, Torpid Liver, Lumbago, Nervous Debility, Female Weakness, General Debility, Painful Menses, Saint Vitus Dance, Spinal Diseases, Kidney Complaints, Urinary Diseases. Pat. Aug., 16, 1887. Improved Aug. 1, 1889. Awarded the highest medal at Cincinnati Exposition, 1888. Gives mild or strong current of electricity which stimulates and assists nature to restore weak organs to health and vigor.

ELECTRIC INSOLES $1.00. Send 6c for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian. DR. OWEN BELT CO., 191 & 193 State St., Chicago, Ill.

BLISS WOMAN'S BAND. Something NEW. Indorsed by Annie Jenness-Miller. No lady should be without. Fitted band, 75c.; plain, 30c. BLISS MF'G CO., Box 367, Minneapolis, Minn. Agents wanted.

REV. T. P. CHILDS Will effectually & permanently cure any case of CATARRH or BRONCHITIS, no matter how DESPERATE. REV. T. P. CHILDS, TROY, O. CATARRH.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES FOR WOMAN'S ILLS. Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.

MAGNETIC SHIELD CO., No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

CANCER and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

RHEUMATISM If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

HEALTH "Compound Clover Blossom" a specific for all female complaints. Lady agents make $25 a week. Dr. J. Moffatt Med. Co., 243 State st. Chicago

OPIUM OR MORPHINE HABIT Painlessly and Permanently Cured at Home. Only Hope for Opium Eaters. Discovered and Tested, 1868. Book Sent Free. Address Dr. S. B. COLLINS, discoverer and sole mfr. P. O. Drawer 691, Am. Ex Bldg., Room 27, Chicago. Formerly La Porte, Ind.

Signal Notes.

THE difficulties between England and Portugal, over which they have been quarreling for three years, have now been amicably settled; a noteworthy and encouraging feature of the settlement is the insertion of a clause providing that all differences that may arise between these two governments in the future, are to be settled by arbitration.

WOMEN had the start in America, and they seem inclined to keep it. Not to mention Isabella's share in its discovery, the truth of the proposition is shown by the fact that the first white children born, both in Virginia and Massachusetts, were girls; Virginia Dare, named from her birthplace, was the first white child born within the limits of the Thirteen Colonies. Mary Chilton was the first Pilgrim to step foot on Plymouth Rock, and it is just as worthy of record that this privilege was hers through the chivalry of John Alden.

Two hundred Hindu young ladies are studying medicine in the medical schools of India.

LASELL SEMINARY, Auburndale, Mass., has this summer turned away, for want of room, as many as she has been able to take. The demand on her rooms seems to be greater than ever. One new teacher takes her place, Miss M. E. Tappan, in the department of English. Principal Bragdon's private rooms have been filled with pupils, and many are on the waiting list. The principal's party, for a trip round the world in eight months, starts October 1. In his absence Miss C. J. Chamberlayne has charge He will be accompanied by his brother, Dr. Bragdon, of Evanston, and his wife, and ladies from California, Ohio, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. Special effort will be made to visit the mission work.

GLADSTONE has published 229 books and pamphlets, not to mention innumerable newspaper and magazine articles; considering his work as a statesman, this record shows that he can hardly be classed as a man of leisure.

FATHER ZIEGLER, of St. Malachy's Church, St. Louis, has instituted an effective temperance campaign by boycotting the drinkers. He has obtained the names of the men of his parish who drink, and placed this list in the hands of a committee of sixty women, many of them wives of the men on the list. These bibulous husbands were informed by trembling wives that unless they straightway reformed their names would be read by Father Ziegler from the altar. Great as was the consternation among these married sinners, it was as nothing compared with that among the bachelors on the list. The young ladies have entered with spirit into the plan, and the least suspicion of a young man's faithlessness to the pledge, is visited with the boycott. Young men vie with old ones in "swearing off," and the crusade which was at first laughed at, is accomplishing great good.

MR. KELTIE, of the English Royal Geographical Society, reckons the entire trade of Africa exports and imports at about £90,000,000. Of this £40,000,000 belongs to the Mediterranean countries. The exports of Cape Colony for the last year are £9,405,955, an increase of over half a million pounds during the year.

THE cost of alcoholics prescribed in infirmaries promises to prove an element for good in the non-alcoholic medication problem. Some thrifty Britons have been feeling that the liquor bills for these institutions were a heavy burden upon tax-payers, and, to test the matter, Alderman Stephens, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, has collected statistics upon this point from sixty-seven hospitals and infirmaries in the United Kingdom. The average cost per patient for liquors varies from 7s. 10¼d. in a small infirmary at Elgin, to NIL, as given in the records for the London Temperance Hospital, where, with 753 patients, not a farthing is expended for alcoholics. Next to it stands the great Swansea hospital, with 3,952 patients, where the average expenditure per patient per year is only one and three-fourths pence. Had it prescribed the same amount of alcoholics for each of its patients that Elgin did, its liquor bill would have been over £1,500, instead of £27. It is well that tax-payers are beginning to ponder these figures; when they go a step further and learn the fact that the death rate in the hospital which uses no liquor is from four to twelve per cent less than in those which do use it, the day of medical drunkard-making in hospitals is past.

HARTSHORN'S SELF-ACTING SHADE ROLLERS
Beware of Imitations. NOTICE AUTOGRAPH OF Stewart Hartshorn ON LABEL AND GET THE GENUINE HARTSHORN

EDUCATIONAL.

Mt. Carroll (Ill.) Seminary "Ore ads" free

Woman's Medical College of Baltimore, S. E. Cor. Druid Hill Av. & Hoffman St. The ninth annual session will begin on Wednesday, Oct 1st, 1890, and will continue seven months For further information or catalogue address Randolph Winslow, M. D., Dean, 1 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

ROCKLAND COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES, NYACK-ON-THE-HUDSON. ...ol of the highest grade on the West bank ...dson, 25 miles from New York. Preparato... for Young Men, College for Ladies, 12 ... Full Courses of study. Steam heat, ...me, and absolute health. An endow... ...adies at $200. Next year opens Sept. 17. ... Catalogue. H. BANNISTER, A. M., Principal.

MICH... FEMALE SEMINARY. Kalamazoo, Mich. Opens S... College, Preparatory and advanced co... study Fine advantages in Music and Ar... Heat. Pass'r Elevator. Send for catalog... ISABELLA G. FRENCH, Prin.

Baby's ... Only 21 patterns 40cts. Complete Wardrobe first outfit Directions for making and trimming stylishly. Number, kind and amount of material required. Hints on care of baby. RELIABLE PATTERN Co. Lodi, Ohio.

DRY GOODS FROM NEW YORK. CATALOGUE SENT FREE Containing 1,000 illustrations of the latest and most stylish Costumes, Cloaks, Underwear, Shoes, Furnishing Goods, Art Goods, etc., with the lowest New York Cash Prices attached. Catalogue mailed by addressing MAHLER BROS., FREE 504 and 509 6th Avenue, New York.

JAPANESE BRIC-A-BRAC
Shipped to Church Fairs on Consignment; get our circulars.
THE FORMOSA, 86 STATE ST., CHICAGO.

One Cent
Buys a postal card. Get one and send for a description of our famous PURE AIR HEATING STOVES and FURNACES. They warm and ventilate on half the fuel used in other kinds.
HESS STOVE WORKS, 103 Fulton St. Chicago,

GRANULA
The most nutritious and digestible of Foods. Send for pamphlet. Trial box by mail 36c. Address Our Home Granula Co., Dansville, N. Y.

LADIES! Use only Brown's French Dressing on your Boots and Shoes.

THE STEVENS DISHWASHING MACHINE CO. Cleveland, O., manufacture the Only Perfect Machine for Washing, Rinsing and Drying the dishes without the use of Dish or Wiping Cloth, ever in vented; the dishes can remain in the Machine until wanted for use; the hated work of the kitchen performed in 5 minutes. Every machine guaranteep to do its work perfectly. Correspondence solicited. Send for descriptive circulars Agents wanted.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.
For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases and Scrofulous Humors.
TO CONSUMPTIVES.—Wilbor's Cod-liver Oil and Phosphates has now been before the public twenty years, and has steadily grown in favor and appreciation. This could not be the case unless the preparation was of high intrinsic value. The combination of the Phosphates with pure Cod-liver Oil, as prepared by Dr. Wilbor, has produced a new phase in the treatment of Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs. It can be taken by the most delicate invalid without creating the nausea which is such an objection to the Cod-liver Oil when taken without Phosphates. It is prescribed by the regular faculty. Sold by the proprietor, A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and by all Druggists.

BEECHAM'S PILLS (THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY.) Cure BILIOUS and Nervous ILLS. 25cts. a Box. OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR THE CURE OF Cancer & Tumors Without the Knife Book free. L. D. McMICHAEL, M. D. 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

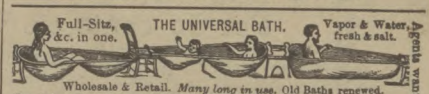
RISING SUN STOVE POLISH
FOR BEAUTY OF POLISH. SAVING LABOR, CLEANLINESS, DURABILITY & CHEAPNESS, UNEQUALLED. NO ODOR WHEN HEATED.
Do not take any chances of being poisoned or burned to death with Liquid Stove Polish, paints, and enamels in bottles. The "Rising Sun Stove Polish" is safe, odorless, brilliant, the cheapest and best stove polish made, and the consumer pays for no expensive tin or glass with every purchase

REVELATION IN DRESS FITTING FREE BY MAIL
ONCE TRIED ALWAYS USED MENTION THIS PAPER.
1 2 3
3 MEASUREMENTS —ONLY— FRANCO-AMERICAN DRESS-FITTING MACHINE CO.
476 Fulton St. Brooklyn N.Y.

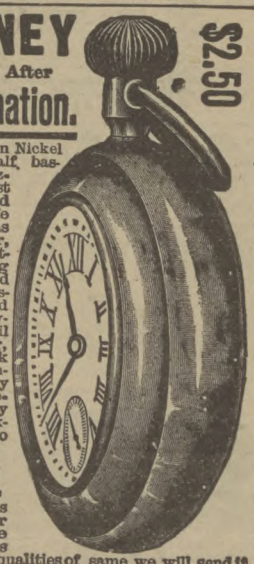
KNITTING MACHINE
The New Branson Knitting Machine is the most perfect machine invented for either family or manufacturers' use. Seamless Hosiery of all sizes, with heel and toe complete, of either cotton or wool, also single and double Mittens are knit on these machines. Boys and girls of 12 years operate them, and in factories turn out 4 dozen pairs a day each. A family can make a living with one of these machines. Descriptive circulars sent free.
Jesse L. Branson, 80 East 4th Street, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

For Gas BAILEY'S COMPOUND light-spreading Silver-plated Corrugated Glass REFLECTORS, For Oil
A wonderful invention for lighting CHURCHES, Halls, etc. Handsome designs. Satisfaction guaranteed. Catalogue and price list free. BAILEY REFLECTOR CO. 118 Wood st., Pittsburgh, Pa.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill. We do not sell liquors in any shape.



Wholesale & Retail. Many long in use. Old Baths renewed.
Send for Circulars. E. J. KNOWLTON, Ann Arbor, Mich.

NO MONEY Required Until After Full Examination. $2.50
A Genuine Solid Coin Nickel Watch, Open Face, half basine, finished to a dazzling brightness, dust and damp proof, and warranted to wear a life time. World-famed as being brighter, harder, smoother and more lasting than solid Sterling or Coin Silver. Fitted with a high grade adjusted genuine stem-wind movement, finely jewled polished pinion, oil tempered main spring, which does not break and all the latest improvements; thoroughly inspected and timed before leaving the factory This watch is a fine looker and we warrant it to keep accurate time.


Our 60-day Offer
That all may have this beautiful watch in their hand and fully examine and see for themselves the value and running qualities of same we will send it C. O. D. to your express office, with the privilege to examine it. If found satisfactory you can pay the express agent the $2.50 or 3 for $6.00 and express charges. If not satisfactory you can refuse same and you are nothing out but your time in going to the express office. Knowing the fine qualities of this watch we make the above offer, as any one wanting a good time piece will accept same at once on examination. A guarantee goes with each watch fully warranting the watch to be exactly as represented and a thoroughly reliable time-keeper. Order at once or our price will be advanced. Address W. HILL & CO., Wholesale Jewelers, 111 Madison St. Chicago.
We recommend this watch to any one who desires a low-priced watch that combines SERVICE with DURABILITY
Kindly mention this paper when you order.

Engraving shows machine without handle.
The Forsyth Combination Rug & Embroidery Machine is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalog and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn-st., Chicago.

THE EDISON
MIMEOGRAPH
Patented by THOS. A. EDISON.
Patented by Thos. A. Edison. A simple, practical and portable device for every day use. Makes 3,000 copies of the one original writing, Drawing, Music, etc. 1,500 copies of one original Typewriter Letters Recommended by over 40,000 users. Send for circular and sample of work.
A. B. DICK COMPANY, 152-154 Lake Street, CHICAGO. 32 Liberty Street, NEW YORK.

RUBIFOAM
A PERFECT LIQUID DENTIFRICE DELICIOUSLY FLAVORED.
ITS USE INSURES BEAUTIFUL CLEAN TEETH

Price 25 cents
E. W. HOYT & CO., LOWELL, MASS.

VAN ORDEN

Agents Wanted. Perfect Shape CORSETS
Van Orden Corset Co., 22 Clinton Pl., N. Y

LADIES! write for terms. $3 sample corset free to agents. Lewis Schiele & Co., 390 Broadway, N.Y.

'DELSARTE'
Corset Waists and Braces. Send for Price List.
Agents Wanted. DELSARTE CORSET CO., 142 W. 23d St., New York. Also 332 The Rialto, Kansas City, Mo.

LADY AGENTS SAMPLE FREE Send for terms to Mme. McCabe's Celebrated Corsets and Waists. St. Louis Corset Co., St. Louis, Mo.

AMERICAN Desk & Seating Co., Manufacturers
Church, Lodge, School, Bank and Office Furniture.
Send for Catalogue.
270-272 WABASH AVE. CHICAGO.

GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS. Give better satisfaction than any other. Are the best substitute for corsets.

The "Little Beauty" A $5.00 Scale for $1.00
Capacity 1-4 oz. to 4 lbs. Steel Bearings, Brass Scoop and Beam. For Housekeepers, Offices or Stores. Weight packed, 8 lbs. Sent by express

A $65.00 Sewing Machine $18.00
A 900-lb. Platform Scale... 15.00
A $125.00 Top Buggy 65.00
A 2-Ton Wagon Scale..... 40.00
A 5-Ton Scale and Stock Rack 75.00
A $50 Feed Mill 30.00
A $40.00 Road Cart..... 15.00
A $15.00 Single Harness ... 7.50
A 240-lb. Platform Scale... 3.00
Price List Free. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago, Ill.

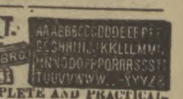
"MURRAY" $55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use GOOD CHEER SOAP. It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it. Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

Pure Drugs at Model Pharmacy, 1542 W. Mich. St., Duluth Minn.

CHICAGO SHOPPING FREE. Send for circular. Mrs. Shergold, 3524 Lake Ave., Chicago. Ill.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.



A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

THE UNION SIGNAL

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

"THOU HAST GIVEN A BANNER TO THEM THAT FEAR THEE; THAT IT MAY BE DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH."

Vol. XVI.—No. 40.] CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, October 2, 1890. [Price $1.50 per Year.

CONTENTS OF THIS NUMBER.

NEWS NOTES AND EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.
EDITORIAL ARTICLES: A Municipal Misgovernment 8, 9
CONTRIBUTED: Poem, The Autumn Home Gathering, by J. E. Rankin, D. D. LL.D —Joab Robinson's Conviction, by Laura J. Rittenhouse—Marriage With Inebriates, by T. D. Crothers, M. D.—International Temperance Studies, by Felix L. Oswald M. D.—True Education, by Hester Poole —Sanctification and the Higher Christian Life, by Ella B. Carter 2, 3, 4
CORRESPONDENCE: Notes from the Battlefield—Rays From the Farther East—Vacation Work—The British, Continental and General Federation—Mrs. Willard's Berlin School—Temperance Temple Items 4, 5
THE STILL HOUR: Topic for the Week Beginning October 12, 1890 5
OUR CHILDREN: Poem, In a Garden—A Young Hero—On Talking Slang—Eyes and No Eyes 6
THE HOUSEHOLD: Poem, God's Singers—Mothering—Teaching Children Badness—Children's School Dresses—Family Worship 7
NEWS FROM THE FIELD: Connecticut, East Washington, Kansas, Wisconsin, Iowa, Ohio, Washington, Missouri, California, Illinois—Announcement—State Conventions 10, 11, 12
OFFICIAL COMMUNICATIONS: Day of Prayer—Railroad Rates —Work Among Colored People—A World's W. C. T. U. Evangelist—Receipts for Temperance Temple 12
PUBLISHER'S DEPARTMENT 14, 15
SIGNAL NOTES 16

NOTICE.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association for the election of directors and the transaction of such other business as may come before it, will be held at the office of the Association, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., Wednesday, Oct. 15, 1890, commencing at ten o'clock a. m. As it is very important that all the stock be represented, each stockholder is urged to be present, or to send her proxy.

MARY ALLEN WEST, Sec.

SINCE OUR LAST ISSUE.

The McKinley Bill has weathered all storms, and passed the House by a vote of 152 to 81.

San Francisco has declared quarantine against Yokohama on account of cholera there.

Dr. W. W. Evarts, for twenty years pastor of the First Baptist Church, Chicago, died Friday.

The London edition of The New York Herald has proved a failure and been discontinued.

Mrs. S. F. Grubb has published forty-eight different temperance tracts in ten different languages during the year.

The National Prison Congress convened in Cincinnati, Thursday evening, President Rutherford B. Hayes presiding.

The immense packing house of Fowler Brothers, Chicago, just sold to an English syndicate, was burned Sunday night. Loss $1,500,000.

Rev. Frank Gunsaulus, Chicago, is to give up his evening service in the Plymouth Church, and preach in a down-town theater every Sunday evening.

Postmaster Eaton, of New Orleans, has begun enforcing the anti-lottery law, though, as he says, he has received no official notification of its passage.

Charles Miller, Prohibition candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania, having declined the nomination, John D. Gill, of Westmoreland, is nominated to take his place.

The Attorney-General of Kentucky has decided that the licenses under which the Frankfort and Henry county lotteries are operating are void, and the lotteries illegal.

The Maritime Prohibition Party, the Dominion Alliance, and Canada's new party, have joined forces, thus uniting the entire temperance element of Canada for political action.

Temperance Sunday was very generally observed in Chicago, all Headquarters people being in demand for addresses. Mrs. T. B. Carse spoke in seven Sabbath schools that day.

The Illinois School of Agriculture and Manual Training for Boys, located on the three-hundred-acre farm given it by Mr. and Mrs. Milton George, of The Western Rural, was dedicated Saturday.

The Farmers' Alliance and the Prohibitionists of North Dakota have united on a ticket nominating Walter Muir for Governor, and endorsing some of the nominees of the Republicans, and some of the Democrats for other state offices.

The efforts of the United States Treasury to relieve the stringency of the money market have resulted in New York banks on Saturday holding $1,900,000 over the reserve required. The average cash holdings showed a gain of $6,890,000.

The question of co-education in the public schools of Boston was submitted to vote of 856 supervisors, masters, teachers, etc.; 565 voted in favor of co-education, and 291 against. Orders have been issued allowing young men to enter the Normal School, and establishing co-education in the Grammar and High Schools.

The Illinois Liquor Dealers' Association in its annual meeting last week passed strong resolutions against the state dramshop act, especially its prohibition of the sale of liquor to minors and to drunkards, declaring it "a stain upon the fair name and an insult to the intelligence of the people of the state." Paul Schuester, of the Champion, made an eloquent appeal for the formation of a liquor dealers' insurance association. The matter was laid over till the next annual meeting.

WE were mistaken in announcing that blank petitions for World's Petition could be obtained from Alice Briggs, Evanston. They can be obtained only of Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge, Ravenna, Ohio.

THE women of Chicago are moving in earnest to have the reading of the Bible restored to the public schools. An efficient organization has been formed, with Mrs. E. A. Cook, as president, and petitions are being vigorously circulated.

W. T. P. A. PEOPLE are not the only cranks in this building; an office on the third floor not occupied by any of our "kith or kin" places this sign very conspicuously on its door: "Cigarette smokers will confer a favor on this office by leaving their vile, ill-smelling favorites outside."

LADY HENRY SOMERSET, the new President of the British Women's Temperance Association, is already engaged until the close of December, with meetings throughout England. She is in great demand. In 1891 Lady Henry Somerset expects to be a fraternal delegate to the annual meeting of our National W. C. T. U.

PHILANTHROPY lost a strong tower when Mary Elizabeth Cooley, wife of Judge Cooley, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, passed over the dark river. She was sixty years of age, but had lost none of the enthusiasm of younger days. For over thirty years she had been a resident of Ann Arbor, Michigan, where she died. She was a noted philanthropist, especially interested in work for women. Some years ago Ex-Governor Jerome appointed her president of the Board of Managers of the State Industrial School for Girls, a position which she ably filled until her death.

THE Association for the Advancement of Women holds its eighteenth annual congress in Toronto, commencing October 18. The citizens of Toronto are making every preparation to welcome its members, and make the meeting a success. Mrs. McDonell, chairman of railroad committee, wishes us to make it emphatic that every one attending, either as delegate or visitor, can secure reduced railroad rates, but only by procuring a certificate from the agent of whom the ticket to Toronto is purchased. This ticket will be sold at regular rates, and the certificate will entitle the holder to reduced rates on return.

A CLEVER Chinaman has outwitted Brother Jonathan by declaring his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States. No Chinaman can become a citizen of this country, but there is nothing in the law to prevent his declaring his intention of becoming a citizen; any alien so declaring and forswearing his allegiance to his former sovereign, becomes, in law, a ward of the Republic, can own property where an alien cannot, and in sixteen states can vote. If many of his countrymen follow this cute Chinaman's example, and "live up to their privileges," it will not be long before anti-Chinese laws will be repealed.

THE columns of the Omaha Bee of the 19th inst. contained a virulent attack upon the personal character of J. R. Dill, of Kansas, who is working in the interests of the pending prohibitory amendment. The slander was immediately refuted by the citizens of the town where the attack originated, and Mr. Dill stands before the public vindicated in character and unscathed by the efforts of the rum power to villify him and injure his work. It is always an indication of good work, when the Devil is attacking our workers. Tent cutting, egg throwing, slander and personal violence only hasten the final crash of the traffic into the depths of infamy whence it sprung.

GREAT interest centered round the state convention of South Dakota because of the equal suffrage campaign in that state. Mrs. Fessenden, National superintendent, was in attendance, and other leading workers. Mrs. Kline, so long treasurer of Dakota W. C. T. U., has removed to Chicago, but returned to attend this convention and will work in Dakota till after election. Miss Anthony and Dr. Anna Shaw are doing wonders there in creating public sentiment, sparing neither their strength nor their pocket-books in this fight, working as they do gratuitously. So do the "home women" of Dakota, led by Mrs. P. E. Johnson, president of the State Equal Suffrage Association; no campaign has witnessed more heroic work than these women are doing.

CINCINNATI has on hand the exposé of scandalous municipal corruption, coming out in a very peculiar way. Ex-Councilman Moonert brings suit against W. H. Forbis, ex-president of the council, to recover $1,000 as his share of boodle for helping pass an ordinance giving especial privileges to the Houston-Thomson Electric Light Company. This brings the whole transaction to light, and a dirty mess it is. The boodlers are impartially divided between the two political parties, have their headquarters in a saloon, and in other ways follow the prevailing fashions of boodlerism, including the stereotype statement, "The exposure, unless hushed up by a liberal expenditure of money, will involve many prominent men of both parties." So says the Chicago Tribune.

WE call especial attention to the article of Dr. Crothers on Marriage with Inebriates. No one can speak with more authority on this subject than he who devotes his life to the study of inebriety; having had years of experience in the Binghampton Home for Inebriates, and in Walnut Lodge, Hartford, of which he is superintendent. The caution he gives is a needed one, and the reasons presented are conclusive. So firmly do we believe in the position here taken that we invariably refuse stories offered for THE UNION SIGNAL in which the heroine married a reformed drunkard, or one who needs reforming, to save him, believing that such stories do an infinitude of mischief, by cultivating wrong public sentiment. Dr. Henry N. Hurd, now superintendent of Johns Hopkins Hospital, for many years in charge of one of Michigan's Insane Asylums, long ago recommended the passage of a law prohibiting the marriage of drunkards, on the ground that children of such marriages run great risks of becoming insane. It is time that public sentiment, especially among women, be aroused along this line, and the awful risks girls run in marrying fast young men or blasé old ones, be clearly set before them.

"EVERY great reform, every foremost cause of God and right has had its heroes. Every reformation has been, at first, an opinion, and that the private opinion of the one man. Here, beneath this consecrated turf, sleeps the hero of a nation's emancipation,—boon not yet realized, vision not yet fulfilled, but a hope and a promise baptized in tears and consecrated by millions of eager prayers." Such was the eloquent tribute spoken at the grave of the Prohibition hero, John B. Finch, Sept. 23, by the Rev. Henry A. Delano, of Evanston, upon the occasion of the unveiling of the monument erected at Rosehill to his memory, by the Independent Order of Good Templars. It is an imposing structure, a handsome granite pedestal, bearing an appropriate inscription, surmounted by a life-size bronze statue of Mr. Finch standing in his favorite attitude, his right hand upon his hip, his left supporting his chin. The ceremony was attended by delegations of Good Templars from many states, prominent Prohibitionists and many other friends. Mr. B. F. Parker, of Milwaukee, secretary of the Grand Lodge of the World, Hon. E. R. Hutchins, of Iowa, Mr. S. B. Chase, of Pennsylvania, delivered addresses. Standing immovable in sight of the hurrying millions that daily pass that beautiful "city of the dead" on their way to and from Chicago, that monument must ever preach of virtue, nobleness and truth. Surely "Being dead he yet speaketh."

Contributed.

THE AUTUMN HOME GATHERING.

BY J. E. RANKIN, D. D., LL.D.

The frost has touched the golden-rod,
And dimmed its yellow luster;
The vine has shed its foliage broad,
And yielded up its cluster.

The leaves are falling from the trees,
And nestling in the hollows;
Buzz lonely by the honey-bees,
And gone are all the swallows.

The hills are clad in green and gold,
The autumn's grand regalia;
The earlier flowers their tale have told,
And lonely stands the dahlia.

We gather round our own bright hearth;
For blazing is the ingle;
In words of joy and peace and mirth,
Harmonious voices mingle.

For home is home, and home alone,
Go east or west asunder;
And why we leave the ingle-stone,
When safely back, we wonder.

Orange, N. J.

JOAB ROBINSON'S CONVICTION.

BY LAURA J. RITTENHOUSE.

Joab Robinson sat on the front porch all alone, with a somewhat troubled look clouding his sunburned face. The children were out picking blackberries, and his wife had gone over to the village to buy a calico dress, and some thread and a new strainer.

He had just finished digging his early potatoes. They were already sold to a dealer in the city at an unusually good price, and he ought to have felt cheerful and thankful, but somehow he did not. He sat looking down the sunny, dusty lane, bordered with iron-weeds and daisy-like dogfennel, with its pungent odor. The crickets chirped lonesomely, the air was full of the hum of insects and twitter of birds, and the red hollyhocks and yellow marigolds stood up stiff and inflexible, as if making up in sentinel-like bearing, for their lack of beauty.

"It's all pure nonsense," he muttered. "People are getting their heads too full of new-fangled ideas. It's mighty strange that folks have gone on making and drinking cider all these years, and that it took a lot of women, with their physiologies and other nonsense to find out that Satan himself lurks in the cider-press, ready to take possession of every one that comes near it. It's pure ignorance; they don't know what they're talking about. Don't any body with sense know that cider is only apple-juice, so if there's danger from drinking it, we'll have to stop eating apples." Here he smiled defiantly, as if feeling he had the best of the argument with his absent opponents.

"I haven't been a strict church member all these years, and prayed in public and talked in love-feast, without having some idea of what the good Lord wants me to do with the substance he gives me. If the juice of apples had been dangerous, he'd have made them without juice, I reckon—dried them in slices on the trees, perhaps." Here he laughed grimly at his own sarcasm.

"Next thing they'll be telling us that ham and eggs are intoxicating, and that bean soup produces delirium tremens. I'm just not going to listen to any such foolishness. I don't see what makes me think about it the second time, any how." And he stooped down and dusted his shoes with his bandana handkerchief.

"I've half a notion to not allow the children to go to those temperance meetings any more. I want to raise them to be good men and women, of course, but I don't want them to be fanatics. I'm not, and my father wasn't, nor his father before him, and if there are soberer, more industrious men anywhere than we have been, I'd like to see them."

Then, having straightened up again, with quite an air of pride in his bearing, he looked out over the orchard where the trees were hanging full of apples, some of the early varieties already ripened.

"The crop's so big this year none of us will get much of a price for them, and it's against my principles to let things go to waste. Of course I could make vinegar, but I'd have to wait so long before I could sell it and get my money, and as to dried apples, there's no demand for them in these days of canned goods, so I'm just compelled to make the cider. Why shouldn't I, anyhow, I'd like to know? Who's ever been hurt by my cider? I've never heard of any one, yet, that's certain. Of course I'll make it!" with emphasis and decision, yet with a queer little thrill of weakness running down his back-bone.

"It's come to a pretty pass, when a man has to be dictated to by women and children. I'm not in my dotage yet, and I guess I can manage my own business, and I'm going to, that's all there is about it."

Then, after a moment's silent reflection: "Alice will nearly cry her eyes out, I reckon, if I make the cider. She thinks it 'most as bad as the saloon business. I believe the child will be ashamed of me if I do it, too,—yes, sir, actually ashamed of her own father; a man that no one can accuse of dishonesty or double dealing. That's what too much education does. But the little thing is so in earnest about it, it kind o' makes me uncomfortable to think of grieving her so.

"If I could afford to lose the apples, I'd do it, just to please her—bless her heart, she's so much like my dear old mother was, that it brings the tears to my eyes many and many a time when I look at her.

"But there's no use thinking about it; I'm not rich enough to throw away what the Lord of the harvest has given me. There comes mother, now, I'm glad of it; it's awfully lonesome when she is out of the house. Why, she wipes her eyes as if she were crying! What can be the matter, I wonder?" And out Joab bustled, beset by sympathy and devouring curiosity.

His wife looked at him solemnly, a fresh rush of tears filling her eyes. "I've bad news, father. Here's a letter from your sister Nancy. She's lost her oldest boy, Ned, the one they were all so fond of. He's the one, you know, that got the valedictory when he graduated, and won the fifty dollar prize for an essay; the brightest, smartest one of the whole family. But here, take the letter and read it yourself. I can't talk about it," and weeping bitterly, Mrs. Robinson got out of the buggy, carrying her small parcels, and proceeded to the house while Joab sat down on the horse block by the hitching-post, and read the letter.

It was full of the pitiful yearnings of the heart-broken mother; of the blackness of sorrow that dimmed the home horizon. Joab read on slowly, tears blinding him so that he had often to stop and wipe the mist from his spectacles.

Suddenly his heart seemed almost to stand still, as he came to the last page of her letter.

"And, oh! Sarah, all this pain and suffering, and disgrace, were brought into our home by cider. Ned would be alive to-day, I have no doubt, the pride and glory and joy of our household, were it not for that deceitful, accursed stuff. I never thought of danger in it. We always drank it at home. Joab can tell you we were never without it in our cellar, so when husband found a bargain and bought three barrels of it at once, I was glad of it, it seemed so like old times again. Of course neither of us dreamed that it was bringing death and disgrace to our fireside.

"I can't bear to write much about it, yet, but anyhow our brave, manly, sunny, loving boy began drinking it when it was new and sweet, and we thought of no danger as it grew older, till it was too late, and the appetite for alcohol had hold of him. We did all we could then, reasoned, implored and prayed with him, but it did no good. The poor boy must have been born with a natural love for it, for, although he, too, fought and struggled and prayed to resist temptation, he was too weak to defend himself, and so he is gone, and we are left with our guilty consciences, our bleeding hearts, and the terrible thought always before us that we caused our dear one's ruin through our ignorance of the fact now so plain to us, that for many a poor soul, cider is the stepping-stone to destruction and the drunkard's grave.

"Your broken-hearted sister, NANCY."

For a long time Joab sat still facing the fearful truth so rudely thrust upon him. The locusts set up their noisy evening whir—the four o'clocks opened and bathed themselves in the soft breeze; the cows came up to the meadow bars and lowed, to remind him of the milking, but he heard none of these things. Above all else rose the thought of the pitfall he had been determined to dig for his children, and HE was not altogether ignorant. He had been warned and had scorned the warning. It was as if God had first persuaded, then had laid a heavy restraining hand upon him. By and by the children came home with their baskets full of berries. The sound of Alice's voice was the first thing to arouse him. He called her to him.

"Come here, Alice, to father! Now put your arms around my neck and kiss me, honey."

The child obeyed gleefully, but something in her father's face sobered her.

"Does anything worry you, father?"

"Yes, dear, your cousin Ned is dead, and—and I've been as blind and as bigoted as a heathen, but I think I have my eyesight at last, and, little daughter, you need shed no more tears about it, for I swear I'll never again make or taste a drop of cider."

Cairo, Ill.

MARRIAGE WITH INEBRIATES.

BY T. D. CROTHERS, M. D.
[Editor of the Journal of Inebriety.]

To the specialist who makes a study of inebriety, nothing can be more unpleasant than to advise in relation to marriage with these drink victims. Very often the advice of the physician is final, both parties agreeing to abide by his decision, and in most cases both parties blame him, either openly or in secret, and suppose a different result would have followed from different advice. Two parents of much wealth and good position in society consulted me as to the marriage of an only son, to an only daughter. The son being a genteel, periodical drinker the parents of the daughter hesitated. A family physician urged the marriage as a means of saving the young man Both parties appealed to me, and my decision was adverse The young lady married a poor clergyman, and was early left a widow in feeble health. The young man drank to great excess and died by his own hands. Both parents are firm in the conviction that my counsel was in error.

Appeals are constantly coming to me from ladies who are engaged to drinking men; from mothers and fathers of such daughters, asking advice, giving histories of talented, brilliant inebriates, who have every qualification to make a home, except this tendency to use spirits to excess. Not unfrequently clergymen and physicians urge such marriages, and my opinions are condemned as unreasonable, but most unfortunately for the parties, the result of the experiment is a sad confirmation of what should have been realized at first. I do not hesitate to advise most emphatically against all marriages with inebriates, or even moderate, or occasional excessive users of spirits. The reasons for this position may be grouped as follows·

1. A moderate and an occasional excessive user of spirits is like a person who has a hacking cough and occasional night sweats, or a slight hemorrhage. He may recover and never have consumption, yet there can be no doubt that he has a strong tendency, and is threatened with consumption. There is every reason to believe that sometime in the future he will die of this disease. In the same way the moderate user of spirits may never be any worse, but there is a strong tendency, and stronger probability that in certain conditions and surroundings (that cannot be foreseen), he will become an inebriate. All experience proves that the persons who use spirits in so-called moderation, and do not become inebriates, are so from accidental circumstances and conditions, beyond any will power to shape or determine. The reason is beyond their control or knowledge, and they are the few exceptions that only prove the rule. All such cases have the early symptoms of a grave and fatal disease, and no human foresight can determine what the future will be. It is certain that no marriage association, no sentiment of love or duty, can be depended upon as a remedy.

2. Persons who have been or are periodical drinkers, and who promise to reform or stop drinking at marriage. Such persons are always defective, especially in the higher brain centers. The highest faculties of the brain, conscientiousness, sense of duty, and right and wrong, and moral obligations, are dulled and more or less palsied. Alcohol of all other drugs attacks the highest and last formed powers of the brain, breaking down and dissolving from the very pinnacle of life. This failure of the higher brain powers is apparent when the man is under the influence of spirits, but is covered up when sober, and concealed, but exists just the same. The brute when drunk, may seem like an angel when sober, yet the brute qualities are all there, and may come out any time from the application of the proper forces. The angel nature is only the shadow of what he could or should be, and every drink excess develops the brute and destroys the angel. The man who has been intoxicated has more or less permanently injured the best powers of his brain, and his future is unknown to himself, and cannot be determined by others. To marry such a man, and expect him to be cured by this means, is as irrational as to hope that a broken bone or diseased lung can be healed by this method. Confirmed inebriates have married, and continued temperate ever after, but there are no reasons for supposing that marriage was the cause or means of determining who, and what conditions of life would end in this way. While the inebriate may never drink from the time of marriage, he will always be a weak, broken-down man. His brain and nervous system can never act along healthy ranges of life.

3. There is no fact more certain than that the weakness and disease of the parents will go down to the next generation. The sin of bringing into the world diseased and defective children is almost unpardonable, and the sin of marrying an inebriate and having descendants tainted, and switched off on to the side track of ruin and dissolution, is literally a crime that can never be atoned for. My advice is always, never marry an inebriate or moderate drinker of spirits. If the man is anxious to show his strength, let him remain six or eight years temperate, before he is encouraged to enter upon such a state. Let him prove with all reasonable certainty that he is restored and will not again suffer from drink excess. A most excellent temperance reformer, who prays and works for the coming of a better, purer age, celebrated with great joy the marriage of his daughter to a periodical inebriate whose history and heredity showed that the race he sprang from was nearly extinct. The man still drinks, and three little children have come into the world to swell the ranks of defects and incapables, to add to the misery and sorrow the grandfather so earnestly prays to have diminished.

The regulation of marriage between inebriates and insane is of far more practical value to the world than all the legislation on divorces. If temperance people would exercise common sense here, many a dark fireside would be prevented and many a tide of misery would be checked. The noble army of women that endure the tortures of martyrdom in their vain efforts to help the inebriate, would be halted, and the "golden age" appear nearer to us, as the march of humanity goes on higher.

INTERNATIONAL TEMPERANCE STUDIES.

BY FELIX L. OSWALD, M. D.

Author of "Physical Education," "The Poison Problem," etc.

VIII. SPAIN.

A British commissioner of charities recently called attention to the curious fact that in the city of London hundreds of families subsist on the labor of their young children. "Children of ten and twelve years," he says, "are sent to factories or kept peddling from morning till night, to earn a few shillings which their parents spend for gin. By the time those wage-earners have learned to shift for themselves altogether they generally run away from home and their parents then go to the poorhouse."

A similar fate may be in store for the Spanish monarchy. For the last two hundred years the Kingdom of Spain has been supported by the labor of its temperate peasants and the valor of its temperate mountaineers, and the time may be near when the removal of those props will lead to a general collapse of the alcohol-rotten structure. The Spanish nobility, the Spanish artisans, and the Spanish shop-keepers spend every spare penny for wine, and without their countless tippling-shops would be unable to while away the tenth part of their leisure. Industry, in the New England sense of the word, is almost unknown; education is grossly and, indeed, purposely neglected, for the chance of supplying the needs of idle millions depends upon the hope of wringing the requisite amount of taxes from the ignorant and overworked peasants. Those bread-winners are too poor to maintain schools of their own, but luckily they are likewise too poor to support dram-shops, so they keep starving and toiling till over-taxation at last relegates them to the pauper-class. Those of tougher back-bone toil on to the last; those that break down rely on charity. Hence, the otherwise inexplicable toleration of mendicancy, the chief disgrace of the Spanish cities and highways. The upper classes are at heart hardly more charitable than the aristocrats of Northern Europe, but they dread the risk of insulting poverty, knowing its origin too well to suppress its consequences.

Hence, also, the remarkable fact that of all the highlanders in Europe, the highlanders of Spain have alone been chronic rebels, ever ready to join an insurrection against the established government, and unwearied in the attempts to set up a better government of their own. The secret of that disloyalty is the fact that the temperance vigor and valor of the North-Spanish mountaineers has been for generations abused to support the weakness of the besotted South-Spanish aristocrats, and shield them from the consequences of their sloth and vices. Without the phalanx of the iron-fisted Catalans the Spanish Government would never have been able to maintain its foothold in Cuba, in Porto Rico, nor, indeed, in the mutinous cities of Cadiz and Barcelona, and only by constant intrigues those highlanders can be prevented from making common cause with the Basques or with the mountaineers of Aragon.

"Los Catalanes de piedras hacen panes,"—"The Catalans know the art of turning stones into bread," says a Spanish proverb, and the industry of those hardy highlanders is, indeed, as remarkable as their valor. They build long rock-walls to form an artificial terrace, capable of yielding a few bushels of grain, they carry up water from distant springs or construct miles of irrigation-dikes; they lead their cattle to the highest summit-pastures of the Pyrenees, but they cannot force their cold uplands to ripen grapes, and thus have escaped the temptations of intemperance, and preserved the vigor of their early ancestors. That hard work in a frosty climate can be performed successfully without the aid of alcoholic stimulants is conclusively proved by the habits of the North-Spanish mountaineers. They raise barley, oats and buckwheat; in hard years fall back on beechnuts, in lucky years now and then raise grain enough to have a small surplus for export, but they do not abuse the hundredth part of their harvest for the manufacture of alcoholic poisons. Drunkenness is almost as unknown in the upper Pyrenees as among the Mahomedan natives of the upper Caucasus, and the explanation of their wine-tippling neighbors is not very far from the mark of fact: The Catalans are too busy to drink; they work so hard that they need every hour of their scant leisure for food or sleep.

That idleness is a chief cause of intemperance in Southern Spain is strikingly confirmed by the verdict of an intelligent French merchant who passed many years in the old, wine-cursed city of Seville. "It may appear a gross paradox," he says, "to assert that the institution of the bull-ring is a blessing for the ignorant lower classes of this country, but such, observation has, nevertheless, taught me to be a fact. I do not attempt to deny that there are more refining spectacles than beast-fights, but with all its barbarities the pastime of the circus is a lesser evil; it keeps thousands of idlers away from the much more degrading man-traps of the wine-shops. Inside of the amphitheatre the sale of intoxicating liquors is strictly prohibited, and the exciting character of the spectacle occupies the assembly in a way that makes even confirmed topers forget their craving for stimulants. On Sunday, if the weather is pleasant, one half of the idlers of the town assemble in the neighborhood of the circus an hour before the opening of the gates, to secure good seats, or witness the parade of the chulos. The show itself lasts from three to four hours; an additional hour is subsequently whiled away in discussing the merits of the performance, and all that time is won from the much more ruinous work of the fonda—the quarrel-breeding and health-destroying poisons of the wine-shops. It is not an ideal remedy, I admit, but under the circumstances, it is the only practical alternative. Where else should the masses go on their leisure day? To libraries and reading-rooms, you may say, but they cannot read. Seek recreation in out-town rambles, physicians might advise, but the fields are dusty and bare; game has been entirely exhausted centuries ago. Go to church? Well, they do, in the morning, but during the long, tedious afternoon, the absence of exciting spectacles would drive thousands to drown their ennui in wine."

The shiftlessness of the South Spanish population might be attributed to that convenient excuse: The influence of climate. Italy pleads the same excuse, and points to the chaos of the Middle Ages, and the vices and brutalities of Pagan antiquity. But in the case of Spain there happens to be abundant historical evidence in support of the fact that a warm climate is not incompatible with the industry and intelligence of a temperate population. Only six hundred years ago Southern Spain was a hive of commercial and agricultural activity. The valley of the Guadalquiver boasted twenty-three thousand prosperous villages, the now dreary coast from Cadiz to Malaga was tilled like a garden. Toledo, under the reign of the temperate Moriscoes, had 500,000 inhabitants; Cordoba had 850,000, and attracted visitors from all parts of Europe by the excellence of its high schools, by the skill of its physicians, by the magnificence of its palaces, and bazars. It is now a poor town of less than 50,000 inhabitants; its palaces are dilapidated, its great warehouses are gone, it has but few schools of any kind, but it has two hundred and fifty wine shops.

(To be Continued.)

TRUE EDUCATION.

BY HESTER POOLE.

No word in common use has been so misunderstood as "Education." It has been accepted as meaning a thorough knowledge of books technically employed in schools and colleges, including those dealing with language, literature, art and science. An "educated" young man or woman was one who had passed through the usual curriculum of institutions of learning.

That this meaning of the word is both inadequate and superficial, it will take but a moment's thought to show. Every school-girl understands that the root of the word educate means to "draw out," to educe. According to this, and it is the real meaning, there must be a process of development or unfolding from within in order to satisfy the requirements of language.

What is there within the individual "to draw out"? What wonderful storehouse of intelligence exists like an unwrought mine in each youthful breast? Is it true that human beings are not like this blank white paper before it is stamped with the mighty printing-press with those characters that are the symbols of thoughts? Are the fountains of intelligence within ourselves, and not without?

Of tremendous import to all are the answers to these queries. Men and women are not empty reservoirs to be filled from without, but exhaustless fountains to be unsealed. Children of one common Father, made in His image; our heritage of love and wisdom is as limitless as the ether in which the universe is bathed. Just as with earthly inheritances the heirs to these endless domains may reject and deny this heirship, or use it for base purposes; but there it is, an eternal, undeniable fact.

Nor is it dead, inert material waiting for vivification through some external method; it is life and love, wonderful, sublime, measureless! A hidden, exhaustless fountain, connected interiorly with the source and parent of all that is, this inheritance of love and life opens out into the external universe through many avenues. It is the business of the educator to keep these channels of communication pure and free, to prevent pollution and corruption from mingling with the flow of the Infinite Spirit which is the life of all lives, and to help it to make of this world a Garden of Eden instead of a Desert of Sahara.

Is this an easy thing to do? "All have sinned! all, like sheep, have gone astray." The channel through which this river of life makes its way is more or less corrupt. But proper methods of education will do more to keep it unstained than the world at large supposes. And the secret of it all is to keep that inner flow of the Divine Spirit unhindered and undeflected, to set worthy objects as the end of the mind's activity, to cultivate kindly, unselfish affection, and, above all, to keep constantly before the youth a sense of relationship with our Heavenly Father. In other words, true education means the harmonious calling forth of all the powers of the individual, the moral, mental and physical.

To do this the youth should be taught from the cradle "the beauty of holiness," or wholeness, completeness. Not through classical studies concerning the amours and crimes of heathen gods, or in learning those roots or branches of language which embody so much literary wealth, in sciences which teach how the Almighty works through law, or in arts which have shed their ineffable beauty over the crudity and asperity of life—not in acquaintance with one or all these domains is one truly educated. They are well in their way, but there is something more important than in any or all such branches of learning. That something is pure, unadulterated love of goodness, and a will strong enough to keep it firm and undisturbed even in the presence of the greatest temptations. Let the love and the will be exercised aright, and there can be no intemperance or other vices. To love the best and the noblest, and cling to those things through allurement and trial, is to have the best education it is possible to attain. That is soul education, the last and highest which the world can understand and foster.

It is Ruskin who said, "What we like determines what we are, and to teach taste is inevitably to form character. Taste is a part and index of morality. The first, last and closest trial to any living creature is, 'What do you like?' Tell me what you like and I'll tell you what you are."

Consequently, it is of the utmost importance that parent and friend, sister, mother and wife, make goodness lovable. For all are educators in one way or another. Each one calls out some element of character in those near her, and that helps educate. Shall not those elements be sweetness, gentleness, affection, moral purpose and firm religious character?

In our country, where intellectual activity and ambition are so prevalent, its corrective is needed in educated affections and disciplined wills. Women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, let us ponder upon the subject of True Education and determine to raise its standard.

SANCTIFICATION AND THE HIGHER CHRISTIAN LIFE.

BY ELLA B. CARTER.

I meet more people who are puzzled by the terms "sanctification" and the "higher life," than by any other doctrines of our most holy faith.

To sanctify, is to consecrate, to make holy, to set apart for God. The Sabbath day was set apart and made holy. Before any especial manifestation of God's goodness, the people of Israel were enjoined to sanctify themselves; as before they were given quails for food in the wilderness journey; before the ark was brought up to Hebron; before the law was given at Sinai, when even the mountain was sanctified and "bounds set," and before the entrance into Canaan. The tithes were called sanctified because they were set aside for a holy purpose. There was a ceremony connected with the "setting apart" as when a "sweet anointing oil of sweet spices and olive oil" was used in sanctifying the tabernacle, and there was the washing of the body and the washing of the clothes, and the blessing by the priest. So much for the Old Testament type of consecration.

In the New Testament I gather that sanctification is a progressive work of divine grace upon the soul justified by the love of Christ, by means of which we grow to know the joys of holiness. We are told that we are sanctified by the Word of Truth, by the Spirit and by prayer. The old Westminster catechism says: "Sanctification is the work of God's free grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole man after the image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin, and live unto righteousness." A lovely Christian woman once gave me this definition of sanctification: "If we consecrate ourselves, then God by His Spirit and the Word of His Truth, comes in to sanctify us wholly and thus we are brought to heavenly places in Christ Jesus. In a word, consecration is our part, sanctification is God's part." A noted evangelist thus explains it, "All who truly and earnestly desire and seek it, may love God with all their heart and soul and mind and their neighbor as themselves, which is sanctification." If I were to give a definition of my own, I should say, that sanctification is an entire surrender of the will to God, for service.

The experience of a friend will best illustrate the work of sanctification. For years she had been a nominal Christian living at a "poor dying rate;" loyal after a fashion to the Master, but feeling always that she was an unprofitable servant. She knew no joy, the Bible was to her a sealed book, and she longed for the rest of those who were living the higher Christian life, and she desired the preparation and fitness that would qualify her for work. Then there came a time when God put her into His crucible to distill the elixir of patience. One by one, the props, the idols, the pleasant things of her life, were taken from her, and she "walked in darkness and had no light," the heavens seemed as brass over her head and it was impossible to pray, for her rebellious will rose up between her and God After weeks of agony there came a surrender, when her stubborn heart of stone was broken, and she knelt and prayed, "Oh, Father, if it be Thy will to make of me a vessel, emptied of every idol, and so made sanctified and meet for Thy use, then take me, purge me, fill me and let Thy good and perfect will be done in me." It was a moment of entire consecration and sanctification, and peace came to her soul, and a strong desire to work for souls. She opened her Bible, never again to be to her a closed book, but to be read daily for "food and for antidotes against her faintings," and she read therein, "He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified" She was perfect in God's sight then, although she still stumbled in the way, because of humanity. Again she read in the Word, "I passed by thee and looked upon thee and thou becamest mine. . . . Then washed I thee with water, and anointed thee with oil, I decked thee also with ornaments, with gold and silver, and thy raiment was of fine linen and silk and broidered work, thou didst eat fine flour and honey and oil, and thou wast exceeding beautiful. . . . and thy renown went forth among the heathen for thy beauty, for it was perfect through my comeliness, which I had put upon thee, saith the Lord." Ah, He had put His beauty upon her, the beauty of holiness. Then the Spirit taught her that she must be wholly sanctified, that the body as well as the spirit and soul, must be made "a vessel unto honor," that the body the temple of the Holy Ghost must be reverenced, and she saw with new horror, the wickedness of the use of narcotics and alcoholics, and the dreadful defilement of unchaste thoughts and deeds, and that a sin against the body is a sin against God. And with the anointing oil of her God upon her she went forth to teach temperance and purity.

One step more and she knew the rest of faith. She had reached the land of promise, and a voice whispered, "Go in and possess the land; every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours." All the promises were hers if she would claim them and she did, and feeling the joy of possession, she knew that no pain she had ever suffered had been a wasted thing, no discipline had been too costly a price for the reward of entering upon a life of absolute trust, which is the higher Christian life of God's sanctified children.

Newark, N. J.

Correspondence.

NOTES FROM THE BATTLEFIELD.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—The campaign in Nebraska grows more and more encouraging. Never was the work pushed with greater assiduity. Sept. 19th Anna Gordon and I were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Blair, at Creighton, a thriving town. Mrs. Blair is well known as our National W. C. T. U. "Chalk Talker." Her husband is a merchant and devoted to our cause. Every morning they rise before five o'clock that Mrs. Blair may get off her letters in the 6:30 mail. She is planning for the Demorest prize medal contests in Nebraska, and daily receives from thirty to forty letters on that subject. Ten elocutionists are kept busy in the drill; 4,150 of the Books of Selections have been sold; Loyal Temperance Legions, Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues and district schools are all at work. In the campaign Mrs. Blair has already sent out 1,496 silver medals, 171 small gold and sixteen grand gold medals. Mr. Demorest paid out $600 in August alone for these medals and the work grows every day. Nebraska leads the world in this work, and will have had over 2,000 contests previous to May 4, at all of which crowds of men and women will hear sound doctrine on the temperance question. Mr. Demorest is indeed a public benefactor—one of the strongest forces in our movement and one of constantly multiplying power. He has wisely restricted the ages between which young people may compete from twelve to twenty-one, but will not apply this rule to Nebraska until after the campaign. I am told that hardly any papers outside Omaha are outspoken against the amendment. The people's heart is right—a full vote and a fair count means success in November. O that those who have money would give it as freely for this cause as Mrs. Blair gives her time from morning to midnight every day! God grant that the sinews of war may be supplied to the president of Nebraska W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary A. Hitchcock, of Fremont, and that the progress of united hearts may hallow all our work "begun, continued, ended" in God.

It has seemed to me that our white-ribboners could no further go in the inventiveness that beautifies with such variety of object lessons and emblems the churches and halls in which their talking sisters meet the public. Columbus, Nebraska, has, however, added a new example to the list. This town is popularly declared to be in the middle of the continent, hence its name, and perhaps, hence, also, its tendency to be made up of every creature's best, for we were entertained by cosmopolitans, a Swiss gentleman (a banker) and his Alsatian wife, both from homes of opportunity and culture. The Opera House was a most pleasant place, and among the decorations was a huge night-blooming cereus, which timed itself so well as to unfold its spotless robes at nine o'clock, p. m., while I was in the midst of my plea for prohibition. I have often called the brain, forever enclosed in the skull's dark crypt, and gleaming with the white radiance of its perpetually-expanded petals and filaments, "the night-blooming cereus of God," the most mystical, majestic blossom on the globe, that nothing wilts and withers like alcohol. This exquisite flower seems to me also like a fit emblem of the amendment for which the home-folks of this great state are now contending. May the warm south wind of Truth melt away the ice of prejudice from every heart, and this bright, consummate flower of a Christian civilization bloom full and fair upon these gracious prairies on November 4.

* * *

While I was away up here near the Dakota line, a telegram came to me from my cousin, Edward Brower, of Churchville, N. Y., announcing that my father's only brother, my beloved and honored uncle, Zophar Willard, had just passed away at the ripe age of eighty years. He was a devoted friend to us all and always, My dear father went home to him to die in 1868. The qualities of manly kindness and integrity were so conspicuous in him that he has been for fifty years a leader in the village where I was born. He has drawn up more wills, settled more estates, and been the friend and guardian of more bereft women and children than any one I know. He was one of the founders of the Congregational Church there, and was sent as a delegate to the great National Council of that denomination at its Chicago session in 1888. "Uncle Zophar" has been a central figure in my home picture all my life long, and I have often stopped over to see him in his loneliness. Thirty years ago or more his wife, who was my mother's sister, died, after which he and my dear widowed Aunt Caroline Town, had their home together until her death in 1883. He has had a housekeeper since then, and led a lonely life, as he tells me in his last letter of August 25, but he writes gratefully of his grand nephews and nieces, who have so loyally cared for him in the illness of last spring, when La Grippe nearly overcame his failing strength. At that time I went to see him, and he said, "I thought I'd like to see you, Frances, and talk with you while I could. If I should pass away it would mean so little for you to come to my funeral, but it is good to have you with me when I can know it."

So we talked of all our loved and lost, of the on-coming young folks, of the swift-dawning life immortal, and I knelt at his bedside in prayer. He recovered so as to resume his usual mode of life, but has now, by a sudden relapse, made the transit to a better world. I know his wish would be that, instead of breaking my engagements in these Nebraska towns and at the state convention, I should go on with the heavy yet blessed duties of middle life, rather than to leave them that I might have the sorrowful pleasure of being present at his funeral.

Farewell, my faithful, loyal uncle, brother and friend. I shall meet you ere long by the River of Life, through the riches of grace in Christ Jesus.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

RAYS FROM THE FARTHER EAST.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—Judging from the distant glimpses we have been catching of this "land of the sun's origin," I was prepared to find the state of morals exceedingly bad; but I am glad to be able to report progress even here. It would be difficult to conceive how matters could be worse than they are when fathers unblushingly sell their daughters to the keeper of a den of infamy for a term of years; when, as one writer affirms, it is rare to find a novel that does not discourse of harlots, or to hear a play that does not introduce one, and when physicians aver that one-half the diseases of both men and women are caused by immoral lives; and yet there is hope, for when evils reach their worst there must be a change for the better. Though there is a reaction against Christianity for the present, yet it is only temporary, and even non-Christians have to acknowledge what the gospel is doing, and they themselves are catching the spirit of moral and social reform.

Some of these reformers are very radical, and insist that it is the duty of the government to suppress immorality altogether; but others, like Professor Togama, quoted above, not deeming such extreme action feasible, yet advocate the prohibiting of everything of an immoral tendency in any way public, such as photographs of indecent characters, plays in which they figure, places of resort for such, advertisements of their houses, government officials attending the opening of such houses, the public exhibition of offerings made by the keepers of such houses, the frequenting of the streets by such characters, and the opening of houses for such in any street.

The Professor goes on in his address to say, "Gentlemen, our lot is cast in a dangerous time, when the rise or fall of the country hangs in a balance. We have enemies on every hand—enemies without and enemies within—enemies that may be met with sword and spear, but enemies, too, that cannot be so overcome—intellectual enemies, moral enemies, sanitary enemies. These must all be encountered and conquered one by one It is to the younger generation I appeal."

I find this desire for reform especially among the students. While our vessel lay in the beautiful harbor at Nagasaki, I had the pleasure of addressing the young men of the Deshima, or Cobleigh Seminary, about half of whom are Christians converted last year, and was gratified to see how all of them were interested in the subject, and especially how they were stirred at the fact of so many of their countrywomen being found abroad in the seaport towns bringing disgrace on their nation. My time at Kobe was just sufficient to allow of a hurried run out forty-seven miles to Kyoto, the old capital of Japan. Attending the missionary prayer-meeting in the evening, I was asked to make some remarks concerning my mission to China and Japan. Also the next morning at the opening exercises of the Doshisha, or college, instituted by the American Board, over which the celebrated Japanese evangelist, the late Dr. Neesima had presided, I had the privilege of addressing, briefly, the 700 students. I found that the subject had been so exercising them that all were ready to sign a strong memorial to the government, which was being drawn up by one of the Professors, Dr. Berry, who showed me the draft and asked for suggestions. Much depends on the influence of the young men.

Yokohama is supposed to be one of the most immoral places anywhere to be found. A visit to Dr. Worden's dispensary proved that the physician's estimate of the proportion of diseases due to immoral practices was scarcely exaggerated. I had pointed out to me the quarters set apart by the authorities for such characters, and would have been glad to know that they were confined to—or confined in—such quarters; but alas, they are not! Still there are at this vicious port earnest people, Christians and others, who are lifting their voices against the vice, and pleading for reform; and no doubt it will come ere long; though where vice is so strongly intrenched, it will not surrender without a great struggle. How much other people besides the Japanese may be responsible for the state of affairs here, I cannot say, but they, too, will be compelled to acknowledge their sins and reform their ways.

Hastening on to Tokyo, I was in time for the Social Purity convention which had been called to concert measures for future action. About forty delegates were present, representing all parts of the country, as also the various faiths, Buddhists vying with Christians. It was agreed that a memorial to the general government should be widely circulated and signed before the meeting of the first Parliament in November, asking them to abolish their system of licensing and regulating vice, as has already been done, in a measure, by the local authorities in some places. As leaders of the movement I was directed to Mr. Iwamoto, principal of a girl's school and editor of the Woman's Magazine, and to Mr. Yemeda Takeo, editor of an out-and-out prohibition magazine.

On the evening of the first day there was a public meeting addressed by Dr. Eby of the Canada Methodist Mission, while that of the second day was appointed for a general mass-meeting for ladies and gentlemen. Notwithstanding the rain the large hall calculated to seat a thousand was nearly filled, even to the gallery. The first speaker was ex-Governor O-we of the Kanagawa Ken, that is, the province in which Yokohama is situated, who spoke for an hour on the political aspect of the question. He was followed by Mr. Nimoto, a gentleman who has spent some time in America, and by Mr. Make, the editor of an influential paper in the capital. Then followed Pastor Yokoi, whose father, a daimio so said, was put to death years ago for reading his Bible in the palace. Having just returned from a tour round the world, he spoke of the greatness and influence of the Anglo-Saxon race as he had observed in America, England, Gibraltar, Malta, India, etc., attributing it largely to the elevated position given to woman

I was to follow with a few remarks, but the meeting being technically a political one, and my name not having been handed in in time, the police officers on duty decided that that meeting must first be dissolved, when we could assemble for another one. Though it was then ten o'clock, and much time was occupied in getting sandals and clogs and clearing out of the compound, yet a large number returned and listened most attentively and patiently, as they had done previously, to a short address on the progress of moral reform in other lands, especially in th British Empire, the interpreter being Pastor Ogata, whom I found to be academically related to myself, though a much younger son of alma mater. I was sorry that my time did not allow me to accept the invitation to address the students of the Ei wa Gakko and Philander Smith Biblical Institute, but I had the pleasure of seeing their beautiful premises.

On leaving Shanghai for Japan I was told that there was smuggling of opium into this country by Chinese residents; but I have been pleased to find by observation and inquiry that if such is the case it must be on a very small scale, since the customs authorities are very vigilant, examining every particle of luggage of Chinese passengers entering her ports, with the utmost scrutiny. Would that the day might speedily come when a similar state of affairs may be seen in China, to which let all the people say amen. W. E. ROBBINS.

Yokohama, Japan.

VACATION WORK.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—I saw, not long since, in THE UNION SIGNAL, a notice of a vacation meeting held by a member of the W. C. T. U., and it suggested that I ought, perhaps, to have reported one held by myself in August in the Catskills.

A notice pinned up in the morning, that the deeds of women would be considered in the evening, sufficed to gather the guests in the large parlors, and they proved an attentive audience. There was not another white-ribboner in the house, but they listened to the history of the white-ribbon host, and heard something of its past achievements, its present activities, and its future hopes.

At the close some warm words of interest and appreciation were addressed to me, which were very welcome, surely. The most gratifying expression came, however, a week or more later, when, as I was riding to the train on my departure, the father of our host, who was driving, turned round and said: "I was very much interested in your temperance lecture the other night." "Ah! did you hear it?" I replied. "Yes, and I agreed with every word of it." I expressed my pleasure, and he went on to tell me that in his youth there were tippling resorts everywhere in that neighborhood, but now there were none at all. Furthermore, he said, that for about half a century he had used neither liquor nor tobacco, and then proceeded to relate how runaway horses had thrown him from his carriage years since, and he was picked up with a terribly injured leg, whose rapid healing amazed the doctors, and forced them to confess it due to blood unpoisoned by alcohol and narcotics. I was very glad to know that I was leaving behind me so stanch an advocate of our principles.

A few weeks earlier than this, I had united with Mrs. A. M Hammer, and a few other white-ribboners, some our own and one from Canada, to hold a meeting for our cause in Intervale Park, N. H. I opened with a Bible reading, Mrs. Hammer followed with an interesting sketch of the work, and our Canadian sister made a brief speech, Miss Flood being the presiding officer.

MRS. SAMUEL CLEMENTS,
Supt. Bible Reading, Penn. W. C. T. U

THE BRITISH, CONTINENTAL AND GENERAL FEDERATION.

DEAR UNION SIGNAL:—This society, extending into nearly every European country, has just closed its Annual Conference, at Stockholm. It was formed and has been largely carried forward by that heroic woman, Mrs. Josephine Butler. The sessions continued three days, and though the meeting was in the extreme north, there were delegates from most of the European countries, and one American was caught on the wing.

The reports showed a general advance all along the line, and the repeal of the unjust and odious acts it labors against in many municipalities. More educational work was reported than last year at Geneva. Great stress was laid upon the point that even if these acts preserved the health of sinners, they were of no avail, and rather the contrary, as they would the more encourage sin. But it was clearly shown in an exhaustive paper prepared and presented by Dr. Nevins, of England, that health is not improved by these laws, notwithstanding many reports to the contrary. Professor Stewart, M P., of England, who presided in the absence of Professor Lavalyé, was the most prominent figure. Ladies were freely welcomed to a part, not only on the various programs, but in the discussions. Miss Willard's name was added to Mr. Aaron Powell's upon the Executive Committee for next year. Special reports were heard from various countries, and a very clear and correct statement of the position of affairs in India given.

A parting word of advice from Mr. Bunting should be repeated and heeded by all. "Examine your own code of laws; if they cannot be strengthened, or improved, watch over the enforcement; if the laws are not what they should be, do not rest till they are changed." One member emphasized the necessity, already mentioned by Mr. Bunting, of changing the laws so that a girl's virtue shall be protected as long as her property; so that a man cannot, without crime, make her his mistress at an earlier age than he can obtain her hand in honorable marriage.

The same member also emphasized the necessity of a change of law about procuresses, namely that when arrested they ought not to be admitted to bail, and that fines should never be allowed in place of imprisonment. The necessity for this change had been gradually brought home to the speaker by seeing how often this abominable class of women escape punishment altogether, even when convicted or pleading guilty. The fines are at once paid by the patrons, who are generally wealthy men. If admitted to bail, they disappear, and the bail is paid. All this is done to prevent notoriety to these proceedings, and to screen wealthy and often highborn villains.

The most hopeful feature of the reform reported, was the great increase of interest among the people generally.

It is likely that the next congress will be held in England, and the second, in Holland.

Mr. Tam, a member of the Swedish Parliament presided at the elegant dinner given the Conference, and very gracefully asked that the first toast might be drank in cold water, "out of regard to our abstaining friends." The American member was called on to reply to the toast, and thanked Mr. Tam most warmly for his gracious action.

MARY CLEMENT LEAVITT.

MRS. WILLARD'S BERLIN SCHOOL.

[Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, writing to the Inter Ocean of her trip abroad, gives the following sketch of an institution presided over by our Mary B. Willard.—ED]

In my recent visit to Berlin nothing proved quite so satisfactory as the time I spent in the home of Mrs. Mary B. Willard. I wish I had language to express adequately all that is in my mind in regard to her and her school. In the first place, it is a liberal education for a girl to be associated with such a woman—a woman who has the highest possible ideals of life and its responsibilities, and who makes a conscientious study of the character of each girl placed under her charge

I once heard a gentleman say of his wife, "She keeps me up to my best," and so Mary B Willard appeals to the very best that is in one. And this is a precious possession in one who has the care of growing minds and hearts. Such a teacher is precious and priceless everywhere, but especially and emphatically so in a foreign land.

The American mother who takes her daughter abroad and leaves her in a "pension" to learn a foreign tongue, has no conception of the price she is paying for that bit of French or German. Cheap it may be in dollars and cents, but costly to the last degree in mind and morals.

Aside from the educational advantages offered by this school, every effort is taken to protect the health of the pupils. The location, Nettelbeck Strasse 21, is a most healthful part of the city. Daily exercise is a part of the curriculum, and the best physicians are in attendance to ward off possible disease. Altogether the management seemed to me most admirable. Then, too, Mrs. Willard is not forgetful that school-girls are social beings, and so she has reception days, when people who are really worth knowing may be found in her pretty parlors. Few women at home or abroad enjoy a better social position than that which is accorded Mrs Willard in Berlin, and as for the student population, her name is with them a household word, and representatives from many, if not every nation of the earth, are carrying home with them some good thought or influence from that cultivated Christian home. If any American mother is pondering where to send her daughter, in my judgment she can find no better place than with Mary B. Willard.

The Still Hour.

FOR THE WEEK BEGINNING OCTOBER 12, 1890.

BY REV. C. C. HARRAH.

DAILY BIBLE READING NOTES.

(Luke 22: 1–23; Isaiah 13–18.)

Sunday, 12; Luke 22: 1–23. Verse 5, What a fearful might has money, when love for it prepared the way for Satan to possess Judas, and he became willing to betray the gentle and loving Saviour. If enough is offered you, are you willing to give up Jesus? Verse 13, The more we know of the world, the more we find that everything among men answers the description of God's Word, and that it must be an inspired book by what it reveals. Verse 19, The fact that in the supper our Lord binds the disciples to remember His death, shows what a high significance He put upon that event.

Monday, 13; Isa. 13. Verse 5, When God determines to destroy a nation on account of its sins, He is at no loss for instruments. It seemed very improbable when this prophecy against Babylon was made, that the fall of the great empire, and the complete destruction of the city, could be accomplished. Verse 19, The downfall of Babylon is a type or emblem of the doom that awaits the wicked and all the powers of this world that are opposed to God. Rev. 18: 10, 21.

Tuesday, 14; Isa. 14. Verse 5, The destruction of Babylon is foretold and connected with the deliverance of Israel from bondage. All this is remarkable, since the prophecy was made about two hundred years before the overthrow of the city. God knows the end from the beginning, and will take care of His people through all the changes of time.

Wednesday, 15, Isa. 15. Verse 1, Moab was the old-time enemy of Judah. Deut 23: 3 The day was near at hand now, when it would be brought to silence. That doom awaits all the enemies of God's kingdom. Verse 5, We can take no pleasure in announcing the destruction that awaits impenitent sinners, but rather weep over their infatuation while they go on destroying themselves.

Thursday, 16; Isa. 16. Verse 1, The Moabites once paid tribute to Israel (II Sam. 8: 2), and now in their distress they exhort one another to do so again. We ought to submit ourselves to Christ now, and continue to meet every religious obligation, so that when the time of distress comes we will not be left in our wretchedness to weep over past neglect. Verse 9, God's true prophets continue to warn men with tears, and men still despise the message and go on in their sins.

Friday, 17; Isa. 17. Verse 1, This chapter is chiefly occupied with a prophecy of desolation to the kingdoms of Syria and Ephraim. It was meant as a picture of the doom which awaited the enemies of Judah, against whom Damascus and Israel had formed a league. Glory and prosperity are of short duration when they are arrayed against the will of God. Verse 7, Many care nothing for God in prosperity, but when trouble comes they cry to Him for help. Verse 10, The root of Israel's sin and trouble was that they forgot God; we will make a dreadful mistake if we follow in the same evil way, which always leads to grief and sorrow.

Saturday, 18; Isa. 18. Verse 1, This chapter is an announcement to Ethiopia (Egypt) that the enemies of Judah (Assyria) were to be overthrown without its aid. The prophecy would be welcomed by Egypt's embassadors, for Assyria was their enemy also Verse 7, Israel has long been "a nation scattered and peeled." All nations will at last come to acknowledge our Lord, and bring tribute to Him as the King of Kings.

THE PRAYER MEETING TOPIC.

(The Preaching that the Times Demand. II Tim. 2: 15.)

1. In the more important matters, the times are not different now from what they have formerly been; and to meet the demand, the best preaching is that which most clearly brings home to the consciences of sinful men the essential truths of the gospel. It is poor, shallow work that any preacher does, if men as sinners are not brought to their Savior.

2. Everything that leads men into sin ought to be uprooted by the preaching of the times The principles of self-control and self-denial, taught in the gospel, ought to be applied so as to lead men to be pure, and to be consecrated to the work of uplifting and saving the world.

3. Preaching does not meet the demand of the times, when bad men are at ease in their practices, and good men are becoming carnal and worldly-minded. Preachers who have no reproof for the dreadful liquor business, who are gluttonous and tobacco users themselves, and who seek their popularity with men by being tied up with them in oath-bound, secret societies, and who are always on the lookout for large salaries and worldly honors, cannot preach so as to meet the need of the times.

IF you ask the way to the crown—'tis by the cross! To the mountain—'tis by the valley! To exaltation—'tis "he that humbleth himself!"—J. Harington Evans.

TEMPERANCE TEMPLE ITEMS

MATILDA B. CARSE.

Don't fail to send for a Temple mite-box, Bulletin and descriptive card. You can secure them by sending a two-cent stamp to Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, 145 Ashland Boulevard Chicago.

***

All persons sending money to the Temple are warned not to send it in currency, as it is liable to be stolen. Send by bank check, post-office or postal order, and registered letter. A large number of letters containing money have lately been lost; all the money has been received except in cases where currency was sent.

***

Our National President, Miss Willard, is desirous that a very fine street display should be made on November 1 at the laying of the corner-stone of the Temple. She wishes that all state and local W. C. T. Unions who own banners would kindly forward them to National Headquarters, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, at once, care of Miss Esther Pugh. The banners are to be carried by the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion (we hope to have two or three thousand children in line) as they go through the streets to the place of the ceremony. They are to sing as they march Miss Willard's Marching Song:

List to the tread of many feet,
From home and playground, farm and street;
They talk like tongues, their words we know:—
Saloons, saloons, saloons must go!

For God they lift their flag of white,
His name is on their banners bright,
His law of purity doth show
Saloons, saloons, saloons must go!

We will see that all banners are returned safely, or sent to the National Convention at Atlanta, Ga., if persons sending so desire. Let all who have banners please communicate with us, also all superintendents of Loyal Temperance Legions who desire to have their children take part in the exercises of laying the corner-stone. We expect to secure reduced railroad rates for the occasion. Loyal Temperance Legions and W. C. T. Unions should send at once for linen lists for autographs of members, if they wish to have them go in the corner-stone, as there is only a month left in which to secure names.

***

The great piers on which the Temple is to rest are being put in; we stood upon one of them yesterday. They are built of white limestone on a foundation of iron. The piers are of great thickness and strength. The foundation iron comes from the Illinois Steel Co., Chicago. The iron beams that are to span the piers are being made by Carnegie, Phipps & Co , Pittsburg, Pa., and the great iron columns that are to support the building are now being manufactured by the Keystone Bridge Co , Pittsburg. The foundations rest upon a cement bottom, or flooring, two feet two inches thick. To say that no other building in Chicago has any such magnificent foundations is but stating a fact that there is no disputing. Even the Rookery, considered the finest building in the city, has piers of brick, and its cement floor is but 18 inches thick.

***

The Thompson Memorial Fund is rapidly increasing. The following unions have each sent $1 to the fund: The W. C. T. U. of Jamaica, Vt.; Racine, Wis.; Napoli, N. Y.; Dorchester, Mass.; Camden, Del., and the Y. W. C. T. U., of Fall River, Mass. The following individuals have each sent $1 to the fund, many of them accompanied by words of appreciation of the dear mother of the Crusade: Mrs. L. R. Kellogg, Jamaica, Vt.; Mrs. E A. Mickle, Millville, N. J.; Miriam Wetmore, Hillsboro, O.; Mrs. L. A. Stevenson, E. Buffalo, N. Y.; Rebecca E. Angelo, Aberdeen, Washington; Mrs. J. E. McDowell, Portland, Me.

***

Ethel Stout, the eight-year-old editor of the Delaware Midget, writes that her bright little paper, which is only ten cents a year, is getting on famously. It has become a National organ, as every state and Territory except four subscribe to it. She has now 500 subscribers, and she gives one-tenth of her subscription to the building fund. She sends $3 in addition to $2 she has already sent

An enthusiastic friend of the Temple, we know not whether man or woman, as the initials only are given, writing from Louisville, Ky., says: "It is nearly 10 p. m After working all day I got home from the store where I clerk, in time to look over the 'Temple Items' in THE UNION SIGNAL. Now I am so enthused over one sentence therein, that I wish you would write it in capitals across the entire page (so as to attract attention and gain the end in view); the words are these: 'Remember, that $6 from each member of the W. C. T. U. for one year, would entirely pay for the Temple.' I will make a great sacrifice, giving more than my entire salary for one week, if all will promise the same. Persons who are poor and desire to give $6 could work for it, or beg it from rich relations in the name of humanity."

We entirely agree with our earnest friend. "Where there is a will there is a way." If every white-ribboner determined, in a spirit of self-sacrifice and dependence upon God, to raise $6, the entire building would be paid for by the time it is finished and dedicated. Shall we not do it?

***

It is with moist eyes we read many letters which are received in regard to the Temple. Such a letter is before us. It comes from an aged saint in Iowa, L. L C.; she does not want her full name given. A little while ago she pledged $100 to be paid in 1891, when she attained her seventieth year, and sent $25. Now she sends the balance, $75. Her reason for doing so so soon, is failing health; she tells how she economized, as she is a poor woman, to get the $100 paid before she died. She says: "It is my prayer that the hearts of those that have means may be opened to give so liberally that the W. C. T. U. may own the Temple when completed."

145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill

Our Children.

IN A GARDEN.

BY ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

Baby, see the flowers!
—Baby sees
Fairer things than these,
Fairer though they be than dreams of ours.

Baby, hear the birds!
—Baby knows
Better songs than those,
Sweeter though they sound than sweetest words.

Baby, see the moon!
—Baby's eyes
Laugh to watch it rise,
Answering light with love and night with noon.

Baby, hear the sea!
Baby's face
Takes a graver grace
Touched with wonder what the sound may be.

Baby, see the star!
—Baby's hand
Opens, warm and bland,
Calm in claim of all things fair that are.

Baby, hear the bells!
—Baby's head
Bows, as ripe for bed,
Now the flowers curl round and close their cells.

Baby, flower of light,
Sleep, and see
Brighter dreams than we Till good-day shall smile away good-night.

—Selected.

A YOUNG HERO.

BY JULIA H. THAYER.

"What is that, doctor?"

The words came almost in a whisper from the bed where the sick boy lay, so weak and helpless that only a single rude breath seemed wanting to bear him away from earth.

The doctor started at the sound, and the glass shook in his hand, for he had thought his patient would never speak again.

"What is the doctor pouring into that glass, auntie?" This time the words were addressed to a sweet-faced woman, clad in deep mourning, who watched beside the little sufferer with an expression of the keenest anxiety.

"Just a few drops of brandy, Arthur, darling, to brighten you up a little," and a tender, soothing hand rested upon the golden head.

"I shall not touch it!" The words were scarcely audible still, but there was an unmistakable ring to them, like the strokes of a distant bell.

"Come, my boy, take a good swallow of this, like a little man, and it will help you to get strong and well again," and the doctor bent over him and held the glass to his lips, but only for a moment, for the child seemed fairly to writhe away from it as he gasped:

"Take it away; I will never drink a drop of it as long as I live."

The doctor drew back, alarmed at the excitement he had produced. It would never do to tax the child's meager strength in this way; something else must be thought of, and beckoning to the lady to follow him, he stepped into the adjoining room.

"I am at a loss to know exactly how to manage him, Mrs. Conrad. It is absolutely necessary for him to take that brandy; he has not the strength to rally without it, and yet I am convinced that he would not take it without a struggle, and anything of that kind might prove serious indeed."

"Is there nothing else that you can give him? I suppose you know why he does not wish to take it," and the lady's eyes fell while her face flushed painfully.

"Yes, a promise given to his dying mother, your sister, I believe. Such promises ought never to be exacted." He spoke impatiently.

"But his father died such a terrible death, and my sister had suffered so much, that—"

"Pardon me, I was hasty, but I must speak frankly and tell you what I have not said before: his life hangs on a breath, and this is the only thing that can save him. There, there, my dear madam, try to bear up. I know he is all you have, but I shall need your help now, and you must forget yourself for the moment. I see that his is no ordinary child's will, to be overcome by threats or commands. I shall have to tell him the truth—it will not frighten him—and nothing else will induce him to submit. Really, there is no other way. Come."

"Arthur," the boy appeared to be in a sort of stupor—"Arthur, dear, the doctor wishes to speak to you."

She had indeed mastered herself, and the tones were perfectly calm. The sleeper's pale face quivered, and the blue eyes unclosed as the doctor approached with the glass once more, and said in a low, kind voice:

"You know I would not tell you an untruth, my boy, and you will be willing to do what we both wish when I tell you that it is positively necessary for you to drink this."

There was an unmistakable meaning in the tone and manner with which these words were uttered, but they only elicited a faint smile, while the large eyes looked steadily in the doctor's face, with a brighter light in their depths.

"It is all I can do for you—you will die if you do not take it," came from the doctor's lips with an impulsive desperation.

"Then I will die," was the measured answer, given with what seemed to be a dying energy, "but I will not drink it! Oh, don't worry me any more, but let me go in peace."

"It is of no use," whispered the doctor. "To persist might hasten the event. There is nothing to do now but to wait. I will send my wife up to stay with you, and I will call again at six o'clock this evening—unless you should need me before that time"—and his nervous glance plainly told how grave were his fears. "I have a very urgent case waiting for me or I should not leave you at this time," and bowing gravely, he left the room.

"Still living!" was his mental ejaculation, as his carriage drew up before Mrs. Conrad's door promptly at the appointed moment, for his glance involuntarily sought the usual outward sign of mourning. The hopeful face that met him at the threshold of the sick room was still more encouraging, and stepping softly to the bedside of his patient, his quick eye told him that a decided change had taken place.

"Better!" rose involuntarily to his lips.

"Oh, doctor! do you mean that there is hope?" The anxious face was pallid with the awful suspense of the moment. "Do you mean that he may recover?"

"I mean that he will, madam."

"Thank God!" was all that the happy woman could say, as she sank into the nearest chair.

"It is a miracle," said the doctor. Mrs. Conrad smiled incredulously, but refrained from saying what flashed through her mind at the moment, viz: that the change was more likely to be merely a proof of the utter ignorance of the professional gentleman regarding his case.

Five years later Arthur Hadley, now grown to be a tall, manly fellow of nineteen, sat in his aunt's pleasant sitting-room, on the evening previous to his departure for college.

"This has been such a happy day, auntie," the young man suddenly exclaimed, breaking the long and painful silence, for the near parting was to be the first one they had known for years.

"Why, dear?" The tones were sad and regretful. It was hard to give up the noble boy who had been such a comfort to her through her long period of bereavement.

"I wonder if you have forgotten what day it is, auntie?" and the bright young face softened with a depth of sacred meaning. "Don't you know it is the anniversary of that time when I 'passed from death unto life?' It is one of my holy days." His manner was full of reverence.

"No, dear, I had not forgotten," and the bowed head sank lower, as if burdened with its weight of memories.

Arthur changed his tone and words to those of a lighter mood. The sight of her sadness would be more than he could bear at this time.

"How little these doctors know, anyway! I verily believe that old fellow wanted me to die just to prove his words true."

"Arthur!"

"Well, not exactly that, but if I hadn't got well, he would never have stopped telling about that stupid little fellow who died just because he wouldn't swallow his brandy, and that would have been a big argument to prove the 'fanaticism' of the temperance cause, wouldn't it? But as it turned out, I think he has kept pretty silent on the subject, and his conceit has never quite recovered from its tumble."

Mrs. Conrad raised her head and smiled indulgently.

"But seriously, auntie, that day, five years ago, was the turning point of my life, in more ways than one. Boy as I was then, and sick as I was, I remembered that a drunkard's blood was in my veins, and I knew that if I broke that vow, given to my mother in her last moments, I should never have any more faith in myself, in my strength of character, or my ability to overcome temptation. The stronghold of my nature would be taken, and all the rest would be an easy conquest. I seemed to see my future all in a moment, as the drowning man sees his past, and when the doctor said, 'You will die if you do not take it,' the glass held to my lips seemed filled with my father's, yes, and my mother's blood, for his life and death killed her—and do you think I could drink from such a glass? Do you think I could accept life at such a price? I know you did not feel as I did at the time."

"Your existence was very precious to me, and I thought your mother would understand."

"But, oh, you did not understand," the words came almost vehemently; "I have felt so strong ever since, 'strong in the Lord.' I feel as if I had 'fought the good fight' and 'kept the faith,' and as if nothing could harm me any more. You need have no fears concerning my future. I am sure nothing can dethrone this sense of perfect security which I have."

There was almost a look of inspiration in the radiant face.

"But suppose I had died, auntie? death isn't the worst thing that can happen to a mortal, is it?"

"No, darling, nor a separation like ours that is to be," was the smiling reply, as every trace of selfish grief vanished out of her face, exorcised by the holy magic of his words.

ON TALKING SLANG.

This "sermonette" is especially for you, dear girls. The advice could be put in three words: Don't do it. Possibly there might come an occasion—say once in a lifetime—when a good sound bit of the genuine article "slang" would prove funny. But to hear vulgar words used by a gentle girl is almost invariably shocking. I remember passing two girls in the street, and hearing one of them say, "I'll bet you a quarter." It gave me a shiver. And when a group of school-girls fill their conversation—as, alas! they often do—with one slang phrase after another, the effect on an outsider is painfully disagreeable. The habit of talking slang grows rapidly. It is like reporting a bit of scandal. Have you never noticed if you say an unkind word against a neighbor, how quickly a chance comes to say another? And with just that same appalling ease a habit of using careless, coarse words increases. Weeds grow rapidly. There is plenty of good, strong English to give expression to wit, drollery, indignation or sympathy, without recourse to the phrases which belong to horse-jockeys, gamblers, tipplers and vagabonds.—Harper's Young People.

EYES AND NO EYES.

I hope all of OUR CHILDREN have good eyes; now I wish to find out whether you make good use of them. Do you really see things or do you merely glance at them? Let us test it: How many of you city children who see hundreds of saucy English sparrows every day, can tell whether these obstreperous little birds hop or walk? You all know the difference between your going along with a "hop, skip and jump," and walking demurely on the sidewalk. Now there is just as much difference in the bird's ways of getting over the ground, as there is in your hopping and running, and naturalists base a classification of birds on this fact. How many of you country children can tell the names of half a dozen birds that fly round your yards or hedgerows, and can tell which of them hop and which run? Shut your eyes and think hard; if you cannot tell, open your eyes and find out quickly before the birds are gone on their winter pilgrimage.

By the way, there is another thing for Bright Eyes to discover; do all the birds go South in the winter or are some of them unfashionably healthy enough to stay at home all the year round? If so, what birds stay with you all winter? Do any stay with you in the winter that are not there in the summer? I think it would be a nice thing for you in every school to have a quizzing class, where you asked each other just such questions. It would make a first rate game for stormy noons and recesses when you cannot play out of doors. Be sure, though, never to stay indoors at recess time when you can go out, for playing in the open air, remembering to keep your eyes open, not only to see what the birds are about, but what you can do to help each other, is the very best thing for recess time.

But stormy days will come in the winter, so it is well for you to plan what you can do then to keep you from fretting and fuming because you cannot go out. Here are some more questions for your bird quiz: What bird is a mason, and where does it like best to build its house? What one is a tailor, and what does it sew? Is there a weaver among the birds, if so, what is its name? Did you ever hear the hammer of a carpenter among birds, and what is his name?

If you read the rest of the paper you know that your Captain Deborah, Mrs. Andrew, has gone across the ocean to London. Captain Mary comes in her place, and hopes you will soon learn to love her as you do dear Captain Deborah.

The Household.

GOD'S SINGERS.

BY MRS. R. C. WAY.

What infinite joy is awaiting us
Beyond, in the sweet unknown,
Where the Savior's "many mansions" are
So near to God's beautiful throne;
Where the weary ones, gone home to their King,
Refreshed from their toil and pain,
With those who are singing the new, new song,
Have joined in the glad refrain!

In those "mansions" fair, what joy it will bring,
As the melodies reach the ear,
To hear 'mong the ransomed the voices sweet
Which so enraptured us here!
Surely the singers who sing for God,
Who sing, with the hope, to bless
The aching hearts that grieve for their dead,
And comfort the comfortless;

Who breathe their lives, as a symphony
Away, in the songs they sing,
Will stand in the heavenly orchestra
Thrice crowned, beside their King.
And I sometimes think that the grandest notes
Will be praise to God, in part,
For the sweet, sweet singers He sent to earth
To comfort the breaking heart.

Charlestown, N. H.

MOTHERING.

Garth, in the Chicago Daily News, in speaking of the change which comes over the theoretical maiden when she becomes a mother, and "as her boys grow up and become her knights and lovers, the old 'maiden need of chivalry' weakens in her heart and becomes transmitted into the divine tenderness of proud and happy motherhood" and asks: Did you ever own a boy of your own?

Did you ever watch him from his cradle to see "how men grow"?

Did you ever see him in his varying moods of knight-errantry and pure savagery?

Did you ever look into his eyes and give him a thought with which to conquer a feeling that you did not want him to have?

Did you ever tell him your griefs and let him understand your perplexities and ask his advice about your plans?

Did you ever sit entranced to find how quick to see, how strong to bear, and how tender to sympathize with your burden he could be?

And did you ever think it is not then a question of sex, but a question of soul, and a man may have a soul as well as a woman if only his mother had a soul?

Again, did you ever see this same boy come rushing into the house, hungry, tired, yet desperately hurried, because "the boys are waiting outside" for him to get his dinner and "come on"? If perchance dinner happened to be late, or the "things he couldn't bear" made up the larger part of the meal, did you ever see that boy rage? Did you ever notice how one irritating word from the cook or from anybody could reveal to your astonished vision a boy so different from the boy of higher moods that his own mother would not know him?

Perhaps you have been weak enough to try to punish him for his wild efforts at retaliation; perhaps you have sent his "boys" away, and robbed him of his fishing pole, and given him some task to do in his own room "to teach him self-control;" perhaps you have meant it all for the best, but have been cut to the quick by his contemptuous acquiescence in your requirements; his muttered "opinions" of "anybody who would always have old custard pie when no decent person could eat such baby food as custard"; perhaps you remember all the details of your efforts to "discipline that boy" and conquer him and make him ashamed of himself, and how he resisted all your efforts and thwarted all your plans and let you know that he could understand "why boys run off," until your heart seemed broken and you could only look at him helplessly, and say: "Well, I've done the best I could, but they say no woman knows how to bring up a boy, and I suppose I don't know, but my conscience is clear. I've never spared myself any pain that seemed to give you any happiness. For a whole year after you were born I never knew what one good night's sleep meant. When you have been sick I have never thought of going to bed at night for fear you might need something. I've tried to talk to you and tell you everything I knew, but it hasn't done any good, and I suppose it's true that a woman doesn't know how to bring up a boy."

Perhaps you remember how he listened, first defiant, then triumphant, at your defeat, and then how he broke down all at once and said: "I know I'm wrong, and I won't ask any woman to bring me up. I'll bring myself up. I won't worry you any more if we have custard pie every day. The reason women can't bring up boys is because women are so good and boys are so bad; but I'm going to turn over a new leaf. You needn't look out for me any more; I'll look out for you."

Did you ever own such a boy?

Then you understand that love conquered him, and that your "coddling" and not your "discipline" made him "turn over a new leaf."

Somehow you don't feel afraid that he will ever be "a robber" and make any woman "a slave"; and when you plunge into metaphysics to find an explanation of "how men grow," you find that "love is the great moral agent," and that love develops the higher nature, that tenderness purifies and uplifts and strengthens the character; until boys will eat what they don't want, and men will grant women the "elective franchise," perhaps they may have to be "disciplined" a very little, but, it is a risk, a very great risk; the maternal instinct may be "sheer sentimentality gone to seed," but it suggests the reply of the old minister who, when asked what rational mind approved the theory of the cross, said: "Somehow, it saves men."

And I think of this same "slavish devotion" and silly mothering, etc., etc.,—"somehow it saves."

TEACHING CHILDREN BADNESS.

BY A MOTHER.

Did you ever see a child who was cruel who did not have a mother who was given to cruelty? If you have, that is, if you think now that you have, I can tell you how to "stand corrected" on the subject. Make thorough acquaintance with that mother, or whoever has the care of the child. If parents strike, baby will strike, too, or do what it sees done or is done to it. The same of scolding. Teach little ones that "little hands were never made to strike;" teach them by practice, and if you can find such a child cruel, you have met an uncommon child. I have seen children who had nobody to strike them; I have seen teachers who did not strike their pupils; I have seen mothers who would never do it. It is my opinion that the shortest way to bring civilization is to stop striking; stop cultivating combat, resents, and destructiveness; never strike nor scold a child. A child that cannot be governed by reason; that cannot be dealt by with a steady hand, and spoken to in a natural tone of voice, can scarcely be found.

If a child is lied to, it will learn to lie. A threatened child will not obey. I take the side of the child, and tell the parents to use self-control, and that will control the child. Genuine kindergarten teachers never strike a child. There is no need of it What can there be in any child that a strong woman or man should strike it? The elders have all the power to break and bruise the young and tender child, and in all discretion should use that power for protection and not brute force, toward dependent and helpless little people. Many a mother is daily damaging and ruining for life her child whom she should guard and guide with more care and culture than her garden rose-trees and violets and lilies. She never strikes them, she with only gentleness inclines them.

Malice is not an attribute of children, neither is cruelty. I have often known adults who, on seeing a babe, wanted to pinch it, and that they called playing with the baby It cried—it had to cry; it had no other mode of self-defense; it could make no other effort toward self-preservation, which is "the first law of nature." That child is taught to pinch, and it will do it as soon as it knows enough. And its mother will try to show the little thing how it feels to be pinched, by pinching back. The same may be said of striking, scolding, etc. When adults put this and that together in a rational manner, and are civil, then children will be civil, too.

Are these small matters? Consider the consequences, and in that sense they are great matters; that is, if the good of the universe is of any importance. Infants are temples of whole-souled powers, if kept by paternal and maternal care from being damaged and perverted and turned into monsters before they know truth from error. Essential goodness is worth cultivating, and it is wrong to destrov it, either in the young or old.

CHILDREN'S SCHOOL DRESSES.

Thousands of little girls are now starting off to school; so lovely and precious are they that we do not wonder their mothers think there can be nothing too dainty and pretty for their darlings to wear. Yet for the future character of their children as well as for the sake of their teachers, we think that these words from Good Housekeeping deserve attention. Back of the two considerations named lies a third, no less important; do not these same white aprons and other dainty superfluities of children's dress make many fond mothers "slaves to the wheel" of the sewing-machine?

"Will you please tie my sashes, Miss M.?" The blonde-haired little girl of eight years stopped before my teacher's desk, holding in her hands the trailing, lace-trimmed ends of her white apron strings. The ties on the shoulders were loose, also, and slipping down over the small arms. One small miss goes by with a half yard of blue and white sash trailing behind. Another closes the door quickly, and steps briskly forward, to be brought up very suddenly, with her apron strings caught in the closed door, and a large triangular hole under her arm as the result. Half the pretty costumes which are ornamented with sashes need readjusting by the time school is called, and several wide collars are turned up behind the ears of their wearers in a manner comical to behold. I proceeded to "straighten" a few. This office was performed for others by those who sat nearest, with a great deal of giggling and not a few frowns and pettish jerks. By noon most of the aprons are soiled and untidy, shoulder-knots slipping down and the sashes at the back rumpled into mere strings. I ask myself, "Why do children's aprons have strings? and why do mothers, whose work for their children keeps them busy almost all day long, put white aprons on little girls?" They are pretty only when fresh. They are of very little use; none for warmth, since the neck, arms and shoulders are more exposed than the body; little for dress protection, since the sleeves, as a general thing, soil sooner in the school-room than the front of the dress. If an apron is not worthy of the name, covering shoulders, arms and dress alike, why should it be worn to school, where garments should come for use only?

I remember, as I write, of two little girls, sisters, who came to school to me. Although the oldest of five children, they were always neat, their clothes very seldom out of order. Their dresses were of soft flannel, one a dark gray, neatly trimmed in braid, with waist rather long and skirt sewed on full; the other, snuff-colored, made with a full skirt, and a close jacket for a waist. This pretty jacket had a vest, collar and cuffs of red velvet. They wore no aprons at school, but immediately on reaching home the dresses were covered with long dark aprons, covering arms and shoulders, and reaching below their hems; these were also worn next morning until after their hair had been combed, and all the little household tasks finished.

You will ask, "Were they not soon very badly soiled?" They did not look so, and were worn constantly until mid-winter, when the jacket of the snuff-colored dress was transformed into a waist by simply sewing the skirt to it. Then two sacques, knit of wool, were added, gray and brown, with scarlet trimmings. These afforded warmth, besides hiding sundry little spots and worn places at back and elbows. Also those dress skirts, with hems let down and new waists and sleeves, were worn far into the next autumn. And the mother saved the time it would have taken to make, wash, iron and keep in order the "school aprons."

FAMILY WORSHIP.

The New York Christian Advocate says editorially, that one of its correspondents has made inquiries in five different pastoral churches, and out of twenty-three class leaders only nine observe family worship in any form. Of fifteen Sunday-school superintendents, only four had worship in their homes. Of forty-seven stewards, only sixteen pretended to attend to this duty. In another church there were forty-two families in which both husband and wife were members of the church, and only nine of them conducted worship in their homes. Of twenty-two wives whose husbands were not members, only one held worship in the family; and of twelve widows, only four had family prayers. In another church, four families out of thirty-five were found where domestic worship was maintained; and of twenty-one women whose husbands were not Christians, only one observed religious worship in her family. This state of things is in the Methodist Church, be it noted; and it is certainly deplorable.

If these things are done in a green tree, what shall be done in a dry? We cannot think such a state of things would be revealed in the average white-ribbon home. As to the passivity of the women in relation to home worship, we can only account for it by the fact that if other pastors are like those excellent men to whom we have listened during our lifetime, in the hundreds of different churches where we have worshiped, they address themselves with practical unanimity to the brethren, and by the laws of mind women are not impressed with their duties as they would be were they more frequently included in the public exhortation. We trust there may be a change in this particular; else within a few generations its outcome may recall to our ministerial friends the Scripture exclamation, "Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

ORGAN OF THE WORLD'S AND NATIONAL WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

EDITORS.
MARY ALLEN WEST,
JULIA A. AMES. ELIZABETH W. ANDREW.

Published by the Woman's Temperance Publishing Association.

GEO. C. HALL, Business Manager.
161 La Salle St. - - - - Chicago, Ill.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

President—MRS. MATILDA B. CARSE, 145 Ashland Boulvd., Chicago.
Treasurer—MRS. L. A. HAGANS, Elmhurst, Ill.
Secretary—MARY ALLEN WEST, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. L. H. PLUMB, Streator, Ill
MISS ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS. CAROLINE B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
MRS CLARA HOFFMAN, Kansas City, Mo.
MISS ELISABETH S. TOBEY, Boston, Mass.
MRS. HELEN M. BARKER, Huron, S. Dakota.
MRS. A. H. CHRISTENSEN, Beaufort, S. C.
MRS. L. D. CARHART, Marion, Iowa.

OFFICERS OF THE NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

President—FRANCES E. WILLARD, Evanston, Ill.
Corresponding Sec.—MRS. C. B. BUELL, 161 La Salle St., Chicago.
Recording Sec.—MRS. MARY A. WOODBRIDGE, Ravenna, Ohio.
Assistant Rec. Sec.—MRS. L. M. N. STEVENS, Portland, Me.
Treasurer—ESTHER PUGH, 161 La Salle St. Chicago, Ill.
For presidents of states and superintendents of departments, see Annual Leaflet, which will be sent by Mrs. Buell on application, in closing a two-cent stamp.

Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and establisheth a city by iniquity.—Hab. 2:12.

Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchman watcheth but in vain.—Ps. 127: 1.

A MUNICIPAL MISGOVERNMENT.

A great menace to good government and the safety of the nation lies in the misgovernment of great cities. This is patent to every student of sociology. Many of the more thoughtful ones feel that unless better methods of governing cities are evolved, the Republic must be pronounced a failure. For such misgovernment nowhere else exists, they tell us, as in America. Certain it is that when we search for well-governed cities, we must go across the water for them. Berlin and Paris secure to every dweller therein personal safety and public service such as no American city can boast, and Glasgow is probably the best governed city in the world. What, then, is the trouble here? Is it something which inheres in republican institutions? The question is too deep for me. I have therefore called in the assistance of experts to answer it.

The following question was sent to prominent gentlemen in various parts of the country: What, in your opinion, are the causes, and what the remedies, for the prevalent misgovernment of great cities? The answers received constitute the following symposium:

The first received is from Rev. William H. Ward, superintending editor of The Independent, New York:

I know of but one cause for the prevalent misgovernment of cities, and that is that those who are chosen to govern them prefer to misgovern them. The electors are willing the city should be misgoverned, and the persons elected are at one with them in this purpose. They are in the alderman business, or the mayor business, or the comptroller business, or in the department of public buildings or parks, for the sake of the business that can be made out of it for themselves or their friends. When a thing is done we may assume that it is desired that it should be done. The misgovernment of a city is not an accident, it is an intention.

What, then, are the remedies? There are no remedies so long as the bulk of the voters prefer to have the cities misgoverned. So long as that is the case the only thing to be done is to apply the slow and tedious process of moral education, the same process that we are applying to the ignorant black voters of the South. We must not be impatient or despondent. The result will come. But when it may be assumed or hoped that the majority of the voters do not desire to have the cities misgoverned, then the only thing is to have such arrangements made, if possible, that they can express their will at the ballot box, and can elect men who desire the cities honestly governed. This is to be done more effectively, as a general thing, by indirect than by direct means.

The reform, or Australian method of ballot is an example of indirect methods of effecting a purpose. The purpose is to stop corruption. It does not directly attack corruption by forbidding or punishing bribery, it only indirectly accomplishes the end by making bribery difficult or ineffective. So if we wish to secure honest government of cities, the best thing to do is to attack the problem and the difficulty in the rear. The most important provision I know of is to separate municipal elections from state and National elections. If they are on the same day and on the same ticket it is impossible not to have the partisanship of general politics affecting the entirely distinct interests of municipal government. So I think the best thing to do is to have a separate election for city officials. That would make it easy for citizens' tickets, and will, more than anything else, break up the "trades" and "dickers" by which the district leaders control the vote. This divorce of municipal politics from state and National politics is an absolutely necessary thing, and must somehow be accomplished, or purification of municipal politics will be long delayed.

Dr. George P. Hays, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Kansas City, sends the next response. He spends no time on the "causes" further than to sum them up in the significant phrase, "Total depravity." Concerning the remedies, he says:

There is no patent, self-enforcing, universally adapted remedy for municipal mismanagement. Whatever new charters and city laws are adopted, the same old crowd work them, and it is not the laws which need reforming, but the officers. Municipal mismanagement is only a sophistical name for the efficient management of official position for private profit. The big word fools us as to the location of the sinner. Nothing is more comfortable to the scoundrel in office, than for the public to waste its time in devising plans to keep him straight and keep him in office. So long as the Cincinnati Committee of One Hundred devoted its attention to punishing rascals found in office, it was highly commended by everybody; but the moment it talked of trying to secure the nomination and election of honest men, it was warned not to meddle with politics.

Something would be done to remedy the evil, if the evil would get a great deal worse than it generally is. When Tweed stole the whole city of New York, good people got together and turned him and his crowd out. There are always plenty of good citizens in any city to keep matters right, if they would give their attention to public affairs. It takes a Johnstown flood of general crookedness and cussedness, however, to get these people to go to work and rectify the corruptions. When the Blood-Tubs and Plug-Uglies turned hell loose in Baltimore, it only took six months for decent people to make that as orderly a city as existed anywhere. At present mismanaged cities are afflicted with a large number of people who are too rich and busy and self-righteous to defile themselves with politics. When things get so bad they have to get dirty anyhow, they will take hold and clean things up. Whenever a city's population gets so bad that the law-abiding people are in such a minority that they cannot elect law-enforcing officers, then comes the uncivilized government of an absolute monarchy by whatever name it may be called.

Something would be done if all the people, or a majority of them, would turn Prohibitionists of the modern type. Prohibitionists are such for the public good, and not for the offices. They never elect any one, and men do not join them or stand as candidates in order to be elected. Whether the scabs will not come to them, or to any other party which may begin to elect some of its candidates, is another thing. It is a good sign, however, that parties are getting slack control of the workingmen and the farmers. All of these parties may not be absolutely unselfish, but they cannot be worse than the old parties, and their employments tend to make them see their own need of attending to public affairs.

It would not do any great harm to let women vote. Of course there are some very bad women, who would be sure to go to the polls, but my observation leads me to think that women average better than men in unselfishness. Of course women would then have to go amid the temptations of politics and elections, but most of them have to live with men who have to go through such things, and these women stand temptation about as well as their husbands and brothers. Indeed, the men generally behave worse when the women are away from home than when they are there. Municipal management is now entirely in the hands of the men, and it does not seem to be such a region of snow white purity that improvement would be impossible. But no method will work, unless the people will see to it that it is worked for the public good. Unfortunately, what most of us are looking for is some self-regulating municipal machine, which, like an automatic railroad switch, will keep the public locomotive on the right track, while we dismiss the watchman and all go to bed in the Pullman.

James H. Beauchamp, one of the leading lawyers of Kentucky, sends the following answer:

As to cause:

1. Avarice; "the love of money is the root of all evil," and, instead of being restrained within the limits of wise municipal regulations, it is rather encouraged by greedy capitalists and "ward politicians" who obtain control of the city government for selfish purposes.

2. An inordinate desire for official position and prominence. This might be termed a corollary to the first, as the example of corrupt officials using their positions to enhance their personal interests and entrench themselves in favor and power, encourages and incites others to the same line of conduct.

3. Party politics, by which the lines of the two dominant parties of the country at large are strictly drawn in municipal contests without regard to the quality or fitness of the aspirants, thereby sacrificing the welfare of the city to party ambition.

These three general causes are supplemented and made effective by the organized liquor dealers—their patrons and servants—and the adoption of the modern appliances of machine politics, resulting in the discouragement of many good citizens, and in practically relegating them to retirement from public affairs.

As to the remedy:

1. The suppression of the liquor traffic in order to procure a clear brain and a pure, free manhood, as the only reliable foundation for permanent reform.

2. The divorcement of municipal government from party politics, so as to bring it within the dominion of home and home-rule.

3. A more active and determined effort on the part of the better class of citizens to control and manage the affairs of the city.

4. Such systematic teaching by literature and lectures as will quicken the thought and consciences of men to the great duty of giving their best influence and efforts to secure and enforce a clean, honest and economical government for the city of their business life, their homes and their families; regular instructions in all city schools as to the sacredness of franchise and all public trusts and duties, and the adoption of the Australian system of voting.

Henry H. Faxon, of Quincy, Mass., sends the next answer:

MISS MARY ALLEN WEST, Chicago, Ill.,

Dear Friend:—Yours at hand asking me to write an article for THE UNION SIGNAL relative to the cause of the misgovernment of cities and the remedies therefor. It would afford me much satisfaction to carefully prepare a letter, were it not that my eyes trouble me very much, and that the illness of my secretary makes me unusually busy.

I can, however, in a few lines, state the principal reason for the existing condition—it is the tremendous influx of foreigners. The Irish, in particular, seem to take to politics instinctively, and almost without exception ally themselves to the Democratic party, which upholds rumselling and its attendant evils. The fact is that nearly all our large cities are governed by the saloon vote, catered to at times, I am sorry to say, by politicians, not only from the Democratic but also from the Republican ranks, who love office only for the plunder it affords.

It is a serious matter for every good citizen to contemplate; and unless stringent immigration and naturalization laws are speedily enacted and vigorously enforced, the political outlaws, who already have too much power, will obtain full control and ruin the nation.

Walter Thomas Mills, editor of The Statesman:

In my opinion misrule does not obtain in city affairs because municipal voters deliberately vote for wrong measures or bad candidates. State and National party politics are dominant. While the political fortunes of the parties, men or measures, at Washington, divide in local elections, a division of the voters on questions of local importance will be found impossible. The most fruitful cause of municipal misrule is this squabble over other things, at the place and time where local matters must be attended to, if at all. The most potent remedy will be found in any means whereby state and National policies and politics can be excluded from the local election. The local election is of importance, in a general way, in the state and National contests, because the same party names and party advocates being in use in both, a local victory has an important bearing on a succeeding general election. Hence, in the local election, entirely different party names and organizations, in which men of all parties shall work together on local matters, must make it a matter of no concern in general politics which side, in a local fight, may be the winners. Again, the local official, through the power of his public patronage, is able to greatly affect the general election; and hence local civil service reform must be complete. A permanent public corps of workmen must be established to do the public work. In this organization of the public servants, entry should depend on some test of ability, promotion on efficiency, and removals made possible only for cause, with a full hearing. Thus, the power of the local officials to control other men in general elections through official patronage, will cease, and it will become a further matter of indifference to the general election what the result may be in a local election. Municipal association should multiply everywhere to hasten the coming of such reforms.

I do not think the men who cannot read are mainly responsible for city misrule; on the contrary I think it is the men who can read. I do not think it is because the city population is less moral than the country population. For every hundred disorderly persons in Chicago, there are ten thousand reputable people. For every single short, narrow street in our city where there are scenes of midnight brawling, there are a hundred miles of silent and unguarded public ways lined on either side by peaceful and virtuous firesides. I am persuaded that the saloon, that ignorance, that the disfranchisement of women, and that public indifference are all powerful factors in this municipal problem, but that more fruitful of evil than any lack of reinforcements from any quarter is our inability to use the virtuous forces already in existence, but practically disarmed through the causes named.

Dr. John Bascom, Williamstown, Mass., ex-president of Wisconsin University:

The corruption, so chronic in our large cities, has little to do with either of the great political parties. It affects them both alike under similar circumstances. It is not a local ill, but a constitutional disease. It is the result of institutions in advance of the moral temper of our citizens. In large cities, this unfavorable balance of social forces shows itself by virtue of the greater concentration and activity of evil influences.

There are too many good citizens who seek their own with intense effort overlooking the public weal; there are too many bad citizens who seek their own through and by the public service; and there are too few citizens who find the larger share of individual well-being bound up in the general prosperity. The only sufficient remedy of this failure in government is a widened and deepened moral life.

The most constant and immediate instrument of this corruption is the saloon. High license serves only to consolidate and discipline this malign agent. What Mr. Chubb, of Sugar Loaf, said concerning the Sproxton election, the keeper of every saloon says everywhere, of every election: "In the way of hacting for any man, them are fools that don't employ me."

The great city, instead of possessing a special right to the saloon, suffers under a special inability in reference to it. Until we have the courage and strength to repress this most obvious, most constant, most successful instrument of political corruption, we shall not remove the corruption itself. The most instant and urgent point of assault is the saloon, through which, as a natural sewer, this political dishonesty flows. There is no affiliation more complete, more spontaneous, more inevitable than that of the saloon—selfish and immoral in every impulse, —with political methods that pervert justice and set the public prosperity at naught.

Rev. J. H. Byers, Emporia, Kansas:

According to the present régime of politics, very few men aspire to office, except with the view of personal profit. It is not the salary that is so much sought as the official position, which affords so many avenues for dishonest grabs into the public treasury. But no single municipal officer can swindle a city, or degrade its people. This is usually done by a mutual understanding all around, especially among the ward politicians and the police force. Given, a corrupt mayor, policemen and police judge, composed of foreigners, aldermen and councilmen from the ranks of the liquor dealers, together with a regnant saloon, and you have all the factors of municipal corruption.

What is the cause of such a state of affairs? I give two reasons. The first is chargeable to the two great political parties and their prejudices. A city ought not to be governed by politicians nor political parties. A city is such a compact, and so identified in moral and financial interests, that what is good for a Republican is good for a Democrat. Hence, when political parties, which includes the good as well as the bad men, array themselves against each other in municipal strife, each calling to its assistance the saloon and other rabble of the city, there can be no result but misrule and the worst feature of corruption.

My second reason follows from the first: this is the saloon. When the inhabitants of a city with exactly the same interests in morals and finances array themselves against each other at the ballot box, the saloon appears there also, and votes for that party which has pledged itself to favor the liquor traffic.

Not long ago I saw a minister of the gospel, pastor of a city church, vote side by side the same ticket with a noted brewer, and every name on that ticket was made up in a saloon; it was composed of only such men as were acceptable to the saloon. The minister was ignorant of the make-up of the ticket, but he was voting for his party. The saloon is the greatest living autocrat.

These are, therefore, the causes of misrule in the large cities: first, political prejudice, as it exists between the Republican and Democratic parties, and second, the saloon taking advantage of this prejudice, forces itself into city government as a balance of power, and then by a mutual understanding the city authorities, by various schemes, grow rich, while the saloon, according to previous contract, has its own way.

REMEDIES.—Abolish partyism in municipal elections. Let every Christian put as much religion in his ballot as he puts in his church, his Sabbath-school, his prayer-meeting and his family altar. There is nothing outside of the church of God, that should be used so sacredly, so conscientiously and prayerfully as the ballot. Every ballot should express the heartfelt desire of an enlightened Christian conscience. I hold that the church is responsible, both before God and man, for the great municipal corruption in our large cities. The ballot of one church-member neutralizes the ballot of another, while the corrupt politician and the saloon take advantage of this division and carry off the spoils. This makes the church a shop for receiving stolen goods. The city, by the help of the church, licenses the saloon—and that means to debauch, degrade and kill. License is a sin that yields more than revenue to build sidewalks—it yields misery, woe, corruption, death and hell. The church, by its ballot, aids the saloon; but the saloon would annihilate the church to-day if it could. Does municipal corruption retreat from the church? Does the saloon feel the influence of the church—the religious conscience—does it feel the religious press? Not much. True, the church through its courts, resolves and re-resolves against the saloon, and these resolutions hold good for 364 days in the year, but on the 365th day (election day) they are a failure. Resolutions do not hurt saloons, but ballots do.

This argument, as to the causes and remedies for municipal corruption, is abundantly sustained in the state of Kansas. Why? Because here politics is mainly barred in city elections, and both women and men go to the polls and vote for the best measures as represented by the best candidates. I feel that I can safely say that there is no place on earth with less misrule and municipal corruption than in Kansas, but it was not so till we got prohibition, AND THE WOMEN GOT THE BALLOT.

Judge McCulloch, of Peoria:

The immediate cause of much of the mismanagement so prevalent in our municipal governments, may be safely attributed to the presence, in official positions, of three characters, the ward politician, the boodler and the saloon man; all of which may sometimes be united in the same individual. The more remote cause is the political machine, which places them in official position. It may be conceded that our National and state politics have not become so thoroughly corrupted as to permit gross immorality to occupy the White House, or other high official stations. There is a moral sense among the people that will, at proper times, assert itself, in keeping the upper strata of our political life measurably respectable. But the rank and file are taught to believe that the salvation of the country depends upon the success of that party to which they respectively belong.

Success depends upon the marshalling of as many votes as possible on their respective sides. This part of the work devolves upon the ward politician. The good people who stand behind the counters of our banks and stores, and who have the business interests of the city in their keeping, have neither the time nor the inclination to enter this field of work. They are content to let the politician manage the affairs of their ward, confident, from past experience, that he will be able to keep the voters in line with their party. As to the methods he will make use of, they are not very particular to inquire, knowing as they do that he is engaged in a good cause, and that the end may justify the means. They know, too, that his shoulders are broad, and that he is not only able, but willing to bear all the reproach that may be heaped upon the party, and so he becomes the scape-goat for all who have been instrumental in bringing about political results of a questionable character.

For all this the ward politician claims compensation, which comes in the way of preferment to office in the municipality. In the turning of the political machine he has received valuable assistance from the boodler, who now comes in to claim his reward in the shape of fat contracts for his friends. The saloon man must also be remembered, for the valuable assistance rendered by him in keeping the liquor vote straight in line with the rest of the party. A ring is, therefore, formed to appropriate to themselves the municipal offices, with all which that implies. While the good people aforesaid, the merchants, the bankers, the manufacturers, and the elders and deacons of our churches are comfortably reading their papers at home, in the bosoms of their families, or may be attending prayer-meeting, the lodge or a temperance association, these fellows get together in a primary political meeting and have themselves or their friends nominated for the several offices. The party lash is then applied to the stay-at-homes, and the prospective candidates for Congress, for state Senator, for Representative in the Legislature, as well as all others who may have political aspirations are notified to come cheerfully up to the support of the party nominees, upon pain of being "knifed" in the next campaign.

Blinded in this manner to their own best interests, the people are led captive to the cupidity of a ring of corruptionists, who consider the public treasury their legitimate prey Fat contracts are let, in the profits of which they are allowed to participate; property of their friends is either undervalued for taxation, or omitted altogether from the assessment; unnecessary public improvements are projected in order to keep an army of street laborers in employment, in view of approaching elections; gamblers and prostitutes are allowed to follow their nefarious callings in open violation of law; saloons are allowed to run wide open on the day of rest; every kind of public vice is winked at, and only a sufficient show of executing the laws is kept up to make the good people believe that something, if but little, is being done in that direction. For these and other like services they think themselves entitled to compensation of some kind, pecuniary or otherwise. The only remedy I can see is to raise a non-partisan crusade against corruption, and in favor of clean city governments. I have no doubt whatever that there is such an element in all our cities, sufficiently powerful to take the absolute control of all our city affairs into their own hands, and to administer them for the best interests of all the people. The greatest difficulties in the way are, first, their apathy as to the public interests; second, their political environments. Arouse the people to an active discharge of this important public duty, irrespective of party affiliations, and the desired reform would speedily follow.

We close this symposium with the clear-cut utterances of Judge C. C. Bonney, President of the International Law and Order League:

In my opinion the chief causes of the prevalent misgovernment of cities, are:

1. The liquor saloon in politics, acting as an entirely unscrupulous balance of political power, and giving its aid to whatever party will best protect it and promote its interests.

2. The insane "spirit of party" against which Washington warned the American people, by which they are led to work with and support the worst interests and classes of the community, for the sake of expected party success.

3. The persistent sacrifice of municipal interests to support the organizations of state and national politics, by giving municipal positions of responsibility and power, not to those who will best serve the people, but to those who will best serve the party.

4. The apathy of the law-abiding, and their gross neglect of the duties of good citizenship, under which apathy and neglect the vast and sacred interests of municipal government are largely surrendered to the control of unworthy hands.

In my opinion the chief remedies for these great evils, are:

1. The expulsion of party politics from municipal affairs, that those who think alike on matters of HOME RULE, may act together to secure good government.

2. The expulsion from the minds of good citizens, of the satanic idea that in politics it is allowable to do evil that a supposed good may come; or, in other words, the idea that a bad man can make a good public officer; or, in still other words, that it is permissible to put a bad man in a public place which he is certain to abuse, because party success may thereby be promoted.

3. A powerful awakening of conscience, honor and reason, till good citizens can see and feel that the highest welfare of state and nation largely depends on the purity and efficiency of municipal government. The towns and cities of the country are its centers of civilization and power, and if they can be made and kept pure and strong, state and National politics will be correspondingly improved, and the public welfare accordingly advanced.

Here, then, is the summing up of this consensus: almost without exception these gentlemen consider the union of National and municipal politics an element of danger. Next in point of unanimity is the opinion that the saloon, by holding the balance of power, and controlling parties for its own benefit, is a potent cause of corruption. Indifference of good citizens and their lack of moral backbone joined to the activity and push of the bad element ready to seize the advantages the better element so carelessly let slip into their grasp, are potent factors. The alignment of good men against good men under party banners while the liquor power makes cat's paws of the whole of them; avarice, desire for office for the sake of the spoils; the influx of foreigners; the failure of Christians on election day to make good their profession for the three hundred and sixty-four other days of the year, and the disfranchisement of women, all, in the opinion of some or all of these gentlemen, are causes for the prevalent mismanagement of great cities.

These causes suggest the remedies: divorce of National from municipal elections; banishing politics from the latter; adopt the Australian ballot; abolishing the saloon; giving the ballot to women; educating public sentiment and public conscience to know what are a citizen's duties and to appreciate their sacredness, strengthening the moral backbone of all voters, especially Christian voters; making every one feel that as of old Christ sat over against the treasury, noting what was cast therein; so now He sits over against the ballot-box judging men by what they deposit there.

News from the Field.

CONNECTICUT.

STATE CAMP GROUNDS.

Within our borders have been assembled two notable state gatherings. One was encamped by the sea, and on a beautiful wide plain hundreds of white tents were pitched in long, regular rows. At early morning the shrill blast of the bugle awoke the echoes, and all day long could be seen the sentinels pacing to and fro as they guarded the grounds; the musketry gleamed in the sun when the soldiers marched out for parade; the cannon hoarsely boomed as the "orb of day" slipped behind the western horizon, and bursts of martial music were borne away on the breeze. All was animation as our state militia were drilled and trained in the arts of warfare.

The other gathering was inland among the hills, where, shaded by forest trees, the cottages nestled quaintly; here was heard ascending the voice of prayer and the harmony of praise, whispers of melody that were lifted heavenward on the soft zephyrs; here met the state W. C. T. U. to gain knowledge of the best methods of conducting their "peaceful war."

Both gatherings were influenced by the same motive, the instinctive idea of protection; both were composed of representatives from all parts of the state and both were well disciplined; in these points they were similar, but in many others they differed widely. The militia are training to protect the state against a foreign or domestic enemy that may come against us in the future; the W. C. T. U. are now engaged in a warfare against a foe that threatens every home and every person in the home. The militia in camp at Niantic presented a fine appearance of strength with its soldierly arms and fine uniforms; the W. C. T. U. gathering at Willimantic bore no visible arms and no sign of uniform except a bit of white ribbon knotted in the button-hole of the ordinary dress, for in the moral warfare in which it is engaged no carnal weapons are used.

Many of those who wished to attend the exercises of the Temperance Day at Willimantic, August 26, went to the camp ground the previous day, and thus made sure of being there in time for the opening exercises. There was much bustle at the station, and outgoing trains were crowded with campers who were leaving at the close of the camp-meeting, not caring to remain for the Temperance Day, while the incoming trains brought crowds of visitors. It was worthy of note that amid all the incident confusion the railroad officials were untiringly patient and courteous, not only politely answering the thousand and one questions propounded to them by thoughtless or bewildered travelers, but putting themselves at some inconvenience to assist in finding right trains, restoring lost baggage, and in many other ways showing good will; even the much-abused baggage agents were pleasant and obliging, and deserved the gratitude of owners of boxes, bags or trunks.

On the camp ground white-ribboners were being assigned rooms in the cosy cottages, friends were greeting each other, and the very air seemed loaded with welcomes. The evening service was an extremely interesting one, and a fitting prelude to the exercises of the following day. After a night of rest (more or less, according to the surroundings), the camp was again a scene of activity. The first service was one of praise and promise, conducted by Mrs S. B. Forbes, state president of the W. C. T. U., and a most beautiful service it was; after this came a Bible Reading, given by Mrs. Barney, of Rhode Island. By many this was conceded to be the finest exercise of the day. The large congregation listened with almost breathless attention, and many wet eyes showed the power of the speaker as she urged that Christianity meant work, and that lovers of the lowly Jesus would be workers with Him in saving the lost for whom He died. From the wealth of her own experience she gave treasures of thought to all, the influence of which will long linger with her hearers.

Mrs. Barney was followed by Beselow, a converted African prince, who gave a thrilling account of the relation of the liquor traffic to his country, vividly portraying the result of sending rum to the heathen and showing the almost impotency of the missionaries to cope with the evils induced by its use. At the close of Beselow's remarks, Miss Rose Williams, one of Bishop Taylor's South American missionaries, sang a solo very sweetly. Then Mrs. C. B. Buell was introduced, "our own Mrs. Buell," as she is wont to be called by the white-ribboners of Connecticut, who conducted a parliamentary drill, which was of inestimable value to the workers who asked questions freely, and were helped thereby.

At the close of the morning, packed full of good things as it was, the audience scattered for dinner, but were soon ready to gather again for the children's meeting, which was conducted by Mrs. C. H. Fitz Gerald. The children crowded to the front seats, but many older children had been attracted and filled the back seats. After singing, the audience were invited to join in repeating the Lord's Prayer, which they did heartily, another hymn was sung, and then Mrs. H. B. Brown, the president of Middlesex county, was introduced and gave a series of experiments showing the nature of alcohol, giving many facts which she illustrated by the chemical processes going on. This was of much interest and profit to the little ones, who regretted that the meeting could not be prolonged. So crowded had this service been that it was arranged to hold a second one later in the afternoon, and the bright faces attested the satisfaction felt at the determination.

Mrs. Barney again took the platform and gave her new lecture, "Facts and Fancies." The morning Bible Reading had prepared us to appreciate the afternoon address, and we were not at all disappointed. The clear voice and sweet face that had moved the hearts of the people a few hours before, again brought to them rich thoughts and fine sentiments, and she carried all with her, as she related fact after fact concerning the cruelty of the liquor traffic to the helpless women and children of our land.

After a solo by Mrs. Randall, and a collection had been taken, a question-box was conducted by Mrs. Buell, and this proved to be just the thing of which the white-ribbon women were in need, and in the asking and answering of questions relating to the work of the union many knotty matters were smoothed out to the satisfaction of the workers.

While this exercise was held at the stand, the children had gathered at the Niantic House, where Mrs. Fitz Gerald was waiting for them, the fresh young voices joined gayly in singing, and then they listened to a recitation given by Miss Percie J. Smith, and one by Miss Etta Aston, both young ladies members of Loyal Legion, Company Q, at Rockfall, then Mrs. Fitz Gerald gave one of her attractive talks, which held the attention of the children closely to the end; after a short prayer the meeting was closed and the supper bell sounding, they quickly dispersed.

Many left the camp ground before the evening praise service at seven o'clock, which was followed by five minute speeches by prominent workers, but even those who were obliged to lose the closing meetings felt that they had had a rich feast of good things, the memory of which they will carry with them for many days.

There were several short speeches and incidents that it is impossible to put into this report and keep it within the limit of space. Among the prominent workers in the state were noticed Mrs. Forbes, president of the state W. C. T. U.; Mrs. M. M. Andrews, corresponding secretary; Mrs. F. P. Partridge, recording secretary; Mrs. S. K. Luce, treasurer; Mrs. H. B. Brown, president of Middlesex county; Mrs. C. H. Fitz Gerald, superintendent of juvenile work; Miss Jane Sharpe, superintendent of state and county fairs; Mrs. M. L. Bogue, superintendent of social purity work; Mrs. R. N. Stanley, editor of the White Ribbon Banner, and superintendent of colored work, also Mrs. Searles, of New York; Mrs. Buell, of Chicago; the Revs. Newell, Sheffield, Fiske and others.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY W. C. T. U.

The annual Temperance Day at Tylerville, August 20, was not as largely attended as usual, owing to the unpleasant weather of the morning, but the rain and clouds did not frighten everybody, therefore a moderate sized audience gathered. In the morning Mr. Wallace, of Springfield, Mass., gave a fine address, and in the afternoon Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, well known in New England, delighted all with her matchless words; her dignified bearing and finely chosen sentences gain a hearing whenever she rises to speak.

A children's meeting was held at noon, and was conducted by Mrs. H B Brown, who made a pleasing address illustrated by chemical experiments. The speaker's stand was artistically decorated, and the motto of the W. C. T U. occupied a prominent place. The dainty contribution baskets were well filled, and the W C T U. literature found a ready sale. Tylerville is one of the most beautiful places on the Connecticut River, and the Temperance Day exercises are well attended as a general thing.

DOINGS OF THE HELPERS.

Company Q of the Middlesex division of the Loyal Temperance Legion has for its special motto, "Help each other," and a more helpful band of young people it would be hard to find. Perhaps it is the influence of the motto that makes them work so harmoniously together.

August 2d and 3d they had Mrs Fitz Gerald, state superintendent of juvenile work, with them, and held two meetings, besides arranging to have her speak at the Sunday-school service. She gave three fine talks, the Legion bearing all the expense and arranging all the details.

August 16th the Legion had a successful lawn party to which they invited friends, and a very social afternoon was thus spent. Rev. W. W. Dowd, of Westchester, gave a short address, and remarks were made by several others present.

Sunday evening, August 31st, the Legion united with the Sunday-school in a Gospel Temperance service at which the leader and assistant leader, both under sixteen years of age, presided. The influence of the juvenile societies is being felt and appreciated; they are of incalculable benefit in fitting the young people to take the lead in temperance work in the years to come.

September 4th this same indefatigable band gave "Ye Hatchet Partie" to a good sized house, and it was a success. The bright young Georgiana Washington Hatchet, known in real life as Miss Etta Aston, did finely. Miss Aston is quite an elocutionist, and her clear voice added much to the attractiveness of the entertainment. All the participants acquitted themselves well, and the treasury indicates that their work was not in vain financially.

On the evening of Sept. 10th a Y was formed in Rockfall, "under a cloud," as regarded the weather, but with a bright prospect so far as interest was concerned. May the Y's be wise indeed.

M. Belle Smith,
Supt. Press Work.

EAST WASHINGTON.

W. C. T. U. ITEMS.

The long, bright summer days of this latitude, not cooled by rain or dew, are not conducive to work of any description. Many go to the mountains or the sea-shore, and public work must often be neglected or deferred in consequence.

In Walla Walla our union has held its regular sessions and met several times for sewing. Preparations are now being made for the county convention, and also for the Demorest contest.

Two weeks ago we were favored with a talk by Mrs. Lizzie H. Miller, of Arkansas City, Kansas. Mrs. Miller's topic was, "What I know about Prohibition in Kansas," and her eloquent presentation of facts and figures must have convinced the most skeptical among her hearers that "prohibition does prohibit." The M. E. Church was crowded with an attentive audience who appeared to appreciate all that was said, and the W. C. T. U. were delighted with their sister white-ribboner from the prairie state. Mrs. Miller is expected to address the county convention next week.

Eastern Washington has some faithful workers, who, in spite of the summer heat, have added to the list of new unions since the close of the state convention. In addition to those already reported in The Union Signal new unions have been organized at Voorhees, Tekoa and Conlee City, and at five places in Lincoln county: Egypt, Wilbur, Harrington, Larene and also at Almira, where our faithful temperance apostle, Rev. E. B. Sutton, was assaulted and nearly killed by a saloon keeper, in June. A fine of twenty-five dollars was levied on the saloonkeeper in the justice's court, instead of turning the criminal over to the grand jury. Verily, women are needed in our courts of law, as well as by the hearthstones of the Nation.

The local unions are preparing to take part in the Northwest Exposition to be held in Spokane during October. A handsome quilt is to be among the nice things. Each local union is expected to contribute a block, and the whole quilt, after exhibition, is to be sold for the benefit of the state union.

A W. C. T. U. column is filled each week in several of our Washington papers, and the public kept informed of the progress of the work. The Walla Walla union supplies wall-pockets in the depot waiting room, and distributes in this way, many pages of temperance literature, tracts, and papers. The state penitentiary is located here, its massive walls and strong towers commanding a sightly position above the city. Our superintendent of jail and prison work secures hundreds of newspapers and tracts, and sends or takes them in for distribution among the unfortunate inmates, many of whom owe their present fate to the passion for strong drink.

Oh! how long will a Christian nation uphold this traffic in human souls, while hearts break and earth's bitter cry of anguish ascends to heaven? Somewhere and sometime must retribution swift and sure be meted out to every transgressor of God's righteous law.

Susie E. Foster,
Union Signal Reporter.

KANSAS.

A PROFITABLE CONVENTION.

The second district held its annual convention in Olathe, September 2 and 3, Mrs. L. B. Smith, president, presiding. We were favored with the presence of our state president, which was not only a help, but a joy to all. The convention was harmonious in every respect; much good counsel was given, resolutions adopted, and plans of work resolved upon, which, if carried out, will not only redound to our own good, but will make ours the "banner district."

The first evening was occupied with a lecture by Mrs. Rastall; it was replete with good, sound reasoning, and listened to by a large audience. The Demorest contest for the gold medal, which took place the last evening, was well attended, though the evening was dark and rainy.

And, now, last but not least, we must record our pleasant reception at the home of ex-Governor John P. St. John. Though it was raining very hard, nearly every delegate went to the noted home where they were cordially received by Mrs. and Miss St. John and were presented with a souvenir of the occasion in the form of a small photograph of Governor St. John tied with white and yellow ribbons. The Governor being away working for the cause which we all love, a telegram of cheer was sent him from the convention, by the hand of the tried and true Amanda Way, who had been in attendance at the convention and had helped us by many a helpful word.

If any other district can hold a pleasanter or more profitable convention than the second did, may our state president be there and tell us all through The Union Signal how it is done.

W. F. Bradford.

WISCONSIN.

State motto:—What ought to be done, can be done.

I wish to tell something of one of our noble W. C. T U women, the president of the sixth district, Mrs. Ella M. Phelps. She and her good husband keep a model hotel at Berlin. As a matter of course, no liquor or cigars are sold in the building. A friend who has visited there writes me as follows: "The cook in that hotel is a lady, refined and pretty, and you will find no better supply of all good things to eat in any home in the land than you will find there. Mr. Phelps is quite as noble and pleasant as his wife, and upholds her in all her good deeds. At eight o'clock, the family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Phelps, all the hired help, whom Mrs. Phelps introduces as 'our helpers,' and any guests who wish to be present, gather in the private parlor where Mr. Phelps conducts family prayers." Who can measure the influence of such a home for the public as this?

The sixth district has just held a very interesting and helpful convention at Berlin, and Mrs. Phelps was elected president for the coming year.

We are very glad of the work recently done by the union at West Superior. They have been organized but a short time, but are doing grand service under the leadership of their brave president, Mrs. Maude Barkey. Soon after their organization they began to plan for a series of lectures by P. A. Burdick. They were offered the use of the state Y. M. C. A. tent on terms that were satisfactory, and accepted the offer.

Mrs. Barkey writes: "Sunday evening, August 3, Mr. Burdick began his work. The tent would seat seven hundred. We soon had to put a shed addition on each side, rolling the sides of the tent clear up, so that we could seat five hundred more. We hired Mr. Burdick in the first place for two weeks, but at the end of ten days we saw that it would be really wrong for us to let him go at the end of that time. It took so long to get the people warmed up. We kept him four weeks. Sunday nights every available bit of space would be full, giving him an audience of 1,300 or more. Mr. Burdick is most successful in this work. A lawyer by profession, before he gave his life to this work, an earnest Christian, a marvelous reader of human nature. He first got the people on his side, and then how he did lay down the law to them! A wonderful work has been done; 500 people signed the pledge; public sentiment is wondrously aroused. We have had some seventy names given us as new members, active and honorary. Last evening a joint meeting was held to devise plans for carrying on this work so well begun. A committee was appointed to look up a location for a coffee house as near 3d street (which is nothing but saloons) as possible. Another committee was appointed to wait upon the mayor and ask why our laws regarding the closing of saloons on Sunday, and at eleven o'clock at night, are not enforced. Pray for us, that we may be given grace and courage. If it is possible, we mean to force the present administration to enforce the laws. If that cannot be done, we shall do our best to see that other men are put into office next spring, who will enforce the laws. We have engaged Mr. Burdick for the two last weeks in next March. Our city election is the first of April."

The union opened this campaign with $15 in their treasury. The campaign cost them $900, and they will have, when all their bills are paid, three or four times as much in the treasury as when they began. Thus their faith and courage have been rewarded.

EMMA J. CURTIS,
Special Correspondent.

IOWA.

GUTHRIE COUNTY CONVENTION.

The first quarterly convention of the W. C. T. U. met in the Presbyterian Church, at Casey, Sept. 10 and 11. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. E. C. Pugh. Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Hubbard, of Stuart, who read and talked very earnestly on the seventy-eighth Psalm.

After prayer and singing, Mrs. Treat, from Stuart, and Mrs. Grinnell, from Casey, were appointed a committee on credentials. Mrs. Treat then gave a very interesting talk on the Temperance Temple.

Wednesday evening we had a good meeting, which was opened with a praise service conducted by Rev. Mr. Deitrich, pastor of the M. E. Church, who also gave an earnest temperance talk, urging us to be more zealous in this great work. A paper was then read by Mrs. Boggs, of Guthrie Center, on "Scientific Temperance."

Mrs. Boggs is a devoted Christian worker, and presented a most excellent paper. A solo, by Mrs. Shotts, of Stuart, was sung. Mrs. Shotts is a fine singer, and her beautiful solos were appreciated by all. The president's address was listened to very attentively, and if her suggestions could be carried out, much more good might be accomplished

The morning session was called to order at nine o'clock, and devotional exercises led in an able manner by Miss Kate Hench, of Stuart. The report of the different unions was then in order. Stuart has the largest membership in the county; it is also the largest town. Mrs Chantry, of Casey, read a paper on, "Practical Temperance Work," which was good and showed how earnestly she is interested in the cause. It was decided that we have W. C. T. U. headquarters at the county fair and distribute temperance literature. The committee on resolutions then submitted the following:

1st. That our plans of work for the coming quarter be fully carried out, and that our temperance work be pushed with greater effort for "God and Home and Native Land."

2d. Resolved, That we return our thanks and appreciation for the kindness and hospitality of the Casey people toward us; to the Presbyterians for the use of their church; to the choir for their music, and to Mrs. Shotts, who has favored us with her beautiful solos.

3d. That we extend our sympathies to those of our W. C. T. U. sisters who are detained at home watching by their loved ones; and that we remember them in our prayers, that they may be able to say, "Not my will, but thine."

The convention accepted the invitation of the Guthrie Center union, to hold the next convention there in December.

HATTIE A. GENUNG,
County Sec.

OHIO.

CUYAHOGA COUNTY CONVENTION.

A Demorest silver medal contest opened the convention at Bedford, September 2. May Early, a colored girl, won the medal.

Wednesday, September 3, was a glorious day in every way. Mrs. Hammond had cause to congratulate the convention on the addition of five new unions, and over eighty members, mostly through her own efforts, too. The reports were all very favorable, especially the financial one, showing no lack, but something still left in our treasury.

Mrs. Rev. Brown, wife of the Baptist minister, and president of the Bedford union, welcomed the convention in a good discourse; Mrs. Purdy responded in her own peculiar manner, witty and wise. After a statement in regard to, and a discussion of Schools of Methods, it was voted to hold one at the next quarterly convention.

As Mrs. Terrell was absent, her report on the action of the International Sunday School convention on temperance lessons, was read by the secretary. Mrs. Millie A. Bell read a paper on "Unfermented Wine at the Sacrament," which was widely discussed, Mrs. Monroe making some pathetic points, telling her own wonderful experience. This brought out the fact that the Ladies Society of the Disciple Church where the convention met, meets yearly and makes their own "fruit of the vine."

A bountiful dinner refreshed the workers after the noon prayer. The afternoon session was called to order by Mrs. T. K. Doty. District work consumed some time, resulting in the election of Mrs. Hammond as district president, Mrs. Doty, treasurer, and Mrs. Bell as corresponding secretary.

A misunderstanding regarding district dues was settled satisfactorily, all funds remaining in the county treasury were equally divided between county and district. Mrs. Monroe's address made a deep impression. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Foote for her fidelity both as county and district president.

The meeting adjourned to convene next time at the East End. A gold medal Demorest contest ended the convention in the evening, Miss Belle Henderson, of Newburg, bearing off the honors. Mrs. Gray presented the medal.

M. A. B.

BELMONT COUNTY ITEMS.

I have been doing press work for years for the W. C. T. U., and this is my first effort to speak through the National organ. Belmont county is one of the best counties in the state, and as beautiful as its name indicates. The La Belle river ripples softly along the feet of its eastern hills, and its western boundary nestles snugly against rugged Guernsey. It ships immense quantities of strawberries and small fruits, is noted for its fine nurseries, leads in the production of tobacco—"oh, the pity of it"!—and is famous for glassware. Mr. Thornton Rodefer, of Bellaire, the husband of our W. C. T. U. recording secretary, is one of our leading glass men, and a strong Prohibitionist.

This district, consisting of Belmont, Washington, Monroe and Guernsey counties, held its third annual convention at Bridgeport. We were glad to become acquainted with such women as Mrs. C. E. Walter, of Marietta, and her townswoman, Mrs. Addy. The New Matamoras women are as bright as new pins, too. They were not afraid to mingle the yellow ribbon with the white above their hearts.

Our own Belmont county has taken up only such departments as could be efficiently worked. Scientific temperance instruction, under the superintendency of Mrs. Anna E. Albert, has been faithfully attended to. More money was expended in this than in all others, consequently the work was better done. At an expense of $25 the Temperance Bulletin, prepared by Francis Leiter, has been distributed to all teachers in the county, and it is said that this instruction is more thoroughly given in this than in any other county in Ohio.

To-day my eight-year-old daughter, on her return from school, gave me the following account of her lesson in physiology: "The teacher told us our hearts were working all the time, and if we should take alcohol into our stomachs it would be just like whipping a trotting horse: it would break into a run and smash things. She told us to put our hands over our hearts and count how many times they beat in a minute; while we were all busy counting, Homer Brant, the funny black boy in the B class rolled up his eyes like he was awfully scared, and called out, 'Te-e-tcher! I hain't got any!' "

Next to scientific instruction, press work has been successfully carried on. I have been superintendent of this department, and therefore speak from knowledge There are eight papers published in the county A year ago no use had been made of them toward forwarding the interests of our organization. The columns of all are now open for our work, and our articles are gladly received. So far as I know, Mrs Hamilton, of Bellaire, is the only one who has assisted in press work, but another year I hope for better things. Press work has cost the county only one dollar and thirty cents for the year. All conventions have been promptly reported, each time in seven or eight papers, and many columns of original matter, editorials, squibs, etc., have appeared. Jail and prison work, under Mrs. Dr Alexander, of St. Clairsville, and social purity under Miss Belle Brown, of Mt. Pleasant, have received conscientious attention. A medal contest at the county seat closed the year's work, and won converts.

MARY TRUEMAN SPRINGER, Press Supt.

WASHINGTON

CONVENTION OF A NEW COUNTY.

The Pierce county W. C. T. U., organized in June through the efforts of our state organizer, Mrs. E. S. Moffat, held its second convention at Sumner, September 4 and 5. The nine unions of the county were represented by twenty-five delegates, to whom the ladies of the Sumner union gave most cordial greeting, and an earnest invitation to "come again."

The decision reached at the first convention to meet together quarterly, was strengthened by a unanimous vote; it being the prevailing sentiment that personal convenience must be sacrificed, if need be, in order to become more thoroughly acquainted with the W. C. T. U. work throughout the country, and to devise "ways and means" for prosecuting the work in our own county.

The fact that our county union has taken up a new line of work, was made prominent when the superintendent of evangelistic work among the hop-pickers made her report. The report from the White Shield Home, now doing its second year of saving work, was most encouraging. The duty of woman to lend a strong, helping hand to her tempted and erring sisters was emphasized. The address of Mrs. Moffat on Thursday evening was the means of strengthening the determination of the Sumner people to banish an original package saloon recently opened against the wishes of the citizens.

"God be with you till we meet again," was sung in parting; and some at least of those who had met together returned to their homes strengthened for more earnest work.

A DELEGATE.

MISSOURI.

ST. CLAIR COUNTY GATHERING.

During the last week of August a county convention of W. C. T. U. workers was held in Appleton City. Mrs. Lucy Wisker, of Osceola, county president, presided. The ladies were assisted by the following named ministers: Rev. Mr. Jones, of the M. E. Church, of Appleton City; Rev Mr. Mayon, of the Presbyterian Church, of the same place; Rev. Mr. Campbel, of Nevada, and Rev. Mr. Stevens, of Osceola. Mrs. Alice Williams, of Cameron, was with us and gave three addresses, which were highly appreciated by large audiences, as Mrs. Williams is much esteemed by Appleton people

Reports from the three unions of the county were read by the presidents, and proved that much energetic work had been done during the year. Papers on some of the different departments of our work were read by Mrs. Warden, of Osceola, and by Mrs. Gilson, Mrs. Sturtevant and Mrs. E. P. Williams, of Appleton City. The address of welcome was gracefully given by Mrs. Rev. Jones, and responded to by Mrs. Warden. The president's annual address was characterized by hopefulness and encouragement. Mrs. Wisker is a faithful worker and a good presiding officer, and has the efficient coöperation of her husband, who is an honorary member of our union.

Memorial services in honor of the late General Clinton B. Fisk, were observed on the last evening of the convention. Mrs. Alice Williams paid a thrilling tribute to his life and character, and was followed by Rev. Mr. Stevens who spoke with the feeling of a personal friend of General Fisk, as a citizen, soldier, philanthropist, and Prohibitionist.

The music furnished by the choir was of a superior character. A hymn composed by Mrs. Williams, and set to music by her daughter, was also sung at the convention. Resolutions indorsing the National union and all its principles and lines of work, were passed unanimously. Mrs. Wisker was reëlected county president; Mrs. Gilson, treasurer, and Miss Baker, of Lowrey City, corresponding secretary.

LOCAL PRESS SUPERINTENDENT.

CALIFORNIA.

SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY CONVENTION.

The fourth annual convention of San Luis Obispo county, met at Arroyo Grande, July 25, 1890, in the M. E. Church, Mrs. Runnels presiding. Devotional exercises were led by Mrs. Nelson, after which social interchange of thought was called for by the president, and was responded to by one or more members of each union present, and was profitable to all, as they spoke of their discouragements and hopes, and expressed firm faith in God as the great source from whence all our strength comes.

Each union in the county was represented except San Miguel and Oak Flat, and reports were received from each union except San Miguel.

Mrs. R. S. Brown, superintendent of prison and jail work, read a very interesting paper on that department. The noon hour of prayer was observed, after which the convention adjourned to partake of the bountiful lunch prepared by the ladies of the Arroyo Grande W. C. T. U.

The afternoon session brought the address of welcome, and responses by the presidents of the various unions represented, and the annual address of the county president. The following officers for the ensuing year were then elected: President, Mrs. Runnels; vice-president, Mrs. Nott; recording secretary, Mrs. Cook; treasurer, Mrs. Noys; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hugh. Last year's superintendents of departments were retained, and the departments of evangelistic work and literature were added. Prohibition literature was freely distributed.

The evening brought several valuable papers, by Mrs. Barry on "Juvenile Work," Mrs. Carmikle on "Hygiene and Heredity," Mrs. Mansfield on "Scientific Temperance Instruction," and by Mrs. Rigdon on "The Present Outlook of Our Work." Rev. Mr. Holloway gave a short talk, and recitations by Miss Carrie Coleman and Gracie Nelson enlivened the evening The acquisition of eight active and five honorary members was one result of the convention.

MRS. R. M. COOK, Rec. Sec.

ILLINOIS.

COLES COUNTY.

In the Third Annual Prohibition Camp-meeting of Coles county, held at Charleston, Ill , Aug. 20th to 31st, the W. C. T. U. was given a day, Friday, Aug. 29th.

Mrs. Addie Northam Fields had the hour between nine and ten (as she had every day during the meeting) for her work of getting the children started right.

Devotional exercises at ten o'clock were followed by reports from each union in the county, and a paper by Miss Clara Parrish, district organizer, on "Y" work Miss Parrish always presents her work in such an enthusiastic way that only those who have un"wise"ly determined to have nothing to do with it can fail to respond.

The program for afternoon was as follows: Roll-call and response, "Why I am a W. C. T. U. Woman." Parliamentary drill; Question-box, conducted by Mrs. Helen M. Gougar. It was thought best to reverse the program, and there was such a thirst for knowledge of the "Aims and Objects," "Manners and Methods" of the W. C. T. U. that the entire afternoon was given up to that part of the program.

At close of the exercises by request Mrs. Gougar presented the "Temperance Temple" and took up a collection for it, amounting to $7.25.

Mrs. Harlan certainly has much to hope for from this day's gathering of her forces. Friday evening, Mrs. Gougar gave an address on "Municipal Suffrage for Illinois Women."

MARY ALLEN MCLAIN, Co. Sec.

ANOTHER COUNTY FAIR.

This week Hancock county held her annual agricultural fair, and amid the rush and business, the work of the W. C. T. U took a prominent part. Headquarters were secured in Art Hall, which was made beautiful by taste and ingenuity. A large supply of our temperance literature was given away by our county union through Mrs. Strader and her helpers. Flowers, banners, pictures and mottoes hung over the literature table; a jug decorated, "A la Kentucky at the New Orleans Exposition," stood upon a bracket near, and attracted a great deal of notice. In addition, we had a tent for W. C. T. U. lunch, where the most toothsome lunch was set, and coffee that seemed to be known of throughout the grounds, judging from the demand. The county W. C. T. U. gave premiums, one of $7 and the other of $3, for the best and second best essays on effects of alcoholics and tobacco on the human system. The first was won by Miss De Groot, of Augusta, the second by Miss Freeland, of Elvaton. The display of work done by public school teachers was very fine, and was one of the great attractions of the fair. After all our expenses were paid we realized a very nice sum of money, which will lift us out of debt and enable us to send a good check for "district special fund." We were treated with kindness and courtesy by every one. Friends assisted us who do not belong to the union. Two sent large baskets of grapes, and one arranged our tables beautifully for us on Thursday. Good order reigned supreme. No drinking nor gambling places were allowed in the grounds. La Harpe, in this county, had temporary headquarters, which you will no doubt hear from. *

NINTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The W. C. T. U. of the ninth Congressional district held their annual convention at El Paso, September 15, 16 and 17. The conditions being favorable, a large attendance of accredited delegates was reported and the convention was one of unusual enthusiasm and profit. It was pronounced a miniature state convention in business done and interest awakened, and it is safe to say that W. C. T. U's in the district received a great impetus for the coming year. Reports given show a condition of general prosperity, and plans made for work give promise of greater activity in W. C. T. U. circles in the year to come.

A feeling of regret was occasioned by the removal of Mrs. Barbara Replogle Atkinson from the district which she has so acceptably served as president for three years. She came into the work a stranger but leaves it with many friends. During the three years of her presidency the ninth district came up to a much higher mark in W. C. T. U. matters than before. Mrs. Atkinson's mantle falls upon the shoulders of Mrs. Helen E. Wright, of Watseka, who comes into the work highly recommended by Mrs. Rounds, our state president.

Mrs Helen Rice, of Boston, National superintendent of juvenile work, was present on the last evening of the convention and gave an address of great sweetness and power on "Our Responsibility to the Child in the Midst." Mrs. Rounds was also present and gave one of her characteristic addresses.

A parliamentary drill, conducted by Miss Emily Shedd, of Forest, was a feature of the program much enjoyed by the convention, the members of which entered heartily into the fine play afforded by the motion that a Temperance Temple be built in the ninth district. After a vain struggle to choose the site (second only to the World's Fair difficulty) the matter was left unsettled by a call for the order of the day.

Narcotics, Mrs. Sarah E. Wood, Odell; Scientific Temperance Instruction, Mrs. M. L. Brumback, Odell; Women on School Boards, Mrs. Blanche Vivian, Grant Park; Doing Good, Mrs. Lillie Martin, Sparland; Barriers to Success, Mrs. Deams, Sheldon; Our Girls and their Mothers, Mrs. Anna Vail, Momence, and Physical Culture and Dress Reform, Mrs. Ella Van Buskirk, Odell; were a few of the choice papers on an exceptionally good program.

Special interest rests in the appointed Membership Crusade Day, Saturday, September 27, when every woman in the land is to be invited to join the ranks of the "Home Protectionists." Through the heroic efforts of that day the membership of the organization must surely be doubled the country over.

LUCY PAGE GASTON.

NINETEENTH DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the nineteenth district was held at Mt. Vernon (of cyclone fame) September 1, 2, and 3. The opening session Monday, at 7:30 p. m., was under the direction of the Y girls of the district. Miss Lucy Johnson, district superintendent, presided with ease. Rev. Thiele gave the address of welcome. The address of the evening was given by our able state superintendent of Y work, Miss Mary Cowen. She completely captured the audience. Rev. C. H. Fields paid a glowing tribute to consecrated young womanhood in his collection speech. A male quartette of unusual ability furnished excellent music.

The program as published was carried out on time, and nearly all the speakers reported a great advance in work done in the different lines, especially scientific temperance, county fairs, and finance. The district is out of debt, has met the full $100 for state work, and has some money left to begin the work for the coming year. The convention decided to ask each union in the district to raise for state and district work a sum equal to $1 per member, and send out their president for constant work in the field.

Mrs. M. C. Board was unanimously reëlected district president; Mrs. F. M. Hibbits, corresponding secretary; Miss E. D. Martin, recording secretary; Mrs. E. J. Hall, treasurer. Superintendents were appointed for thirteen lines of work. Never were prospects brighter for this district. With fifteen women writing to the unions, Mrs. Board traveling most of the time, and the help we hope for from Mrs. Rounds, Miss Cowen and others, we'll not need much longer to be called the "Poor old Nineteenth."

Mrs. L. S. Rounds was present two days, and with her wise and earnest words of instruction to the women, and her stirring and logical public addresses, did very much to make this the best convention the district has ever held.

We feel sure the influence of the brave, strong words of these consecrated women will live on forever.

SECRETARY.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Delaware W. C. T. U. will hold its annual convention at Dover, Del., October 15, 16 and 17. An interesting program has been arranged. Mrs. Woodbridge will address the mass-meeting on Thursday evening, the 16th.

MRS. MARY L. COX, Cor. Sec.

STATE CONVENTIONS.

Illinois, Rockford,	October	7- 9
New York, Elmira,	"	7- 9
Indiana, Terre Haute,	"	10-14
Iowa, Des Moines,	"	14-17
Massachusetts, Worcester,	"	15-17
Delaware, Dover,	"	15-17
Rhode Island, Central Falls,	"	16——
Virginia, Norfolk,	"	21-22
Ohio, Chillicothe,	"	21-24
South Carolina,	"	23——
Connecticut, New Haven,	"	28-30
Maine, Portland,	"	——

Official Communications.

DAY OF PRAYER.

October 29th has been set apart by the general officers as a Day of Prayer for the National Convention, and a program promised for the day's exercises.

A request has come to us from the Nebraska W. C. T. U., that the struggle in that state for the prohibitory amendment be also remembered upon that day.

Next week there will appear in THE UNION SIGNAL a full program for the day, part of which will be especially given to the Nebraska campaign.

It is our hope that all over our land our unions will observe the day, and so far as possible, secure the coöperation of all pastors and churches. Certainly that part of the program relating to the work in hand in Nebraska must appeal to the Christian people, and they should be invited to take part.

See to it that notices are given in all churches, and inserted in all the papers, and be ready to use the program in the same way when it shall appear in THE UNION SIGNAL. Extra copies of the program will be struck off and can be obtained by sending a two cent stamp to National Headquarters, 161 La Salle street, Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 26th. CAROLINE B. BUELL.

RAILROAD RATES.

The usual one and one-third railroad rates will be granted to delegates and visitors attending the National Convention at Atlanta. Special excursions are being arranged for at different points, at which special rates will be given. The following ladies have kindly consented to act as my aids in arranging for such excursions:

Mrs. Ellen M Everett, 36 Bromfield street, Boston; Mrs. Caroline Woodward, Seward, Nebraska.

I shall personally conduct an excursion from Chicago, in which I hope delegates and visitors from the Northwest will join. Fuller particulars as to the roads giving reductions, and time granted, will be given in THE UNION SIGNAL as soon as complete arrangements are made.

Chicago, Sept. 27 HELEN L. HOOD, Supt.

WORK AMONG COLORED PEOPLE.

As the time is now approaching for our annual reports, will you please furnish me with any items of information from the department of colored work, North and South? I have spent several months South since our annual meeting, although I did not know, till near the close of my southern tour, that the South had been included in my work. I found in the South a field of interest and encouragement, open doors, hospitable homes, and receptive hearers. A field which if cultivated in the spirit of the all-inclusive Christ, may yet yield the nation a harvest of good fruit Perhaps it is rather early to expect very much in the way of permanent unions either North or South among the colored women. The masses of the colored women have not had a generation since slavery to straighten their hands from the hoe, and grasp the pen, and to have purchased leisure from the cares of maternity and bread-winning, to have accomplished very much purely benevolent work outside the pressure of their own home and church work, or to have developed a perseverance of character, and persistence of effort which may characterize others whose lines have fallen in more pleasant places. The failure of unions once formed to exhibit healthy growth, may have been discouraging to some who have worked in this department, but if we look beyond the facts of the present to the antecedents of the race, the ignorance, poverty, and social contempt which has fallen to our lot, we need not be surprised if there is a failure of enthusiastic uprising to carry on any reform outside of distinctive church and home work. Perhaps this department is among the hardest to fill in some parts of the country, with earnest, consecrated, capable women, either white or colored, and yet might not a good work be effected by forming Loyal Temperance Legions among the children, or inviting them into Legions already formed, and organizing mothers' and social purity meetings among the women, and using the home as a moral lever in uplifting the race, and striving to have it one of the "provinces of God's kingdom" where they may plant their strongest batteries against the crime and curse of the liquor traffic? Please do not fail to let me hear from all parts of the country of the progress of the work, and if any unions desire my services, write to 1006 Bainbridge street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Yours in the work, F. E. W. HARPER, Supt.

A WORLD'S W. C. T. U. EVANGELIST.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Andrew, long associated with the editorial corps of THE UNION SIGNAL, has been appointed an evangelist of the World's W. C. T. U., and has gone to England in this capacity. It is hoped that Mrs. Andrew may make the tour of the world under the auspices of the W. C. T. U., and she is warmly commended to white-ribboners in all lands as a woman of rare gifts and culture, a fervent Christian, and a zealous worker for God, Home and Humanity.

FRANCES E. WILLARD,
Pres. World's W. C. T. U.

En route in Nebraska, Sept. 18, 1890.

RECEIPTS FOR TEMPERANCE TEMPLE.

Indiana—Marion: W. L. Leufestey, Mrs. M. C. Mead, Mrs. C. W. Neal, Mrs. P. Hall, Mrs. H. Thomburg, Mrs. E. Wright, Mrs. J. L. Thompson, Nathan Cogshell, J. and A. Teale, Mrs. P. Motter, Baby Band, Loyal Temperance Legion, $1 each; Deer Creek: Mrs. E. Cogshall, B. L. Shugart, M. R. Elliott, $1 each; others, Marion and Deer Creek, $6; Fairmount: Mrs. L. Rush, $5; Lena Crilley, C. R. Small, 50 cents each; Oak Ridge: Mary Rich, 50 cents; Mary Bond, 75 cents; Bethel: Jennie Neal, $1; Lucina Steres, 50 cents; Mary Mart, 25 cents; others, $11; La-Porte: Baby Band, $2.50; per Mrs. A. V. Woodward, $22.

Iowa—Monona, Mrs. A. A. Young, $1; Spencer: W. C. T. U., $5; Albion: W. C. T. U. and Baby Band, $5,-05; Marathon: W. C. T. U., $5; Danville: Ida Mix, $5; North Liberty: Mrs. Eliza Ault, $3; Oskaloosa: per Mrs. M. S. Dickson, $5.80.

Indian Territory—Eufaula: Mrs. Sarah Coodey, $1.50.

Kansas—Baldwin; W. C. T. U.; $5; Chanute: Julia and Ruth Alexander, $4; Carlton: W. C. T. U., $1; Coolidge: Mrs. Dockstader and Miss Roberts, $2; Clay Center: Mrs. M. E. Bennett, $2.

Kentucky—Millersburg: Graham and Mary Smedley, $1; Louisville: Mrs. S. M. Barr, $1; Grant's Lick: Mrs. J. E. Darlington, $2; Lexington: G. M. Brooks, $3.65.

Maine—Presque Isle: W. C. T. U., $6; Thomaston: Mrs. S. Whitcomb, $4; Portland: Mrs. J. E. McDowell, $1; Waldsboro: W. C. T. U., $1.

Massachusetts—North Adams: W. C. T. U., $2; Falmouth: per Mrs H. C. Davis, $6.50; West Newton: Ellen I. Waite, $6; Adams: W. C. T U., $3; Holyoke: W. C. T. U., $25; Brocton: Mrs M. L. Reed, $5; Springfield: Mrs. M. M. Hall, 50 cents; Lawrence: W. C. T. U., $5; Dorchester: W. C. T U., $1; E. G. Ives, $1.50; Plymouth: W. C. T. U., $1; Wellesley College: Christian Association, $20.

Michigan—Centreville: D. P. Peeke, $1; Schoolcraft: Y. W. C. T. U., $2; Decatur: W. C. T. U., $1; Second District W. C. T. U., $100; Albion: Mrs. L. L Ostrom, $5; Kalamazoo: W. C. T. U., $10; Ionia: Mrs E A. Kennedy, $50; Pittsford: Carrie Tolford, $3.75; Mrs M F. Cutler, $4; Ballards: Baby Band, $2 20; W. C T U, $4.20; Epsilon: W. C. T. U., $2; Hudson: W. C. T. U., $5; West Le Roy: W. C. T. U., $3.25.

Minnesota—Ellsworth: W. C. T. U., $4.05; Minneapolis: Lucy Hayes W. C. T. U, $6; Mrs. E. A. Russell, $5; Oxford: W. C. T. U., $2.25; Elmore: Y. W. C. T. U., $10; Wasioja: Loyal Temperance Legion, $3.30; Rushford: W. C. T. U., $11.35; Duluth: Mrs. A. W. Bradley, $25; Leavenworth: Hobart W C. T. U, $1.75; Rushford: Mrs. Lars Norem, $100; Lake Crystal: W. C. T. U., $5.50; Lake City: W C. T. U., Loyal Temperance Legion and Baby Band, $31 50; St. Charles: W. C. T. U. and Band of Hope, $5.63.

Missouri—Lone Cedar: W. C T. U. and Loyal Temperance Legion, $3.50; Maryville: W. C. T. U., $13; Truxton: Mrs. J. M B. Gilmore, Gladys Gilmore, Helen E. Babcock, $1 each; Kansas City: Anna M. Jones, $1 25; Rochester: Amelia F. Ruby, $1; St. Louis: Clara Holliday, $4; Evelyn: Mrs. E. J. Thomas, $10.50; Brookfield: Baby Band, $10.50; Mt. Vernon. W C T. U., $1; Kansas City: W C T U, East Side, $2.32; Burlington Junction: W. C. T U., $4.08.

Mississippi—Edwards: W. C. T. U , $1.75.

Nebraska—Inland: Ada Helen Smith, $1; Lincoln: Baby Band, $1.60; Omaha: Mrs. J. B. Nelson, $5.50; Hansen: W. C. T. U., $3.25; Rulo: W C T U., $1.17; Plainview: Baby Band, $5.

New Hampshire—Tamworth: Mrs. E. S. Jackson, $1; Lake Village: Mrs. H. Tucker, $1; Concord: Irving Gray, $1.

New Jersey—Long Branch City: I. Robins, $1; Merchantville: Mrs. J. T. Brien, $3.50; Rosenhayn: Cherub Band, $2; W. C. T. U., 50 cts; Loyal Temperance Legion, 50 cts; Baby Band, 30 cts.

New York—Millville: 33 cts; Waverly: Colored Sunday-school, $1; Central Park: Z. E. and Amy Gray, $3 75; Middleburg: Mrs. H. D. Wells, $4.65; Burke: Miss F. I. Looker, 50 cts; Holley: per Mrs. Jas. Mallory, $3.50; Rossville: Gustave Rose, $5; Auburn: per Mrs. S. C. Crosman, $1; Elmira: W. C. T. U., seventh ward, $1; Wellsville: Mrs. Mary F Macken, $12; Mt. Vernon: W. C. T. U , $3; Waverly: Miss Rita Lowman, $1; Livonia Station: R. R. Barber, 10 cts; Canton: W. C. T. U., and Baby Band, $11.05; East Buffalo: Mrs L. A. Stevenson, $5; Lockport: Baby Band, $5.40; Warsaw: Baby Band and W. C. T. U., $32.50; Batavia: W. C. T. U., No. 2, $5; Webster: W. C. T. U., $4.50.

Ohio—Sardis: Baby Band, $2 20; Woodstock: Mrs. C. Martin, $1; Berea: W. C. T. U., $4.48; Mrs. J. F. Smith, $1; Martin's Ferry: Mrs. A. M. Wood, 50 cts; Berlinville: in memoriam, Mrs. Rachel Harris, $5; ——: Cash, $25; Gano: Mrs. S. Shepherd, $3.12; Hillsboro: Loyal Temperance Legion, $5; Highland Co.: W. C. T. U., $25; Mt. Sterling: W. C. T. U., $1; Canton: Loyal Temperance Legion, $10; Stryker: Mrs. P. A. Gaines, $2.35; Cadiz: Mrs. D. Cunningham, $1; Texas: Mrs. M. M. Durbin, 25 cts.; Wayne Co.: W. C. T. U., $4; Oak Shade: W. C. T. U., $5; Swanton Tp.: W. C. T. U., $5.25; Wellsville: Mrs. Lide Aten, $1; Athens: W. C. T. U., $6; Morning Sun: W. C. T. U., $2.50.

Oregon—Helix: W. C. T. U., $1.75; Ashland: Loyal Temperance Legion, $3.95.

Pennsylvania—Sewickley: E. H. Wilkins, 25 cts; Elderton: Mrs. C. M. Jackson, $1.25; Mercersburg: W. C. T. U., $1.20; Brownsville: W. C. T. U., $2.25; Philadelphia, A friend, $5; Berch Creek: W. C. T. U., $6.77; West Philadelphia: W. C. T. U., $5; Lonestown: Mary McClain, $1; Factoryville: Y W. C. T. U., $2; Rochester: W. C. T. U., $1; Darby; W. C. T. U., $3.61; Miles Grove: Mrs. M. Spangler, $1; Idlewood: Loyal Temperance Legion, $2.17; Indiana: W. C. T. U. and Loyal Temperance Legion, $10.60; Millville: W. C. T. U. and Loyal Temperance Legion, $1.64; Avoca: W. C. T. U., $5.50.

Tennessee — St. Bethlehem: W. C. T. U., $1; McKenzie: W. C. T. U., $11.40; Dayton: S. A. Chace, $1.

Texas—Kerrville; Mrs. Clara Candlin, $5.

Vermont—W. Wardsboro: W. C. T. U., $1.75; St. Johnsbury: R. Ward, 10 cts; Weston: W. C. T. U., $1; N. Springfield: Mrs. A. C. James, $5; So. Ryegate: Mrs. Canfield, $1.50; Mrs. Bone, $1.50; Mrs. Doe, $3.65.

Washington—Aberdeen: Mrs. R. Angelo, $1.

Wisconsin — New London: W. C. T. U., $1.50; Mukwonago: per A. C. Hollister, 60 cts.; Fox River: W. C. T. U., School Dist. No. 9, $2.60; Rib Lake: W. C. T. U., $3; Lodi: W. C. T. U., $10.25; Spencer: Mrs. G. I. Follett, $1; Sharon: Baby Band, $4.80; Lucy Miller; Massagawega, 20 cts.

Mrs. Evelyn Graham, Winnipeg, Manitoba, $1. A well-wisher, $6.

One hundred dollars, credited to Mrs. Phebe Avery, Galesburg, Ill., should have been credited to W. C. T. U., Galesburg. ESTHER PUGH.

Compound Oxygen has been before the public for twenty years. It has passed its period of probation, been "tried, and not found wanting." We have treated over 50,000 patients in various parts of the world. An International Congress of our patients, each speaking in his own tongue, would rival the scene at the Tower of Babel. All this, we are proud to say, has been accomplished not by any species of charlatanry. We never have professed to cure all cases of disease, nor to warrant a cure in any case. We simply present the testimony of those who have tried it. We have their permission to refer you to them, if you desire further information

Send for our brochure of 200 pages, a treatise on Compound Oxygen, its discovery, mode of action, and results, and you will find a record of cures in many chronic cases, with well attested testimonials. Sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, California.

Publisher's Notes.

A Lithograph Worth Having.

We will have ready in the latter part of October a lithograph of the Temple in the exact colors as it will appear, together with a handsome portrait of Mrs. Carse. The effect of the picture is most excellent. Every one wants to know how the Temple will appear, and will appreciate the portrait of Mrs. Carse, the one who has planned so grandly and executed her plans so bravely. There will be a great demand for these pictures. We will send one postpaid for 25 cents, or five in one package, $1.

To Get One Free.

Send us one new subscription for THE UNION SIGNAL with $1, or,

Four three months subscriptions at 25 cents each, ($1 in all) or,

Ten five week trial subscriptions at 10 cents each ($1 in all).

The corner-stone of the building will be laid Saturday, Nov. 1st, and the next issue of THE UNION SIGNAL, Nov. 6, will be known as the Temple number. Send for extra numbers of that issue. All your friends will be interested in the account of the laying of the corner-stone, and it will be a good time to get the trial subscriptions.

More Vigorous!

Can we have it? A more vigorous policy as regards subscriptions for The Young Crusader? The Sunday-school edition is doing well, but the semi-monthly edition is not. Suppose you think of six children who get little or no reading of this kind; suppose you send 25 cents for six months subscription for each of the six—$1.50; suppose you could follow those papers into those families? Keep this matter in mind. Why isn't such a gift far better than a Christmas card or booklet that is merely pretty? Remember we have had to make one change in publishing this paper; don't force us to another!

FAIR

Don't forget it. Use it liberally in August, September and October. Extra good for use at all gatherings of farmers.
Do something!

PRICES.

10 copies .....$ .20
100 " 1.70
1,000 " 14.00
All prepaid, Address
W. T. P. A. 161 LaSalle St.

NUMBER.

"Why One Woman

Wants to Vote," by Ella G. Ives, is the title of National Leaflets No. 43. Here are some of the reasons:

1st. Because I am a human being.
2d. Because I am a woman.
3d. Because I am a Christian.

But we cannot here give the cogency of the reasoning deducted from the above. National Leaflet No. 42 is on the same subject and gives "Twelve Reasons why Women want to Vote," by Alice Stone Blackwell, and still another (No. 44) is by Mrs. S. S. Fessenden, Superintendent of the Department of Franchise, "The Letter Killeth, the Spirit Maketh Free," and is a plea against the literalism in enforcing Paul's command, "Let your women keep silence in the churches," where his other commands, "Use a little wine," "Greet one another with a holy kiss," are not so enforced. But here are three bright, short and very much to the point suffrage leaflets. For 10 cents you can have 10 sent you assorted, for 90 cents, 100. "Seem 's if" it would pay to start these pages out? Some need, at least?

A Kindly Word from a Minister.

MR. GEO. C. HALL, Dear Sir:—Your very courteous letter of inquiry concerning my purpose with reference to THE UNION SIGNAL for 1891 is at hand, and is so kindly put that it seems to me to deserve more than the mere yes or no on the card address. Your valuable paper has become a helpful and welcome guest, and I do not want to lose its visits. It was sent me by some member of my church without my knowledge of the donor, and should the gift be renewed during the coming year, I shall be saved the necessity of subscribing for it myself, which I assuredly will, yes, MUST, if no other does it for me, for a necessity the paper has become to me. Hold me responsible, therefore, should my unknown friend not renew for me, and believe me in complete and hearty sympathy with you in your fight against the Goliath of the age. Yours truly,

REV. J. E. W.

It costs nothing. Would readers of this paper like a copy of one of the most complete cook books ever published? 536 pages, 2,000 recipes, in flexible waterproof cover—one of the very best works on cookery. More than half a million copies now in use. It costs $1.75 at bookstores. Send a 2-cent stamp and your address to the Buckeye Publishing Co., Minneapolis, Minn., and they will tell you how to get it free.

Beecham's Pills cure Sick Headache.

Van Houten's Cocoa. Delicious, made instantly.

Harvest Excursions—Pennsylvania Lines.

Half rates, Chicago to the South; tickets on sale Oct. 14th. Call at City Ticket Office, 65 Clark St

Happy indeed are the homes which contain "Garland" Stoves and Ranges.

MR. ALFRED ROBINSON, Wilson, N. C., says: "I have used Bradycrotine since I first heard of it, and it has always given instant relief from Headache."

MR. J. C. WEAVER, Macon, Ga., says: "I have given Bradycrotine to other persons, and have never yet seen a case of Headache it would not cure promptly."

Sioux City Corn Palace.

Sept. 25 to Oct. 11, 1890.

What is a Corn Palace?

The Sioux City Corn Palace—and there never was a corn palace outside of Sioux City—is a palace covered and embellished, as with tapestry, outside and inside, with products of the field, corn predominating, ingeniously and fancifully arranged. In building the palace a large structure is first erected of lumber, of a shape that will carry and show to advantage the multiform decorations with which it is to be adorned. It is in form lofty, with broken lines, pinnacles, buttresses, bridges, gables, ornamental windows, etc.

Over every inch of this wooden surface are laid corn, and kindred plants, in architectural harmony, in a multiplicity of designs. The corn is employed in the stalk, the ear, the kernel, and even the husk has its decorative uses. All the grains and grasses of the field lend themselves to the beautifying of the palace. The walls are covered on the outside with ears of corn, cut lengthwise or crosswise, and nailed on in geometrical figures or other designs. The various colors of the cereal permit of a wide range of shading and coloring, while its artistic possibilities, developed from year to year in building the palace, admit of the production of effects that are as startling as pleasurable.

High over the entrance of the palace of 1889 was King Corn's crown as the nucleus of a sunburst, while below was the national flag in graceful folds—all wrought in vari-colored corn as true and as beautiful as if painted by an artist-brush. The roof is overlaid with corn-leaves. Pinnacles and columns are capped with the sorghum plant, or with grains and grasses. The iridescent walls, seen from a near distance, seem to be a rich mosaic of polished woods, while with the "Banners, yellow, glorious, golden,"

that

"From its roof-tree float and flow,"

the palace enraptures the beholder as one who looks upon a cloud-painted mansion that may dissolve before his eyes.

The interior work is finer and more elaborate. Here the kernel of the corn is largely employed, producing amazing and lovely effects. On the walls are wrought pictures, illustrating farm scenes, legendary and nursery tales, etc., with a fidelity that is calculated to raise a doubt that the material employed is the homely utilitarian growth of Western farms. Frescoes and flowers, figures of persons and animals, draperies, and thousands of surprising and beautiful things are made of field plants, for the delight of the visitors to the palace, whose astonishment is succeeded by admiration of the genius that conceived and developed so much of art and beauty from such homely fabrics as are employed.

For full particulars of lowest excursion rates and most scenic route, call on or write to

W. A. Thrall,
General Passenger and Ticket Agent.
S. B. Jones,
City Passenger Agent, 206-208 Clark St., Chicago.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS: Samples free. 100,000 circulation. The Witness, Frankfort, Ky.

HARRIMAN The New City with PROHIBITION in Title Deeds. East Tenn. Land Co. Clinton B. Fisk, Pres., A. A. Hopkins, Sec'y, Times Building, New York City. JAMES B. HOBBS, Agt., 97 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

PATENT BOOK FREE. N. W. FITZGERALD, Washington, D.C.

PENSIONS New law. All entitled. Blanks free. No fee unless successful. N. W. FITZGERALD, Washington, D. C.

MUNICIPAL BONDS AND OTHER INVESTMENTS
A GENERAL BANKING BUSINESS TRANSACTED.
S. A. KEAN & CO. BANKERS,
CHICAGO: 100 WASHINGTON ST. New York: 115 B'dway.

WASHINGTON Write for information. New State and Town Jay An derson, Box 62, Seattle, Wash. LILLIWAUP

THE NEW PENSION LAW

grants $8 a month to all self-dependent widows of soldiers who served 90 days or more in the War of Rebellion, and to children under 16, and Dependent Parents of Deceased Soldiers. All disabled soldiers of the Rebellion also entitled to pension. Apply to ADA C. SWEET, Pension Claim Agent.
Room 82, 175 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

"I wept when I was born, and every day shows why," said ©COPYRIGHT
House-keeper — who did'nt use

SAPOLIO

Sapolio is a solid cake of scouring soap used for all cleaning purposes

"Ah! Ah!" Cried the housewife, "The Secret I know, no DIRT can resist SAPOLIO."

"Oh! Oh!" Cried the DIRT, "At length I must go, I cannot withstand SAPOLIO."

600 SONGS. THE GREATEST! THE BEST! THE CHEAPEST! WORDS & MUSIC

Satisfaction Guaranteed in Every Case, or Money Refunded.

WHY PAY 30 CENTS FOR ONE SONG WHEN YOU CAN GET THIS BOOK WITH 600 FOR THE SAME PRICE?

English, Scotch, Irish, and American Songs

Handsomely Printed
SOME OF ITS CONTENTS:

Annie Laurie	Eureka
Baby mine	Fisher's child
Bay of Biscay	First love
Canaan	Gaffer Grey
Captain Jinks	Galley Slave
Dandy Pat	Hully Ann
Danube River	Janet's choice

600 MULTUM IN PARVO SONGSTER 30c.

From New Plates.
MORE OF ITS CONTENTS:

Katty darling	Old arm-chair
Lilly Dale	Pesky Ike
Lottie Bell	Ranordine
Lorelei	Shamrock
Mary Blane	Trend-mill
Mary's dream	Vicar of Bray
Nelly Gray	Washing-day

Araby's daughter	Chevalier's lament	In the starlight	Love's ritornella	Old Dan Tucker	Roslin castle
Auld lang syne	Clare de kitchen	I wish you well	Lubly Dine	Old Grimes	Rural felicity
Bachelor's fare	Coal black rose	I won't be a nun	Maggie Lauder	Old Ireland for'er	Seaside cottage
Bacon and greens	Colleen Bawn	Jim along Josey	Maggie's secret	Old Joe	Settin' on a rail
Beautiful bells	Come back to Erin	Jim Brown	Maiden's prayer	Old King Cole	Shabby genteel
Beautiful Bessie	Concealment	Jim crack corn	Mary Morrisou	Old King Crow	Shule agrah
Be gone dull care	Darby the blast	Jim Crow	Mary of Argyle	Old kitchen clock	Solomon's temple
Bell Brandon	Dearest Mae	Johnnie Cope	Medical student	Old maid's ball	Squeak the fife
Ben Bolt	Departed days	Johnny Sands	Mellow horn	Old oaken bucket	Standard-bearer
Bessy's mistake	Dermot Astore	Jolly darky	Men of Harlech	Old Tubal Cain	Standard watch
Betsy Baker	Ding, dong, bell	Jolly raftsman	Miniature	Ole gray goose	Stopdat knocking
Beware	Don't come late	Jonny Boker	Minstrel boy	Ole pee de	Sweet Kitty May
Birds in the night	Dream is past	Juanita	Minstrel's return	O Mr. Coon!	Sweet long ago
Blue-eyed Mary	Emerald Isle	Kathleen Aroon	Miss Lucy Long	Origin of the harp	Swiss boy
Blue-eyed Milly	Ever of thee	Katty darling	Miss Wrinkle	Our little queen	Ten little niggers
Black-eyed Susan	Fairy tempter	Katy's letter	Modest bachelor	Over there	Three blind mice
Blue tail fly	Farewell ladies	Killarney	Molly Bawn	Past	'Tis midnight h'r
Bold privateer	Farmer's boy	Kitty of Coleraine	Molly Malone	Pilot	Twig of Shillelah
Bonnie doon	Finigan's wake	Knight errant	Murmuring sea	Poachers	Twilight dews
Bonnie Dundee	Flee as a bird	Lancashire lass	Mush, mush	Polly	Virginia rosebud
Brave old oak	Flying trapeze	Lanigan's ball	Musical wife	Poor old maids	Warblings at eve
Broken yoke	Garibaldi hymn	Law	My ain countrie	Queer little man	Watchman
Brose and butter	Ginger's wedding	Life let us cherish	My country	Quilting party	Whisper of love
Bruce's address	Girls and boys	Little barefoot	My heart is true	Reel o' Bogie	Widow Malone
Bryan O'Lynn	Give a kiss to me	Little bo-peep	My Nannie, O!	Red, red rose	Willie Riley
Buy a broom	Green sleeves	Little boy blue	My pretty pearl	Resolve	Work, niggers
Caller Herrin	Gumbo chaff	Little sunbeam	National debt	Robin Adair	Wounded hussar
Castilian maid	Hail Columbia	Long tail blue	No one to love	Robinson Crusoe	Yankee doodle
Castles in the air	Happy thought	Long, weary day	Not married yet	Rock-a-bye baby	Ye merry birds
Charity	Highland Mary	Louisiana belle	O baby mine	Rollicking rams	Zelma Lee

Sentimental, Comic, Operatic and Ethiopian

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY, I WHISTLE AND WAIT FOR KATIE, LITTLE FISHER MAIDEN, and 390 others.

256 PAGES The above book, containing the words and music of all of above 600 Songs, for sale by all News, Book and Music Dealers, or sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of 30 cents (stamps or silver) by A. F. TRIFET, 408 Wash. St., Boston, Mass. 30 CENTS

KISS ME, MAMMA, I CAN'T SLEEP!
Beautiful song and chorus. 30c.
Wm. A. May. Box 3442, New York, N. Y.

WE SELL DIRECT TO FAMILIES
PIANOS $150 to $1500. ORGANS $35.00 to $500.
Marshal & Smith Piano Co., 255 East 21st St., N. Y.

CORNISH ORGANS. Great installment offer Send for illustrated catalogue. Mailed free to any address.
CORNISH & CO. Washington, N. J.

HOTEL FREDONIA,
H. St., between 13th & 14th. Washington, D. C.
New, Elegant, Quiet, Homelike,
G. H. La Fetra, - - Prop.

MILLER'S HOTEL New York City, 39 West 26th St. A Prohibition Home Patronized by W. C. T. U. workers visiting New York. Turkish, Electric, Roman Baths. Address, DR. E. P. MILLER, Proprietor.

A HOME OF REST is opened for those needing rest, with the best of nursing if required, and retirement to wait upon the Lord. For particulars address Mrs. Dr. A. M. CUNNINGHAM, Beaver Springs Farm, Woodville, Mass., Box 47.

DON'T PAY ONE CENT
Until After Examination.
We warrant this watch to be plated with Genuine, Pure 14k Solid Gold, over a stiff composition metal. The case is hunting style, elaborately engraved in the very latest (see cut) and most beautiful patterns.

This case is fitted complete with our own special full jeweled, full plate, lever movement, celebrated for its handsome appearance and perfect timekeeping qualities. This movement is patterned and modelled after the World Famous Elgin or Waltham style. No money required until after full examination. Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will promptly ship the watch to you by express C. O. D., with instructions to the express agent to allow you to examine it at the express office before you pay. If on examination you find it equal to our representations, pay the agent $4.95, or 3 for $13.50, and the express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. Remember this price is for 60 days only. A guarantee is sent with each watch. When cash accompanies the order, chain and charm is given free. Address W. HILL & CO., Wholesale Jewelers, 111 Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

ASK your dealer for Water Pails Dairy Pails, Wash Basins, Cuspidors, Slop Jars, Table Mats, Slop Jar Mats, Etc. made from FLAX FIBER. Practically indestructible. Manufact'd by the STANDARD FIBER-WARE CO. Nothing will please you like this Plain and Decorated Ware. In use everywhere. None genuine without "STANDARD" Trade Mark on bottom. If your dealer does not keep it, send his address and we will mail you picture cards.

BEAUTIFUL GIRLS ruin their health and beauty by wearing some bad fitting corset—
BE SURE TO BUY FERRIS'
GOOD SENSE CORSET WAISTS.
THOUSANDS NOW IN USE.
Best for Health, Economy and Beauty.
BUTTONS at front instead of CLASPS.
RING BUCKLE at hip for Hose supporters.
Tape-fastened Buttons—won't pull off.
Cord-Edge Button Holes—won't wear out
FIT ALL AGES—Infants to Adults.
Sold by Leading RETAILERS everywhere.
Send for Circular,
FERRIS BROS., Manufacturers,
341 BROADWAY, NEW YORK.
MARSHALL FIELD & CO., CHICAGO, WHOLESALE WESTERN AGENTS.

PLAYS Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers, for School, Club & Parlor. Best out. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

A HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY
THE PERFECTION Flour Sifter and Sieve, No home is complete without it. Dispense with barrels, sacks, pans, scoops, sieves, etc. No scattering of flour; no apron or rolling up of sleeves needed. A few turns of the handle and you have enough sifted for a baking. It pleases everybody. No housekeeper will be without it after once using. Where we have no representative we will send the bin on receipt of price. To hold 100 lbs. $4.00; 50 lbs. $3.00; 25 lbs. $2.50. No goods sent C.O.D. Agents wanted. Sherman, Langenberg & Co., 491 & 493 Carroll Ave Chicago.

Patronize our Advertisers and Mention The Union Signal when Answering Advertisements.

Publisher's Notes.

October Offers.

We want 5,000 new subscribers during October, and if you want what we offer as returns for your work they will come, and that without any particular "fuss or feathers." How would you like to have Henry Drummond's wonderfully popular books, "The Greatest Thing in the World" and "The Greatest Need of the World"? Send one new name with $1 and you can have either one of the two that you name. Lovely books both in binding and contents. Deep thoughts dressed in simplicity's garb.

—Or—

Miss Willard's picture, which will be ready in November. Why not get a new subscriber, add 25 cents ($1.25 in all), and get this beautiful aquarelle-tint life-size picture of your leader?

—Or—

If you send five new names, with $5, you can have the new and enlarged edition of Senator Blair's great book, "The Temperance Movement." Concerning it Miss Willard says:

"If I were president of a local union I would see that this book was read chapter by chapter at the monthly meetings. Our women, by this time, should be well furnished for the fray. They need to have the arguments at their tongue's end. Especially is this true of National Prohibition, which now looms above the horizon, the coming tornado in politics. On this theme Senator Blair is the expert among our sixty millions of people. To it he has devoted fifteen years of thought and honest hard work. Let us know what there is to be said on this question. Let us copy out paragraphs from this book of admirable temper for the local press in our own towns and villages. Let us make efforts for National Prohibition."

Why couldn't yours be one of a thousand unions to follow out Miss Willard's suggestion? By sending five new names you get the book and the education it will bring, free. Will you read this and forget it, or try to remember and then forget, or give a noble-hearted push in the matter?

RESPONSIVE READINGS FOR THE L. T. L.

These are eight-page issues, designed to be used monthly in the meetings of the Legion. While taking the place of the Temperance Lesson Manuals, to some extent, they differ in form and method of use. They contain Scripture readings, lesson thoughts, songs—often with new music—besides the responsive exercise. The titles are as follows:

Pure Temples. Mrs. Lucy A. Scott.
The Flower Mission. Arranged by Jennie S. Casseday.
Eyes Open! (A Band of Mercy number.) Alice M. Guernsey.
The Queen's Gift. Nellie B. Hardee.
Our Country. Mrs. Geo. Archibald.
Books and Reading. Mather D. Kimball.
Diplomas and Seals. Alice M. Guernsey.
The World's W. C. T. U. Carrie T. Whedon.

Price, each, $ .03. In sets of four, $ .10: 25 copies or over to one address, each, $ .02.

The above will be issued monthly during 1891, if we get sufficient orders. And unless you give the Readings an examination, how can you know whether they are worth printing monthly? And if you don't send for samples how can you examine them?

SENIOR GRADE LESSONS.

The first quarter of these valuable lessons now being issued once in two months in the Young Crusader, is ready in pamphlet form. It has met with enthusiastic reception from the leaders of the older classes in the Loyal Temperance Legion, who say it is exactly the thing needed by the boys and girls who are soon to be citizens. It is a series of lessons on government, teaching the main facts in regard to the Constitution of the United States, the way in which officers are elected, etc., combining with the whole skillful suggestions as to the way in which temperance should be made a vital factor of law. While strictly "non-partisan," it is thoroughly prohibition in its influence. New matter has been added in the Manual, for which there was not room in the Crusader.

Price each, $ .05. Per 100, $4.00.

WELL! Which means, is it possible that you have never tried
WELL! to get 10c. for 5 weeks, or 25c. for 3 months' trial of WELL! THE UNION SIGNAL?

Well, well, well! That is the way to get indifferents interested.

Address WOMAN'S TEM. PUB. ASS'N, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

Rub sprained limbs with Pond's Extract.

BALL'S AND KABO CORSETS AND BALL'S WAISTS.

Ball's Corsets in a variety of styles. Most comfortable corset ever made. Kabo Corsets of perfect fit, in various styles and lengths. Kabo never breaks. Ball's Waists are the best in the world for Ladies, Misses and Children. All with soft eyelets.

FOR SALE EVERYWHERE.
CHICAGO CORSET CO.,
CHICAGO AND NEW YORK.

$4.95 GOLD PLATED
WARRANTED GENUINE.

Don't buy a common looking silver watch when you can now obtain for the small sum of $4.95 a handsome genuine 18 karat gold plated hunting case, full engraved watch with a first-class full jeweled movement, a perfect timekeeper, genuine lever and full plate handsomely damaskeened and ornamented, fully equal in appearance to the watches regularly sold by jewelers at from $25 to $35. In carrying this watch you have the credit of carrying a solid gold watch, as the plating process is got down so fine now-a-days that it is almost impossible to detect the difference. The engraving on the case is just the same as on the high priced watches, and is in the very loveliest and latest patterns. Some will doubt our ability to be able to supply such a watch at this price, and to convince you that we mean just what we say we make the following most extraordinary offer for the next 30 days.

READ!

Cut this out and send it with your order, and we will promptly ship the watch to you by express C. O. D. with instructions to the express agent to allow you to examine it at the express office. If on examination you are convinced that it is a bargain, pay the agent $4.95 and the express charges and it is yours, otherwise you pay nothing and it will be returned at our expense. We could not afford to make such an offer as this, unless we were confident that the watch will not only please you, but be a surprise to you. Bear in mind this price will be for 30 days only.

THE NAT'L M'F'G AND IMPORTING CO.,
(Incorporated) 191 & 193 Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

Better than Tea and Coffee for the Nerves.
VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA
The Original--Most Soluble.
Ask your Grocer for it, take no other. [65

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY

GOOD NEWS TO LADIES.

Greatest offer. Now's your time to get orders for our celebrated Teas, Coffees and Baking Powder, and secure a beautiful Gold Band or Moss Rose China Tea Set, Dinner Set, Gold Band Moss Rose Toilet Set, Watch, Brass Lamp, Caster, or Webster's Dictionary. 3½ lbs. Fine Tea by Mail on receipt of $2.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA CO.,
P.O. Box 289. 31 and 33 Vesey St., New York.

UNITY. A weekly journal of a Religion that is Rational, and a Rationalism that is Religious. 10 weeks 10c. CHICAGO.

P. T. BARNUM'S NEW BOOK
"Dollars and Sense" or How to Get On, is now ready. This is the chance of your life. Agents report 5 to 20 sales per day. Retail price $2.50. Agents outfit 50 cts. Exclusive territory given. We also have the finest line of Holiday and Juvenile books in market. Send for circulars.
PEOPLE'S PUB. CO., Lakeside Bldg. Chicago.

AN OWL MAID!

We will send you a Fringed LINEN TIDY of "An Owl Maid," Floss to work it—INGALL'S BOOK OF STITCHES, and INGALLS' 32-page ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of STAMPING OUTFITS, FANCY WORK MATERIALS, STAMPED GOODS, ART BOOKS, etc., all for six 2-cent stamps (12 cents)
Address J. F. INGALLS, Lynn, Mass.

MOTHERS' PORTFOLIO. Illustrated. 400 pages. Contains best helps for teaching young children. Instruction and amusement combined in Kindergarten lessons, stories, games, etc. Agents can find no better selling book. Circulars free. Prepaid $2.25. ALICE B. STOCKHAM & Co., 161 La Salle St., Chicago.

Prohibition a Business Success.

DEMOREST

THE PROHIBITION CITY
OF THE HEALTHY HIGHLANDS OF NORTH-EAST GEORGIA.

The grandest business openings. Manufacturing establishments already in operation. Others going in rapidly. Room for many more. Cheap cotton, cheap wool, cheap lumber, cheap raw material, free water power, low cost of living, free factory sites, small operating expenses render Demorest a manufacturing paradise. Low cost of building material enables every man to build and own a home.

Finest climate in the United States. Summer more pleasant than in the North. Winter mild and short. Spring and autumn long and delightful. Yellow Fever impossible; Malaria Unknown; Asthma Always cured; Bronchial and other Chronic troubles always relieved; no Hay Fever. The bracing air and remarkably pure spring water restore health and render life enjoyable.

GRAND AUCTION SALE OF LOTS
OCT. 16, 17, 18.

Buy Tickets via Queen and Crescent Route, or Louisville and Nashville, from all North-Western Points to Atlanta, Ga., at One Fare for Round Trip.

ATLANTA TO DEMOREST $3.50 FOR ROUND TRIP.

For Particulars, Address,
The Demorest Home, Mining and Improvement Co., Demorest, Ga.
FRANK J SIBLEY, Secretary.

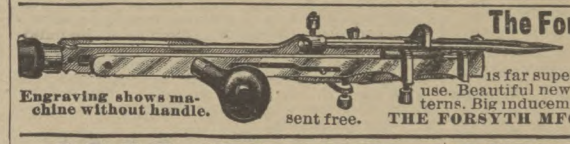
DEMOREST, GEORGIA

GREAT OFFER!
PIANOS! ·:· $35. ·:· ORGANS!
Direct from the Factory at Manufacturer's Prices. No such offer ever made before. Every man his own agent. Examine in your home before paying. Write for particulars. Address
THE T. Swoger & Son Pianos & Organs
BEAVER FALLS, PENNSYLVANIA.



Engraving shows machine without handle.

The Forsyth Combination Rug & Embroidery Machine is far superior to anything of the kind now in use. Beautiful new designs for Rug and embroidery patterns. Big inducements to agents. Catalog and price list sent free. THE FORSYTH MFG. CO., 204 Dearborn-st., Chicago.

GOOD HEALTH.

Lady Agents wanted. for The THOMAS GOOD HEALTH CORSET WAIST. Thousands in use. Corded, Boned, Buttoned or clasped at front; will fit old ladies, young women and growing girls. Every lady wishing a beautiful figure and also comfort will buy The Thomas Good Health Corset Waist. HUNDREDS sent by mail to women unable to obtain them of our Agents. All mail orders promptly filled. THE THOMAS CORSET Parlors, 465 W. Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

LADIES SHOULD WRITE FOR OUR FALL AND WINTER CATALOGUE SENT FREE
Containing 1,000 illustrations of the latest and most stylish Costumes, Cloaks, Underwear, Shoes, Furnishing Goods, Art Goods, etc., with the lowest New York Cash Prices attached. Catalogue mailed FREE by addressing MAHLER BROS., 504 and 509 6th Avenue, New York.

THE EDISON MIMEOGRAPH
duplicating apparatus. Send postal card to A. B. Dick Company, Chicago, for descriptive circulars and samples of work.

WANTED ACTIVE PARTY-SALARY $100—to represent ASSOCIATION incorporated to supply, at co-operative prices, general merchandise and articles for home and family use, in each small city, town and place. Paid up Certificates $100.000 CASH. 80,000 members. CREDIT WELL RATED. References Exchanged. Empire Co-operative Association (P. O. Box 1610) N.Y.

400 RECITATIONS and Readings, Bound in Handsome Lithograph Cover, mailed to any address for 50 cents. Stamps taken. Address J. S. Ogilvie, Publisher, 57 Rose Street, New York.

ROCK BOTTOM Prices on Dry Goods, Groceries. Every thing you eat, wear or use. Send for FREE Illustrated Catalogue to H. R. EAGLE & CO., 68 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.
We do not sell liquors in any shape.

SALESMEN WANTED at once. A few good men to sell our goods by sample to the wholesale & retail trade. We are the largest manufacturers in our line. Liberal salary paid. Permanent position. Money advanced for wages, advertising, etc. For terms ad. Centennial Mfg. Co., Chicago.

"MURRAY"
$55.95 BUGGIES and $5.95 HARNESS
are the best and cheapest. Write for catalogue and prices. Wilber H. Murray M'f'g Co., Cincinnati, O.

GOOD CHEER, Good Cheer to all who use
GOOD CHEER SOAP.
It is a wonderful labor saver. Ask your grocer for it.
Allen B. Wrisley, 479 5th Ave., Chicago.

AGENTS MEN OR WOMEN To sell Teas, Spices, etc., to families in towns and cities. NO CAPITAL REQUIRED. Also Salesmen to Wholesale Groceries to Farmers, Hotels, etc. No License to Pay. Good pay. Steady work. Janes Bros. & Co. Wholesale Grocers, 263 & 265 Wabash Av. Chicago.

$75 to $250 A MONTH can be made working for us. Persons preferred who can furnish a horse and give their whole time to the business. Spare moments may be profitably employed also. A few vacancies in towns and cities. B.F. JOHNSON & CO., 1009 Main St. Richmond, Va.

BEST PAYING THING for Agents is our PHOTOGRAPH FAMILY RECORD PICTURE. Agents wanted. Terms extra liberal. Address. C. P. CORY & CO., 325 State-st., Chicago.

SILK-SONGS SATIN & PLUSH pieces for Crazy Patch large, beautiful pkg. 10c. Pkg. BEST EMBROIDERY SILK, all colors, 10c. 100 Best SONGS words & music complete 10c. Any three articles 25c including our story paper 3 mos. 5 lots, $1. Adr. THE LITTLE GIANT, St. Louis, Mo.

WOULD YOU?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO BE LOCAL AGENT FOR ARTICLES THAT EVERY BODY WANTS? Write for CIRCULARS to "F." CASSGREEN Mnfg. Co., 134 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill.

LADY Agents clear $5.00 daily. Goods indispensable Sample free. G. L. Erwin, Chicago.

AGENTS Wanted. Liberal Salary Paid. At home or to travel. Team furnished free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

BABY CARRIAGES. We sell direct to customers. Delivered free to any point in U. S. Cat. free. Chas. Raiser, Mfr, 62 Clybourn av. Chicago.

WOMEN Wanted, local and traveling. Positions permanent. Salary from start. Experience unnecessary. Brown Bros., Nurserymen, Chicago

"130 ORDERS IN 3½ DAYS;" "10 Orders every 12 calls;" "47 orders in 16 hours." Terms free. JAS. H. EARLE, Pub. Boston.

LADY Agents $10 a day sure; new rubber undergarment. Mrs. N. B. Little, Chicago, Ill.

FREE TO LADIES.
If you do sewing for yourself or for others write us to obtain an article of great value to you, free, for introducing it. Address
The Triumph Co., Carmi, Ill.

25c PRINTING OUTFIT.

AAA BBCC DDEEE FFF GGCHHIIJJKKLLLMMN HHNNOOPPQRRSSSTT UUUVVWWXXYYZZ

A WHOLE PRINTING OUTFIT, COMPLETE AND PRACTICAL, Just as shown in cut. 3 Alphabets of neat Type, Bottle of Indelible Ink, Pad, Tweezers, in neat case with catalogue and directions "HOW TO BE A PRINTER." Sets up any name, prints cards, paper, envelopes, etc., marks linen. Worth 50c. The best gift for young people. Postpaid only 25c., 3 for 60c., 6 for $1. Ag'ts wanted. Ingersol & Bro., 65 Cortlandt St. N. Y. City.

WM. A. YOUMANS & CO.,
ARCHITECTS,
Room 91, 159 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.
"Ottawa Terra Cotta" construction a specialty. The best looking and cheapest sanitary system of building.

Advertisers want to know what paper pays best. Mention The Union Signal.

Publisher's Dep't.

The Convention Daily.

We have not made the usual announcements regarding the Convention Daily because of the difficulty experienced in getting the proper facilities away from our own plant to print so large a paper in so short a time. We have decided, however, on the following plan: A daily will be issued at Atlanta (five issues) subscription, fifteen cents, or five cents per copy It will be entirely a written-up report and not, as heretofore, a stenographic one. The place, the people, the convention, church, the programs, personnel of the speakers, etc , etc., will make up the paper There will be no premium, and we will not attempt to mail each day's paper by itself, but all mail orders will be sent after the convention has closed, and as soon as possible after the fifth session is over. In addition to this paper we will print an exact stenographic report of all the proceedings within a week or ten days after the close of the convention (providing we get 1,000 orders for the same) at 25 cents each We prefer that orders be sent for the stenographic report rather than for the dailies, but if any wish to order both they can remit 40 cents, and if the 1,000 orders are not reached for the stenographic report we will return the 25 cents. After four years' hilly experience in running a daily at the conventions we have evolved the above plan as being the most satisfactory to all concerned. This announcement is to appear in each issue of THE UNION SIGNAL until November 6. We recapitulate the offers to make them as plain as possible.

The Convention Daily.

Five issues to be mailed in one package on November 18 or 19, $ .15.

The Stenographic Report to be issued, if 1,000 copies are ordered, as soon as possible after the convention, $ .25.

No premiums or commissions can be allowed at these prices, except that in clubs of five or more the cost of sending the money can be deducted. The regular convention number of THE UNION SIGNAL will be dated November 27.

Another Bargain Offer.

Publications at Half Price.

We have the below named goods slightly damaged. Have been sent out to Conventions, assemblies, etc., but are well worth more than we ask for them. We will mail any of the below named goods at one-half the regular price if you ask for Bargain Publications. We also have some 1,500 Loyal Temperance Legion Lesson Manuals on hand that have been damaged a very little. If you order $1.00 worth of Bargain Publications, you can have from 10 to 50 of them free of cost. All we ask is that you use them to help on juvenile temperance instruction. They are identical with the regular numbers of these admirable manuals of which we have sold over half a million copies.

SOILED GOODS.

NUMBER ON HAND.		REGULAR PRICE.
15	Helps for Health Meetings, paper,	$ .10
150	Purity Crusade, paper,	.25
20	Crusade Series, No. 2, paper,	.10
7	"Unto this Last."—Ruskin, paper,	.25
100	Helping Hand, paper,	.10
20	Marching Songs, No. 1, paper,	.10
5	Woman in the Pulpit, cloth,	1.00
14	Woman in the Pulpit, paper,	.25
44	Y Songs, paper,	.25
21	Handy Manuals, paper,	.25
45	Nineteen Beautiful Years, paper,	.25
100	Nineteen Beautiful Years, cloth,	.75
150	"Ye Hatchet Partie," paper,	.15
74	Duties of Women, paper,	.25
54	Glorious Cause, paper,	.30
17	Hygiene of the Home, cloth,	1.00
141	Romance of the 19th Century, cloth,	1.00
54	Free Rum on the Congo, paper,	.25
76	Drill Manual, paper,	.20
130	Birthday Books,	1.00
25	Prove It, paper,	.10
32	Van and Vet, paper,	.10

Remit one-half and give second choice in case we are out of the books ordered.

Address WOMAN'S TEMP. PUB. ASS'N,
161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

The Children of the Vanderbilts,

How they are Trained, Dressed and Educated,

Showing the sensible methods for systematic training in a well-known family—a most interesting and helpful article in the OCTOBER number of

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

now ready on the news stands.

Price Ten Cents per copy.

Other special features in this issue include

Dr. T. De Witt Talmage's famous page,

"Under My Study Lamp," in which he discusses

"What Parents Owe to their Children," "Our Neighbor's Boy,"
"How Children are Spoiled," "Religious Dyspepsia," "Money in Youthful Pockets," "Parental Gloom in Our Homes."

Mrs. Lyman Abbott's Department,

"Just Among Ourselves,"

A new feature, wherein the wife of the Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., (Henry Ward Beecher's successor,) holds a confidential talk with women each month, under her familiar pen name of "AUNT PATIENCE."

The OCTOBER number is on the News Stands, at TEN CENTS a copy.

For One Dollar mailed to us direct, you may have THE BALANCE OF THIS YEAR FREE—your subscription for a Dollar to run from now to January 1892.

Our subscribtion list now numbers NEARLY HALF A MILLION; we ought to double it. Never before was offered so handsome a Magazine for Ladies and the family.

CURTIS PUBLISHING CO., Philadelphia, Pa.

FACTS FOR THE SICK.

Dr King's Royal Germetuer builds up and cures when all else fails. Send stamp for full particulars.
Atlantic Germetuer Co., Atlanta, Ga.

OPIUM or Morphine Habit cured at home. Trial Free. No Pain. No exposure. Address, Compound Oxygen Ass., Fort Wayne, Ind. Name this paper

FOR A 2c. STAMP

WE WILL SEND FREE TO ANY ADDRESS, A A TRIAL BOX OF . .
No Pain! No Poison!
A-CORN SALVE
REMOVES THE TOE-CORN EVERY TIME.
GIANT CHEMICAL CO., PHILA., PA.

MODENE will easily, quickly and safely remove Hair on the face, neck, arms, or any part of the person and the growth destroyed without injury to the skin. Every bottle guaranteed. MODENE MF'G CO., CINCINNATI, O.

RUPTURE

Positively cured in 60 days by Dr. Horne's Electro-Magnetic Belt Truss, combined. Guaranteed the only one in the world generating acontinuous Electric & Magnetic current. Scientific, Powerful, Durable, Comfortable and Effective. Avoid frauds. Over 9,000 cured. Send stamp for pamphlet.
ALSO ELECTRIC BELTS FOR DISEASES.
DR. HORNE, REMOVED TO 180 WABASH AVE., CHICAGO.

ILLINOIS PAPER COMPANY,

181 Monroe St., CHICAGO,
Manufacturers and Dealers in Book & Cover Paper.

ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL.

THIS NEW ELASTIC TRUSS Has a Pad different from all others, is cup shape, with Self-adjusting Ball in center, adapts itself to all positions of the body, while the ball in the cup presses back the intestines just as a person does with the finger. With light pressure the Hernia is held securely day and night, and a radical cure certain. It is easy, durable and cheap. Sent by mail. Circulars free. EGGLESTON TRUSS CO., Chicago, Ill.

THE DR. OWEN
Electric Belt
AND APPLIANCES

Cure acute, chronic and nervous diseases without medicine. It is a stimulant and tonic, and while curing one disease does not produce another. Send 6c. for sealed illustrated catalogue with full list of diseases and valuable information and sworn statements in English, German, Swedish and Norwegian. THE OWEN ELECTRIC BELT AND APPLIANCE CO., 191 & 193 State Street, Chicago, Ill.

(TRADE MARK.)

RHEUMATISM

If you suffer it is your own fault. Address Dr. W. H. Ross, Grand Rapids, Mich.

DR. JULIA R. HOWE'S MEDICATED CAPSULES

FOR WOMAN'S ILLS.

Are of genuine merit—not a patent medicine. Sold only by Dr. Julia R. Howe, 263 Ohio St., Chicago. Write for explanatory letter free

THE ABOVE CUT ILLUSTRATES OUR MAGNETIC Belt. One of the grandest appliances ever made for Lame Back, Weakness of Spine and any diseases of the Kidneys. This belt will give relief in Five Minutes, and has never failed to cure Lame Back! It has no equal for Kidney Disease. It is nature's own power concentrated and will do more good in one hour than all other remedies will do in one week. It is the crowning triumph of the nineteenth century! Whole families are often cured by wearing one Belt in turn. It gives off LIFE and WARMTH the moment it touches the body. We can refer to one thousand people now wearing this Belt. Never since Galileo has there been given to the world such a potential power for curing diseases as DR. THACHER'S MAGNETIC SHIELDS. We challenge the civilized world to produce the equal of this Magnetic Belt for curing disease. If every reader of THE UNION SIGNAL will send for our book the law of magnetic impartation will be explained to them. Every lady in the land should wear this belt, as it is a perfect protection against pain and sickness at all periods of life. Write us for information of vital interest to you.
MAGNETIC SHIELD CO.,
No. 6 Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.

CANCER

and Tumors CURED: no knife; book free. Drs. GRATIGNY & BUSH, No. 163 Elm St., Cincinnati, O.

Signal Notes.

THE Woman's Industrial Union, of Vienna, supports sixteen schools, attended by 1,666 pupils; the union has about eight hundred members and is worth $70,000.

